As simply the enchant he'd like,
For it seemed if the Heavens attends set
Of a world that is brighter than this.

But Progress has swept all before her
In a feverish and ambitious haste,
With a hand—yes, and ill destruction—
Which a Godfearing people erased;
And now other Temples are replified,
Breathe prayers of petitions to save,
And mormon "Regeneration is Pure"
For those who lived in the grave.
But mortify still the bells echo,
And loud on the clear morning air,
Tis call to the "Gateway of Heaven"
Oh! ye people, leave labor and care
And behold the great Holocaust rising
To the Throne of the Infinite One,
Verifying that "His shall be offered
From the rise to the set of the sun."

How many a crushed reed was lifted
To bask once again in the light,
As the peaceful mesmeric of Heaven
Dispelled from the soul sin's dark night;
And in Spirium, when all nature rejoiceth,
How often young hearts were thrice blest,
As they joyfully hailed for the first time
Their Saviour and King in such breast!
A prisoner returned than wert ever,
From trials and temptations to save,
An oasis in life's weary desert
That sheweth faint hearts towards the grave;
For the infant received his great reason
In the sacred Baptismal rite—
Then dight pilgrim's thy through life those same footsteps,
Even brightening Death's awful night.

I could sing of thy peaches forever,
As I pass on these turrets so old,
But my heart is becoming so dreary,
And my shynine grows paler and cold;
For Time is lowering about thee
His wield and mysterious spell,
And fain would I lay thy form sleeper
As softly I left to thy shell.
Then commend to our care the who
Of them words that forever shall burn:
"Earth is earth and ashes to ashes,
Dust thou art and to dust shalt return;"
For what are we all but the relics
Of crumbling antiquities and dreams,
Our journey and dark understanding
Illumined by flickering gleams.

But, oh! thou art grand and majestic—
Yes, o'ns in this modern alms,
Thou hast stood so firm and defiant
Unbent the relentless destructive of time;
As an emblem of that mystic Body
Whose foundation were laid ere time fell,
Against which the Infernal regions
May rise up, but never prevail!
And oh! 'tis a sweet consolation
To feel that when life's sorrows cease
We shall rest 'neath thy shade while the night wind
Murmurs softly a requiem of peace;
Oh! then may we feel that assurance
The hope of the Christian sublime—
That God will at last in His mercy
Raise our souls from the ruins of time.

ARNIE J. WHITE.

San Francisco, Feb. 26, 1887.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]
PAINTING LIFE PICTURES.

I longed to paint me a picture;
Colors dark and bright
Were placed on the palette, all ready,
But alas! for the proper light!

Great trees was sky, for surely
The sky hangs over us all;
Shield, darkness and dreary,
And sadness rolls drops fall—
Or, perhaps the other's all sunshine,
As a beautiful silver glow
Of the heavenly light beyond it;
And peopling shades and colors
Moving restlessly, too and fro,
Intense as anger, human hearts,
Burning in fated glow!
Relics of the Eternal Promise
To rather into below.

"Pity have their reward, (Christ speaketh)
Verily I say unto you,
Be the frame at last holds the picture,
Be the artist false or true;
This is a truth—set one thinking,
(As when tale oft told)
Each artist will touch from his palette
Whatever the colors it hold.

The colors will be clear in the today,
Or in vague shires severe of doubt,
And a heroine despair in the shadow,
Which somehow never turns out;
Else, but shadowy semblance and shrinkin,
From the light (analogy of years)
Artist, in handling your brushes,
(With coloring of sunshine and tears)
Oh, never shrink, never hide
In stretched the black canvas of life,
And gloom in the clouds and the shadows,
The tinging of joy or strife.
Pray the Angels arrange as our studies
Of colors and fine effect,
And the earth, a sweet dark of the blossoms,
In a plaining of moonlight reflect;
E'en U desert land, lonely and barren,
Stretches wearily on before,
The sands are tinged as golden
Like a drift from the heavenly shore.

TERRIE.

San Francisco, Feb. 27, 1887.

Important to all Who Work for a living. Write to Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, and receive, free, valuable work you can do, which will bring you pay you can make from $5 to $10 and upwards a day, and in your own locality wherever you are located. Capital not required; you are started free. All apparatus, book, etc., free. Great business before those in the work. Form, now avail all workers with large profits.

Dr. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY—St. Bridget's Church—Portland, Jas. M. Barnett; Vice President, F. J. Thomas; Secretary, William McMahon; Treasurer, John J. F. Sullivan.

Literary Miscellany.

What the Snow Did!

An Incident of the Late Snow-Storm in San Francisco.

WRITTEN FOR THE MONITOR BY M. M.

"It's what a cold day it has been, I do snow in the air," I hear my mother say, as the front door opens and a strong draft blows through the house.

"It is indeed very cold, we do not often experience such weather in our temperate California climate; but now! oh! if it only would fall," and I draw aside the heavy curtain and gaze out into the dreary, dark day's fury of the rain storm has passed away, and a momentary lull has come. The heavy clouds that stretched like a dark pall from horizon to zenith, have spent their fury and have been blown aside, disclosing a pale, trembling moon. But to the south, great, black, storm-laden clouds loom up with an ominous scowl, and though the placid smile of the queen of Night floods their forewoms with an apparent softening peacefulness, yet they soon will spread their sable wings across the sky and hide her from sight. But now the moonbeams are flooding the vault of Heaven with mellow and dreamy splendor, and, as I musingly gaze upwards, the soothing spirit of Heaven attends me. Snow! how well I remember, though only a little child of six years, when I first reveled in the glory of a snow-storm. How it seems that time of childhood and the little New England village!

As I stand by the window I seem to pass through a strange scene. It is a dream of promise, or a vision of substantiveless phantasies! Or has Imagination reproduced in the gallery of memory a meaningless sketch of impossible occurrences! I am in the midst of a plain. Far away in the white moonlight stretches a field of glittering snow bounded only by the azure dome that sinks in the distance into a rim of blue black horizon. I look upward, and lo! through the clear, exhilarating air descend two fair and queenly forms. They are angels, if I judge by the seraphic beauty of their countenances; they are snow-maidens if I judge by the texture of their nestling loveliness. Between them they bear a wreath of crystal beauty, nearer they come and press it on my brow. I start—I try to remove the wreath—with a commanding gesture they dissuade me, and together address to me these strange words: "We bring life and strength to thee." I turn to look at them—to trembingly ask the import of their message—I glance wildly around, grasp at something, start, and open my eyes, but—the parlor windows are shining in the moonlight, and the fair forms of Damnah curtains are around me. I feel troubled and leaning my throbbing head on my hands try to disentangle the perplexing cords of mystery that bind my struggling thoughts, but the soul I try to grasp eludes me, swaying just out of my reach, and I cannot, I cannot, I cannot!

"Well, I declare! here she is, frown to the window, come to the fire, little girl, and thaw out."

It was my brother Frank who drew me from my retreat to join the cheerful group around the fire. We had company, old friends lately from the East, who were spending the holidays with us; for this was New Year's Eve, the last day of 1852. I listened the fun in an animated discussion; the Easterners were maintaining that our wonderful western climate was "all stuff," while Frank, our champion, inveighed against the injustice of judging the rule by an exception.

I dreamed that night of snow, and awoke thinking I was drifting through huge heaps of polar ice, or wandering through castles formed of great glaciers; but in reality it was very cold and the dreary rain was beating against the windows.

Mass was over in the church, and the lay brother was extinguishing the tapers, when over the pews breathed the assisted whisper "it is snowing." It was some moments before the pacing aisles were cleared enough for me to leave the pew, and then, kneeling for a hasty prayer at the altar of the Sacred Heart, I was all but fainting. I had often seen before—one of those people whom we sometimes know and love intuitively, although they are actual strangers to us. I did not know her name nor where she lived, only that she was good and holy. Often the fire of her fervent living devotion warmed into life my own languid faith, and as I glanced now at her pale sweet face I thought I had never seen such perfect peace and quiet repose on human countenance before.

In the vestibule, I was detained by some acquaintances, though I was dying to be out in the snow, and when at last I was free I stood on the porch. How I loved this anxious familiar scene! I felt a new life thrilling through me. Down drifted the silent flakes, covering the roughness and blackness of the great city in a smooth white mantle of spotless purity. On all sides was the inevitable small boy who, though perhaps he had never seen snow before, is accepting so handfuls to fire at his fellows, or at some horror stricken individual, whenever one of those patient pagans would venture into sight.

At last when I was ready to descend the steps, I noticed the old lady I mentioned above, slowly and painfully going down the slippery stone steps. She seemed so feeble and trembling that I feared she would fall, and hastening to her abruptly said: "Lean on me, Madam." She looked straight in me for an instant, and then said as she laid her hand on my shoulder: "Thank you, my child." When we reached the sidewalk she seemed very much frightened at the confusion and shouting of the excited men and boys, varied every now and then by the crash of breaking glass, and she said "Oh, why didn't Ray come," then turning to me, "you are not afraid?" "Oh! no Madam, I love the snow and I am sure that we shall not be hurt," replied as a snowball was flung against the frame beside us. But her only answer was a dolorous shake of the head and an involuntary grasp at my hand. I hurried alarmed sentiment far from the church and comforted to see her safely home.

was right, for when we came to a pretty little cottage set in a large garden, she swung open the gate, and when I would have said good-bye, she shook her head, "No, no, my child, you must come in and not while, at least until it stops snowing." "Ray, I attempted to speak, "I won't let you go; I know who you are, my dear, I have heard Father Joseph speak of you; you are the child you have no relatives," she abruptly exclaimed, as running her eyes over my attire she also seized this omission.

"No, Madam, they are so unmerciful."

"You feel bound to go home to-day, right in this minute, you'll catch your death," and the persuasive old lady hurried me up the path and ushered me into a snug little parlor where a bright fire was blazing. Then throwing off her shawl and bonnet, she insisted on unfastening my cloak and drawing a low chair to the fire, bade me lay my feet upon the fender and have a good time. I was thoroughly enjoying the warmth and comfort of my novel position when I heard a manly voice say

"Mother I thought I heard you talking to some one. Are you alone?

"No, there is a little girl with me, and you may think her that I get safely home."

"Snow! mother, are you dreaming! But no—it actually is snowing. This is the first I've seen of it. I've been reading and didn't notice or I had gone for you myself. But who is this female girl?

"Little girl! I'm not a chaperon," replied his mother

"I thought so. I rarely believe you go to church to make acquaintances. It used to be old fogeys, and now it's little girls. Can't you pick up a stray young lady for me?

"Stay! I'm your own young Ray," I hear the old lady answer, and then she cause in with a cup of tea.

Seeing the amused expression in my face she added in a low tone. "Ah! you have heard him! don't mind him, my dear, he is only quizzing. There isn't a better boy in the world than my Ray."

Then we talk of the sermon, and of Father Joseph. She is, I find, a delightful, sympathetic, interesting but never unbearable conversationalist. Just fastidiously we indulge the pleasing discovery that we have many friends in common, and I altogether it is a delightful half hour I spend with my new friend, and regretfully I rise to go. With genuine hospitality she speeds her parting guest, first over my cloak, then my hat, all the while talking volubly.

"I am so sorry you must go, my dear, but then mother can be anxious. Be sure and come to see me again. From seeing you in church I wanted to know you, and now there is nothing to prevent it! hope!

"I will be very happy to come," I reply, "I feel as if we were old friends now."

"Do you dear! the dissatisfaction, kissing me, and then before I can prevent it she is in the hall calling, "Hey, Ray, come, I want you to take him home home with me and I don't want him," I think; but it is too late, Ray comes and we are introduced. He extends his hand when he hears the name I give—Marion Stanley. Their name I know through my foolish embarrassment. It is decided that I must go home with him. Mother insists on my taking her arm, and I answer, Candidly, Frank's coming does not interest me just then!

Soon we hear his cheery voice calling us, and Mrs. Clifton brings him out on the balcony. It is getting late and Frank tells me to get my things as he cannot be long gone. Mrs. Clifton urges me too, but Frank grins slyly at me, and maliciously says: "I guess I can take care of her."

"Oh! I can, I can!" Ray protests, "you're too fond lately of gazing at the moon," and Frank blushes and says no more, we all laugh.

"What is her name, Frank?" I inquire as that individual continues silent.

"Who? mother?"

"The lady Ray tells me you are thinking of."

"Mary likes company, eh, Ray?" says Frank, "I was thinking, as that I ought to congratulate myself, -I am a born matchmaker."

"Ass!" Ray exclaims, "you had nothing to do with it."

"That's all right, if I did any more I'd have equaled a new, Hallo! Ray!"

"But we do not admit his logic.

"It was Hate," says Ray solemnly.

"It was the error," I retort.

"I accept the exception," answers my lawyer lore.

Cherished Closet Skeletons.

Baron Hemickstein was a banker in Vienna, to whom I had letters of introduction, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Times Leader. With some friends I called on him. He received us cordially. When our business was completed he invited us to visit his private museum, which filled an upper floor of the lofty building. He said he was the noble banker some fifty years to form this collection of rare and valuable curiosities. After making the tour of the hall the baron drew from his pocket a massive gold key, and unlocking the door of one end-bolstered or to follow him into a smaller hallway room, his entering was arranged about it a series of tall and narrow mahogany cabinets, the doors of which were kept equally three open, disclosing to our astonished gaze a grim and ghastly human skeleton in each.

"Ladies," said this extraordinary man, "I put me introduction you to this select circle of my intimate friends—friends, ladies, in my lonely hours, when I am cursed nothing. Here is my beautiful Rinka, the love of my youth, who can aside from the baron, the room stood alone. But it was not until twilight fling her tissue of purple mist over the earth that I realized the glorious beauty of the scene before me. From the balcony, the eye ranged over a vast extent of stately, lofty mansions spread over undulating fields and from sloping valleys to the summits of azure-piercing mountains. Then a fair triumphant moon shone forth, and mounted in a silvery haze that sloped drifting clouds in a mellow glory, and the frame for this sweet picture was the far-off mountains, that rose, a pleading rim, to guard the fair dreaming loveliness.

But my reverie was broken by Ray calling, "Snowbird! You, it was himself here plained, he wears in the city on business, and must go back in the morning, but he couldn't resist the temptation of "seeing the folks," and then we both became absorbed in the strange scene before us. But soon Ray tells the true reason for his coming—to let me know that he loves me, and to ask me to be his wife, and my answer is yes. There are no romantic protestations whatever.

"Your brother is in the city with me, Ray says, breaking the happy silence, "and he'd be over in a little while." I do not answer. Candidly, Frank's coming does not interest me just then!

But

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED FREE OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

— The Pope has appointed Monsignor Pampolla, now Nuncio at Madrid, Secretary of State to succeed Cardinal Jacobini.

— A cablegram from Rome, published in Friday's dailies, considerately informs the reading world that Pope Leo XIII. "has concluded to allow political liberty of thought and action in this country." This is the kind of "news" Catholics are compelled to read and digest as best they can without even daring to doubt the infallibility of the cable manipulator who resides in Paris. "Newspaper enterprise" is the modern pygmy giant that daily crushes Truth beneath its rapidly-revolving wheels.

— The Rev. W. M. Bennett of Ottawa, Ont., is dead. He passed peacefully away in the General Hospital surrounded by the good Grey Nuns, who did all within their power to alleviate his pain. The deceased was about 70 years of age. He was a subdeacon of Leo XIII., and often refused to the admirable qualities of the supreme Pontiff as evinced in his early days. Father Bennett, previous to the illness which resulted in death, was professor of English literature in the College of Ottawa.

— Extensive and very extravagant calculations appeared in the daily press last week concerning Cardinal Gibbons and the Knights of Labor. To us there are many expressions in the document to which the signature of the Cardinal is attached which look too sensational not to have emanated from him. The document in its correct condition will be published in these columns as soon as we receive it from quarters deemed far more reliable for Catholic news than the sensational concoctions of cable manipulators.

— The addition of Mr. Swift MacNeill, an honest Protestant Nationalist, to the Parliamentary phalanx of Home Rulers, will be a notable strengthening of the party intellectually. He will act as the successor of the late Mr. Bernard Kelly in South Donegal at the expense of Mr. Parnell and his principal colleagues. The election of Mr. Timothy Healy for the Longford Division, formerly held by Mr. Justin McCarthy, is imminent. His return to St. Stephen's will be hailed with pleasure by his countrymen, for, as the leader says, the popular counsellor is a man of great energy and fighting power, and these we cannot afford to do without in the crisis.

— The news from Ireland this week indicates the Tory desire of applying Coercion to the Irish people. The National party, however, are now in a position where they can successfully resist England's tyranny through the bullets and bayonets of its hireling minions in Ireland. A triangular alliance has been entered into between Gladstone, Harrington and Parnell which will, in all likelihood, solidify the Liberal party, defeat the government measure of Coercion, throw the Tories out of power, and bring back Gladstone to the post of Prime Minister. Then Home Rule for Ireland is a foregone conclusion.

— To such a degree of absurdity has the custom of flowers at funerals been carried in some of the Eastern cities that "no flowers" is the standing appendix to funeral notices by respectable relatives of deceased persons. The Boston Transcript reports that recently at the funeral of a hotel-keeper in that city, there was a floral rock strewn, set with bottles and grid-irons, and at the funeral of a market-man, there was a floral lamb composed of white pinks, save in one spot, into which a floral knife was thrust suggesting the bloody cut. After this we may expect to hear of a floral "goose" adorning some tailor's coffin, and perhaps a floral gallows standing on the casket of an executed murderer.

— Lovers of the old tongue of the Gael—who the Irish-American—will relish with pleasure of the approval given by Leo XIII. to the Irish translation of the "Imitation of Christ." But such incidents only increase the astonishment at the apparent indifference with which the gradual extirpation of the national language is regarded by Irish Catholics, by and should. Yet it apparently can be more certain than another, it is the fact that it was the Irish language which, under Providence, mainly preserved the Catholicity of the Irish nation. The English language on the Old Faith were not even understood by the Gaelic-speaking Irish; and, then, even that fragmentary success which attended Lutheranism and Calvinism, in France and Germany, was excluded from Ireland.

— There is a new religious sect established among the peasantry in the interior of Russia which is founded on the dogma that it is a sin to let a fellow-member suffer the martyrdom of disease. Accordingly, when anybody falls sick, one of the believers goes to him and strokes him to death. The person commissioned for the deed is clad in red clothes, and is known as the "red death." They do not confine their delusive attentions to the members of the sect alone, but impelled by a broad charity, seek to cure in their peculiar way every one, whoever he may be, who has the misfortune to become ill. We wish some of the "cranks" in California would form a branch of such a society in this city. "Red Death" would thus rid this afflicted community of a great many evil-disposed men for whom the world has no use.

— A very useful and instructive climatic map of California has been issued by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. This map demonstrates the fact that the mean temperature of the San Joaquin Valley and that of Los Angeles and San Diego is very nearly the same. The hottest portion of the State is the Mojave Desert and the Bernardino county, very nearly the whole of which is colored brown to designate the temperature ranging from 68° to 72°.

The fact bill bell and the regions neighboring on the coast are colored yellow, designating a temperature of 52° to 68°. Tables showing the superiority of the climate of California over more other portions of the globe, are printed on the back of the excellent map, which makes the unique publication valuable both to settlers in the State as well as to intending immigrants.

An Appeal to Catholic Parents.

We ask from every Catholic father and Catholic mother, from every Catholic in Monroe may fall, a careful and conscientious reading of the Pastoral Letter from the pen of Rt. Rev. P. Bourgade, Vicar Apostolic of Arizona, which we print for the instruction of Catholic parents this week.

An awful responsibility rests on Catholic parents, and one that they far too seldom reflect on. Each and all of us believe that Catholic faith and Christian knowledge are necessary to salvation, and yet—alas! too often—Catholic parents lose sight of the awful responsibility that rests upon them in the fact that upon them rests the future progress or prostration of the Church of the Living God in America! There is no disguising the fact that without Catholic children the children of Catholic parents will become the enemies of that Church whose precepts such parents rebelliously refused to follow.

Upon whom rests the salvation of children's souls? Not on the Church. Not on the Bishops. Not on the Priests. Not on the Brothers. Not on the Sisters. The responsibility for the salvation or the loss of the souls of our Catholic children rests alone upon Catholic parents. Vain is the hope of the Church if you will not listen to her. Useless are the wise admonitions of Bishops in Pastoral Letters if Catholic parents will not obey them. Fruitless is the advice of Priests if Catholic parents are so foolishly conceited as to refuse to follow it. And yet—it is the sight of Almighty God—the Judge, the great, as a factor in the salvation or the destruction of God's image in the soul of the child—Catholic School, Christian, grounded on teachers!

Every child sent to Catholic parents is a gift from God. The sacred Scriptures tell us that children are the inheritance of the Lord. Mark, then, the monstrous inequity of those Catholic parents who destroy the gift of God! and who direct His inheritance into the paths that lead to destruction! There is but little hope for the salvation of the soul of that parent who calls himself or herself Catholic, yet who refuses to pursue the precious gifts of God to be educated in the love, the fear and the knowledge of that Father who sends to us such "a precious inheritance."

Bishop Bourgade in his Pastoral, well and forcibly informs Catholic parents that "the enemies of God and virtue are allied to drive away from their Creator the souls of your children," and let us ask any Catholic parent who reads this paper, on which side of the contest his duty to God calls him! Will he be ranked with the enemies of God and the enemies of his own and his children's salvation, or will he not rather rally beneath the Standard of the Cross, and be marshalled among the hosts of God's children on earth?

Pause, then, Catholic parents, when you have read this profound Pastoral Letter, and if you heretofore have not sent your children to some Catholic school, do so at once, as the worst earthly wealth and honors your children can gain are those that may be purchased through the loss of the souls of their parents because they lored false education and false learning as a substitute to that faith, that knowledge, and that virtue which flow in living streams from the fountain of Christian education, as truly as descends the grace of God upon the souls of those happy Catholic parents who cherish God's gifts in a Christian spirit, and raise up their children to call them Blessed.

Adventurous Lives of Protestant Missionaries.

In the line of literary ability "to blow their own horn," we are not outpinned by any class on the community that can at all compare with Protestant preachers. They can discount even quack doctors whenever they sit down to write out their so-called "missionary adventures and to detail the "terrible sufferings" they endure in order to sow the cockle of heresy and infidelity in the garden fields of God.

We select as a sample of this evil spirit of self-adulation, the letter written by D. F. Taylor, of Fort Bidwell, printed in last week's Pacific under the incorrect and misleading caption of "The Adventurous Life of Missionaries," wherein the cockle-sowing sectarian relates a trip he recently made in the Northern part of this State in order to carry his false gospel to the benighted denizens who reside along Goose Creek and other adjacent streams. Here is the opening chapter in this evangelical eulogy:

"And now, dear Pacific, (also in the hour twilight) but one last trip to Oedenville was yet in store. I place before you a leaf from "The Adventurous Life of a Missionary and His Wife." We started down the valley Saturday morning, and, with Sunday, my wife joined us at the mouth of Goose Creek. My wife adjourned her business, and we both jumped into the hack."

"My wife adjusted her fascinator. What—in the name of woman's mysterious make-up—is a fascinator? And what part does "a fascinator" play in the propagation of Protestantism? We pause for a reply, and we appeal to the married managers of this Pacific not to keep the world in ignorance regarding this new fangled aid to missionary enterprise!

"Arrived at Goose Creek—continues the narrator—Mrs. Taylor left another duty undone, remaining that her left foot fell as it fell, thinking to her, and had a desire to go out of sickness."

Poor dear lady! Perhaps she dropped her fascinator! Or this mysterious appliance of the good lady's toilet may have become frozen! Terrible to think of! How is a member of the weaker sex most suffer who has a frozen fascinator! It makes us shudder with sympathy as we contemplate such an awful catastrophe! Ah! little does this wicked world realize the terrible terrors of "The Adventurous Life of a Missionary and His Wife."

What fate is in end, what earthly job is greater? Then what job is a frozen fascinator?

A Discrimination on Protestant Falsehood.

The ignorance displayed by Protestant preachers when they set out to libelous Catholic Church is actually astonishing. No man over pretended to write upon any scientific subject, any religious question, or any artistic theme—unless he had at least some general knowledge of the subject matter of his literary contribution. But when the Catholic Church is to be calumniated, the lie direct seems to be unnecessarily and by history the trained them every ignorance who feels bound to "expose Rome," with that he has spread "cell" to continue the Church of Christ by publicly parading his preconceived prejudices against Rome. Reckless of their own ignorance, careless concerning the truth or falsehood of their assertions indifferent as to how correct they are on the subject matter under consideration either material series fill column after column of newspapers with their bigoted blunders and their unmerited falsehoods.

The incentive inspiration which moves Protestant preachers thus to break every commandment of Almighty God by bearing false witness against their Catholic neighbor, comes from the Father of Lies who continually goes about the Church of God as a roaring lion, and whose power on earth is manifested through a multitude of servants, "the spirit of error."

In the columns of the Pacific last week we noticed a communication from Mr. Ellis, concerning the Whitman massacre, which took place in Oregon in 1847, and regarding which more fulminations has been exhibited by Protestant preachers, and more falsehoods have been written by that same class of calumniators, than would fill the entire of Mount Vesuvius.

Mr. Ellis may be a very good kind of a gospel slinger; he may be able to tell the difference between a rail fence and a railroad tie; but when it comes to questions concerning the Catholic Church, the man is so utterly ignorant that he does not know the difference between a Priest and a Bishop. This is a fact, as we will show to readers shortly, yet this Mr. Ellis undertakes to enlighten the readers of the Pacific upon matters of history which all his information comes from Spalding, the not-that-the slanderer, and Gray, the widely known Protestant minister of Chicago Plains.

Mr. Ellis thus perpetrates his first blunder:

"The massacre took place on Monday, but Mr. Spalding did not hear of it until he was within three miles of Dr. Whitman, where he met Bishop Brouillet, a Catholic priest, who had just come from the scene of death."

Good Father Brouillet! Poor fellow! he! to be made to play a double ecclesiastical role through the ignorance of this scribe, who continues to call him "Bishop Brouillet all through his badly sanctified screed. Mr. Ellis also fogies to tell his readers that it was Father Brouillet who saved the life of Spalding, whose ungratitude led him after wards to slander his benefactor. This fact is admitted by Spalding himself in a letter which he wrote to Bishop Blanchet, (recorded in Gray's work under date of December 10, 1847, in which he makes this candid admission:

"Rev. and Dear Friend.—This hasty note may inform you that I am yet alive through the mercy of God. The hand of the Merciful God brought me to my family three days and nights from the time my dear friend (Father Brouillet) separated me with protestations of mercy from the Indians."

Pause, Catholic parents, when you have read this profound Pastoral Letter, and if you heretofore have not sent your children to some Catholic school, do so at once, as the worst earthly wealth and honors your children can gain are those that may be purchased through the loss of the souls of their parents because they lored false education and false learning as a substitute to that faith, that knowledge, and that virtue which flow in living streams from the fountain of Christian education, as truly as descends the grace of God upon the souls of those happy Catholic parents who cherish God's gifts in a Christian spirit, and raise up their children to call them Blessed.

A Professor Who Perverts Historical Truth.

In the Pamphlets of Friday last we find an account of an interview between a representative of that journal and a certain Herr Dr. Alexander, Professor of Church History in the San Francisco Theological Seminary, concerning the Waldenses, in which the latter gentleman undertook to give a lecture of the historical sort, and among other matters—he said that Pope Innocent III. virtually gave the Waldenses the power of excommunicating the Catholic Bishops. Herr Alexander's version of Professor Michelet's language.

Pope Innocent III., one of the greatest of the Pontiffs, had the sagacity to perceive the power and tendency of his principles, which this feudal and military age had deprived the Church of a body of men, who might form powerful auxiliaries against the Church. Accordingly, he sanctioned the Waldenses the power of excommunicating the Catholic Bishops, with the child-like notion, as we have seen, that they would be burned for it. But it was a wise idea, and it succeeded.

The latter statement is entirely untrue. Neither Pope Innocent III., nor any other Pontiff, who ruled the Church of God could or would bestow on any body of laymen the right to excommunicate Bishops.

In the year 1179, the Waldenses appealed to Pope Alexander III., from the decision of the Archbishop of Lyons, who had forbidden them to preach, and the Pope replied—that in interfering with the duties of the clergy, and referred their back again to the Bishop of Lyons for further information. Matters rested in this position until Pope Alexander died and his successor, Lucius III., was elected, when the Waldenses again sent a petition to Rome asking permission to preach. Pope Lucius III., not only refused their petition, but in the Synod of Verona, in 1184 he published anathemas against the Waldenses and their heresies.

These will appeal to Catholic readers as a very little to the purpose, but we will show that the Pope referred to in the Pamphlets, who is said to have conferred on the Waldenses the power of excommunicating their Bishops, was not Innocent III., but Innocent IV., who ascended the throne of St. Peter in 1243, and who died in 1254. Now, we will show that Innocent IV. was a very different man from Innocent III., and that he was the author of the Inquisition, which Innocent III. had nothing to do with. We will show that Innocent IV. was the author of the Bull, which authorized the torture of the Waldenses, and that Innocent III. was the author of the Bull which authorized the Albigenses to be burned, and that Innocent IV. was the author of the Bull which authorized the Bishops of Lyons to be burned, and that Innocent III. was the author of the Bull which authorized the Waldenses to be burned, and that Innocent IV. was the author of the Bull which authorized the Waldenses to be tortured

Farm and Home.

The World's Tea Drinkers.

The popular idea that the people of Great Britain consume more tea on the average per head of population than any other country in the world is now shown to be erroneous. The Australian Colonies and New Zealand (according to one of the Indian journals) drink far more tea per head of population than the British Islands. The Australians come first, with 7 lbs per head; the New Zealanders next, with 7.22 pounds per head; while the people of Great Britain, though appearing third in the list consume only 4.86 pounds each. New-foundland and Canada come next, while in the United States the consumption is only 1.30 pounds per head; and in Russia, which is always regarded as a great tea drinking country, the consumption is only .61 pounds per head. Belgium, Sweden, Austro-Hungary and Spain consume less than the other European nations. But in certain parts of the countries named tea drinking is much more common than in others. In certain Russian districts, especially, tea is drank constantly and copiously, and it is this fact which has given rise to the notion that Russia is the most bibulous of all tea-drinking countries.

How to Sweep.

Sweep with a long, steady stroke, taking care to form a belt of raising the broom at the end of the stroke in such a way as to prevent dust raising. Watch some women sweep as if they were digging; a small cloud of dust will follow the end of the broom every time it is raised.

Be careful and go into every corner with the end of your broom, and be careful to dust from between carpet or matting and skirting board, as here is where moths love to harbor. Sweep from all sides of the room to the centre. This sweeping to the centre instead of to the door may strike readers as an innovation, but if they will consider a moment they will see that there is no reason whatever for dragging be dust all over the room.

Sweeping towards the centre of a kitchen just square room, you only sweep the dust eight feet each way, instead of carrying it before the broom the whole sixteen feet. Short quick strokes of the broom are apt to scatter the dust, especially when the strokes ends with an upward jerk, as I have often seen it do when the broom is in the hands of vigorous girls who image they are getting over the ground much more rapidly by hurried movements than they would if they took greater pains.

A Lesson on Home Subjects.

In a recent discourse by a prominent non Catholic clergyman, the prevalence of crime in our communities is attributed to three main causes, viz.: "The haste to be rich," "Extravagance in living," and "The false education and culture of our young women." The discourse was directed to the consideration of those evils, and his severe reprehensions of them were well-timed. He closed his sermon with the following good paragraph:

When, therefore, parents and daughters realize how much better it is to be wise and useful, than to shine and glitter—when our young ones enter their new homes with characters formed on a solid moral and religious basis—when all men and women are ready to lay off all pretension and let every presence to seem precisely what they are—when all foolish extravagance ceases, every one learns to live according to his means, and to feel that death is to be all ways preferred to dishonor—then we shall have removed at least one cause of a large class of crimes. Then ends-element and fraud, forgery and theft, will become less familiar words than they are now.

Drinking a Farm.

"My homeless friend with the chronic nose, while you are stirring up the sugar in that ten cent glass of gin, let me give you a fact to wash down with it. You say you have longed for years for the time, independent life of the farmer, but have never been able to get enough money together to buy a farm. Now this is just where you are mistaken. For several years you have been drinking a good improved farm at the rate of 100 square feet a glass. If you doubt this statement figure it for yourself. An acre of land contains 43,560 square feet. Estimating, for convenience, the land at $40 50 per acre, you will see that this brings the lands to just one mill per square foot, or cent for ten square feet. Now your down that they does, and just imagine you are swallowing a strawberry patch. Call in five of your friends and have them help you gulp down that 300 foot garden. Go on in a prolonged spree some day, and see how long a time it requires to swallow a pasture large enough to feed a cow. Put down that glass!—there is first 1—100 square feet of good, rich dirt, worth $43 56 per acre."

But there are plenty of farms which do not cost more than a tenth part of $43 56 per acre. When an enormous acreage has gone down many a homeless drinker's throat. No wonder such men are buried in the potter's field; they have swallowed farms, and gardens, and homes, and even drank up their own graveyard.—H. I. Hastings.

Courtesy at Home.

"The foundation of courtesy is unselfishness and the desire to please." How much happier would home be if true politeness found its way there; and why should we not be polite at home, and make our nearest friends as happy as we can? We see people in society that look as though they were the "pink of politeness," but when they return home they carry gloom and sadness to great their nearest friends. We should be as agreeable at home as we strive to be in society. We should be as polite as possible when we wish to make anyone happy. Home should be the brightest and happiest spot on earth for kindness and cheerfulness should be the rules. "Happyie the home and happy are children is not allowed to enter, and where gentle, forbearing courtesy is the rule of all; where the happiness of all is the consideration of each one."

Worrying over Things.

The older I grow the less I feel like worrying over things. I am essentially optimistic in my tendencies. Worry makes people gray and crinkled and bald, and I slept consciously to my youthful looks.

I often wonder why some men will help wrinkles to deepen and increase baldness by flying into such passions when their meals are a little late, or the buttons are off their shirts. I know a Christian man a "performer," a deacon in the church, who makes his wife's life a burden to her because of his occasion complaining and scolding about trifles. Do other readers know such husbands? Heaven forbid that one such has fallen to the portion of any reader of this. I call such men vicious. We allow too many trifles to worry and fret us, and once now a man noted for his mental vigor and great learning swell up and pour upon his wife rage because—he couldn't find his hat. How many is it for a man to make a family wretched by this habit of whining and complaining and scolding. Life is too short to waste any of it in such useless moonlings.

—In hysterics of cases, Hood's Sarsaparilla by purifying and invigorating the blood, has proven a great remedy for rheumatism. Hence, if you suffer the pains and aches of this disease, it is safe to assume that Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure you. Give it a trial.

Family Fun

Misplaced Confidence.

"Where did you get that watch?" said her husband, as she very ostentatiously pulled out a watch and looked at it.

"I bought it."

"A Christmas present?"

"No; I bought it for myself. I couldn't help it. I could see a poor lady starve and I bought the woman a watch."

"Just like you," he said. "You're always doing something kind—with my money.

"You're not mad, John, are you?"

"No; let me look at it. What did you give for it?"

"Forty dollars."

"Forty dollars!" and she husband began examining it.

"It is all you have it happened. I was passing along this street and there was an auction going on in a store.

"An auction! Oh!"

"Yes, I was listening and looking, and as I stood there a poor, ill-dressed man came up. He pulled out his watch, and he asked the auctioneer if he'd auction it for him. He said his wife and family were starving, and she was an old family heirloom, and he wished to sell it. Well, the auctioneer said he'd sell it, and he put it up, and all they'd bid for it was $7. The poor fellow began to cry. It's worth $100," he said. "Won't somebody give more than $7? I can't sell it for that. I've had an offer of $45." And I got mad and sorry for the poor man, and bid $8 and somebody bid $9, and I bid $10, and finally they got it up to $40 and I bought it. The poor fellow's the man went off relieved and happy, and I was glad that I'd done a good deed at a bargain.

"Yes, the poor chap was relieved. I don't doubt it. This watch is worth $1.75, and that was a good deed, and this poor distressed-looking man was a cooper for the establishment. He does that twenty times a day."

"Oh, John!"

"Just like you, my dear. Always doing something stupid—with my money."

"Well, I believe I do."

Topnoddy Taken Down.

Mr. Topnoddy threw down his newspaper with a muttered objugation, and looked across the table at his wife.

"What's the matter? she inquired.

"The confounded civil service reform troubles makes me sick, he exclaimed. "I don't see why it is that a lot of men can't do their duty when it is marked out plainly before them."

"Did you order that coal to day? she asked irrelevantly, but with a new light shining in her face.

"I beg your pardon, my dear," he said picking up his paper again, "that's get right to do with civil service reform."

"Did you order that coal, I said," she persisted.

"No—no, my dear," he hesitated. "I forgot all about it. But I'll do it the first thing in the morning. As I was saying, my dear, this civil service reform—"

"Don't talk to me, Topnoddy, about civil service reform," she said hotly. "What you want to devote your time and attention to domestic service reform. There isn't a lump of coal in the cellar; the boards are off the sofa force; that back yard looks like a pig-pen; there hasn't been a stick of kindling chopped since Saturday; you haven't given me a cent of money in two weeks, and the cook's going to leave in the morning. You may think that's the way to do things, Topnoddy, but I want to say to you that I'm running this admiralition now, and if you don't stop fooling with politics and attend to business you'll hear from headquarters after a fashion that will make your head ache. Civil service reform, indeed!"

Topnoddy never said a word; he knew better.

A Pretty Mean Man.

Old Billy W. was one of the richest men who lived some fifteen years ago, in that part of West Philadelphia called Mantua, and one of the meanest men who ever drew breath. One day he took a Lutheran Avenue for the city, having in his hand a basket of superb white grapes, raised in his own greenhouse. Old Billy W. sat in one corner of the car, and a poor mother with a sickly child in her lap sat in the corner opposite. The child looked at the grapes wistfully as the car rolled on, square after square. At last the old man, in a time of rampire curiosity, asked the child where she was going.

"To the park, sir, to see the grass and the birds."

"Do you like grapes?"

"Yes, sir," and the pale little face bright ened up as the child half rose from her mother's lap.

The old man lifted up his basket of luscious fruit, and, plucking one grape from a gigantic bunch, gave it to the child.

The rest of the passengers said nothing, but the way they looked at the old man would have split a stone post.

Couldn't Fool Him.

An Union Creek dairy visited the establishment of an Austin jeweler.

"I wish, boss, you would regulate dis fresh pendulum."

"How can I regulate the pendulum without the rest of the clock?"

"Dem outfin the mester wid de rest ob de inards ob de clock, yo' I jess lof 'em at home. Jess you fix up the perjulum. If de perjulum goes all right de rest of de clock goes all right, too. I know dat much, cbes if I ain't had no book larnin."

Not a Farmer.

"You are not a farmer, are you, Mr. Feathery?" Flabby inquired, as that young man settled himself on the sofa for a party call.

"Certainly not, Bobby," he replied, "I'm in the dry goods line. Why?"

"Because pa told me that from the way you acted at the supper table last night you must believe in makin' hay while the sun shines.

Everything Goes.

"Would you take a poor man's last cent for a glass of gin?" asked the tramp, in a very careful voice.

"Certainly," replied the bartender, briskly, "that's what I'm here for."

"Well," said the tramp, as he returned the glass to the counter and produced his last cent, "there you are," and then he walked sorrowfully but hastily away.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the membrane lining of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it is now made easy to cure these cases of catarrh by the use of two simple applications made by the patient at home. Send stamp for circular describing this new treatment to A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request Mr. Dixon, M., is staying at the Melville House (formerly Tremont) 1103 Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Hours—10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Consultation free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

THE GENTLE, YET EFFECTUAL ACTION OF THIS WELL KNOWN REMEDY HAS RENDERED IT a favorite medicine, here placed it at the head of all medicines.

No household should be without it. It purgates as well as cures Torpid Liver, Headache, Neuralgia, Sick, Colic, Indigestion, Constipation, Fevers, Dispiriousness, Lassitude, Pain Breath, and every disease brought on sedentary or disordered stomach.

It has as equal as a Preparatory Medicine: No matter what the ailment, a dose of it will afford relief, and in ordinary cases will effect a speedy cure. It is safe for any and every by thousands of people have endorsed it as

THE BEST FAMILY MEDICINE

D. M ENCARINI. 911 Mission St., San Francisco, Cal. Manufacturer and Importer of RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC. Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc. THE ONLY COMPLETE COLLECTION ON THE PACIFIC COAST. ☞ Catalogue sent free on application.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 767. ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Boarding Houses, Ranches, Dairies, Salmon Stands, Canneries, Chinatown, and Martinez Employes on hand. Hotels, Restaurants, Saloons, Boarding Houses, Private Families, Ranches, Dairies, Canneries, Etc., supplied with Waiters, Cooks, Bartenders, Dishwashers, Chambermaids, Laundresses, Etc., at short notice on shortest notice. Single office rooms for rent.

PATENTS THOS. P. SIMPSON, Washington, D. C. Established 1865. No fee until patent issued. Write for Inventor's Guide.

THE NEWEST BOOKS.

St. Alphonsus' Works. Centenary Edition Vol. I. The Passion and the Death of Jesus Christ. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Vol. II. Preparation for Death. 12mo, $1.25. Vol. III. The Way of Salvation and Other Sermons. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Vol. IV. The Great Means of Salvation and Perfection. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Vol. V. The Incarnation, Birth, and Infancy of Jesus Christ. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. St. Joseph, the Advocate of Hopeless Cases. From the French of Rev. Father Huchet, Marist. 32mo, cloth, $1.25. Meditations on the Sufferings of Jesus Christ. From the Italian of Rev. Father de Ponlevoy, S.J. 12mo, cloth, $1.25. Abandonment; or, Absolute Surrender to Divine Providence. By Rev. J. P. Chaignon, S.J. Edited and Revised by Rev. H. Rawes, S.J. 12mo, cloth, 50 cents.

Hand-book for Altar Societies containing Instructions on the Ministry of an Altar Society, Hints, Rules, and Regulations, etc. 75 cents.

The Glories of Divine Grace. A Treatise on Predestination, according to the Principles of St. Thomas Aquinas, by Rev. J. F. Chanels, S.J. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

Illustrated Catechism of Christian Doctrine. Approved by Cardinal Archbishop of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. Published by Cardinal Gibbons. 12mo, boards, cloth, 25 cents.

50th Thousand of Catholic Belief. 40 cts. 10 copies, $3.50; 100 copies, $25.00; 100 copies, $20.00.

Sold by All Catholic Booksellers and Agents.

IN PRESS, SIXTH EDITION, REVISED

Elements of Ecclesiastical Law. Vol. I. Ecclesiastical Persons. 6/. Revised by Rev. Thos. Lynch, Author of Moral Rev. Archbishop of New York. 6/6, cloth, 6/. $2.50 by mail. Notes on request.

BENZIGER BROS., Printers to the Holy Apostolic See, MANUFACTURERS AND IMPORTERS OF Vestments and Church Ornaments, New York, Cincinnati, and St. Louis.

Tutt's Pills SAVES MONEY. One box of these pills will save many dollars the doctor's bills. They are specially prepared as a Family Medicine. and adapted to meet every ailment that may arise in a family. Their action upon the digestive organs is so thorough and yet so mild, that they are free from all fear of producing any disturbance in the most delicate constitution. They are Sugar Coated, and are in every respect the most perfect pill made. PRICE 25 CTS. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

☞ Show this copy of the MONITOR to your Catholic friends and neighbors, and ask them to subscribe. Only $2 a year when paid in advance.

EVERYTHING THAT IS NEW AND RARE IN SEEDS AND PLANTS. CATALOGUE No. 139, which fully sets forth our claims, is issued in two editions, one for the Vegetable and Flower Seed Department, and the other for the Seed Potato Department. Both editions are elegantly illustrated, and contain, besides 7 beautiful colored plates, and very full instructions on garden culture, 100 pages of matter, and will be found the most complete and reliable publication of its kind ever issued. Mailed on receipt of 10 cents (in stamps, which may be deducted from first order). Prices low, here is a sample: 12 Choice Cabbage Plants for 10 cents. PETER HENDERSON & CO., 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

1887. GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE. 1887. What Mr. Beyer says: "Your Seeds for the market made me rich." Gregory's Seed Catalogue for 1887 will be mailed free to all who apply for it. It should not be confounded with the ordinary catalogues issued by seed dealers. It is a book of 176 pages, with five colored plates, and is the most beautiful and costly work of the kind published in America. It contains the results of 36 years' experience in the business, and is a guide to the production of the best vegetables and flowers. Its price is only 10 cents, but as it is intended only for those who will plant its contents, we shall mail it free to all who will write for it. Address, JOHN A. GREGORY, Marblehead, Mass.

RELIABLE AGENTS STARTED IN BUSINESS WITHOUT CAPITAL Write for Particulars. Agents make from $10, $15, $20, $30 or $40 per day. Agents wanted everywhere. Business strictly legitimate. Large profits assured to active men. Many agents are now making from $20 to $50 per day selling these pumps. Agents cannot help selling pumps when they once see them. Farmers, Mechanics, Manufacturers, Merchants, Doctors, Lawyers, Ministers, Women, all succeed. Agents report selling from 3 to 10 pumps per day. Independent to all who engage. Employing others to work for them, and paying them from $5 to $10 per day, is a business by itself. Our hands are full with our business. We can only briefly state the above facts. Those who see our pumps work, understand the business at once, and need no further evidence. Those who do not, we do not care to have. The Private Bag Attachment is a wonderful invention. They will raise water 25 feet with the bag attachment, as easily as 25 feet without it. Our Patent Suction Valve is the only one which will not lose its power by wear. Our Patent Self-Adjusting Packing Ring is the best and most durable packing ever used. WE WILL BE PROVED AS REPRESENTED OR MONEY REFUNDED. Address, F. C. LEWIS, Cobbill, New York.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD. THE DISPATCH BETWEEN SAN FRANCISCO AND PETALUMA. COMMENCING SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1886, AND UNTIL further notice, Boats and Trains will leave and arrive at the Narrow Gauge Passenger Depot, Market street, foot of Mission street.

Leave S. F.	Destination.	Arrive S. F.
7:15 A.M. / 3:30 P.M.	Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Fulton, Windsor, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale, and Way Stations	10:40 A.M. / 6:50 P.M.
7:45 A.M. / 5:00 P.M.	Guerneville	12:10 P.M. / 9:00 P.M.

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for White Sulphur Springs, Sebastopol and Mark West Springs. At Cloverdale for Geyserville, Skaggs Springs, and at Cloverdale for High Spur, Kelseyville, Soda Bay, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Bucknell's, Saratoga, Springs, Highland Springs, Kelseyville, and the Geysers.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Saturdays to Monday, to Petaluma, $1.75; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $3.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only—to Petaluma, $1 50; to Santa Rosa, $1 50; to Healdsburg, $2; to Cloverdale, $2 50; to Guerneville $2 00.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon, Main and Broadway Docks: 7:45, 9:15, 11:00 A.M., 2:30, 4:15, 5:45, 6:45 P.M. Sundays—8:00 A.M., 2:30 P.M., 4:30 P.M., 5:45 P.M., 6:45 P.M.

To San Francisco from Point Tiburon: Week Days—6:50 A.M., 8:15 A.M., 10:00 A.M., 1:00 P.M., 3:45 P.M., 5:15 P.M., 6:15 P.M. Sundays—8:15 A.M., 7:00 A.M., 12:15 P.M., 3:30 P.M., 5:15 P.M., 6:15 P.M.

To San Francisco from Point Tiburon: Week Days—7:45 A.M., 9:15 A.M., 11:00 A.M., 2:30 P.M., 4:15 P.M., 5:45 P.M., 6:45 P.M. Sundays—8:00 A.M., 10:00 A.M., 12:00 P.M., 3:30 P.M., 5:15 P.M., 6:15 P.M.

F. W. MELIS, Land Agent. CPENAR, Gen'l Ticket Agent. JEROME MATHEW, Gen. Pass. Agent. N. KOMSTEDT, Gen'l Manager. T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agent. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

RAILROAD LANDS For Sale on Reasonable Terms. Apply to, or address, JEROME MATHEW, Land Agent, C.P.R.R., SPEKS, N. KOMSTEDT, T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Manager. Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO., IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF PAINTS, OILS and GLASS 112 and 114 California St., SAN FRANCISCO.

A. F. KNORP, MAIN STREET MILL. 120-122 MAIN ST., Bet. Mission and Howard San Francisco. Planing, Sawing, Turning, Shaping Wood Carpet, Moulding, Tenoning, Tongue and Groove Planing, Mortising, Tenoning, Sawing, Turning, Shaping, Moulding, Sash, Doors, Blinds, Frames, Mouldings, Pickets, Rail Posts, Stair Balusters and Carpet Turning, Etc. Sash, Doors and Carpet Turning a specialty.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL. MARVELOUS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS. Has a Pad different from all others. Retains the Rupture under all circumstances, even during violent exertion. Sent on trial. Also for Female Complaints. Illustrated Circulars with testimonials free. Mention this paper. DR. JAYNE & CO., 1044 Arch St., Philadelphia. DOES WITHOUT A TOUCH. Sold by Druggists. Pamphlet free. Mention this paper. BOLSTER TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

JOHN F. LYONS, NOTARY PUBLIC AND Commissioner of Deeds for All the States and Territories. OFFICE, - 413 Montgomery St. Residence, - 1213 Polk St. ☞ Advertisements cannot be inserted before or after time, due or third Tuesday. Insertion Fees Strictly Cash. Advertisements must be in the office by 12 m. on Tuesday to insure insertion in the issue of the following Friday.

WE WANT YOU! A few energetic men or women to introduce our goods and take orders. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or large commission. Sample free. Address, STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

BEST PIANOS. $500 Pianos from $50 upwards. New Pianos on low as $150. Antistell Famous Pianos gained highest award over 150 makers. All Pianos sold by us guaranteed for 7 years. Backed by half a million dollars capital. CALL ON T. M. Antissell Piano Co. 7th and Market Sts., O. P. Hall.

KNABE PIANOS. Unequalledly and Emphatically the Best Piano in the World. L. E. SHERMAN & CO., Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

ESTEY PIANOS Superior in Tone and Finish. UNEXCELLED IN DURABILITY. BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, Agents, 770 Market Street, San Francisco

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, covered gymnasium, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a museum of Natural Philosophy and Natural History, collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, philosophical and chemical apparatus, a Astronomical Observatory, Library of 5,000 volumes and active at San Francisco Passenger Depot, Market street foot of Mission street.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

[Payable semi-monthly in advance]

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once. $ 15 00
Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of ten months 200 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Father Bronsgeest, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.

REV. P. E. KENNY, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME SAN JOSE ..... CALIFORNIA

This institution offering peculiar advantages to young ladies, which are not to be found in any other institution in the State, has been incorporated by the State Legislature, and empowered to confer the degrees and grant the diplomas usually conferred by other institutions of the State, and to confer all the rights and privileges of College grads.

It occupies large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, shady walks, and is noted for extreme healthfulness and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the Departments. Every facility will be afforded to students who may find it desirable to prepare for the state examinations for teachers.

Special attention is given to the study of the language. The Spanish language is taught by a native teacher, who is a lady well versed in the best modes of teaching. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, payable in advance.

Entrance Fee, for Tuition, to be paid one time ..... $ 10 00
Board, Tuition, Washing and Mending of Linen, Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Elocution, from entrance 150 00
Southwestern, French and Spanish 150 00

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY, ANAHEIM, ORANGE CO., CAL. Conducted by the Sisters of St. Dominic. Address all Communications to SISTER SUPERIOR.

JOB PRINTING. Any of the Best Cheap Printshops of which Society officials or Business men who desire serve money by having their Job Printing executed at the Lowest Rates, of Cash, at the Office of the MONITOR, 510 Sansome street, the most reliable place in the city to patronize. ☞ Call and get estimates and be convinced.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY 417 MONTGOMERY ST. Half's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes. 311 and 313 California Street. Safes made for church and other uses. Go and look over our stock and see for yourselves.

BOILERS RIVETED AND SOLD, BY A. BOYCOCK 1306 Montgomery street.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. Conducted by the Brothers of the Christian Schools. Offers Every Facility for Acquiring a Thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL course receive the degree of A. B.; in Scientific, B. S. in the Commercial, Diploma.

The Commercial course has been established for the benefit of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our care is given to moral education. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class room.

TERMS:

[Payable, invariably in advance.]

Board, Tuition, Medical Attendance, Books, Stationery, Washing and Mending, per term of Five Months $150.00
Day Students 40.00
Vocation at College 50.00
Extra Charge for Music and Drawing.

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME BY SAN FRANCISCO, FOR YOUNG LADIES. CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

This institution, founded in 1851, received in 1857 by Act of the Legislature, authority to confer Diplomas and Academic Honors, and in 1863 was made a Branch of the Mission Church. The course of instruction is thorough, and the education of the young ladies is the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

TERMS:

Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, per session $250 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

Piano use of Instrument per session. $60 00
Vocal Music 30 00
Harp, Guitar, Violin 30 00
Drawing, per session 30 00
Painting in Oil, per session 30 00
Painting in Oil, per lesson 2 00
Painting in Water Colors 30 00
Graduating Fee 10 00

Pupils's Fees for use of sheet music.

Bills are presented and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (cash in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2nd Collegiate Classes $ 10
Tuition in the 3rd and 4th Collegiate Classes 7 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory Classes 5 00
Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes 4 00
Tuition in the 3rd and 4th Preparatory Classes 3 00
Tuition (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing Calisthenics and Private Elocution Lessons form extra charges, as in Boarding School, but reduced to one half. Separate Bills are presented (cash in advance) as also Plain and Fancy Needle work.

☞ A private entrance is furnished, in moderate rates, for the convenience of pupils residing in distant parts of the city.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, SAN LUIS OBISPO ..... CALIFORNIA

[COUPONS AND DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES, conducted by the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. Terms, $20 per month. This house is the Rectorate of the order. Address, SISTER MARY OF THE PROVIDENCE, Principal.

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, OAKLAND ..... CALIFORNIA. CONDUCTED BY The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

This institution is pleasantly situated, but only a few minutes walk from the Broadway, affording an extensive view of the bay. The building is large and well adapted to the purpose, and every care has been bestowed to provide for the comfort of the boarders.

The course of instruction embraces the various branches of a thorough education.

TERMS (Payable half yearly in advance):

Board and Tuition in English, French, Spanish, per session of ten months $150 00
Washing, per month 2 50
Bed and Bedding 10 00
Music, Piano lessons, with use of instrument 10 00
Harp or Guitar, lessons and use of instrument 10 00

☞ No deduction for required. For further information address the Mother Superior.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, A Select Boarding School. Conducted by the Brothers of Christian Schools. Fifth and Jackson Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.

This institution is a select boarding school for boys up to the age of fifteen years. Its location is healthy, and the premises are large and well adapted to the purpose. The course of instruction is thorough, and the education of the young boys is the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

TERMS (Payable invariably in advance):

Board and Tuition in English, French and Spanish, per session of ten months $150 00
Washing, per month 2 50
Bed and Bedding 10 00
Music (Piano use of instrument) 10 00
Harp or Guitar, lessons and use of instrument 10 00

☞ No deduction for required. For further information address the Brothers.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY, Oakland Cor. Ave. San Francisco. DIRECTED BY THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.

This academy pleasantly situated in the Mission District, has been established by the Sisters of St. Dominic, who have charge of the Rosario Academy, comprises the substantials and ornamentals of a thorough education, at moderate terms. For particulars address the Sisters as above.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE, HOLLISTER, SAN BENITO CO., CAL. Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies. Conducted by the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. Terms moderate. For further particulars address the SISTERS OF THE SACRED HEART OF MARY, Hollister, Cal.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY, ALAMEDA, CAL. (Branch of the College of Notre Dame, San Jose.) Now Commenced Second Work at July. TERMS (PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY IN ADVANCE): Board and Tuition in English, French and Latin, per session of ten months ..... $150. The Academy is within the grounds of the Park. Pupils are not required to take lessons in music unless they desire to do so. Pupils should be prepared to make their suitable wardrobe. For further particulars address, SISTER DAME ADVERTISED, ALEMEDA.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies, SAUSALITO, ... CALIFORNIA. Conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. TERMS: (Payment invariably in advance) Entrance Fee, for Tuition, to be paid one time ..... $10 00. Board, Tuition, Washing and Mending of Linen, Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Elocution from extra charges ..... 150 00. Southwestern, French and Spanish ..... 150 00.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY, ANAHEIM, ORANGE CO., CAL. Conducted by the Sisters of St. Dominic. Address all Communications to SISTER SUPERIOR.

JOB PRINTING. Any of the Best Cheap Printshops of which Society officials or Business men who desire serve money by having their Job Printing executed at the Lowest Rates, of Cash, at the Office of the MONITOR, 510 Sansome street, the most reliable place in the city to patronize. ☞ Call and get estimates and be convinced.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY 417 MONTGOMERY ST. Half's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes. 311 and 313 California Street. Safes made for church and other uses. Go and look over our stock and see for yourselves.

BOILERS RIVETED AND SOLD, BY A. BOYCOCK 1306 Montgomery street.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, A Select Boarding School. Conducted by the Brothers of Christian Schools. Fifth and Jackson Sts., OAKLAND, CAL.

This institution is a select boarding school for boys up to the age of fifteen years. Its location is healthy, and the premises are large and well adapted to the purpose. The course of instruction is thorough, and the education of the young boys is the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

TERMS (Payable invariably in advance):

Board and Tuition in English, French and Spanish, per session of ten months $150 00
Washing, per month 2 50
Bed and Bedding 10 00
Music (Piano use of instrument) 10 00
Harp or Guitar, lessons and use of instrument 10 00

☞ No deduction for required. For further information address the Brothers.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY, Oakland Cor. Ave. San Francisco. DIRECTED BY THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.

This academy pleasantly situated in the Mission District, has been established by the Sisters of St. Dominic, who have charge of the Rosario Academy, comprises the substantials and ornamentals of a thorough education, at moderate terms. For particulars address the Sisters as above.

URSULINE ACADEMY, FOR YOUNG LADIES, SANTA ROSA, ... SONOMA CO., CAL.

For Particulars Address the Superiores of the Ursulines, Santa Rosa. Seventh Annual Session Begins August 1st.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels, SANTA CLARA ..... CALIFORNIA.

This institution, conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity to young ladies to acquire a refined and intellectual education, combined with the advantages of a home. The course of instruction is thorough, and the education of the young ladies is the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences at the beginning of August and ends in June.

Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Per quarter, payable in advance.

Entrance Fee, for Tuition, to be paid one time $10 00
Board, Tuition, Washing and Mending of Linen, Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Elocution from extra charges 150 00
Southwestern, French and Spanish 150 00

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, BY SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA. Conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. TERMS: (Payment invariably in advance) Entrance Fee, for Tuition, to be paid one time ..... $10 00. Board, Tuition, Washing and Mending of Linen, Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Elocution from extra charges ..... 150 00. Southwestern, French and Spanish ..... 150 00.

MT. ST. MARY'S, GRASS VALLEY, ... CALIFORNIA. THIS INSTITUTION COMMODIOUSLY FOR THE SISTERS of Mercy, in connection with the Convent of Mercy, San Francisco, is now in full operation. The building is large and well adapted to the purpose, and every care has been bestowed to provide for the comfort of the boarders. The course of instruction embraces the various branches of a thorough education. The scholastic year commences on the first Monday in August and ends in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS (Payable half yearly in advance): Board and Tuition in English, French, Spanish, per session of ten months ..... $150 00. Washing, per month ..... 2 50. Bed and Bedding ..... 10 00. Music (Piano use of instrument) ..... 10 00. Harp or Guitar, lessons and use of instrument ..... 10 00. ☞ No deduction made for temporary absence.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA. Studies will be Resumed Aug. 30th. THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1851, chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with the rights and privileges of a College, is conducted by the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. Reference required, for terms and particulars address, COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, Marysville, Cal.

Our Young Folks.

☞ Short, original contributions (1 page) will be accepted for this Department. Write on one side of the paper only. Give your full address of contribution should you desire your name kept.

Communications should be written on one side of the paper only, with pen and ink, and in the proper form.

THE POET AND THE SAGE.

(WRITTEN FOR THE MONITOR BY C. A. C.)

In olden days when the spirit of Poesy first came from Heaven to Earth to cheer, with the hope of its mission and the light of its countenance, the toiling spirits of the industrious and good, there lived a poet famed for the beauty and dignity of his compositions and the religious purity of his conceptions. His versatility was remarkable, and when he gained the plaudits of the populace—for in those days poems were publicly recited—yet amongst a few sitals, his name and fame were highly spoken, for entry and spirit close fed their jealous judgment. These rivals pretended to be friends to the poet, and took advantage of this guise, to constantly challenge him to perform various things in his art. But they had failed to place him with their quarrs, until one day the question was given to him for solution. "Give annulled life and Death, wherein the better gauge, merchants, and shepherds of Arcadia, and the Sicilian Sea." Now, in which the glory and the gain of both will be portrayed."

The poet thought awhile, and then, with a sigh, and finally resigned his challenges to return at a certain day and hour his answer to it. In the interim the poet thought steadily and long, but without a single word. He could conjure up nothing which would truly, yet without bitterness, portray the life and death of man. Driven to despair almost at his signal failure, he lethargically himself of a stage where fired close by, and was fascinated by its burning. To him, therefore, our poet had The sage being asked the apparently puzzling question, in our good's astonishment, at once replied: "My Brother, the cruise you set for is within the Heavens—in the Sun. He portrays

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA CITY.

Catholic Affairs on the Comstock—Bright Mining Prospects this Year—Gleanings Drawn from President Clieland's Letter to Catholic Citizens. Father John Nolty's Labors in Nevada.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nevada, March 5, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

Dear Sir—A few callings from this silver region may not prove unfavorable to your numerous readers. Owing to the great amount of work which has recently taken place in this Nevada Mountains, and which is now safely stored away in the hands of eastern capitalists, the people of Virginia City have every reason to hope for a very lively and prosperous coming summer. The snow, melting under the sun, forms numerous rills and streams which will flow to swell the waters in the Carson river, thus supplying ample motive-power to the mills for crushing and pulverizing the rock which contains the precious ores. The miners and officers of the famous Comstock lode feel happy in view of such bright prospects of continued prosperity.

NOT WHILE THE MATERIAL INTERESTS of our city are so hopeful, while a better age has already dawned upon our battle-born State, the far more important affairs of Christianity claim all the present time a great deal of attention. Realizing the absolute necessity of having the growing and impressionable mind and faculties of our youth to bloom and expand beneath the salutary influence of religion, and knowing from past experience that in some cases the unhealthy atmosphere of the public schools can easily produce the contrary effect, our people have determined to withdraw their children from these Godless Institutions. This is only as it should be; for the soul being infinitely more valuable than the frail body, prerequisite demands of every Christian who hopes to enter a happy hereafter a life-long cultivation of every virtue and an utter abnegation of every vice. This care, the normalizing attention to the spiritual wellbeing of man's spiritual being is morally obligatory on the youth of tender years as it is on those of riper age. All must admit that a child who spends six days of the week in the atmosphere of a godless school, and the rest of our country has completely eliminated every iota, the Alpha and Omega, of the Christ and His glorious Gospel—that is an sophistical plea that to preserve the liberty and to render more secure the enfranchisement of our Free and eclipse all human creatures must render on the day of Judgment.

EXCEPT A PERSON REALIZES THE FACT that he is strictly accountable to God for every act he performs, what is there to restrain him from the commission of the most dreadful crimes? Thus murder, robbery, lying, dage or any other criminal deed—only winners of was must establish a modus vivendi which will unite the various denominations to impart religious instruction combined with secular education. We need no better illustration of this proposition than the sterling words of President Cleveland, recently published in the Monitor. "A wholesome religious faith," says this wise statesman, "is at the perpetuity, the safety and prosperity of the Republic, by teaching the "obedience of civil laws, the preservation of public order and a proper regard for the rights of all, and thus are for all." Such a faith is fitted for good citizenship," and such, "We will be fortunate for our country when every citizen of the Republic has an over-powering duty to perform to his Maker which he cannot escape from or neglect without being false to his religious as well as to his civil allegiance." The burning truth contained in these words of the Chief Magistrate of this nation needs no further comment.

THAT THE CATHOLICS OF THE COMSTOCK are awake to the vital importance of this great necessity is evident from the flourishing condition of our Christian schools where the entire available space and seating facilities are not sufficient for the number of the children in attendance. More ample accommodation must soon be provided for the large increase in pupils that is certain to result when our glorious climate returns from its brief isolation.

A few paper from which I clip the following extracts of the exhibition of the pupils of Sacred Heart Academy. The girls' department was first visited and the following are the numbers in the various classes: First Grade, intermediate Department, 62 students, all through school, age between 12 and 17; Second Grade, Primary, 50 students, all through school; Third Grade Primary, 50 pupils, all deserving the greatest credit; Fourth Grade, Primary, 50 portraits. Class A, 40 pupils in the various classes. Class B, 40 students. The girls' department is composed of about 300 students. The school was then visited and the following are the numbers in the various classes: First Grade, intermediate Department, 62 students, all through school, age between 12 and 17; Second Grade, 50 pupils, all bright and intelligent girls; Third grade, primary, 50 students, all deserving the greatest credit; Fourth Grade, Primary and Department. Class A, 40 students. Class B, 40 students. The girls' department is composed of about 300 students.

Nevada Mountains, and which is now safely stored away in the hands of eastern capitalists, the people of Virginia City have every reason to hope for a very lively and prosperous coming summer. The snow, melting under the sun, forms numerous rills and streams which will flow to swell the waters in the Carson river, thus supplying ample motive-power to the mills for crushing and pulverizing the rock which contains the precious ores. The miners and officers of the famous Comstock lode feel happy in view of such bright prospects of continued prosperity.

NOT WHILE THE MATERIAL INTERESTS of our city are so hopeful, while a better age has already dawned upon our battle-born State, the far more important affairs of Christianity claim all the present time a great deal of attention. Realizing the absolute necessity of having the growing and impressionable mind and faculties of our youth to bloom and expand beneath the salutary influence of religion, and knowing from past experience that in some cases the unhealthy atmosphere of the public schools can easily produce the contrary effect, our people have determined to withdraw their children from these Godless Institutions. This is only as it should be; for the soul being infinitely more valuable than the frail body, prerequisite demands of every Christian who hopes to enter a happy hereafter a life-long cultivation of every virtue and an utter abnegation of every vice. This care, the normalizing attention to the spiritual wellbeing of man's spiritual being is morally obligatory on the youth of tender years as it is on those of riper age. All must admit that a child who spends six days of the week in the atmosphere of a godless school, and the rest of our country has completely eliminated every iota, the Alpha and Omega, of the Christ and His glorious Gospel—that is an sophistical plea that to preserve the liberty and to render more secure the enfranchisement of our Free and eclipse all human creatures must render on the day of Judgment.

EXCEPT A PERSON REALIZES THE FACT that he is strictly accountable to God for every act he performs, what is there to restrain him from the commission of the most dreadful crimes? Thus murder, robbery, lying, dage or any other criminal deed—only winners of was must establish a modus vivendi which will unite the various denominations to impart religious instruction combined with secular education. We need no better illustration of this proposition than the sterling words of President Cleveland, recently published in the Monitor. "A wholesome religious faith," says this wise statesman, "is at the perpetuity, the safety and prosperity of the Republic, by teaching the "obedience of civil laws, the preservation of public order and a proper regard for the rights of all, and thus are for all." Such a faith is fitted for good citizenship," and such, "We will be fortunate for our country when every citizen of the Republic has an over-powering duty to perform to his Maker which he cannot escape from or neglect without being false to his religious as well as to his civil allegiance." The burning truth contained in these words of the Chief Magistrate of this nation needs no further comment.

THAT THE CATHOLICS OF THE COMSTOCK are awake to the vital importance of this great necessity is evident from the flourishing condition of our Christian schools where the entire available space and seating facilities are not sufficient for the number of the children in attendance. More ample accommodation must soon be provided for the large increase in pupils that is certain to result when our glorious climate returns from its brief isolation.

A few paper from which I clip the following extracts of the exhibition of the pupils of Sacred Heart Academy. The girls' department was first visited and the following are the numbers in the various classes: First Grade, intermediate Department, 62 students, all through school, age between 12 and 17; Second Grade, 50 pupils, all bright and intelligent girls; Third grade, primary, 50 students, all deserving the greatest credit; Fourth Grade, Primary and Department. Class A, 40 students. Class B, 40 students. The girls' department is composed of about 300 students. The school was then visited and the following are the numbers in the various classes: First Grade, intermediate Department, 62 students, all through school, age between 12 and 17; Second Grade, 50 pupils, all bright and intelligent girls; Third grade, primary, 50 students, all deserving the greatest credit; Fourth Grade, Primary and Department. Class A, 40 students. Class B, 40 students. The girls' department is composed of about 300 students.

THE WEEK'S NEWS FROM IRELAND. IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—Sir Hercules Langrishe, the Most Rev. Dr. McGettigan, Archbishop of Armagh, has transferred the Rev. Dr. Doherty, C.C., Crossgar, to the curacy of Downpatrick, and the Rev. Michael McGovern, recently ordained, to succeed him in the curacy of Portadown.

CLARE.—Colonel O'Callaghan's agent has settled with 100 out of 131 tenants on the Doyle estate. The rent-roll of the other tenants is expected to be carried out during the month. The tenantry of Mr. Tobin of Cappagh, Ballyvaughan, have decided to adopt the "Plan of Campaign." The agent, Francis Moore, the County Treasurer of Clare, was waited upon by the tenants headed by the Rev. Father Cleary, but he refused to hear the Rev. gentleman's statement on behalf of the tenants. Mr. Moore acted in an extraordinary manner towards the Rev. Father Cleary. He resented his interference, and he treated the tenants in a manner which they came individually to him. The tenants, who were interested in the treatment of their priest, left and adopted the terrible "plan."

CORK.—Miss Thorne, Walton, Liverpool, who, it will be recollected, contributed £1,000 to clear for the ladies of the Presentation Convent, Bandon, last year, has, on the termination of a similar engagement at Macroom, received a handsome testimonial in the shape of a work-box and silver salver, as an token of her love for the ladies of Macroom.

Mr. Thomas Lindsay, hon. secretary of the Sunbeam National League, held a "Plan of Campaign" meeting at Newmarket, on Feb. 20. It is to be only a great demonstration was subsequently held. The chairman declared that the tenants would be more determined than ever to resist, and even the landlords of Newmarket, to be fair, but to hold out against the unjustness of the Irish Land Commission. Mr. John's, the largest Protestant church in Cork, was totally destroyed by fire on Feb. 20.

Mr. Solomon Frank, J.P., Stewanstown, has given to his tenants at Foxrogh, 15 per cent off the judicial rents.

On Feb. 24, Mr. Pure, who arrived at Youghal, by a strange coincidence the very person to met on platform from the carriage was John Dowling, the evicted tenant. Some lively interchange of remarks took place between these. Mr. Pure's remarks that he (Mr. Pure) was a "fine man." Dowling said he was a "fine man." Pure said he was legal. No wonder. Later on in the day Mr. Pure, accompanied by Mr. Blakemore, was seen on foot by a circular route to Kilmacow, evidently with a view to survey the situation. The car waiters of the town absolutely refused them care rather say condition whatever, and they were therefore obliged to return on foot.

CARLOW.—James Fidler, of Old Leighlin, County Carlow, farmer, and Lucy Byrne, of Kilkenny, spinster and sister, have been judged bankrupts.

DUBLIN.—The death is announced of the Rev. Edward Ryan, of 11 Millbourne Park, Dublin. He was born in 1807, educated at Maynooth, and entered the Society of Jesus in nineteenth year. For more than forty years devoted himself to teaching in the college of the Society. Many of his first pupils have passed away in the future of their lives. Not those with whom he was brought into further intercourse in more modern times, in Leviathan College, retain vivid memories of his strong faith and zeal for the promotion of every good cause. His father years were spent at Milltown Park.

DOWN.—On Feb. 5, Miss Gillagan in Saintfield, Miss Mary Ann Gillagan was appointed Miss Allen, Miss St. Clare Stewart, High street, Newry, in succession to Miss Mother Mary Gonzaga Gordon, Miss Mother Mary Leahy, R.C. Bishop of Dromore, Rev. Dr. Leahy, Rev. Dr. Gibney, Rev. Dr. Kennedy, Rev. Dr. Wilson, Rev. Dr. Kennedy, Rev. Dr. Wilson, Rev. Dr. Kennedy, Rev. Dr. Wilson

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

AN ODE TO ANGELO.

Affectionately dedicated by S. M. J.

Our earth has cast of her mantle
Of beautiful, virgin snow,
And stands with her young heart throbbing,
As she bids old Winter go.

She smiles from her exalt'd valleys
O'er the crystal waters bright,
Rich with the spoils of spring,
And calm as the dawn of light.

She looks from the lofty summit
Of gray old mountain's height,
Across the boundless prairie,
And sees a royal sight.

She lifts her eyes to heaven
To bless the snow-drame,
Or onto them on the ocean,
White with its silver foam.

She laughs at the sun, her father,
As he smiles on his child so gay,
And our hearts like the Spring rejoice
That Winter has passed away.

She is decked with the May blow-bell,
Or violet pure and fair,
And she wears the fragrant clover
In her bosom and her hair.

She with the yellow cowslips,
And dahlias great and gay,
As the owl does from her night,
And we know this lovely maiden,
The precious, spotless Spring—
A light to all in darkness,
A warmth to all will bring.

So our hearts join in the carol,
And we sing this halcyon lay—
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
All hail sweet Spring to-day!

ZARE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

REMEMBER THAT.

How sweet, when the last ray of sunset
Has died, with its mellow light,
The lovely hills and rich valleys,
Are they stark in the darkness of night;
When the spicy and fragrant perfume
Of the sweet cedar tree,
Is gently wafted to greet us
On the wings of the soft June air.

When the plain of the noonday is over,
And the bells of the day are past,
When the parched, worn face of Nature
Wears the garb of peace at last;
When the moon is its silver beauty
Is shedding her peaceful beams,
Flooding with radiant brightness
The meadows and babbling streams.

When the stars with their brilliant lustre
Are in the enraptured gaze
Like some glimpse into Heaven,
Through the opening in the sky;
When the gentle breeze of evening
Sees to wind the drooping flowers,
"By silence" breathing around.

Will we, pal for whom Christ died,
When we wake and be satisfied,
Remember the Master's goodness
Who gave us the day's ended,
The wonders of Nature around us,
Or, Ireland! on you in love?
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
I bid you the Top o' the Morning.

The sun's last glow is fading
For many a year now lovingly back,
Its glorious rendition will be lost sight,
There's no much joy in a sunset,
Or, rather, I should say, in a sunset,
All other attractions aside,
O, Ireland, this lovely sunset
I bid you the Top o' the Morning.

The sun's Christ's shaving strand
And Kerry's jutting promontories
Tis give us a blessing for ever
Let be the down the sky,
Or, photos that have gone before,
And set from the sky with welcome charged,
A million of water-color troops.

Finally, generous Irish land,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
All hail sweet Spring to-day!

ZARE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

REMEMBER THAT.

Hope, sweet, when the last ray of sunset
Has died, with its mellow light,
The lovely hills and rich valleys,
Are they stark in the darkness of night;
When the spicy and fragrant perfume
Of the sweet cedar tree,
Is gently wafted to greet us
On the wings of the soft June air.

When the plain of the noonday is over,
And the bells of the day are past,
When the parched, worn face of Nature
Wears the garb of peace at last;
When the moon is its silver beauty
Is shedding her peaceful beams,
Flooding with radiant brightness
The meadows and babbling streams.

When the stars with their brilliant lustre
Are in the enraptured gaze
Like some glimpse into Heaven,
Through the opening in the sky;
When the gentle breeze of evening
Sees to wind the drooping flowers,
"By silence" breathing around.

Will we, pal for whom Christ died,
When we wake and be satisfied,
Remember the Master's goodness
Who gave us the day's ended,
The wonders of Nature around us,
Or, Ireland! on you in love?
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
I bid you the Top o' the Morning.

The sun's Christ's shaving strand
And Kerry's jutting promontories
Tis give us a blessing for ever
Let be the down the sky,
Or, photos that have gone before,
And set from the sky with welcome charged,
A million of water-color troops.

Finally, generous Irish land,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
All hail sweet Spring to-day!

ZARE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

REMEMBER THAT.

Hope, sweet, when the last ray of sunset
Has died, with its mellow light,
The lovely hills and rich valleys,
Are they stark in the darkness of night;
When the spicy and fragrant perfume
Of the sweet cedar tree,
Is gently wafted to greet us
On the wings of the soft June air.

When the plain of the noonday is over,
And the bells of the day are past,
When the parched, worn face of Nature
Wears the garb of peace at last;
When the moon is its silver beauty
Is shedding her peaceful beams,
Flooding with radiant brightness
The meadows and babbling streams.

When the stars with their brilliant lustre
Are in the enraptured gaze
Like some glimpse into Heaven,
Through the opening in the sky;
When the gentle breeze of evening
Sees to wind the drooping flowers,
"By silence" breathing around.

Will we, pal for whom Christ died,
When we wake and be satisfied,
Remember the Master's goodness
Who gave us the day's ended,
The wonders of Nature around us,
Or, Ireland! on you in love?
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
Will you be "Top o' the Morning,"
I bid you the Top o' the Morning.

The sun's Christ's shaving strand
And Kerry's jutting promontories
Tis give us a blessing for ever
Let be the down the sky,
Or, photos that have gone before,
And set from the sky with welcome charged,
A million of water-color troops.

Finally, generous Irish land,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
Hail! Hail to Summer's sunlight,
All hail sweet Spring to-day!

ZARE.

Literary Miscellany.

"An Eye for an Eye."

"An Irish Story of the Present Day.

CHAPTER I

Though the children of Amalek, with trumpets and pattiers,
To deeds of sacred terrents of humanity gone;
Let them look, for deep hell at their far rather allies,
Where the death-dealing tyrants of Ireland

It was evening—a wild and bleak November evening in the rugged slopes of the great Galtee Mountains, a few years after the famine era. Large masses of jet-black clouds hung over the distant peaks in heavy blasts of winds swept down the bare mountain sides and roared through the desolate gorges, the elements were in complete harmony with the wild and inexplicable character of the place. Although well-thatched and altogether comfortable-looking, though rudely constructed, stood in a small glen at the foot of one of the loftiest mountains of the range. Within a turf fire was rather smouldering than burning, and over the embers were crouched two persons, who listened to the howling of the wind around their humble dwelling, and shivered with the chilly dreariness of the night.

The one was a woman, still young, but evidently prematurely aged and disheartened by care, toil and anxiety. She retained few traces of what was once deemed unequalled beauty, the deep lines on her haggard, care-worn face told of years of hardship, want and agony. The only other inmate of the hut was a lad of fifteen, in whose countenance could be observed a marked resemblance to the elder, which at once proclaimed their relationship, while traces of the famine demon of want and hunger which had blighted his young life were not less plainly stamped thereon. Both were literally and almost in the surroundings of their abode unmistakably denoted abject poverty.

"Mavbe, arthur alll, we mighn't be out till spring, and who knows what may turn up before then. Cheer up, mother. God is good, and even if the worst comes He will not forsake us," and the boy after a long interval of silence.

"They say the new agent is hard and cruel, and that the people on the other estate are turned out on the world by him. Drink every day, to make room for the sheep Lord Colloden intends to bring over from Scotland," answered the mother in a desponding tone.

"But share, to, was with a heart would have any Christian business in such weather!"

"Ah, Brian, you little know what them furrin' praste can do. Share 'twas only last month Poor Tom Grady and his nine chil. drem were

"Upon this cursed door, and he quiet about it! Dye think we're going to stay here on this infernal mountain till we're frozen!"

Before either mother or son had recovered from their surprise a vigorous kick sent the frail door into the cabin, and three bailiffs entered, accompanied by a well-dressed, brutal-looking man, whom the hapless inmates at once recognized as the dreaded pay. ment of every evil and of unlimited power, the new agent. Outside a formidable body of armed policemen stood leaning on their rifles and shouldered with odd, bother; I dare-sheep happy woollen great. I hear too much of it! Yes, I am the new agent, as the pay-sant, and I have come to turn you out of this cabin, and you may consider yourselves lucky in accepting of it. Come, come, bestirring yourselves, I have no time to waste."

"Share, sure, we are only our Lord's tenants and tenants-at-will, and our health and degree and drainin' is, to, more nor mine, sir, and our poor little boy, sick of stone you won't throw us out on the world, replied the poor woman, without a friend to aid us but God in heaven.

"Well, if you pay the year's rent you may consider yourselves safe."

"Will, I will!" exclaimed the widow, a gleam of hope lighting up her pale face. "We sold every bit about the place to make it up."

The bailiffs, who had been engaged in roughly removing the miserable furniture, paused and looked somewhat surprised, but the agent winked cunningly at them while the widow was extracting from some place her scattered clothing, and the difficulty retreated and the rifliam with disappointed their laughter when they comprehended their sharp pay's dabbed on the ground.

Here, sir, is the whole year's rent, and may God bless you!" exclaimed the poor woman, handing the money to the agent.

"Quite right, quite right. Oh, if you hadn't partially scribbled a receipt, I should be a fool to give it back."

"And now, Mrs. Cavanagh, he coolly remarked, as the widow secured the paper with fervent thanks, "we must proceed with the eviction of the same. Lord Colloden's great grandfather, Sir Hugh Colloden, was a particularly desirous of taking your farm into his hands as it is now far more than value for the rent you pay. Well, I suppose you have heard of Lord Colloden's intentions who intend to turn out the people and bring over Scotch sheep."

"Yes, sir, I have heard of it," muttered the poor woman.

"Well, I am sorry for Mr. Brant on his son, and a clerk at the door of the cabin.

"Show him in," ordered Mr. Hunt.

Immediately there entered a fashionably dressed young gentleman of about twenty, a wealth of jet black hair curled over a broad, white aristocratic brow, piercing blue eyes, which sometimes assumed a pensive and at other a fierce expression, harmonized admirably with a refined complexion, which bespoke a young sojourn under a tropical sun, and the elegance of his dress, and the manner assured of that of independence of spirit which only remarkable wealth or distinguished lineage can bestow.

"Mr. Brant, I presume, sir, as your service-man, he said," answered the Gentleman, pointing to the clerk.

"Thanks I do not intend to delay. I understand you hold a mortgage on Lord Colloden's Tipperary estate."

"Yes," assented the head partner.

"Under the existing circumstances, I expect you will have no objection to transferring your claim to me, I presume?"

"Certainly, sir, only too glad to accommodate, sagerly replied the head partner, at the same time, Mr. Hunt, in nervous anxiety, from some pleasant dream.

In a few minutes all the necessary formalities were gone through, the solicitors were of Brant & Co. departed, the owner of the mortgage on Lord Colloden's estate, and leaving the delighted firm a cheque on the Bank of England for sixty thousand pounds, signed "W. Collin, Royal Hotel, London. When the representative of Hodman & Co. called few hours later, to his surprise and gratification the rather unfortunately paid the agreed amount. But one night it was known that Lord Colloden had by some mysterious means quite revived the money, and that the head of the unsuccessful firm had recovered her prestige, and were in full possession of their former existence and lucrative business.

Five months had rolled rapidly by, the famine-cry and the day appointed for the payment of Lord Colloden half yearly instalment of the interest of the mortgage came on. Of course the bailiffs had been duly advised of the transfer of the claim on his estate, and had hastened to pay his respects to his new taskmaster, but Mr. Collin had engaged a suite of the best apartments at the Royal Hotel, pid the rent for two months, and then cut occupying them for a few days at his ease. Meanwhile the time he was immensely rich; a few hinted that he was some disguised nobleman, but as he made no acquaintances, received no company and conducted every of his business affairs, the avaricious gossip mongers could find no fact to their speculations upon. Parent & Co. and the reputation of great, cute, clear-headed, resolute and long-sighted, and yet the rent he had made engagements with them, but as he assumed Mr. Collin, the firm felt it was a better object to the transaction he resolved to make him a loan of half a million to pay the three thousand pounds, which he found necessary for the commencement of the days spent. Gallant cavaliers in gay hunting attire laughed and chatted with beautiful ladies in tight-fitting habits, while itself and quiet rode apart, lounging for the pick of the pack, the huntsman's whisp, and the wild gallop over hill and dale in wily reynard's wake. Mr. Blood was there, in his glory, and his laugh was the loudest and longest, his voice was clearest heard in the brilliant of merry conversation, and his jovial disposition seemed to share in sports and merry-making. Suddenly the report of a pistol shot rang out clear and sharp. Looking upwards the startled company beheld a wreath of smoke issuing from the shelter of an immense fragment of rock far up the mountain. A boyish figure emerged for a moment and attentively gazed on the scene below; then the youthful marksman shouldered the deadly weapon and leisurely skirted the brow of the hill, disappearing just as one of the party cried out in horrified accents.

"My God, Mr. Blood's shot!"

The agent had lingered behind, the others a few paces, and while his companions at a bound, which seemed to have carried every avenger his lifeless body was being dragged along by his hunter. A bullet had penetrated right through the brain, and his guilty spirit was in an instant hurled from its earthly tenement into the awful presence of Eternal Justice. Of course, a magnificent reward was offered for the apprehension of the murderer. But the effort of the police were quite fruitless. Young Brian Cavanagh suddenly, almost mysteriously disappeared. Not even the kind peasant who had generously entertained him since the memorable night of his mother's death received intimation of his departure or destination.

CHAPTER II.

By my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To utter—I say I love you on my head.
Or the oldest sins.—Merchant of Venice.

The scene changes to a wild and romantic glen, amid the lofty peaks of the Galtee Mountains, where he preserved that his mother's words were only too true that she was quickly dying from worry, want, and exposure. He wildly endeavored to chafe her lump and lifeless hands, though his own were completely benumbed by the piercing cold. His cries for help, echoed shrilly on the gale, but were lost amid the roar of the tumultuous cataracts that now rushed down the rugged mountain sides with ever increasing violence. At length finding that his mother had become utterly unconscious, he was nestled in a lonely glen among the hills, three miles away. Tenderly composing his lifeless form into as comfortable a position as possible, he started on his perilous journey, but ere he had proceeded twenty paces he stumbled over one of the huge boulders with which the ground was strewed, and fell heavily, unconscious, to the ground. Next morning the neighboring peasants discovered the dead body of Walter Cavanagh near the walls of her ruined home. Brian Cavanagh was found a short distance off, bleeding from a deep wound in the forehead, and still unconscious.

Thanks to the exertions of the local doctor, a kind and humane gentleman, he rapidly recovered. The widow was interred in the little cemetery hard by, a few days later, and ever her freshly-covered grave young Brian knelt in deep sorrow, and vowed a vow to be a kind to his aforesaid gentleman.

* * * * * * * * * *

Nine months after. A bright, frosty December morning at the foot of the old Galtee. A merry hunting party are starting—inspired by the commencement of the days sport. Gallant cavaliers in gay hunting attire laughed and chatted with beautiful ladies in tight-fitting habits, while itself and quiet rode apart, lounging for the pick of the pack, the huntsman's whisp, and the wild gallop over hill and dale in wily reynard's wake. Mr. Blood was there, in his glory, and his laugh was the loudest and longest, his voice was clearest heard in the brilliant of merry conversation, and his jovial disposition seemed to share in sports and merry-making. Suddenly the report of a pistol shot rang out clear and sharp. Looking upwards the startled company beheld a wreath of smoke issuing from the shelter of an immense fragment of rock far up the mountain. A boyish figure emerged for a moment and attentively gazed on the scene below; then the youthful marksman shouldered the deadly weapon and leisurely skirted the brow of the hill, disappearing just as one of the party cried out in horrified accents.

"My God, Mr. Blood's shot!"

The agent had lingered behind, the others a few paces, and while his companions at a bound, which seemed to have carried every avenger his lifeless body was being dragged along by his hunter. A bullet had penetrated right through the brain, and his guilty spirit was in an instant hurled from its earthly tenement into the awful presence of Eternal Justice. Of course, a magnificent reward was offered for the apprehension of the murderer. But the efforts of the police were quite fruitless. Young Brian Cavanagh suddenly, almost mysteriously disappeared. Not even the kind peasant who had generously entertained him since the memorable night of his mother's death received intimation of his departure or destination.

CHAPTER II.

By my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To utter—I say I love you on my head.
Or the oldest sins.—Merchant of Venice.

IRELAND'S ARCHITECTURE

Its Peculiar Beauty and Solidity Biographically Demonstrated.

(CONTINUED FROM LAST WEEK.)

Those subterranean passages, some 1500 years ago, were built in lime and mortar and arched overhead with wide, spacious chambers, are numerous in many parts of Ireland and generally interwoven in near proximity to forts, thus at one age or another, almost unknown, and were built, no doubt, for living purposes as well as for protection against the enemy. Such places are found in Eastern countries and along the banks of the Nile in Egypt.

At the landing of Cæsar in Britain, the inhabitants were found living in caves and holes in the ground and in huts, built of what was called wattles, covered with mud. Indeed the progress made in domestic architecture in England up to the 11th century, compared very unfavorably with other countries more especially with that of Ireland and even then, when the people began to build and lay out cities of brick and stone, little of which were known there up to that period, very little amongst was great either the cleaning of stones, houses or cities. J. F. Bayless, editor of the Iron Age, on his work on "Water-Service and Street Plumbing, says: "Rome (Italy) cities's being covered with large marble mansions a yard deep, their houses floored with rubies which were hideous debauchery. Up to Jupiter's Capitol, the Capitol of Italy, from the landing of the Tiber, and the sides of the road were lined with palaces, and the pavement of the road was of the finest marble

THE MONITOR.

TRIBUNE ORGAN OF JURISDICTION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—It is stated on good authority that the Propaganda has under consideration the creation of a new See in Western Iowa, with a Cathedral in Des Moines.

—Patriotism is a crime in Ireland, as Sir Thomas Grattan Esmonde has been suspended from the office of High Sheriff of County Waterford for having supported the "Plan of Campaign."

—Over 20,000 persons in France have subscribed for the statue of St. Genevieve to be placed in the new Montsouris Church, Paris, as expiation for the secularization of the Pantheon. M. Hugins is to execute the work.

—The Rosary said in common sweetly fosters the home life which was one of the most beautiful features of the Christian family in the ages of faith, and the absence of which is one of the crying evils of our own time.

—[illegible] of Rites has distinguished that [illegible] "Ave Maria," when clothed in their own habit, and in a body following a cross, have precedence of the members of all other lay sodalities.

—The theological department of the Hona University has been remodelled in consequence of the modification of the May Laws. A strong Catholic faculty has been appointed, and Catholic students are again seen inside its ancient walls.

—At an audience held with the Holy Father by Cardinal Gibbons the other day, the Pope thus addressed him: "The American Catholic Church enjoys the greatest civic freedom. Her Bishops have no other work than to live like shepherd's guiding and tending their flocks."

—The British government deserves credit for the manner in which it fosters a religious spirit in its soldiers. A chapel, which has been built for the use of the Catholic soldiers at the Guards' depot, Caterham, was opened recently. The building cost £8,000. The War Office contributed £3,000.

—Cardinal Gibbons will leave Rome next week in order to visit the principal centres of Europe. He will also visit Cardinal Manning, travel through the North and West of England, then visit Ireland, where he will start for Baltimore in the latter part of April.

—A bill has been Rhode Island legislature to [illegible] into the independent military companies in the state, the reason given by the framers of the bill being that they are composed chiefly of the "foreign element." The Boston Pilot says it is aimed at the Catholic societies of the state, and is a fair specimen of the bigotry of the view of securing the complete religious liberty and security of the Catholic missions, series and their flocks in the empire. It will be sent to Pekin this month.

—There are, according to Warner's "Atlas of the Missions," the most authoritative work on the subject extant, 6,224,000 Catholics in Asia, which is fifty times as many as all the Protestant churches have together. There are 2,635,000 in Africa, which is a hundred times as many as all shades of Protestants can claim.

—Michael Davitt, speaking at Grangemouth, Scotland, recently, advocated Archbishop Croke's "jay-to-hawk" manifesto. He said the continuance of a Tory Government in Ireland for any considerable time would either compel Ireland to adopt such a plan of national assertion or fall back upon the undisciplined methods of past resistance.

—It will be a source of pleasure to all the friends and members of the Order of the Good Shepherd, to learn that the cause of the beatification of the saintly foundress of the Order, Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia Pelletier, has been introduced at Rome. At an audience recently granted by the Holy Father to some of the Nuns of the Order, he bestowed his benediction on all the benefactors of all the houses of the good Shepherd.

—We are not astonished to learn that the bitter anti-Catholic course of the so-called Catholic Herald of New York in the Dr. McGlynn matter, has brought it into collision with the Church authorities in many sections of the country. Some of the Bishops have forbidden their clergy and people to take the paper. We suspected the honesty and Catholicity of that paper a couple of years ago, so we set it off from our exchange list, and now we are continued in our suspicions.

—Slowly but surely (thank Heaven!) the "Old Catholic" movement is dying out in Germany. The latest desertion from the diminished ranks occurred recently when Herr Bussenbach, the Old Catholic "parish priest" of Neisse, after a ministry of half a year, has resigned his post and left Neisse, owing to the almost total extinction of his flock. On Christmas Day only fourteen persons attended the solemn function, and on the day after (Sunday) only twenty-four. On New Year's Day, Herr Bussenbach held service for the last time.

—Sister Alphonsus, of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, died at the Convent of that Order near Dublin on the 20th ult. She was a native of County Limerick, her family name being Joanna Hotlor. At her obsequies the chief mourners were Hon. Edward Sexton, Mr. Eugene Butler, all her brothers, and Brother T. J. Butler, her cousin. She had made her solemn profession only a year before her death.

—A London secular paper gives currency to the rumor that Germany has consented to mediate with Italy to an endeavor to arrange a modus vivendi between the Vatican and the Quirinal. The proposal is said to be that the part of Rome including the Leonine city and the nine from the Vatican to the sea by the Porta Viridaria should become the absolute property of the Pope.

—The labors of the Mission repeatedly force during the past week have taken quite public and peculiarly pleasing to our publishing department. Mr. Flood forwarded the names of fifty new subscribers from Stockton, and Mr. Kinsella sent in as many more from the southern counties. We think every friend who subscribed as well as those who helped to extend the influence of this paper in such particular locality.

—The Lord Mayor of Dublin is a wag as well as a poet. At a dinner given at the Mansion House recently, on the 5th of Jan. were furnished forth such dishes as "Gaelic shew oysters," "Clurricaude sweetbread," "Limerick ham a la Marty Hynes," "Greek Street asparagus," and "Nelson of Ireland" called on pain of Ten Pounds." The menu would have been complete had there been [illegible] Jugged Members of Parliament, [illegible] Sandiness, and Salisbury Hash.

—If we are to believe the Chicago Times, San Francisco is the most corrupt city in the Union. It says: "Chicago is not entitled to her reputation for superlative wickedness. Bad as she is, she must take a back seat for San Francisco. She is cursed with crooked Aldermen, lawless Commissioners, an inefficient Police Department, and other afflictions of the kind. A good deal of the public money is stolen forthwith year and a good deal more is wasted, and there are many persons in authority who ought to be in the penitentiary."

—A private letter from Sidney says: "Cardinal Moran travels as hard over the almost impassable roads that humanly speaking, his health can hardly keep up. Since his return to Australia he travelled through, on the business of his diocese, over 2,000 miles and gave Confirmation to 3,000 people. It would be impossible to describe his labors and privations. He preached at Newcastle for the dead mines, and the result was nearly a thousand pounds, which he gave to the Sisters who conduct the deaf and dumb asylum. Parts of his journeys have to be performed on foot."

—Prior to his departure from New York for England, on the 10th inst., Justin McCarthy and of Irish affairs: "The news which comes from Ireland day by day, of Tory losses by elections, cabinet disasters, and cabinet resignations, is exactly as I prophesied in my first speech in the Academy of Music, on arriving in this country. I see another general election [illegible] in two years. The majority of Irish members will be returned as home Rulers independent of the so-called Unionists, who will be [illegible] ation, into his cabinet. This produces unprofound constitutional lawyer in the person of Mr. W. E. Jim the startling information that no foreign born citizen can hence forward hold a cabinet position. The new law further enacts that no naturalized citizen makes each naturalized citizen ineligible; hence they must be all Irish. The Sun answers that the constitution does not make a foreign-born citizen ineligible to the cabinet, but that in the event of his succession failing to his lot he would be passed over in favor of the next eligible cabinet minister.

—The Nuntiature of the Irish Sisters of Charity, which is situated at Milltown, on the Dodder, held a most interesting festival a few days ago. It was the centenary of the birth of their foundress, Mrs Mary Aikenhead, one of whose earliest good works was the establishment of St. Vincent's Hospital in Stephen's Green, the first attempt at a Catholic Hospital in the British Islands. The Archbishop and a great number of the Clergymen were present at High Mass, which was the chief ceremony of the occasion. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Achonry, the Most Rev. Dr. McCormack. Subsequently the Archbishop laid the cornerstone of a new chapel to be attached to the Nuntiature.

—Among the Peter Pence offerings recently presented to the Holy Father was $65.20 from Bishop Glorieux, Vicar Apostolic of Idaho, the last named sum being the first collection of Peter Pence from that recently re-established vicariate, whose Bishop, appointed April 19, 1886, is hopping the Papal acceptance of the small tribute, noted the slender number of the Catholic population—2,500 whites, the half of whom are not self-supporting, whilst the remainder to the amount of 1,000, is comprised entirely of Indians. The Holy Father was pleased to declare the love and reverend devotion prompting the gift, of far more value to his paternal heart than the intrinsic worth of the offering, and desired Dr. O'Connell to write in that sense to Bishop Glorieux, to whom, as well as to his clergy and flock he sent his Apostolic Benediction.

—The Sultan of Turkey is the first sovereign to recognize and celebrate the jubilee of Leo XIII. February 15th Mgr. Azarian, Armenian Patriarch and special envoy of the Porte, was received in public audience by His Holiness. After reading an address in letter in Turkish and Latin with a magnificent diamond ring which His Imperial Majesty offered as a jubilee present to the Pope. His Holiness placed the ring on his finger, and in a short discourse referred fondness to the Sultan, not only for the venerable person of the Vicar of Christ, but also for the religious liberty accorded to the Catholics in the empire. February 20th the Holy Father commenced the tenth year of his glorious reign.

What St. Joseph Accomplished for California.

The feast of Saint Joseph, which falls on next Saturday, is a most acceptable day in the history of California, and we know of no occasion more suitable for commenting on what we may well call the first national event in the early history of the pastoral of the Pacific Coast than by laying before our readers a brief account of what St. Joseph did in response to the prayers of the saintly Franciscan Father Junipero Serra and his associates in Christianizing California.

When it is remembered that Portez was in possession of Mexico in 1519, and thence forth the energies of himself and final explorers were bent upon new conquests in the north, it is surprising that California remained unconquered, or rather unoccupied until 1769. In 1542 the famous navigator Cabrillo had coasted along her shores as far as Cape Mendocino, and in 1602 the explorer Vizcaino entered the Bays of San Diego and Monterey, closing his career on one of the California islands, San Miguel, which he was buried on a forgotten spot. From that time there is a large gap in the course of discoveries. The whole of Mexico had been subjugated, its aboriginal wealth poured into Spain, the Indian population of Mexico had been reduced to a fourth in number, and for many generations Mexico was like Tennyson's land "where all things always are the same."

In 1768 there was a change, however, Carlos III. of Spain ordered the expulsion of San Diego and Monterey, places marked on old maps but not seen by a single European since then. Between the receipt of the royal order in Mexico and its execution there would have been the usual delay, if not a tragedy had not been resorted to a man of extraordinary energy for those bitingly organized four expeditions to go to California by sea and by land, and there to meet at San Diego. Hospitan was successfully carried out, and in the same year Father Junipero Serra was busy with eight labouring California's first mission at that place; while Californian newly appointed governor, Don Gaspar Portola, continued his northward, missing Monterey, but sighting, as it were, upon the Golden Gate. Through inexperience his party failed to identify Monterey by the landmark described by the old navigators and returned to San Diego, disappointed with their fruitless efforts.

The order of the expedients had ended commissarily and the San Diego colony was equally less spirited. The expected vessel with provisions from the Gulf of California had not arrived. No supplies could be obtained in the country itself, and gradually all settled down to the belief that only by abandoning California could they save their lives. All but Father Junipero, who prayed incessantly and trusted to the intercession of St. Joseph—the Patron of the Universal Church—Novena was commenced to culminate in a grand ceremonial on the feast of St. Joseph. Meanwhile Portola, continued his search

Family Fun.

His Future Assured.

"I guess I'm pretty safe about going to Heaven," remarked Bobby to young Mr. Feathery.

Mr. Feathery replied that he earnestly hoped so, and then inquired why Bobby felt so confident about the matter.

"Because," explained Bobby, "Ma says that it ain't safe to trust me where there's fire."

A Wise Child.

Angel Child—Say, Mrs. Wiggins, if ma asks you to stay to dinner, you stay. Mrs. Wiggins—Why! Would you like to have me stay, my little boy?

Angel Child—Yes. I would. Nobody ain't stayed to dinner with us this week, an' I'm dyin' for a square meal.

A Safe Secret.

"You tell everything you know, don't you?" said Mrs. H——— to Mrs. A——, a garrulous neighbor.

"Indeed I don't," replied Mrs. A——, with some show of asperity. "I can keep a secret as well as any one. It was only yesterday that Mr. A——told me that he was going to tell that Mr. H——was short in his accounts, and I haven't mentioned it to a soul, and don't intend to either."

A Queer Bonanza.

"That dime is only worth five cents—said the proprietor to Johnny Faststep.

"How's that?"

"It's gotta hole in it."

"Je t'ne."

"Then gitz the dime back to me. I'll punch another hole in it and then it will be worth ten cents. By thunder, I'll punch six holes in it and then it will be worth thirty cents. I'll have money to throw at the birds pretty soon."

Determined to Break Him of Forgetfulness.

"What time is it Brother Gruff?"

"Time you should pay me back that dollar you borrowed from me about a year ago.

"Did I never pay you that dollar?"

"You never did.

"Well, isn't it strange how a little thing like that will escape one's memory!

"It never escaped my memory.

"So I see. A good memory is a great blessing. Now, we'll just let it run a bit just to see if I can't think of it myself about this time next year. I'm determined to break myself of such forgetfulness. It's annoying. Good day, Brother Gruff."

Another Fruity Joke.

Miss Clara (to young Featherly, a guest at dinner)—"Won't you have a little more, Mr. Featherly?"

Featherly—"Oh, thanks awfully."

Bobby (turning to his mother)—"How's that, ma?"

Mother—"How is what, Bobby; little Bobby?"

Bobby—"Why, ma, but you said that Mr. Featherly's vittles wouldn't be Clara's concerned, would he, ma?"

An Obituary World While.

An immersion on a monument winds up with the following touching obituary: "Mike lived a life of virtue, and died of the shock. He was drowned, caused by eating green fruit in the hope of a tender immortality, at the early age of 17 years, 3 months, and 12 days! Reader: Go thou and do likewise."

How it Came There.

Guest—How comes this dead fly in my soup!

Waiter—In fact, sir, I have no positive idea how the poor thing came by its death. Perhaps it had not taken any food for a long time, dished upon the soup, etc too much of it, constructed an inflammation of the stomach that brought on death. The poor thing may have had a weak constitution, for when I served up the soup it was dancing merrily on the surface. Perhaps—and the idea presented itself only at this moment—it endeavored to fancy to fly the use of vegetable; this remaining fast in its throat, caused a choking in the windpipe. These are the only reasons I can give for the death of that insect!

He Had Changed His Mind.

Bachelor to Benedick—You believe in luck, don't you?

Benedick—Not much; I don't.

Bachelor—Why, my dear fellow, you surprise me! You used to believe in it firmly.

Benedick—That was before I got married, my boy.

Not Very Polite.

Mrs. Hendricks (the landlady)—Can I send you some more soup, Mr. Dumley?

Mr. Dumley—No, thank you.

Mrs. Hendricks (emphatically)—Don't relish, Mr. Dumley, because it isn't considered good form to be helped twice to soup.

Mr. Dumley—Oh, etiquette has nothing to do with it, madam; it's the soup.

How He Lost Her.

A lawyer recently lost a bride in a peculiar way. He appeared at the wedding, but on his way to the ceremony, from whose force of habit, protested that it was not ready to proceed, and demanded delay. And on the table got cured and would not have him.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it now leads many to cure the worst cases of catarrh by one or two simple remedies. For pamphlet containing full home treatment, send 10 cents in stamps to Dr. Jaynes & Son, 805 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request M. Dixon, Jr., is making at the Melville House (formerly Grand Union) Hotel Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Sufferers should send for his treatise or call and see him. Consultation free.

Letter from Her Majesty's Opera Company.

MONTREAL, P.Q., May 25th, 1886.

MESSRS. HOLLOWAY & DAVIS CO., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen—Your Celebrated Ointment has been used in Her Majesty's Opera Company" to advantage during our tour in Canada, and I feel bound to write to your address. Your Mr. Fisher has kindly called our attention to one of the best results of your ointment, which we have witnessed in our company. Yours, etc.

It is truly a wonderful testimonial, surpassing anything in the agreeable form we have heard of from Madame Patti. Among the chief powers of Holloway's Ointment are its marvelous healing and soothing qualities. It relieves the most painful forms of scalding (rubbing), blackness and perfect a cure of any wound, and shows all of congestion, inflammation, and sympathetic quality of which it is capable. Its power to cure the most obstinate and painful forms of inflammation, and the extreme tenderness of the parts, are matters of surprise to the medical profession. We have seen cases of carbuncles, which had resisted all other treatment, and which had been given up by the medical men, completely healed by the use of Holloway's Ointment. The ointment is also a specific for all skin diseases, such as eczema, tetter, ringworm, scaly eruptions, and all other forms of cutaneous disease, which may be described as the result of a vitiated state of the blood. Holloway's Ointment is also a specific for all diseases of the glands, such as scrofula, glandular swellings, and all other forms of glandular

Erin's Place in America's Prosperity.

SPLENDID SKETCH BY SENATOR HOAR.

NATIONAL INGREDIENTS OF IMMIGRATION.

Irish Blood in Native Americans.

The following is the full text of the Hon. George F. Hoar's reference to Irish-Americans in his oration at the Worcester Bicentennial:

I must not pass by another important factor in our history, whose influence has been already very great, and must be largely taken into account in our anticipation of the future. I mean the immigration, within the last half century, of our brethren of foreign birth, especially of the Irish race. Mr. Webster, at Plymouth, in 1820, said, with just pride, that in the villages and farmhouses of New England, there was still unbattered sleep within unharred doors. New England, and America, so far as it has slept or her teaching, has ever kept her doors unbarred. The great immigration, which began about 1830, has enriched Worcester with its abundant life. Of our whole population in 1880 of 58,291, there were of foreign birth 15,624. Of this number the principal ingredients were contributed as follows:

Ireland	9329
British America	3869
England	1297
Sweden	1000
German Empire	976

The number of persons having one parent or both of foreign birth was 32,894.

Allowing for the very large number of the grandchildren of emigrants, it seems reasonably certain that of our present population of 70,000, quite 30,000 are of Irish descent. To many good men this has been a source of alarm. But to me, much meditating on this theme, considering it in those large and paternal relations which belong to an occasion like this, it seems cause for both, for what it has done for us in the past, and for what we may hope from it in the future. Say nothing now of the benefit we have been able to confer on them. Leave out of view the blessing of justice, freedom, manly, self-government, education, to those who have withdrawn their necks from under the heel of England, a boon which a humane and generous people would strain and peril their own institutions to the utmost to confer. Think of what this has done for us.

CHEERFUL GRATITUDE NO ONLY,

Without the foreign immigration to this country the building of our railroads would have been impracticable, or must have been delayed for a generation. That, in turn, would have postponed the settlement of the West, would have made the suppression of the rebellion impossible, and would have prevented the creation of that western manhood, and access to that western agriculture, which, in their turn, have erected, supported and fed the manufacturing communities of East.

WEDDED OVER ITS GROWTH.

He spoke of the Irish Catholic element, that railroad, Poles, which these men erected for us, and of the Pope.

The English and the Saxon race exist in America in even larger numbers than in England, also in equals. The problem of their perfect union is to be wrought out here, on a new field, where equal justice prevails, where there is no political and no social Wealth, with an honest pride, on the great qualities of our ancestors. We hope to transmit them to our children. In that mighty national life, the Saxon and Celt, different sources of many, one; of many states, one nation; of many races, one people; of many creeds, one faith; the elements the Puritan has contributed, civil courage, his constancy, his belief in God, his sense of duty, his love for liberty, his reverence and lofty hope—will be elements of perpetual power.

But see what the Irishman brings, also, as a dowry to this marriage which the centuries are to weld.

THE IRISH RACE IS IDIOSYNCRATIC

among great races for great traits. No people that possessed them ever failed to achieve a high rank among nations, on a fair field. These qualities are the capacity to govern and organize under the most adverse conditions; the capacity for rapid elevation, when conditions are favorable; courage; soldierly qualities; the gift of eloquence; the power of severe and patient labor; the passion for rational liberty; strong domestic affection; chastity; deep religious feeling.

The most English of English historians has drawn a picture of England's rule over Ireland, whose dark and terrible shadows no other hand can deepen. Six hundred and forty years of the most terrible form of tyranny, that of a race by a race; government by bayonets, artillery, and intrenched camp; the greatest English champions of civil and spiritual liberty denying even toleration to Ireland; whatever is associated with daily deliverance and dignity; the Englishman is associated with bondage and ruin to the Irishman; of the two greatest English sovereigns—Cromwell for the Puritan—the Irish policy of one extirpation, of the other, degradation; the most odious laws, aggravated by more odious administrators; priests, reviled by millions as the only authorized expositors of Christian truth, and the only authorized dispensers of the Christian Sacraments, treated as no honest man would treat the most abject beggar.

THE LAST LORD MACAULEY'S VOUCHER.

His authority needs no confirmation. If it did it would be supplied by multiply English witnesses, and by slight that this state of things continued, without intermission or improvement, down to the time when the great emigration from Ireland was at its height. Yet what sight millions of men on earth proclaimed more great men than Ireland during the last half of the last century? Swift and Goldsmith and Burke and Sheridan, with the foremost name in great literature, in English literature; Wellington, the first soldier of his time, were Irishmen. It may be said that they belonged to the dominant race. But take the men whom Ireland claims as her own, all on the stage within a period of 50 years—Emmet,

The noblest star of Fame,
That ever in life's young glory set!

Grattan, whose genius gave Ireland her brief taste of national life,

That soon faded, withered from the plume
And the emblem of age, when, filled with life anew,
A nation exchanged the dark bonds of her doom,
And, for one moment instant, touched Liberty's goal!

Plunkett, greatest of the great orators of the House of Commons, Curran, Moore,

To whom with one consent,
All Irish the crown in the high argument.

Father Mathew, whose inspired word excited the desire of intemperance from the bosom of hundreds of thousands of his countrymen; O'Connell, before whom England trembled for her peace. Had Ireland but a few of the great names which have adorned the annals of this downtrodden people, —Mr. Fulton Forman, of the London Stores Co., has just arrived from the "village" of only 7,000,000 population (London), with an extensive assortment of gigantic mammoths of all sizes, weights, colors and fancy; also a quantity of diamond jewelry in all cut styles, and a large consignment of Indian Clubs, as which and manufactures generally Mr. Forman's produce stock is overstocked with the 10 Fisher St., room 17, San Francisco.

Selecting a Jury in Ireland.

An Irish journal gives the following graphic sketch of how jurors are selected in Ireland whenever any Nationalist "rebels" are to be put on trial:

"What sort of a man is Paddy Murphy? queries the Crown solicitor. 'Is he a loyal Leaguer? Does he attend their meetings? Is he a Home Ruler? 'Begorra, I don't think he is,' exclaims the constabulary. 'He's a quiet, decent man, who minds his own business.' 'It is a Catholic name, observes the Crown official, as if commiserating with himself. 'Yes, yes, he is a Catholic.' 'Well, now, constable, what about his sons and daughters? Do they show any active part in politics?' 'Yes, says the constable. 'I remember that his youngest daughter, Mary, was a member of the 'Ladies' Land League' when that association was flourishing some years ago.' 'We cannot have him on the jury, cries the Crown solicitor, and accordingly Paddy's name is marked for challenge, but not on account of the patriotism of his daughter, but simply because he belongs to the proscribed class.

Now here it will be observed that although a multiplicity of questions are asked, the only real test of which the Crown Solicitor wants to assure him is whether the man is a Catholic or Nationalist or not.

"No doubt there are a certain class of cases in which the religious question is not raised. For instance, Catholics are permitted to serve on juries before the jury-packers, lawyers and other notorious offenders are to be tried. But mail questions of an agrarian character, or in which the national sentiment is in any way concerned, the sole end and object of the Crown officer is to get a Protestant or exclusively Protestant jury.

"It is a very remarkable thing, and one not accepted as including the base, under-hand and unscrupulous methods by which English law is enforced in Ireland, that while the directions which Attorney General Holmes read in the House of Commons appear to enumerate a number of grounds upon which a challenge may be made, there is no allusion to the subject of religion, which is the only reason in twenty-nine cases out of a hundred for which Roman Catholics are ordered to stand by.

CURIOUS STATISTICS FROM ROME.

Catholic Statistics from Rome.

The Rome correspondent of the Boston Pilot, gives the following interesting extract from the "Pontifical Annuary" issued from the Vatican press. The Dean of the Sacred College, by age, is Cardinal John Henry Newman, aged 87 years; the Dean, by date of creation as Cardinal Merchi, who is 29 years in the Sacred College. The Dean of the Sacred College, however, is Cardinal Sacconi, first Cardinal of the Order of Bishops, by the date of his creation in 1861. He is Cardinal during 26 years.

The Cardinals of the Order of Bishops are six; of the Order of Priests, 42; of the Order of Deacons, 13. Of the Cardinals created by Pius IX., 23 are still living; Leo XIII. has created 39 Cardinals, and five who have been created of their elevation to the Sacred College at the next Consistory, after which date the Sacred College will have 67 members. In relation to age there are, in the Sexagenarians, 16 octogenarians, 23 nonagenarians, 16 over the age of 90, and 16 over the age of 94. The youngest member of the College is Cardinal Vannutelli, Nuzio, Patriarch of Lisbon, 46 years of age. With regard to Italians and foreigners there are at present five Roman Cardinals and 25 Cardinals of other Italian sects. The nations have 37 members of the Sacred College, according to the list published for this year. There are 13 Patriarchal Sees, 192 Archbishoprics, 1,000 Episcopal Sees. The Patriarchates of the Latins are Lisbon, Venice, Lisbon (Malacitana, Syrians), Halydon of the Chaldeans, Cilicia of the Armenians, And those of the Latin Rite: Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, Venice, Jerusalem, Indies, West Indies and Lisbon. The Archbishops and Bishops, known formerly as in partibus infidelium, who do not enjoy Episcopal Sees properly speaking, 315; Archbishops and Bishops no longer having titles, 21; Prelates sullaire discrezo five; a total of 1271 titles actually conferred. Leo XIII. has created one Patriarchate, 16 Archbishoprics, 42 Dioceses, 27 Vicariates and one Apostolic Delegation, nine Prefectures Apostolic, and 98 new titles, in short, marked the happy development of the hierarchy under the present Pontiff.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)
ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

Where Erin lay a dreamy child,
Upon Atlas's wave and wave,
Her hills, and valleys, lone and wild,
Her music but the breakers roar,
The green turf, smiling at her feet,
Seemed beckoning to some gifted head,
Her fortune then, in a word,
A guardian Saint of Church and land.

He opened to life amid the poor,
As it be ancient virtue home,
And placed upon each cottage door
A blessing for the coming morn.
He gave a promise to the race,
Of wit and joy, to wed or woo,
And to the home wear a smiling face
Though stormy days might come or go.

Then slowly marching o'er the ground,
He planted the great and tall then here
The work of love, that might be found,
In saving man by a little deed.
The Faith of old he lovely taught
To rich and poor, 'mid gain and loss,
The Christ, the Crucified,' who bought
Their purchased souls upon the Cross.

Oh Saint! in these latter days,
Thy children, who have kept thy life,
The world's pet banner tale of trays,
Hit kingdom's peace, and war and strife.
Try good St. Patrick's simple plan,
Is this your heir of grief and pain,
Be true to God, and just to man,
Then Erin's saints shall live again.

San Francisco. THOMAS CURTIN.

ROLL OF HONOR.

OUR LADY OF MERCY'S SCHOOL.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT—Maggie Ballin, Mary Cahill, Agnes Farley, Annie Wallace, Mary Ballin, Agnes Ward Maggie Joyce, Cecilia Reilly, Fannie O'Brien.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT—Nellie Healy, Belle Hickey, Lizzie Healy, Katie Shaw, Mary Quick, Jude Crowley, Lou Dwyer.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT—Mary Whalen, Katie Kelleher, Katie Daly, Tessie Keegan, Adeline Rascoillet, Maggie Hayes, Maude O'Donnell.

PRIMARY DEPARTMENT—Mary Gray, Judith Gordon, Minnie Finnegan, Annie Hagerty, Lena Madden, Mary Casey, Christine Sewell, Hattie Stone, Linnie Casey, Nettie Carr, Annie Kane.

SITUATION WANTED

By a middle aged widow lady as housekeeper or to do housework. Apply at 618 Francisco.

A Sudden Change of Weather

Will often bring on a cough. The irritation which follows coughing is quickly subdued by "Brown's Bronchial Troches," a simple and effective cure for all hard or tender throats. Price, 25 cents per box.

—Frank P. Kelly, Druggist, 109 Fifth st., opposite Panorama Building, Prescriptions a specialty. Complete assortment of fancy goods and toilet articles always on hand.

—The oldest reliable optical establishment. C. Mullen the leading optician 136 Montg. street.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—Captain McHardy's report on the Belfast riots will recommend better barracks, more rapid conveyance for the police during riots, and the employment of mounted and plain-clothes constables, with more premiums.

CARLOW.—Mr. F. Mulvigan, school master, Carlow Parish, has received an appointment in the Government service.

CORK.—A very extraordinary moonlight affair is reported from Bantry. On February 16, about 12 o'clock, a house in the possession of a woman named Mrs. Ross, who was protected by the Land League, was surrounded by about one hundred men, who demanded that the inmates should leave. The woman refused, whereupon attempts were made to force the door and effect an entrance. They answered by volleys of stones, with shouts, groans, and threatened to pull down the house if it was not given up. The police, believing that it would be useless to contend with such a large body of men, consented to leave. Mrs. Ross and some other inmates, together with the three policemen, then left for Bantry, some three miles distant. What makes the affair more extraordinary is that the dispute between the parties is confined to the Ross family, the National League not interfering.

On February 17, the remains of Sister Philomena were interred in the holy ground attached to the Kinsale convent. The funeral procession was a very imposing one, the Kinsale people feeling great regret among the inhabitants of Kinsale, at the departure of Sister Philomena, who was one of the highest respected sisters, which were justly merited on account of her noble works, humility, and untiring devotion. Judge Barry, who is a Protestant, and who knew the deceased lady very well, was closely sheltered as a token of respect, and many other similar demonstrations of respect were indulged in by the Catholics of the town.

The occasion of turning the first sod of the Cork and Cloyne Cloyne Cloyne Cloyne railway took place on Saturday last, and was celebrated by a luncheon at St. Anne's.

CLARE.—The Government, it is said, has been at considerable difficulty in finding a suitable person to accept the appointment of High Sheriff for Clare. Mr. Cornelius Cornelius Cornelius Synge, J.P., Moyan Callan, Co. Clare, has, it is now generally known, at last consented to take office. The new sub Sheriff, Mr. Charles Mahon (Belfast), is a nephew of the Marquis of Sligo, and is a Protestant. It is stated that he will be succeeded by Mr. Patrick Hogan, Fort Castle, Doughmore Creek for the Nenagh and County Limerick Division. Mr. Patrick Dawson is the son of Mr. Richard Dawson, J.P., Bearnty, County Clare, and if his recruits go well he may be sure of success. He has done in Sheriff, he is bound to become that singular anomaly, a popular sheriff.

DUBLIN.—On February 16th, a servant girl named Jane O'Neill, aged 30 years, residing in the house of Mr. Dawson, 20 Grosvenor-place, Dublin, was sent to post some letters. When she reached the post office she was accosted by a young man of fine mien, native and backed upon the footway, and from whom she was crushed by upon the horse and cart and a carbine wall. She was killed instantly.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Mr. Stuart Harvey, of 29 Nassau street, and 16 and 23 and 25 Frederick street, to the Commission of the Peace for the Borough of Dublin.

DONEGAL.—Prof. Seth McNeill, M. D., speaking at a meeting of the Professional Hole Association, on Feb. 16th, said the Protestant clergy, a Protestant, the sex of a Protestant clergy, and showed the English public that Irish Protestants, who, in the last century, had been very numerous, had ceased to be so from their Catholic fellow-countrymen, so that the Protestant clergy of Donegal and Sir (Mr. McNeill) had gone about the county working for Catholics, and they had found that the Catholic sacrifice—into the very hearts—of the Lord Lieutenant, and all the lie they had told about the country, that Protestants and Catholics were fly at each other's throats but for their mutual interpretation.

DERRY.—Derry is at present the more celebrated party triumphs. It was generally thought that the Orangemen would be allowed the pealing of the old Cathedral over the difficulty. But, it is said, the Protestant clergy, their use for the occasion. The loyalists disapproved of the proposal, and it was not carried into effect. The bring continued by two Catholics, and the thing by protestant, the police did not interfere.

LONDONDERRY.—The Lord Lieutenant's tenantry, with reference to the recent decision in Parnell's case, received a very cordial reception. At one at part, the route due Lord Lieutenant, and he had to pass until the 15th of March, on the hall week's rent due the 1st November, on or before the 8th of May. After time respective dates indications cannot be given."

GALWAY.—The town of Loughrea continues to present the appearance of a place in a state of siege. The houses of those who have taken the land from the owners are still in the police are kept in barracks. Notice have been posted, calling upon the people to boycott a landlord who had supplied goods to the police. All the shops in the town are closed, and the people have to go to Galway for food, the inhabitants refusing to convey them. Provisions have been forwarded into the town.

Upwards of a thousand people assembled in Clifden on the 16th, to hear Mr. Michael Davitt and parish priest, the Very Rev. Patrick Lynskey, P.P., V.F., who arrived from Dublin, at 4 p.m. Rev. the parish priest, by which the very representations travelled from Galway had reached the usual destination, at Mullahey's Hotel, he was loudly acquitted by the crowd to alight, and was obliged to take his place at the head of a large procession, which was formed in Fair Hill, and proceeded to Clifden, the Rev. Mr. Lynskey by his side, followed by a large bodyguard of the Irish National Land League, who formed a hollow square at the entrance to the town, which was brilliantly illuminated. Mr. Davitt addressed the people in words to the people from the steps of the Freemasonry door.

On Feb. 11th, Mr. Michael Walsh, teacher of the National School, Cloon, Ballinrobe, received the following letter, addressed to "Michael Walsh, Cloon, Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo, Ireland, Europe, Asia, Africa, America, Australia, Sydney, Melbourne, Cork, Dublin, Ballinrobe, Cloon, Mr. Michael Walsh, Cloon, Ireland." Mr. Walsh, Cloon, Ireland." Mr. Walsh, Cloon, Ireland." Mr.

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

TRUTH AND VIRTUE.

To me this world is but a treasure mine,
Aglow with gems of rarest hue and lone;
They form our passports to a happier clime,
By them our fame or infamy is known.

And like the base objects of our care,
To feel them we must search and toil and delve;
Just, so within those baser objects—they Must search with toil and delve for gems like these.

For all the virtues which these gems possess,
Attach themselves to him who happily sought,
And all their power to strengthen and to bless
Within the inward heart—strongly wrought.

Wouldst know these gems, be will-bored, aimless youth,
Just entering Life's full play with heartfelt zest!
Thy soul then—search well for Truth and Virtue,
And prize to it the treasure thus gained by the quest!

Sweet Virtue is another; great its art
To strengthen purposes and to truly bless;
Go find this one and gain it in thy heart
To light thy way to honor and success.

More gems I still could name, but shall not—lest
Their number dull thy purpose—let them be;
First mine for Truth and Virtue and the rest
Will be the surface and basin on thee!

C. ANTHONY DOYLE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

IN CLEARER SIGHT.

(SUPPER AFTER CONFIRMED.)

My walls are no more prison walls;
I see one see that sunlight on the casement falls;
And here I thought were bars, cold and grim,
Were only branched shadows—something dim.
That caught their darkness from the soul within,
Or now in fadeless glory I behold
Or crowning sunbeam, with no thought to hold
A sunless spirit in a captive gloom,
Whose walls are stony speech, and doom
With an pale pages of despair—
The dread, alas! of which months no outer air.
Ah, well! it surely well doth seem
It was at last but passing or dream;
No gaoler holds me now a prisoner here,
There is no gaoler but one, Conscience—and fear
Imprisons minds and bodies in its chain,
And freedom is not freedom—only seeming such,
A very mockery of freedom!
Our faults so tenderness should ask
The chastening stripes must chastise them all!
But for our blessings—oh, in shame,
Before the throne of heaven we bow!

"Earth bears no blessings for mistaken;
Man crown the brows, and scourge the too
That did his gift, but spoil, or slay!
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed, in silence rose
The king, and sought in the garden cool,
And walked long and earnest long and low,
"Be merciful to me, a fool!"

M. L.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE GRAVE OF ST. JOSEPH.

Holy Joseph! glorious Patron
Of the Church's sacred fold,
Guardian of the Divine Infant
Given once to mists of old.
Oh! sent thy powerful influence
And the Church's pride behold.

Keep our faith from growing cold!

Behold! Behold! Behold!
Keep our faith from growing cold!

Behold! Behold! Behold!

Eyes of a Saviour's life;
And what joy had mortal feeling
One Who is the Bread of Life!
Let us, too, partake thy bliss,
For our days with sin are rife;
Our souls, too,
Save and feed to through the strife.

Hyacinthe Joseph! glorious model
Of the lowly, poor, and meek!
Pour the sweet telling spirit
With a powerful, holy mirth,
Pour the sweet telling spirit
Of thine own most lowly birth!
Come, oh! thy powerful, mirth,
Pulsing! Joseph! solve doubt we
Days and years are fleeting fast;
Thou hast died in Jesus' bosom,
Thou our hope on thee we cast;
Lead us to the land of Peace
When we each approach our last!
Joseph, Joseph!
Help us till death's final is past.

THE FOOL'S PRAYER.

The royal feast was done; the king
Sought some new sport to please his soul.
And to his jester cried, Sir Fool,
Kneel and to us thy fool make a prayer!

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the modding court before.
Then kneel down and crossed his hands,
Bobbed the painted pate he wore.

He bowed his head and bent his knee
Upon the floor. A hush fell on His pleading voice some, "O'ts Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"No pity, Lord, could change the heart
From wrong to right, as wrong is wrong!
The rod must heal the sin; but, Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"I'm by our guilt the outward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay,
We are foolish and we do
We hold the earth from heaven away.

"These clouds of sin, dull in the skies,
Go scathing blessings without end,
Then fall, well-meaning men be so struck
Among the heart strings of a friend.

"The ill thrust truth that we have kept—
We have been sharp to pierced and stung
The words we had not mean to say—
We know not how great our fault lies!

"Our faults so tenderness should ask
The chastening stripes must chastise them all!
But for our blessings—oh, in shame,
Before the throne of heaven we bow!

"Earth bears no blessings for mistaken;
Man crown the brows, and scourge the too
That did his gift, but spoil, or slay!
Be merciful to me, a fool!"

THEODORE.

PUBLIC SPEAKERS AND SINGERS.

Use our "Brown's Bronchial Troches" as freely as you please, knowing perfectly that they can do you no harm. They are the unanimous opinion of the world. G. A. GRANT, Teacher of Oratory, Boston.

Ask for and obtain only "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Sold everywhere, at 25 cents a box.

—The Fish garden at Fredericksburgh, Very Rev. Father Dowling, will be consecrated, as mentioned, by Mgr. Corrigan, Bishop of Newark, shortly after Easter. The rise of consecration will be performed by Mgr. Corrigan, the Archbishop of Toronto, the Bishops of Brooklyn, Hamilton and Kingston notifying.

Literary Miscellany.

Buried Hopes.

A Pretty Story of Domestic Life.

Agnes Fitzroy was the youngest of a numerous family, all of whom had survived their father, an officer of distinguished character who fell in the Crimean war. Two of her sons had embraced the same profession, the third was in the navy and therefore had already attained some celebrity as a hero after. She had five sisters, all married, but only two of them resided in England.

Agnes lived with her mother at their family seat in Gloucestershire with no youthful companion but little Jane Douglas. Jane Douglas, who was a niece of Mrs. Fitzroy, had been brought up by her aunt from infancy (in the death of her parents Mrs. Fitzroy took her child, then only six months old, to her own home, educated her with Agnes who was one year older, and bestowed the same maternal care on the little orphan as on her own child.

Though the bulk of Jane's father's property went to his male kindred, the giver only relinquished such a portion as enabled them to make a mere than adequate settlement upon her; and as Mrs. Fitzroy religiously abstained from appropriating any part of it towards the expenses of her maintenance and education, it had grown accumulating for nearly eighteen years, until two Jane Douglas might almost call herself an heiress.

The two girls being "grown up," Mrs Fitzroy saw no objection to again open her doors to the visits of her neighbors. Agnes now nineteen, is fair as a lily, beautiful, indeed, in form and feature; but, alas! that glowing pink cheek and marble brow are in this instance the forerunners of the direct of mortality which in several generations had helped to thin the ranks of the house of Fitzroy. The medical observers, but hopes lovingly for the best—but we shall see.

Among the neighboring gentry was the family of Sir Frederick Trehearn, with whom Mrs. Fitzroy had kept up an intimate acquaintance since her husband's death. Sir Frederick was a widower, and had two sons, George and Edward, and one daughter, Emily. Edward was the elder, and of course heir to the title and estate. George was a miserable cripple in consequence of an accident which befell him in his infancy, at Emily everything I told when it is said she was not ugly, and not ancient, is all natural or stupid; not too talkative or too grave. In fact, she was one of those girls you might see hundreds of any day—simply commonplace.

Edward Trehearn, the "Young Squire," as he was usually denominated, was in his twenties (Agnes, had been educated at Stonyhurst, and habit fair to reflect honor upon the hot-headed hot-hearted youth.

In the close intimacy which subsisted between the families at Trehearn Hall and Fitzroy Cottage (as the elegant residence of Mrs. Fitzroy was modestly designated), Edward, of course, became a frequent visitor at the latter; while somehow or other it always happened that he was at home whenever the Fitzroys were expected at the Hall. It was soon settled, therefore, that a match would certainly take place between Edward and either Agnes or Jane. But it was impossible to decide whether Edward cared for either Agnes or Jane, so impartially were his attentions bestowed upon both. He was, in deed, the frequent companion of their walks and rides in summer; would read to them in the long dreary evenings of the winter; and sometimes take his part in singing or accompanying them with his flute, which he played with a brilliancy of execution, while they exerted their voices and their science alternately upon the piano. Occasionally, too, he might be detected lots one at one time with Jane at another with Agnes, either in the drawing-room or upon the lawn, or sauntering through the grove of surrounding poplars, where sweetly-scented lovers usually their path with dancing moonbeams. It happened however, that these latter walks were more frequent with Agnes than with Jane, not because they were sought or contrived, but simply because Agnes was more prone to seek such quiet nooks than her mercurial cousin. Edward, with all his hot-headedness, was a true and honorable gentleman. He would rise have discovered, and soon enough to have a pang, such he was ever desirous, and too honorable to appropriate as a triumph, that he was looked upon as rising with roses the beginning of a pale whose cold and lonely grave.

Time glided on, and month after month saw Edward a more and more frequent visitor at Fitzroy Cottage, when one morning, about two years subsequently to the period at which this narrative commences, Sir Frederick came alone, and with an air of mysterious importance requested the honor of a private interview with Mrs. Fitzroy. They were closeted in the breakfast-room, whence the footman retired, and Mrs. Fitzroy immediately took her leave of her guest. Jane, who was busy at embroidery, instead of continuing her work, could do nothing but look again and again at that portion of it which was already finished, as if she was endeavoring to catch the image of the pattern. Agnes was reading, but the hand which held the book dropped upon her knee, and while a faint flush came across her cheek, her eyes were fixed upon the countenance of Jane, who for once in her life, looked anxious and fearful.

In about half an hour Mrs. Fitzroy returned to the room, for Sir Frederick had taken his departure. His approached Jane took her hand affectionately, as she tenderly inquired "what was the matter?"

"I have long expected such an interview."

Jane looked up. There was a tender smile upon her features which caught the eye of Agnes. She was real all its meaning, and smiled too; but the smile of her mother, as it spread itself over her pale cheeks was like a wintry sunbeam upon a bed of snow.

Mrs. Fitzroy, having gained herself, in her accustomed place, the Cottage Family resumed upon her to make certain customary inquiries, in consequence of having learned from his son that he was desirous of being permitted henceforth to consider himself the acknowledged suitor of Jane, a desire which he had no wish to oppose. "No, my child, you have only to consult your own heart and before you finally take a step, in which, according as the heart is well consulted or not, must make or mar the after chance of its after felicity."

The affectionate and parental tone with which Mrs. Fitzroy addressed these words was answered by the tears of Jane as she fell upon the work she held in her hand; but Agnes, advancing towards her with the lively throwing her arms around her neck, exclaimed, as she gently kissed her "Happy Jane!" in accents that only too well mated with her tears, which now mingled with those of her own cousin. In a few moments the struggle was over; and then what a touching contrast there was between the beaming countenance of Jane, suffused each restant by the standing tinge of confusion joy which despoiled to a blush, and the fairness of her cousin, which was the check of Agnes, now speechless, and now pressed, as Hope's angelic touch has on flying flakes in the silent agony of her stricken heart. Slip, like her mother, laid long expired each an interest as Sir Frederick had that morning sought; but her altered anticipation of the object was scarcely a month old. She had wakened as from a dream. But it was impossible that Rosen told her it was a dream, and that the scene of enchantment had dissolved away.

Agnes was not slip, but at late the presence of Edward Trehearn, amid the transporting thoughts which disturbed and harassed her when he was absent. And then, too, everything he said or did had become so, were suspicious and cracks with her. He could not be wrong, and she was surprised that anybody could think or act otherwise than as he thought and acted. Sometimes she paused to doubt the meaning of all this. To question her heart why it turned so instinctively towards him as a fruitless scrutiny, for she knew the pang it was to know the fact, but not to find the cause. She was quite aware that he had no share in what she felt; besides, Edward had never spoken of love to her; and know then for, must be out of the question. Thus, then, was her conduct at a time, but it gradually departed from her to be unmeaning, and consequently unpleasant. The first consciousness of the real truth started her one evening when Edward was thinking for her mother, and her sister, but she. Sad often heard Edward read, but this time the felt a strange interest, an unusual sympathy in the romantic scenes of the lovers, while her heart palpitated at the sound of his voice fell upon her ear. In a moment she knew he did not prefer her. It was a moment of bitterness, but Sir Frederick called upon Mrs. Fitzroy, and when she left the short period Agnes had discered that which caused his visit. No prejudice, no, nor even pride, could stand the shock of an unexpected blow when it really comes; and hence the brief struggle with herself. But that brief struggle was all. Agnes was too proud to confess a sense of slight, or wrong. She could not, she acknowledge she had nourished not merely an unrequited, but an unsought and unauthorized preference; and she was too independent of spirit to allow herself to be so lowered by obtrusion of her own weakness.

The bridal course came, and Agnes had proceeded from her chamber a fairer bride. She would have it so, in spite of all the fond entreaties of her mother to the contrary. And why were those fond entreaties urged? Alas! the ground that spoaks not, that wipes its, that will not, cannot, speak, but in silence in the heart, is the grief that consumes the soonest.

The health of Agnes had gradually declined, and her mother was now in fear of the symptoms of her increasing debility, she could not allay the anxious fears of her mother as her cheek, which was painted with the lovely glow of a wasting fever that told of the "withered rose upon her mother's cheek."

Mrs. Fitzroy had watched these symptoms with unwariness, but without any serious apprehension, till the rapid strides they had lately made imparted her with alarming thoughts of the danger they pretended—that there was but too much reason to dread that Agnes was becoming consumptive, if she were not so already. The languid glare of her full blue eyes, to which a frightful prominence was given from the hollow cheeks produced by the wasting of the flesh from their orbits—the quick breathing, and the panting cough, brought on by the slightest motion, were fearful indications of the existence of that malady though deceitfully malady. Medical aid had been called in, but the most skillful remedies had failed to arrest its progress. Yet there were some days when a transformation for the amendment was held out, to be followed only by a more severe and searching relapse.

It was on this delusive and dangerous crisis of her health that the appointed wedding day arrived, and hence was that forth Mrs. Fitzroy and Jane earnestly dissuaded her from attempting the fatigue and excitement of the ceremony. But no; it was her own wish, she said, it was her last request, and that she should be her cousin's bridesmaid, and she would be her cousin's bridesmaid, and she would be her cousin's bridesmaid. Jane was the first to yield to her wishes; and when the day was at the finger of Jane she smiled, and in a whisper said to her own breaking heart—"I will be well. I have triumphed over my sin! I have actually witnessed the consummation of a felicity which should have been my own; and now I may depart and bury my secret with me."

Jane was a happy bride, but Agnes felt that she was a happier bridesmaid. Jane's heart was full of love

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1887

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—"Take away," says Brownson, "the subjection of the State to God, and you take away the reason for the subjection of the subject to the State."

—The Belgian hierarchy has selected Mgr. Jean Baptiste Abbelen, D.D., father to Vicar-General of the Archdiocese of Malines, for the important post of Rector Magnificus of the University of Louvain.

—The Irish National League has issued a circular to the branches throughout the kingdom, urging the necessity of preparing for the next general election, the supposition being that the fall of the Government is among the early possibilities of the near future.

—A Chinaman has been elected President of the Congregational Club at Hartford, Conn. Intelligent Christians can appreciate the reasons which impelled the people who thus elevated John over them. John has "coin," and money makes the Congregational mare go at a 2:40 pace.

—Lutheran Germany is disturbed at "without a living sense of God. Reverence, mystery and awe at the name of God have died out, and where they glimmer, other fires do not burn. A more tyrannical ministry, a more enslaved people, is not found in Germany than those who compose the Lutheran Church of to-day."

—Emperor William celebrated his 90th birthday, yesterday, and the Sovereign Pontiff sent his congratulations by a special envoy, who telegraphed to the Holy Father from Berlin that he has been very favorably received, and that he had an audience with the Emperor, in order to present to him the autograph congratulation sent by the Pope.

—A cablegram from Germany announces the re-opening of the Theological Institute, at Paderborn, which was closed under the Kulturkampf. The Catholic papers, commenting upon this, rejoice upon the return of the May Law victims, including Father Gabriel, who was imprisoned for three months and was afterwards exiled to England for a breach of the law. Father Kemper of Eggenstedt and Father Thoes have also returned.

—We are in receipt of a neat pamphlet giving interesting particulars concerning the new St. Patrick's Church in Rome. Among the subscribers to the fund for the erection we notice the name of Pope Leo XIII. for $800; all the Irish Bishops for various sums ranging from $100 to $500; John Fitzgerald of Nebraska, $500; Dr. J. F. Gibbon of this city, $100; Richard Tobin of this city, $100; Bernziger Bros. of New York, $50.

—Readers of the MONITOR will remember that some few months ago General Sir Redmond Buller was sent to Ireland in order to terrorize the Irish people into abrisk fear of English bayonets. But England's enemy, it seems, has become England's enemy. Here is what he says of the bad government of Ireland by the country whose representatives he is: "He said there never would be peace in Ireland until there had been established a court having strong coercive powers over bad landlords and protective powers over poor tenants."

—"Ireland," said Cardinal Manning in a recent sermon, "in all its poverty, in all its suffering, in all its penal laws, now happily gone for ever, has again covered the face of the land with cathedrals, churches, convents, seminaries and colleges. And it is not only in Ireland, but throughout the world—in Northern America, in Australia, throughout the British Empire—the Irish faith and the Irish blood are spreading, scattering broadcast the seed of eternal hope, which, taking root, springs up thirty fold, sixty fold, one hundred fold."

—Poor old Joyson's Catholic flock has been teetorally stranded at last! The long-threatened financial crash has culminated in the ex-Pere's desertion of his determination to establish a Gallican Catholic sect, and as he has gone into copartnership with the Protestant episcopal sect in Paris! Such is the ignominious end of one who—as a Catholic priest—commanded the attention and the admiration of Europe, but who fell through pride and perished in his own perversity. The Gallican fance is thus finished at last!

—The rapidity with which Socialism is spreading in Germany may be surmised from the following figures which indicate the Socialist vote in Berlin alone, during the years indicated: In 1867 the Socialist vote was only 67. In 1871 it increased to 2,036; in 1874, 11,779; 1877, 31,022; 1878, 56,147; 1881, 30,671; 1884, 68,526; 1887 94,259. It is no wonder, therefore, that the governing power of Germany dreams an alliance with the Pope in order to save the country from an enemy raised up by the persecution of the Church under the "blood and iron" rule of Bismarck.

—The Thurles Board of Guardians have passed the following comprehensive resolution: "That inasmuch as in this, the fiftieth year of the reign of Queen Victoria, our laws are being made and administered by a Little German Prince, the Privy Council, and the Court of Queen's Bench, our Press is being persecuted, our National leaders prosecuted, the Union Jack contemptuously dishonored, and all Catholic juror are told to stand aside, we, the Guardians of the Thurles Union, hereby decline to take any part in the celebration of her Jubilee." The words "Little German Prince" are meant for Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, commander of the forces in Ireland.

—Hedging to a letter recently received from Prior Elyon, regarding the contemplated church of St. Patrick in Rome, Cardinal Manning says: "I do not know how I can express my long delay in fulfilling my promise to unite with the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland in assuring you to be [illegible] in Rome a church in honor of St. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland, and Spiritual Father to millions scattered throughout the world. It is indeed most fitting that as England has the church of Saint Gregory at Rome, Ireland should have a church of St. Patrick, to whom, next after the Apostle of England, it shall bear a filial love. May your project thriving, as I am sure it will, be carried by the blessing of God to a happy issue."

—The Boston Catholic Pioneer, commenting on the action of the local Sabbatarians, says: those ordinance ordinances are not wanted in India, or for that matter anywhere else. They effect no possible good amongst the native population by making themselves absurdly ridiculous, and, apart from the mischief which they do themselves, the only serious result of these antics and gyrations is to bring Christianity into contempt. But as long as there are dupes at home willing to supply the sinews of war, we shall probably find fools enough abroad to carry on a crusade which is nothing short of a travesty on all that sensible Christians hold in esteem and veneration.

—One of the chief topics of conversation in Ireland at present is the religious disposition which John Graham, deceased, under of his real estate. Mr. Graham was a resident of Ballintra, in the county Donegal. Two of the provisions of the will of deceased include clauses that in case his son Norman die from his wife and without issue, the farm in Aughadella, known as Aughadella Hill, should be given (the tenant right thereof) free of charge to the inhabitants of the village of Ballintra, and the people of Drumholm parish for a public park." The rector, the parish priest and the police officer of the district for the time being are appointed trustees for the carrying out of the bequest.

—The manifestly manner in which our fellow Catholics in the East respond to the appeals of their pastors for help to build schools in their parishes furnishes a pleasing contrast to the slipshodness with which such appeals are oftentimes met with by the officers of this section of the Lord's vineyard. Rev. Father Corcoran, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Brooklyn, recently made an appeal to his parishioners for funds to erect a school building for girls to be taught by the Sisters of St. Joseph and within ten days—he received thirteen thousand five hundred dollars! This is real, genuine and practical Catholicity, which blesses those that give more than a hundred-fold. Philadelphia or Corcoran may well feel proud of his parishioners.

—"Golden Gate Park will shortly be graced with a $60,000 monument erected to the memory of Francis Scott Key, the author of the "Star Spangled Banner." James Lick left the money for its purchase and Story, the Sculptor, has just finished his portion of the work. It is made of Roman travertine—a white concretionary limestone peculiar to Italian localities. The whole structure will be fifty feet high and will be surrounded by a magnificent symbol of America. The figure of Key is of bronze; he is represented seated under an arch of elaborate workmanship and the figure is modeled in Story's best style. We earnestly hope there will be no Masonic mummeries permitted at the inauguration of this great work of art.

—A singular admission was recently made by the St. Johnbury Republican, a paper published in Vermont, concerning the great illiteracy of that State's native-born population. The Republican says: "It is a singular fact that in a country where popular education that is falling behind. To the figures given from time to time in this paper the only answer has been that the growth of illiteracy in Vermont was due to the great increase in our foreign-born population. But the statistics do not sustain this view. Of native-born white persons 10 years old and upward who are unable to write, the census of 1870 gave us 2,962, while in 1880 the number had increased to 3,354. On the other hand, of our foreign-born population the number unable to write was 13,864 in 1870, and 10,327 in 1880."

—The Anglican bogus Bishop of Lichfield, England, has hit upon a great remedy for the troubles of the Church of England. He candidly acknowledges that the religious belief of a great many Protestants is "little better than a jumble of ill-assorted truths to some one or more of which they attach a special importance. The consequence is that when they meet with "a well-instructed Romanist or other non-conformist, or perhaps a plausible skeptic, they have no solid ground on which to stand, and no trief armor with which to meet the attacks made upon them. The Anglican representative thinks their position would be rendered stable by "definite instruction in spiritual truth." Right you are, good Sir, but how can you expect the flock to know the way in which they should walk if the head-shepherds cannot agree in pointing it out to them!

—The death of Henry Ward Beecher has revealed the fact that—from a financial point of view—his life was a magnificent success, in fact he stands alone in modern days among men who live by their talents. Here is the result of his long life, as recorded by one who is in a position to know approximately: Salary first ten years, $20,000; salary second ten years, $100,000; salary third ten years, $200,000; salary fourth ten years, $200,000; for "Life of Christ," $50,000; for copyright of "Norwood," $5,000; lectures first ten years, $20,000; lectures second ten years, $30,000; lectures third ten years, $150,000; lectures fourth ten years, $100,000; for "Life of Christ," $10,000; for editorial and special work, $150,000; weddings, $10,000; sales and copyrights, $25,000; total, $1,145,000. To which may be added miscellaneous income of at least $100,000; grand total, $1,250,000. And at death that did all these thousands perish the persuaded soul of Beecher! No faith, no comforting assurance, no pentecostal spirit manifested, no appeal to God for mercy—he died as he lived—his own god in his life, his own idol in death.

—A singular coincidence was recently made by the St. Johnbury Republican, a paper published in Vermont, concerning the great illiteracy of that State's native-born population. The Republican says: "It is a singular fact that in a country where popular education that is falling behind. To the figures given from time to time in this paper the only answer has been that the growth of illiteracy in Vermont was due to the great increase in our foreign-born population. But the statistics do not sustain this view. Of native-born white persons 10 years old and upward who are unable to write, the census of 1870 gave us 2,962, while in 1880 the number had increased to 3,354. On the other hand, of our foreign-born population the number unable to write was 13,864 in 1870, and 10,327 in 1880."

Saint Charles Borromeo.

The action of his Grace Archbishop Ryan in creating a new parish in this city under the patronage of the great St. Charles Borromeo, will be earlier than to some of that distinguished citizen of heaven into a prominence on the Pacific Coast which it does not hitherto enjoyed.

St. Charles Borromeo, Archbishop of Milan, Cardinal and Confessor of the Faith, was born October 2nd, 1538, in the castle of Arona, fourteen miles from Milan, which was destined to become the seat of his celebrated ecclesiastical See. He was descended from a very ancient Lombard family which gave to both the Church and State many celebrated men. He was educated at the celebrated University of Pavia, where his prudence, piety and moral conduct made him a model for his fellow students. In 1559 his uncle, Cardinal de Medici, was chosen Pope, to succeed Paul IV., and by him St Charles was created Cardinal and nominated as Archbishop of Milan, although then but 23 years of age. Pope Pius IV. also placed him at the head of several important ecclesiastical Commissions, but St. Charles refused all high positions and emoluments in order to devote himself entirely to the service of God and the salvation of souls.

During the time his uncle occupied the Chair of St. Peter St. Charles was his confidential adviser, and mainly of the great work accomplished by Pope Pius IV. during his brief pontificate, is due to the prudence and wisdom of this prince-nephew. To St. Charles is also due the credit of suggesting the reopening of the Council of Trent, which had been interrupted during the reign of Pope Johnus III., and yet amidst the numerous onerous duties which devolved upon him as a public adviser and confidant of the Pontiff St. Charles never neglected a single opportunity to increase the happiness of his people, to ameliorate the condition of the poor, to spread the Faith and to be himself the apostle of prayer and humility for the edification of the people. He was also a great patron of learning, having established many schools, and among others an academy in the Vatican for the advancement of clergymen and scholars in virtue and knowledge. This academy was the doctrine of great good and gave to the Church many bright ornaments among whom was Pope Gregory XIII.

St. Charles afterwards founded the College of the Borromeo for the education of priests in the city of Milan, and which he provided over that ancient See with all the dignity which his elevated ecclesiastical position entitled him, so private St. Charles was a most stern ascetic. He subsisted upon the plainest food purtaken of in the smallest quantity which would remain fire, for several years before his death he fasted every day upon bread and water, never tasting any eggs, milk or wine. Often he spent the whole night in prayer and meditation, and his couch was a pallet of straw.

A reformer of ecclesiastical discipline his labors proved of immense benefit in purging Religious Orders of irregularities which had crept into them through inertia, and, after a life of forty-six years—during twenty-four of which he governed the Church of Milan—he died between the 3rd and 4th of November, 1584, the Church having selected the latter date as his festival when he was canonized by Pope Paul V., in 1610.

St. Charles was one of the many instruments which Almighty God makes use of in the world in order to carry on His Church in accordance with His holy will. He literally spent himself for the aggrandizement of God's glory and the salvation of souls, and the large fruit the seasons which marked his career on earth may be transferred to the new parish, so that it may be fruitful in bringing many souls to the vision of God.

A Baptist Preacher Undertakes a Big Job.

Protestant preachers are so constantly engaged in attempting the impossible feat of reconciling God a truth with Protestant error, that some of them have become possessed with the idea that they can "convert" Catholics to their one-horse heretical sect! A certain Dr. Justin D. Fulton, has notified an astonished world through the daily press that hereafter he proposes to devote himself to the conversion of Roman Catholics to the Baptist faith! Poor souls! We really pity him! He will find it far easier to advertise his ridiculous pretensions than to perform his proposed task, and we suggest to him that he would be perverter of Catholics that he had better convert his dissenting Baptist brethren to one form of sectarianism, before he undertakes to denominate Catholics by making Baptist manikins out of them.

Among the sect represented by Dr. Fulton there are no less than a dozen different wings of Baptists—each claiming to be the Simon-pure system of sectarianism, yet all differing as widely as the Mormons do from their Methodist brethren. There's the Anabaptists, Dunkenbaptists, Arminian Baptists, Calvinistic Baptists, Regular Baptists, Free Communion Baptists, Free Will Baptists, Six Principle Baptists, Seventh Day Baptists, Antimonian Baptists, Mennonite Baptists and Hunker Baptists! What a medley of man-made mockery of Christian truth!

To which of these heretical wings of religious bombaggery Dr. Fulton intends to "convert" Catholics, that great modern Apostle fails to tell us, but it is fair to presume that any Catholic who may be silly enough to follow this daring dreamer will be known as Fulton's Fools.

We opine, however, that Dr. Fulton's array of "converts" will be very much of the same calibre as Falstaff's army, "ragged prodigals" whose Christianity is comprised in a well-clad body and a well-filled belly. "Except they call this class of "converts" in Ireland, and those are the only class who will consent to enter the corral of "converted" Catholics who are to be known as Fulton's Fools.

—The reliability of the sensational calligraphic received from Rome may be estimated by the fact that of them recently made Monsignor Stonesbro inform the Pope that mixed marriages were "a benefit" to the Church in America.

Lands Awaiting Catholic Settlers.

There are thousands of acres of land in California which Catholic colonists can procure on easy terms and which emigrants from the East can take up, cultivate and grow rich upon as comparatively few years California is by long odds the best state in the Union for agriculture, horticulture, fruit raising, or any industry where pride crops depend upon a good climate. Here a farmer or other occupier of land can labor in the fields eleven months in the year, he has no long dreary winter to consume the profits of his summer and fall crops. Children will be healthier and the family happier through climatic influences than any other portion of the United States, and the land will be advancing in value year by year.

If this should fall under the vision of any person desirous of procuring large tracts of land for Catholic colonists, it will give us a great deal of pleasure to furnish such information in reply to any inquiries. Our Catholic fellow-citizens are good needs citizens and they are rapidly coming here, but we regret to say that a large proportion of these are not of the household of Faith.

Bishop Keane on Ireland.

A cablegram from Rome says that Bishop Keane of Richmond preached on Sunday last in the Irish Franciscan church in that city, on the subject of St. Patrick and Ireland's love for the Church and the world. It must have been a masterly discourse if we may judge of it by the following meagre excerpt:

Bishop Keane compared the early phases of Christian Ireland to the transfiguration of Christ on the mount, and His persecution and suffering on the journey to Calvary. He drew a powerful picture of Ireland's conflict as a light and teacher of the nations of Europe, her children reaching even to the gates of Rome itself. As Christ was despised and the most abject of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with infirmity, so was Ireland. Jeers by three days to the tomb, which was sealed with the seal of Cæsar and the synagogue. When Easter came he arose in glory. So Ireland, after at least after three centuries of entombment. The first brightness was the Catholic constitution, and it had more been always steadily expanding. Life has been slowly but steadily returning to that mangled form, exalted in grave clothes. Already the trumpet of the Lord is sounding "It is Easter!" Vocus deep, thundering "There is no resurrection" "Other has not risen; there is no life in her." They have asked her for a sign. Shall we give them? But although the same mystery of the cross prevails, it is also has for her the joy and the tomb with just as surely lead her to the new light.

—It is a lucky thing for the huge army of "humorous" who fire vagrant lives in this country that the laws of Kentucky are not in force in California. At Augusta, Ky., Hiram Hudson, a vagrant, who had been in jail, was sold recently under the laws of that State to the highest bidder for seventy days. The jailer brought him to the dollars and immediately turned him loose, glad to get rid of his bad bargain.

The Duty of Catholics.

The evil influences of secularism and unbelief are undermining the elective plural religion of that benevolent materialism which poises in the world as Protestantism. Its ministers are becoming more and more and they are rapidly approaching that crisis in the history of sectarianism when the work will end in a period. In the midst of all this turmoil, and the unrest feeling which springs from disbelief, it is a great happy to Catholics to be able to point to a place of security which springs from Catholic faith and to be able to base our opinions upon a Church which are promulgated from the Rock of Christ.

Individuals outside the Church have only their own fallible, frail and fleeting judgment to guide them whenever upon questions affecting their worldly welfare or their spiritual future age-brought letter. Catholics are blessed with an infallible guide to whom they can turn. They have no predecessors whose wisdom they can consult, even as the Catholic turns to the tomes of the Fathers. They have no Vicar of Christ whose word goes forth the Vicar of God and all the lesser guides in such delicacy. And yet for want of the light of Faith, this lamp of Inspiration, that so many non-Catholics are now led into the lamentable condition of doubt and bewilderment concerning man's rights on earth and the future state of man after death.

In this state of doubt is the duty of Catholics? In it not to bring before their separated brethren, who are groping around in the darkness of doubt, the light of Catholic reasoning founded on the Faith, a mental law of Heaven?

Is it not a duty which comes upon us in conversations among men, where sin abounds, works like a cancer in the most Catholic souls, that souls be found fully and dearly solved in Catholic Revelation? Is it not a duty to act of mercy to open the eyes of our weaker and misled brethren, by placing them in possession of unfeasible evidence calculated to convince those of them in sincerity to which they may have come through sad experience, that the Church is the only Ark of Salvation, and that no man or any of the problems presented to him on opening questions of the hour. All a Catholic does is duty to ask himself this question: What says the Church? And what he has once learned the lesson the Soul of Wisdom teaches—then he can safely adopt her principle as his own. This is the plan and simple duty of all Catholics whenever the shadow of doubt falls across their souls regarding new theories, new propositions, or alarmist, questions upon which their knowledge may not be complete. To follow the Church is to walk on the straight and narrow path which leads men to the right, to avoid the numerous pitfalls which surround us, and, after a life of forty-six years—during twenty-four of which he governed the Church of Milan—he died between the 3rd and 4th of November, 1584, the Church having selected the latter date as his festival when he was canonized by Pope Paul V., in 1610.

St. Charles was one of the many instruments which Almighty God makes use of in the world in order to carry on His Church in accordance with His holy will. He literally spent himself for the aggrandizement of God's glory and the salvation of souls, and the large fruit the seasons which marked his career on earth may be transferred to the new parish, so that it may be fruitful in bringing many souls to the vision of God.

Protestant Opposition to Secret Societies.

A new movement in opposition to Secret Societies is about to be inaugurated by women in influential non-Catholics who are beginning to realize the fact that Rome is not alone in condemning Masonry and all kindred oath-bound organizations.

A committee of all persons engaged in secret societies has been called to meet in Chicago on the 24th inst., when a circular will be issued to the public, setting forth the evils of Masonry, which will be sent to the leading sects as Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Rev. Dr. Cuyler, Rev. McCosh, D.D., President of Princeton College, Professor A. Hodge, of Princeton College, Rev. W. Hatch, D.D., U. W. Pentecost, editor of the Christian Herald, Rev. James E. Rogers, of the American Missionary Association, Rev. H. F. Roberts, of the Friend of Man, Rev. Dr. N. C. Emerson, Rev. Sunderlin, President of the Woodman Lodge and Society. Their prime objection to Secret Societies, and to Freemasonry in particular, is "that they have a moral and religious tendency which is in conflict with the teaching of Christ in some instances, and the moral tendency of the rest, which are not in conflict with Christ, is so far in conflict with the teaching of Christ as to be morally injurious to the moral character of our citizens, and to be a source of great evil." The committee have taken no other position than that which Catholics have taken for years, and they do not claim that the society which is at the foundation of all the evil is the invention of the Catholic Church, but they do claim that the society which is at the foundation of all the evil is the invention of the Devil, and that the Church is the only society that has ever opposed it. It was the Church that first condemned the society, and during the centuries that the Church has been in existence she has always demonstrated. They had to be suppressed by general canons of their century, and it is to the credit of the Church that she has always opposed it.

Although secret societies have existed from the time of the Apostles, they have never been so numerous as at the present time, and they have never been so powerful as they are now. The Masonic institution has grown into a power in the land, and it matters to deny what it has done for the country. It has been the mainspring of the Union army, and it has 1,000,000 of men in its ranks, and it has 1,000,000 of men in its ranks, and it has 1,000,000 of men in its ranks

Family Fun.

How He Lost His Taste.

I was sleeping in a second story bed room of a painter's house in Mississippi, and it was not yet daylight, when something roused me up. I was listening to hear the noise repeated, when there came such a yell as fairly shook me out of bed. I ran to the open window, but it was too dark outside to see anything. As I stood there listening I heard the clank of a chain, followed by groans, and then the yell was repeated back to bed with the idea that some crazy negro was prowling around, and slept till sunrise. Then I looked out, and solved the mystery. A few rods away was a smoke-house. A big bear had been set at the door, and it had caught a grab. With one leg held as in a vise, and with his hands grasping a young tree to hold him up, a burly negro looked up at me and called out—

"Say, boss, but I want to get loose of dis!"

When I went down and told the colonel he expressed no surprise, and took no notice until after breakfast. Then we walked out to the smoke-house, and, after looking the prisoner over, he said—

"Does it hurt?"

"Not so much hurtin' in my life, sah."

"Can't you get out?"

"No, sah. I've been trying ever since midnight, but I can do it."

"I have hams and shoulders in there."

"Yes, sah; I reckon you has."

"Are you fond of smoked meat?"

"No, sah. I used ter be, but I ain't any mo'. I shall be hard to cooked meat agin!"

"Like to walk out nights?"

"No, sah. I'm guiss ter bed shery sight at sun down arter dis."

We got a rail and opened the trap and let him out. He went off dragging his leg behind him, and as he reached the gate he lifted his hat and coolly said—

"Wuzzy mush c'lowged, kabed. If my appetite for hams an' shoulders eber returns, I'll keep wide o' dis plantashun, an' does you fergit it."

After They Found Out.

A Detroiter who was driving out on the Holden road the other day came to a spot where the snow had drifted on each side of the track just as a woman driving a horse and "pung" entered the other end of the cut. As both had to be on the road their horses soon came head on and stopped.

"Why didn't you turn out?" shouted the man.

"Why didn't you?" replied the woman.

"I've got seven miles to drive, but I'll stay here all winter before I'll turn out!"

"And I've got five miles to go here, and I'll let 'em freeze as hard as rock before I'll give an inch!"

The man dropped the lines, lighted a cigar and leaned back on his seat. The woman dropped her lines, lighted her pipe and wrapped the old buffalo robe around her feet. Thus they sat for eight minutes, when the man grew impatient and called:

"What's the price of hogs out your way?"

"Oh, you've got all the pork you want in your sleigh!" she answered.

"I'm glad I'm a widower!"

"And I'm glad I'm a widder!"

"Will you be married?"

"Sartin, and I own 225 acres of the best land in Greenfield. So you are a widower!"

"Yes'm. Madam, pray excuse me. I'll cheerfully turn out."

"Oh, don't mention it. I'm mighty willing to back clear to the snow bank."

"Ah! madam, allow me to hope that you will overlook my—"

"Oh, certainly. Fine weather, but rather cold. Good-bye.

"Good bye madam. Wish you a safe journey."

Made Believe They Were Married.

Little Dot—Mamma, Dick and I got married this morning.

Mamma—You did, did you! Who performed the ceremony!

"I don't know what you's talkin' about."

"Well, how did you make out you were married!

"Oh! Why I got my dishes an' set the table, an' then we both sat down an' he said there wasn't a thing fit to eat, an' I said he was as ugly as he could be, an' he went out an' slammed the door."

Her Pa Was Older.

"What pretty children you have," said the new minister to the proud mother of three little ones. Ah, my little dear, said he, as he took a girl of five on his lap, "are you the oldest of the family?"

"No, ma'am," responded the little mite, with the usual accuracy of childhood, "my pa's older'n me."

Caution and Good Sense.

Photographer (to Philadelphia customer)—Will you be taken standing up or sitting down?

Philadelphia Customer—How about the cost?

Photographer—The cost is the same.

Philadelphia Customer—Then I'll sit down, of course.

Life in Harlem.

"Lemme an' oranges, all sweet, twenty-five for a quart'r; here y' are!" vociferated a vender.

"Are they all sweet?" demanded a woman with a basket.

"Yessem, all sweet."

"Well, I wanted to get some lemons, but if they're all sweet I don't want 'em," and she passed fruitlessly on.

A Professional Talker.

"Charley," said Clara, at a ball, "that young man you introduced me to is the greatest talker I ever heard. I didn't get a chance to say a word."

"Oh, he's a professional," replied Charley.

"A professional!"

"Yes. He's a barber."

The Economy of Nature.

Deacon Horing (to Sunday School)—Yes, dear children, everything in this world has its uses. There is nothing, however small or trifling, that was not intended for some good purpose.

Small Scholar (thirsting for information)—What good does a pig's tail do the pig?

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness and May Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it is now made easy to cure the worst of our country to use a two minute application made by Dr. Nicholson, of Newark, N. J., of a vegetable compound. The highest title now bestowed by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request Mr. Dixon, Sr., is starting at the Metcalfe House (formerly Truesdell) 1104 Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Sufferers should send for his treatise or call and see him. Consultation free.

Farm and Home.

Profit in Fruit.

Up to as high as $800 per acre has been realized in Santa Clara county in the raising of French prunes. In one instance 8 Kirk of San Jose realized the three quarters of a acre patch of four-year-old prunes to the dimensions of San Jose, who realized $1200 in one season from the fruit. It is well known that the tree will yield as profitably in Contra Costa as anywhere in the State. It becomes a source of profit the first year and is widely known to be free from insect pests. The fruit never fails to find an easy market, no matter the extent of its production.

Peaches and pears realize from $200 upward per acre. H. F. Hardy, whose orchard is near Martinez, has realized as high as $700 per acre from the product of four-year-old peach trees.

Cherries, of which Juliano Cantine has a number in his orchard near Concord, have realized as much as $1000 to the acre.

Figs, of which there are numerous trees in the Lang Camp orchard in Ygnacio valley, have yielded the $100 to the acre.

We could enumerate a host of instances proving the fruit industry of Contra Costa to be more profitable and encouraging to those who have and intend to engage in it than any other country in California.

We advise farmers to set out the French prune, peach and pear. We have it on good authority that the most largest nursery erected in the State will be established in our beautiful county of Contra Costa. Already the small display from the widely known orchards of Dr. John Strentzel and others of this county is attracting considerable attention at the Citrus Fair now being held in Sacramento, as being unmistakable for firmness, flavor and size—no irrigation being needed in its production.

A Wife's Prayer.

(O God, who hast ordained and sanctified the holy state of matrimony, for replenishing the earth, for mutual consideration, and as a type of the union of Christ and His Church, give me grace both thankfully to accept its blessings and carefully to fulfill its duties. I beseech Thee continually to bless our union, and enable us to live together in peace and love, in the faithful discharge of all our duties to Thee and to each other.

Deliver us from every evil temper, from every bodilisn action, which may in any way weaken or embitter the sacredness of that tie by which Thou hast bound us together, and which can never be a vexed.

Make me faithful and affectionate, studious to please, and ready to deny my own will and inclinations in all things. Let not the trials and crosses of this life cause me to murmur, nor any earthly blessing cause me to forget Thee, the Author and Giver of all; but by patience and meekness, by prayer and thankfulness, may all things be sanctified unto me for eternal union with Thee, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

A Good Hitker a Free Drinker.

Observing dairymen have noticed that the quantity of milk a cow yields depends very much on the quantity of water she drinks. Almost invariably a good hitker is a free drinker. M. Lemoon reported to the French Academy of Science that he found, by a series of experiments, that the quantity of water habitually drank by each cow during twenty-four hours was a criterion to judge of the quantity of milk she would yield per day. And a cow that does not habitually drink as much as four quarts of water daily must be a poor milker, and should be fed to the butcher pretty fast. But all the cows which consumed as much as 50 quarts of water daily were accounted milkers, giving from 18 to 23 quarts of milk per day. He gives a confident opinion that the quantity of water drank by a cow is an important factor of her value as a milker. Prof. Horsfall found that a cow giving only 20 pounds of milk a day drank 40 pounds more of water than for yielding milk of the same weight. There is a clue to the excellent effect noticed by many that cows should have the water fire chaw. The Boyd reported in the Dairyman, nearly the usual quantity, and the result, as John Boyd reported in the Dairyman, was an increase of 25 per cent more milk of equal good quality.

The Value of Industry.

Let every youth be taught some useful art and trained to industry and thrift. Let every young man lay aside and keep sacredly intact a certain portion of his earnings. Let every one set out with a determination to engage in business for himself as soon as he can. Begin in a small, safe way, and extend your business as experience will teach you is advantageous. Keep your own books and know constantly what you are earning and just where you stand. Do not marry until in receipt of a tolerable certain income, sufficient to live on comfortably. Let every man who is able buy a farm on which to bring up his sons. It is from the farms the best men are turned out, morally and intellectually. Hear in mind that your business cannot be permanently prosperous unless you share its advantages equally with your customers.

Taking Care of Harness.

Two brothers in Ohio at the same time sent bought a set of farm harness, made by poor correspondent from the same lot of leather. One could his harness each spring and fall and kept it housed when not in use, and it kept sound and pliable for ten or more years. The other never oiled his, but used it in wet and mud, and in three years it was hard and dry, and cracked and ripped so as to be nearly worthless. For all this, of course, he blamed the harness maker.

Never oil a harness when dry.

Never hang it in the sun to dry or for the oil to strike in.

Some leather day in spring, fall or winter take the harness into the cellar or some damp place; take all apart and soak thoroughly in warm water. Then wash off all the dirt and gum, and when nearly dry on the outside put on with a swab or brush a heavy coat of oil, either best tanner's oil or neat's foot oil, with just enough lampblack to color it well. Lay it oil in spots in the thinks till the oil works in. If very dry and hard it will pay to put on a second coat. When well soaked in take saddle soapand and a coarse rag and wash it well and clean the poter, press it a glow and put away where it will not freeze. If this is properly done twice a year the harness will keep nice as new and add one half to the durability.

— Dr Gilles de la Tourette has recently published a monograph upon mental locomotion and the variations in the gait caused by diseases of the nervous system. He found from a comparison of a large number of cases that the average length of pace is, for men 25 inches; for women, 20 inches. The step with the right foot is 2 inches longer than that with the left. The feet are separted laterally in walking about 4½ inches in men and about 5 inches in women.

Children Starving to Death

On account of their inability to digest food, will find a most nutritious food and remedy in Nestle's Food. Very palatable and easily digested. Dr. S. W. Cotton of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your Lactated Food with marked effect. It not only relieves wasted tissue, but gives strength, and increases the appetite."

MISCELLANEOUS.

In cases of Diphtheria Delay is Dangerous PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER will quickly cure Diphtheria Quinsy, Coughs, Colds, and Sore Throat. All Druggists sell it.

1,648,000 FLORINS PAID OUT WITH FIVE DOLLARS

FOR ONE BRITISH OR AUSTRIAN

Imperial Austrian Vienna City BOND.

ISSUE OF 1874.

These bonds are drawn in a year, the interest at which is paid out in premiums four times yearly. Every bond is entitled to

Four Drawings Annually,

Until such and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must draw one of the following premiums, as there are

NO BLANKS.

Premiums.	Florins.	Florins
1	100,000	100,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
2	1,000	2,000
5	500	2,500
8,150	100	815,000
Together, 1,650 premiums, amounting to		1,654,000

Florins. The next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF APRIL,

Parties at least bought of us ON OR BEFORE THIS DATE will be entitled to the full value of the premium which may be drawn upon the bond they have in their hands on that date.

One or more orders sent in Eastern Express Letters, in clubbing $5 will secure one of these bonds for the sum of $1 weekly. Balance payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

106 Pulton St., cor. B'way, New York City.

N. B.—Parties who have bought of us before, can add to their holdings on the above premium bond, and be drawn upon one or more of these bonds for the next drawing. Orders payable in monthly instalments.

N. B.—In writing please state that you saw this in The San Francisco Monitor.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

"THE DONAHUE STEAMER RETURNS."

COMMENCING SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1885, AND UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE, Boats and Trains will leave Foot of Market Street (Ferry Depot, Pier 2) as follows:

Leave S. F.	Destination	Arrive in S. F.
9:00 a.m.	Petaluma	10:50 a.m.
2:30 p.m.	Santa Rosa	4:20 p.m.
	Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Fulton, Windsor, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, and Way Stations
7:45 a.m.	Sonoma and Way Stations	10:10 a.m.
3:45 p.m.	Sonoma and Way Stations	8:10 a.m.

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for White Sulphur Springs, Mark West Springs, Aetna Springs, at Lytton for Alexander Springs, and at Geyserville for Skaggs Springs, Kelseyville, Soda Bay, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Saratoga, Springs, Blue Lakes, Upper Lake, Eureka, Navarro Ridge, Mendocino City and the Coast.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Saturdays to Monday, to Petaluma, $1.75; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $4.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only—to Petaluma, $1; to Santa Rosa $1; to Healdsburg $1.50; to Cloverdale, $2.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon and San Rafael, week days, 7:45 a.m., 2:45 p.m. Sundays, 9:00 a.m., 2:45 p.m. Leave San Rafael, week days, 7:50 a.m., 4:00 p.m. Sundays, 10:30 a.m., 4:30 p.m. Leave Point Tiburon, week days, 8:20 a.m., 4:30 p.m. Sundays, 11:00 a.m., 4:30 p.m.

The Best Produce from Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Ukiah, Lakeport, Upper Lake, Eureka, Navarro Ridge, Mendocino City and the Coast, will be found on the Tables of this Company.

PETER J. MCGLYNN, H. C. WHITING,
Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt. Superintendent.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD

STEAMER JAMES M. DONAHUE LEAVES SAN FRANCISCO for Sonoma and Way Points every Tuesday and Friday at 10 a.m.

4.00 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) from Wharf foot of Jackson street. Wharf on the left hand of Sansome. Glen Ellen and Way Points.

SATURDAY EXCURSIONS

$.15 A. M. Sundays only, from Washington street Wharf, foot of Jackson, to Glen Ellen and way points. Round Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1.00 to Glen Ellen, $1.50.

PETER J. MCGLYNN, H. C. WHITING,
Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agent. Superintendent.

SONOMA VALLEY STAGES

Connect at Sonoma with Steamer and Train for San Francisco, and at Glen Ellen with Train for Calistoga.

Leave Sonoma for Glen Ellen and Calistoga at 7:30 a.m. and 3:45 p.m.

Leave Glen Ellen for Sonoma and Calistoga at 8:00 a.m. and 4:45 p.m.

Fare to Glen Ellen, 50c; to Calistoga, $1.50.

Stages for Kenwood, Oakmont, Glen Ellen, Agua Caliente, Boyes Springs, Eldridge, Glen Oak, Glen Ellen Springs, Madrone Springs, Kenwood Springs, Agua Caliente Springs, Fetters Springs, Lawndale, Vineyard, Pythian Springs, Wildwood, Temelpa, Camp Meeker, Occidental, Bodega, Freestone, Valley Ford, Tomales, Dillon Beach, Duncans Mills, Jenner, Cazadero, Guerneville, Monte Rio, Forestville, Sebastopol, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Ukiah, Lakeport, Upper Lake, Eureka, Navarro Ridge, Mendocino City and the Coast.

Leave Sonoma for Stages every Morning at 7:30 a.m. Leave Santa Rosa for Stages every Morning at 7:30 a.m.

Fare to Santa Rosa, $2; to Ukiah, $5; to Lakeport, $5; to Eureka, $7.

Stage Offices: Plaza, Sonoma; Exchange Hotel, Santa Rosa.

JAMES T. HUTCHINGS, Proprietor.

QUICK TIME AND COMFORTABLE TRAVEL

To Eastern and European Cities

Via the Great Trans-continental All rail Route

ON THE

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

(Pacific System.)

Fast Express and Emigrant Trains make prompt connections with the above-named Cities in the East.

CONNECTIONS AT

New York & New Orleans

FOR ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.

PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS

attached to overland Express Trains

THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS

are run daily on the Overland Express Trains.

Unsurpassed charter for Parties in Third-class Cars.

Tickets, Berths in Sleepers, and Baggage Checked to destination, can be obtained at the Company's Office, 613 Market street, opposite Palace Hotel, and at Ferry Depot, foot of Market street.

PAUL SHARON, Agent.

Marvellous Memory DISCOVERY.

Wholly unlike Memory Systems. Cured Mind Wandering. Any book learned in one reading. Prospectus, with testimony of Professors Loisette, Bain, Ribot, Max O. Mason, Judge Gaynor, Rev. Dr. Wilson, Spanish-Retired College over others, sent free. Address

PROF. LOISETTE,

237 Fifth Avenue, New York.

FLORAL GUIDE FOR 1887

New Illustrated Edition of Dreer's Garden Calendar, containing valuable information for the Farm and Garden, with Directions for Planting and Flower Culture, and over 600 illustrations of Choicest Novelties in Vegetables and Flowers. Sent free to all who write for it. Contains more than 1000 varieties of the best vegetables and flowers, with prices and directions for their cultivation. Our Specialties are the Celebrated Lettuces, Cabbages, Tomatoes, Cucumbers, Melons, Radishes, Onions, Peas, Beans, Corns, Cauliflowers, Beets, Carrots, Turnips, Cabbages

AUSTRALASIAN NOTES.

Outlings from our Australian and New England Contemporaries.

The Patrician Brothers at Goulburn, Australia, have opened a select school.

The Catholic Church at Gympie, Australia, was recently destroyed by floods.

Rev. P. J Doran was recently raised to the priesthood in Sydney.

One of the most promising literateurs of Australia is an Irishman—John Ferrell.

Last month New South Wales entered upon the hundredth year of its settlement as a British colony.

The total area under wheat in this whole colony of New Zealand is estimated at over 170,000 acres.

Cardinal Archbishop Moran is about to introduce into Sydney a branch of the Order of Christian Brothers from Ireland.

A new church was recently dedicated in the diocese of Maitland, Australia, by Bishop Murray.

At the conclusion of the Redemptorist Mission at Dunedin on the 6th ult. over 6[illegible] of the congregation approached the altar and received Holy Communion.

Rev. Fathers Barry and Delaney of All Hallows College, Dublin, are in the colonies, collecting subscriptions in aid of the building fund of that celebrated institution.

Rev. Dr. Mathew Gibney was consecrated Bishop of Perth, on Sunday, January 23rd. His Eminence, Cardinal Moran officiated as consecrator. The ceremonies were imposing.

The Order of the Nursing Sisters of the Little Company of Mary, which was introduced into Australia by Cardinal Moran some sixteen months ago, is doing a wonderful amount of good. A convent for the Sisters is nearly completed at Petersham.

The Rev. Mother of the Ballarat City Convent and Loreto College (Victoria) proceeds to Europe shortly for the purpose of selecting about forty nuns. During the past ten years the nuns of Ballarat have spent £45,000 on educational work.

Four missionaries destined for the Vicariate Apostolic of the New Hebrides arrived in New Caledonia on the 6th ult. It is said that their coming will permit the chief of the mission to take possession, in the name of religion for the welfare and honor of France, of the New Hebrides group hitherto given up to English and Protestant influence.

Recently at St. Joseph's Novitiate, North Sydney, Sydney, two lady and interesting ceremonies took place in the oratory, which has lately been enlarged and beautified. The first ceremony was a reception. The following received the white veil: Miss Annie Joh, in religion Sister Mary Bibiothyna, native of England; Miss Catherine Donnelly, in religion Sister M. Aloysius, native of Armagh, Ireland; Miss Mary Hyde, in religion Sister M. Theodora, native of New Zealand; Miss Ellen O'Brien, in religion Sister M. Camilla, native of Dapto, New South Wales. At the second ceremony Sister Mary Serafina (Miss Kate Carroll) made her profession as a Sister of St. Joseph.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

CABLEGRAMS FROM ALL COUNTRIES.

CATHOLICS IN GERMANY.

Objections of the Centre Party to the New Church Bill.

BERLIN, March 16.—The Church bill as passed by the Commission of the Chamber grants the religious orders the restitution of their property. The report of the commission will be ready for the consideration of the Chamber on Tuesday. The report of the commission will be in favor of the Government proposition. The report of the commission will be signed by all the members except Herr Windthorst. These are that the premises contained in the bill in favor of Prussian Lombardy and Osnabruck be extended to the Rhine provinces, including Cologne, Sieg-burg, and Soest, and that the bill shall entirely include the Catholic clergy, and shall be made identical in phraseology with the ecclesiastical bill. The Centre party of the Minister Von Puttkamer will be ready, if religious orders be defeated and limited. Dr. Windthorst declares that there will be no peace between the Church and the State unless these demands shall be conceded.

No Danger of War.

BERLIN, March 16.—It is reported that the Emperor William, on receiving General Marquise on Saturday, said: "Tell your compatriots that there is no danger of war. So long as I live I shall use my influence in maintaining peace. Peace will one be Himself. I do not wish to leave as my present heritage to Germany, Germany shall my desire for good will with the French."

IRELAND'S OUTLOOK.

A Rift in the Clouds of Her Sorrow.

NEW YORK, March 18.—A London cable speaks of the 17th ult. as follows: "At the usual hour just of the London League to-night, Henry Labouchere responded to the toast of "Ireland's sorrows." He said: "We are told the crushed people, but I have seen no appearance of it. I see a little more hardiness and determination than I saw when I last resided in Ireland. I see a great deal more liberation Act in Ireland, but as it has been well remarked, the Act will be with little use. You have taken land long in the desert, but the promised land is now in sight. Ireland is a land of hope and the land, and you must soon enter that promised land."

The Shamrock Wave in Englishmen's Hearts.

LONDON, March 17.—The feature of the observance of St. Patrick's Day in England was the appearance of many Englishmen wearing shamrock, and great enthusiasm was shown at all outdoor demonstrations in honor of the day.

TORY LAND SCHEME.

Plans for Assisting Tenants.

LONDON, March 19.—Enough is known of the scheme for the relief proposed by the Cabinet to show that it is intended to be the most advanced measure ever introduced by a Tory Government. The details have not yet been communicated to the Liberal dissidents. It has transpired, however, that purchase money for tenants is to be provided by the issuance of land bonds. These bonds are to be a charge on the property sold to tenants. Delinquent tenants will accept the bonds from the landlords and place their fate rents to the credit of either. Regular installments, as they fall due under these bonds, will be collected by the local government officials sent by them and by the bonds. Provisions will be inserted for a periodical revision of rents based on the fall in prices. The Government will be charged for the security of the money advanced by the bonds, if it see needs.

An Irish Priest Arrested.

DUBLIN, March 16.—Father Keller of Cork was arrested today. He had been twice indicted in courts a summons ordering him to appear in Dublin on charges of conspiracy and inciting to violence. He came under the Plan of Campaign, of tenancy, belonging to the tenants of the Tipperary estate.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—A few heaps out in the Mid-Island, Fri. Mail, Wednesday morning, Feb. 23. The Fire Brigade arrived on the scene in a short time, and subsequently the flames in about half an hour. The damage is estimated at £1,000. The fire will not interfere with the working of the establishment.

CORK.—The sum of £3,000 is to be spent upon improvement work in connection with the Cork District Lunatic Asylum.

On Feb. 21st, there died in Castlemartyr, a woman named Ellen Sullivan, who had completed 105 years of age. She was the mother of 13 children, all of whom are dead. Up to twelve months ago the deceased was in fairly good health, and a month ago she was able to walk about the village and discharge her duty of minding the grounds attached to the Protestant Church.

The extensive flour mills of Messrs. Bowen Brothers, King street, Cork, were burned down on Feb. 23. The whole buildings were gutted. The mills were originally built in 1854, but being burned down in 1877, were again rebuilt in the same year. The damage is estimated at £20,000, and the insurance amounted to only £17,000.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien and Dr. Tanner spoke at a public demonstration on Sunday, Feb. 20th, at Mitchelstown, in connection with the adoption of the "Plan of Campaign" by the Kingston estate. The meeting was organized privately, and Mr. O'Brien said it was a great mistake to hold public meetings to open day time and take the Government at their word, and hold their meetings secretly. He referred to the fact that, notwithstanding all the Government proclamations, garrisons, police, and Gladstone, the "Plan of Campaign" had been adopted in 25,000 tenants, and of these 9,000 had had their demands acceded to. He advised the people to trust Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, who would have their grievances redressed.

CLARE.—The Government, acting on information received, arrested a land resistance in Ennistymon, Co. Clare, and repeats of large contingents of army and police assembled among the people, who assisted in arresting all the artillery forts on the Shannon, and Mr. Dillon was in charge of caricatures for a week.

DUBLIN.—Mr. Michael Davitt, J.P., of Grosvenor Quay, Dublin, died on Feb. 20. The deceased was a member of the Board of Guardians, Auctioneers and Valuers, and a prominent Nationalist. He was aged 72 years.

DONEGAL.—Prosecutions are taken by the Crown against fifty people who took part in the proceedings in connection with the attempt at eviction at Bloody Foreland, Gweedore, on the 19th of January. The charge is for unlawful and riotous assembly, and rescuing, and assaulting the police in the execution of their duty on the occasion. It was expected that no proceedings would be taken owing to the indefinite and contradictory nature in the local clergy for having restored order and induced peace on several occasions, and relying on a conversation between the resident magistrate and the Bishop of Raphoe after the Mass on Sunday, the people had abandoned evictions because unable to point out the exact in the conversation the resident magistrate was understood to convey that there would be nothing more about the affair in case Father McFadden would use his influence and draw the people off from further outrages, and allow the law to do its part in peace. The Father McFadden did.

DOWN.—The consecration of the Rev. Thomas McGivern, D.D., as Coadjutor Bishop of Down, with the right of succession to the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, O.P., in the See of Dromore, took place in the Hill street Cathedral, Newry, on Sunday, March 4th.

GALWAY.—A meeting of the people of Lough Corrib, was held on Feb. 20, for the purpose of deciding what action they should take in forcing the military, and if it was agreed that they should get whatever supplies they required, Mr. J. Mitchell, secretary, and others addressed the meeting, and it was decided that the people should not whatever supplies they required, and that the military should be compelled to pay for the supplies they required. The meeting was organized privately, and Mr. O'Brien said it was a great mistake to hold public meetings in open day time and take the Government at their word, and hold their meetings secretly. He referred to the fact that, notwithstanding all the Government proclamations, garrisons, police, and Gladstone, the "Plan of Campaign" had been adopted in 25,000 tenants, and of these 9,000 had had their demands acceded to. He advised the people to trust Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, who would have their grievances redressed.

KERRY.—The Government, acting on information received, arrested a land resistance in Ennistymon, Co. Clare, and repeats of large contingents of army and police assembled among the people, who assisted in arresting all the artillery forts on the Shannon, and Mr. Dillon was in charge of caricatures for a week.

DUBLIN.—Mr. Michael Davitt, J.P., of Grosvenor Quay, Dublin, died on Feb. 20. The deceased was a member of the Board of Guardians, Auctioneers and Valuers, and a prominent Nationalist. He was aged 72 years.

DONEGAL.—Prosecutions are taken by the Crown against fifty people who took part in the proceedings in connection with the attempt at eviction at Bloody Foreland, Gweedore, on the 19th of January. The charge is for unlawful and riotous assembly, and rescuing, and assaulting the police in the execution of their duty on the occasion. It was expected that no proceedings would be taken owing to the indefinite and contradictory nature in the local clergy for having restored order and induced peace on several occasions, and relying on a conversation between the resident magistrate and the Bishop of Raphoe after the Mass on Sunday, the people had abandoned evictions because unable to point out the exact in the conversation the resident magistrate was understood to convey that there would be nothing more about the affair in case Father McFadden would use his influence and draw the people off from further outrages, and allow the law to do its part in peace. The Father McFadden did.

DOWN.—The consecration of the Rev. Thomas McGivern, D.D., as Coadjutor Bishop of Down, with the right of succession to the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, O.P., in the See of Dromore, took place in the Hill street Cathedral, Newry, on Sunday, March 4th.

GALWAY.—A meeting of the people of Lough Corrib, was held on Feb. 20, for the purpose of deciding what action they should take in forcing the military, and if it was agreed that they should get whatever supplies they required, Mr. J. Mitchell, secretary, and others addressed the meeting, and it was decided that the people should not whatever supplies they required, and that the military should be compelled to pay for the supplies they required. The meeting was organized privately, and Mr. O'Brien said it was a great mistake to hold public meetings in open day time and take the Government at their word, and hold their meetings secretly. He referred to the fact that, notwithstanding all the Government proclamations, garrisons, police, and Gladstone, the "Plan of Campaign" had been adopted in 25,000 tenants, and of these 9,000 had had their demands acceded to. He advised the people to trust Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, who would have their grievances redressed.

LIMERICK.—Mr. Moran, solicitor, Limerick, has given notice of his intention to bring in a Bill for Compulsory Land Purchase in Ireland. The Bill provides for the purchase of £1,000,000 in Ireland for the purpose of a small committee, to be appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, to consist of Colonel Forse, R. M., for a small committee, to be appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, to consist of Colonel Forse, R. M., for the Petty Sessions District of Cootehill, and others.

Edmond Ryan, aged 55, of Palmerstown, died suddenly on Sunday, Feb. 20th, at the Market Fields, while witnessing a hurling match.

LOUTH.—In the convent of Lurgan, Feb. 21, the anniversary of the death of Mr. Ryan, the deceased, of Lurgan, and prominent in the local clergy for having restored order and induced peace on several occasions, and relying on a conversation between the resident magistrate and the Bishop of Raphoe after the Mass on Sunday, the people had abandoned evictions because unable to point out the exact in the conversation the resident magistrate was understood to convey that there would be nothing more about the affair in case Father McFadden would use his influence and draw the people off from further outrages, and allow the law to do its part in peace. The Father McFadden did.

MEATH.—The consecration of the Rev. Thomas McGivern, D.D., as Coadjutor Bishop of Down, with the right of succession to the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, O.P., in the See of Dromore, took place in the Hill street Cathedral, Newry, on Sunday, March 4th.

GALWAY.—A meeting of the people of Lough Corrib, was held on Feb. 20, for the purpose of deciding what action they should take in forcing the military, and if it was agreed that they should get whatever supplies they required, Mr. J. Mitchell, secretary, and others addressed the meeting, and it was decided that the people should not whatever supplies they required, and that the military should be compelled to pay for the supplies they required. The meeting was organized privately, and Mr. O'Brien said it was a great mistake to hold public meetings in open day time and take the Government at their word, and hold their meetings secretly. He referred to the fact that, notwithstanding all the Government proclamations, garrisons, police, and Gladstone, the "Plan of Campaign" had been adopted in 25,000 tenants, and of these 9,000 had had their demands acceded to. He advised the people to trust Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, who would have their grievances redressed.

LONDON.—Mr. Michael Davitt, J.P., of Grosvenor Quay, Dublin, died on Feb. 20. The deceased was a member of the Board of Guardians, Auctioneers and Valuers, and a prominent Nationalist. He was aged 72 years.

DONEGAL.—Prosecutions are taken by the Crown against fifty people who took part in the proceedings in connection with the attempt at eviction at Bloody Foreland, Gweedore, on the 19th of January. The charge is for unlawful and riotous assembly, and rescuing, and assaulting the police in the execution of their duty on the occasion. It was expected that no proceedings would be taken owing to the indefinite and contradictory nature in the local clergy for having restored order and induced peace on several occasions, and relying on a conversation between the resident magistrate and the Bishop of Raphoe after the Mass on Sunday, the people had abandoned evictions because unable to point out the exact in the conversation the resident magistrate was understood to convey that there would be nothing more about the affair in case Father McFadden would use his influence and draw the people off from further outrages, and allow the law to do its part in peace. The Father McFadden did.

DOWN

AUSTRALASIAN NOTES.

Gallings from our Australian and New Zealand Contemporaries.

The Patrician Brothers at Goulburn, Australia, have opened a select school.

The Catholic Church at Grafton, Australia, was recently destroyed by flood.

Rev. P. J. Dwyer was recently raised to the priesthood in Sydney.

One of the most prominent literateurs of Australia is an Irishman—John Farrell.

Last month New South Wales entered upon the hundredth year of its settlement as a British colony.

The total area under wheat in the whole colony of New Zealand is estimated at over 170,000 acres.

Cardinal-Archbishop Moran is about to introduce into Sydney a branch of the Order of Christian Brothers from Ireland.

A new church was recently dedicated in the diocese of Maitland, Australia, by Bishop Murray.

At the conclusion of the Redemptorist Mission at Dunedin on the 6th ult. over 1000 of the congregation approached the altar and received Holy Communion.

Rev. Fathers Barry and Delaney of All Hallows College, Dublin, are in the colonies, collecting subscriptions in aid of the building fund of that celebrated institution.

—Rev. Dr. Mathew (Sliney) was consecrated Bishop of Perth, on Sunday, January 23rd. His Eminence, Cardinal Moran officiated as consecrator. The ceremonies were imposing.

The Order of the Nursing Sisters of the Little Company of Mary, which was introduced into Australia by Cardinal Moran some sixteen months ago, is doing a wonderful amount of good. A convent for the Sisters is nearly completed at Petersham.

The Rev. Mother of the Ballarat City Convent and Loretto College (Victoria) proceeds to Europe shortly for the purpose of selecting about forty nuns. During the past ten years the nuns of Ballarat have spent £45,000 on educational work.

Four missionaries destined for the Vicariate Apostolic of the New Hebrides arrived in New Caledonia on the 4th ult. It is said that their coming will permit the chief of the mission to take possession, in the name of religion for the welfare and honor of France, of the New Hebrides group hitherto given up to English and Protestant influence.

Recently at St. Joseph's Noviciate, North Sydney, Sydney, two lady and interesting ceremonies took place in the century, which has lately been enlarged and beautified. The first ceremony was a reception. The following received the white veil: Miss Annie Joch, in religious Sister Mary Ethelburg, native of England; Miss Catherine Donnelly, in religious Sister M. Julia, native of Armagh, Ireland; Miss Mary Pitts, in religion Sister M. Theodore, native of New Zealand; Miss Ellen O'Brien in religion Sister M. Camilla, native of Dapto, New South Wales. At the second ceremony Sister Mary Bernhmans (Miss Kate Carroll) made her profession as a Sister of St. Joseph.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

CABLEGRAMS FROM ALL COUNTRIES.

CATHOLICS IN GERMANY.

Objections of the Center Party to the New Church Bill.

BERLIN, March 16.—The Church bill as passed by the Commission of the Chamber grants the religious orders the restitution of their property. The report of the commission will be placed before the Chamber on Friday next. The Commission also to constitute the Church whose final demands will be formulated by Dr. Windthorst, the leader of the Center party, recorded his vote in favor of the proposition of Lasbonet and Gonnebrech to be extended to Lutherans, and consequently Protestant Bernhard Meester and Emsel, and that the bill shall strictly limit and define the powers of the State to vote clerical appointments, and that the discretionary power of the Minister of Worship over the temporalities of religious orders be defined and limited. Dr. Windthorst declares that there can be no peace between the Church and the State unless these demands shall be conceded.

No Danger of War.

BERLIN, March 16.—It is reported that the Empress William, on receiving General Manteuffel, said: "Tell your compatriots that there is no danger of war. In four or five years I shall use my influence to maintain peace. God will soon call me to Himself. I do not wish to leave my people a heritage of blood. Germany shares my desire for good will with the French.

IRELAND'S OUTLOOK.

A Gleam of Hope in the Clouds of Her Sorrow.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A London cable special of the 12th says: "At the annual banquet of the London Liberal Club, Mr. Chamberlain said he hoped the time for a united nation." He said: "We are told the crucial years would have been the supreme, but if the woven had a little more backbone and common sense it would turn before it was made, and we threatened with a fresh Cromwell. Act for Ireland, but as it has been with former Coercion Acts so will it be with this one. You have wandered long in the desert, but the promised land is now in sight. Only be true to yourself and the people, and you may soon enter that promised land."

The Shamrock Week by Bagliatanus.

LONDON, March 12.—The feature of the observance of St. Patrick's Day in England was the appearance of many Englishmen wearing the shamrock. A short and uneventful speech of considerable enthusiasm in honor of the day.

TORY LAND SCHEME.

Plans for Assisting Tenants.

LONDON, March 19.—Enough is known of the Irish Land Scheme of the Tory Cabinet to show that it is intended to be the most advanced measure ever produced by a Tory Government. The details have not yet been communicated to the Liberal Cabinet. It is said, however, that, over that premium money for tenants is to be procured by the issuance of land bonds. These bonds are to be a charge on the property sold to tenants. Imperial funds will enable the tenants to purchase and place their fees value to the extent of the Imperial contribution, at a large fall due under these bonds will be collected by the local government officers and paid over in gold to the banks. Provisions will be introduced for a periodical revision of rents based on the market value. The Imperial credit is pledged for the security of the money advanced by the banks on the bonds.

An Irish Priest Arrested.

DUBLIN, March 19.—Father Keller of Cork was arrested to-day. He had twice declined to receive a summons ordering him to appear in London and answer questions respecting his conduct, as Trustee under the Plan of Campaign, of moneys belonging to the tenants of the Fitzmoby estate.

Young Men's Institute in Southern California.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of young men was held in San Bernardino on the 14th inst. The progress of organizing a branch of the Y. M. I. was reported. Rev. Father Mc. Donald, who was present, gave a lucid exposition of the objects of the institute, presented to effect an organization with the following officers, who may be known as the permanent officers: President, James J. Dockery; Vice president, J. H. Lightfoot; second Vice president, H. J. Kaar; Treasurer, Rev. P. J. Brockman; Rec. Secretary, D. E. Kelly; Financial Secretary, T. J. Smith; Marshall, K. McDermott; Executive Committee, E. McTygue, H. J. Kaar, Thos. Walkin; S. Sam ordained H. E. Lodge. The Institute in Southern California is flourishing, the organizer having distributed twelve hundred and twelve tickets to visit them and the Institute which will be done during the next four months. A hall and reading room, etc., will soon be provided for the members in Los Angeles.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—A fire broke out in the Mill-hey This Mill, Waterford street, Belfast, on Feb. 23. The Fire Brigade arrived on the scene in a short time, and subdued the flames in about two hours. The damage is estimated at £1,000. The fire will not interfere with the working of the establishment.

CORK.—The sum of £5,000 is to be spent upon improvement work in connection with the Cork District Lunatic Asylum.

The Rev. Thomas Ryan, died in Castlemartyr, a venerable priest, who had attained the extraordinary age of 96 years. He was twice married, and was the mother of thirteen children, all of whom are dead. Up to twelve months ago Mrs. Kennedy was in fairly good health, and a month ago she was able to walk about the village and to discharge her duty of minding the grounds attached to the Protestant Church.

The extensive flour mills of Messrs. Brown and Austin, King street, Cork, were burned down on Feb. 24. The whole buildings were gutted. The mills were originally built in 1854, but being burned down in 1862, were again rebuilt in the same year. The insurance amounted at £2,000, and the assurance amounted to only £1,000.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien and Dr. Tanner spoke at a great demonstration on Sunday, Feb. 20th, at Mitchelstown, in connection with the adoption of the "Plan of Campaign" by the Kingwilliamstown. The meeting was organized privately, and Mr. O'Brien said if they were prevented from holding their meetings in open day they would take the thunderbolt at their word, and hold their meetings secretly. He referred to the fact that the withstanding all the Government power and the garrisons, police, and fulminations, the "Plan of Campaign" had been adopted by 25,000 tenants, and of these 20,000 had had their demands acceded to. He said the people of Ireland, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, who would have their grievances redressed.

CLARE.—The Government, acting on information of a threatened forcible resistance to the evictions in Clare, and reports of large concentrations of arms being distributed among the people, are mounting and manning all the artillery force on the Shannon, some of which have been in charge of caretakers for years.

DUBLIN.—Mr. Michael Davitt, Mr. J. P. McGovern (Cavan), Dublin, died on Feb. 20. The deceased was well known as one of the prominent Anti-Coercion and Nationalist, and was greatly respected. He was aged 72 years.

DONEGAL.—Prosecutions are taken by the Crown against fifty people who took part in the proceedings in connection with the attempt to evict Mr. Patrick Doherty, Fortland, Gweedore, on the 14th of January. The charge is for unlawful and riotous assembly, and for assaulting and assaulting the police in the execution of their duty on the occasion. It was expected that the prosecution would be taken owing to the intelligence of the authorities in the local clergy for having allowed order and the habitual peace on several occasions, and relying on the conversation between the Parliamentary Nationalists and Father McFadden after the Manors Sweeney had abandoned the evictions became unable to point out the leaders. In the conversation the resident magistrate was informed that it was in vain that there would be bloodshed if ever the affair in case Father McFadden would use his influence and the people had to be forced from their homes, and allow the force to do part in peace. This Father McFadden did.

DOWN.—The consecration of the Rev. Thomas McGivern, D. D., as Coadjutor Bishop of Dromore, with the right of succession to the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, O. P., in the See of Dromore, took place in the Hill street Cathedral, Newry, on Sunday, March 6th.

GALWAY.—A meeting of the people of Loughrea, was held on Feb. 22nd, for the purpose of deciding what action they would take regarding the military, and if it was agreed that they would not whatever supplies they required. Mr. M. Meagher, C. C., presided, and explained the meaning that the action taken, the commissariat would remain in the town. A long discussion took place, and it was whether they should agree or not, but, in a division, it was carried by a very few of the people. The Loughrea Coal Company, employing 100 men, stated they would not supply coal, and, as long as they had nothing to do with the military, they would continue to employ men.

LEITRIM.—Mr. Michael Ovie, J. P., of Ballinamore, died on Sunday, Feb. 20th, at the Mansion House, Dublin, aged 72 years.

LOUTH.—In the convent of Lurgan, Feb. 21st, the ceremonies of reception and profession took place. The following received the black veil: Miss Annie Gill, of the late Mr. John Mathews, proprietor of the Lurgan Mail, in religion Sister Mary Monica; Miss Kate Fullerton, in religion Sister Mary Ignatius; Miss Mary Ann Mathews, of the late Mr. John Mathews, proprietor of the Lurgan Mail, in religion Sister Mary Malachy. The following received the white veil: Miss Annie Joch, in religious Sister Mary Ethelburg, native of England; Miss Catherine Donnelly, in religious Sister M. Julia, native of Armagh, Ireland; Miss Mary Pitts, in religion Sister M. Theodore, native of New Zealand; Miss Ellen O'Brien in religion Sister M. Camilla, native of Dapto, New South Wales. At the second ceremony Sister Mary Bernhmans (Miss Kate Carroll) made her profession as a Sister of St. Joseph.

Young Men's Institute in Southern California.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of young men was held in San Bernardino on the 14th inst. The progress of organizing a branch of the Y. M. I. was reported. Rev. Father Mc. Donald, who was present, gave a lucid exposition of the objects of the Institute, presented to effect an organization with the following officers, who may be known as the permanent officers: President, James J. Dockery; Vice president, J. H. Lightfoot; second Vice president, H. J. Kaar; Treasurer, Rev. P. J. Brockman; Rec. Secretary, D. E. Kelly; Financial Secretary, T. J. Smith; Marshall, K. McDermott; Executive Committee, E. McTygue, H. J. Kaar, Thos. Walkin; S. Sam ordained H. E. Lodge. The Institute in Southern California is flourishing, the organizer having distributed twelve hundred and twelve tickets to visit them and the Institute which will be done during the next four months. A hall and reading room, etc., will soon be provided for the members in Los Angeles.

BELFAST.—The Church bill as passed by the Commission of the Chamber grants the religious orders the restitution of their property. The report of the commission will be placed before the Chamber on Friday next. The Commission also to constitute the Church whose final demands will be formulated by Dr. Windthorst, the leader of the Center party, recorded his vote in favor of the proposition of Lasbonet and Gonnebrech to be extended to Lutherans, and consequently Protestant Bernhard Meester and Emsel, and that the bill shall strictly limit and define the powers of the State to vote clerical appointments, and that the discretionary power of the Minister of Worship over the temporalities of religious orders be defined and limited. Dr. Windthorst declares that there can be no peace between the Church and the State unless these demands shall be conceded.

No Danger of War.

BERLIN, March 16.—It is reported that the Empress William, on receiving General Manteuffel, said: "Tell your compatriots that there is no danger of war. In four or five years I shall use my influence to maintain peace. God will soon call me to Himself. I do not wish to leave my people a heritage of blood. Germany shares my desire for good will with the French.

IRELAND'S OUTLOOK.

A Gleam of Hope in the Clouds of Her Sorrow.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A London cable special of the 12th says: "At the annual banquet of the London Liberal Club, Mr. Chamberlain said he hoped the time for a united nation." He said: "We are told the crucial years would have been the supreme, but if the woven had a little more backbone and common sense it would turn before it was made, and we threatened with a fresh Cromwell. Act for Ireland, but as it has been with former Coercion Acts so will it be with this one. You have wandered long in the desert, but the promised land is now in sight. Only be true to yourself and the people, and you may soon enter that promised land."

The Shamrock Week by Bagliatanus.

LONDON, March 12.—The feature of the observance of St. Patrick's Day in England was the appearance of many Englishmen wearing the shamrock. A short and uneventful speech of considerable enthusiasm in honor of the day.

TORY LAND SCHEME.

Plans for Assisting Tenants.

LONDON, March 19.—Enough is known of the Irish Land Scheme of the Tory Cabinet to show that it is intended to be the most advanced measure ever produced by a Tory Government. The details have not yet been communicated to the Liberal Cabinet. It is said, however, that over that premium money for tenants is to be procured by the issuance of land bonds. These bonds are to be a charge on the property sold to tenants. Imperial funds will enable the tenants to purchase and place their fees value to the extent of the Imperial contribution, at a large fall due under these bonds will be collected by the local government officers and paid over in gold to the banks. Provisions will be introduced for a periodical revision of rents based on the market value. The Imperial credit is pledged for the security of the money advanced by the banks on the bonds.

An Irish Priest Arrested.

DUBLIN, March 19.—Father Keller of Cork was arrested to-day. He had twice declined to receive a summons ordering him to appear in London and answer questions respecting his conduct, as Trustee under the Plan of Campaign, of moneys belonging to the tenants of the Fitzmoby estate.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

President, R. H. McDonald. Vice-President, R. H. McDonald, Jr. Cashier, S. G. Murphy.

Capital, $1,000,000. Oldest Established Bank on the Pacific Coast Surplus, $550,000.

BUYS AND SELLS BILLS OF Exchange ON UNITED STATES, ENGLAND, IRELAND, Scotland, and EUROPE. ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

ISSUES LETTERS OF CREDIT Available Throughout THE WORLD. Collections MADE PROMPTLY EVERYWHERE AT LOWEST RATES.

PACIFIC BANK. - Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, Cal.

Market Report.

MERCANTILE OFFICE,
320 Kearny St., Tuesday Evening, March 22 1887.

WHEAT—No. 1	$1 10@$1 [illegible]
Flour—Superfine	2 20@2 [illegible]
Cornmeal	30@ [illegible]
Corn	[illegible]
Barley, feed	[illegible]
Bran, P ton, wholesale	16 50@17 00
Almond Barley, P ton	22 00@23 00
Middlings	22 00@23 00
Oats No. 1 feed	1 50@1 [illegible]
Rye	1 55@1 [illegible]
Buckwheat	2 00@2 [illegible]
HAY—
Hams, P lbs, wholesale	6 00@7 00
Bacon, P lb, wholesale	[illegible]
Ducks, P doz	9 00@12 00
Turkeys, P lb	14@16
Broilers, P doz	3 00@5 00
Young Roosters	5 00@6 00
Old Roosters	4 00@5 00
Eggs	18@20
Butter—
Choice, P lb	13@14
Roll—
Choice fresh roll	17@19
Cheese	10@11
Pickles—
Cucumbers	15@17
Onions	1 00@1 [illegible]
Potatoes—
Sweet, P box	1 50@1 [illegible]
Sweet, P box	1 50@1 [illegible]
Sweet, P box	1 50@1 [illegible]
Potatoes	1 00@1 [illegible]
Potatoes	1 00@1 [illegible]
Potatoes	1 00

Poetry.

FOR THE MONITOR.
MY MUSE.

'Twas a beautiful bird—a white wing'd dove,
It came to me in my tears and thrall;
Came to me in pity in line of the love
That bloom'd as a rose—but died to fade.

And it futter'd and fanned—poor fel,stained bird,
Pass'd in the pinions of my prison cage;
Left a broken heart and a blighted word
Pouted its beauty—and all was well.

It came on Friday—my dismal day
Ah, yes, it wafted my soul away
To the old churchyard and the trysting stile—
The village green and my boyhood's play.

It sang of my father—here bed above,
It sang of a saint—my mother,
And it sang of souls it sheeps to love—
Of love that outshine the love.

It painted in song—grave, stately and tall,
As a lily—pure, and fair, and young,
The sister whom God saw fit to call—
Beautiful—beautiful, only one.

I mourned in my manacles—moaned and cried:
O! Ho! what now may I woo or wed?
And the bird in answer softly sighed:
Thy beautiful, beautiful dead.

And sorrow resolved was pang'd and born
To pulsate the years spent in vain and gone
Kiss my shackles—shake off manger to mourn
The bird song on—her murmuring on,
Of the brave and the pure and the true;
Of hearts that will die and live dare not
And of hearts that know nothing to do.

Then to earth the bird—when shades of twing
To the dungeon's dome; their home impart—
Flutter'd a moment—then, o'ver'd in song,
Folded its wings in the tomb and lay.

F. S. DORSEY.

FOR THE MONITOR.
VAGRANT VERSES.

I stood in the vault of ages
With the angel of memory near,
And paused in the silent chamber of sleep,
Each one bits mentioning bier;
Each one with the stone of the sorrow
Raised over his ghastly head—
Behold but the shadow of glory
For the enchanted pavilioned and fled!

I approached and read with a grain's laugh,
The empty vessels of each epitaph,
And not on a stone were the lines engraved
Of a heart made happy, or a lost soul saved;
But power and birth and creed and gold
In letters of glorious size were held,
And I think, as the beautiful lines I sous,
Not washed in life blood in time's dark sea,
What good is life glory and gold and name,
Or the fleetest phantom of passing Fame—
When life is over and the coffin gone
And nothing is left but a graven stone?
Does are the bones, for the price,
When the mockery of a memento remains
Weak is the glory, powerless the gold,
Were the ones of the unknown much is told.
Oh! rather should heart and hand and hope
Unite in the breadth of a Master scope,
And the impulse inspiring in every soul
Should be shaped and sent in a sense goal.
Then unknown should unknown a God hath sent
Should aim to return to the foot of His throne
With the Powers of Faith and Purity power;
For the one the soul's true purpose given,
To keep o'er the channels which bind it in—
Gloomy perceived against of sin,
The channel in the waters of virtue sweet,
Pure and fair, and free from the stain of sin
The pure sweet, we trust, in the Master's hand
It keep in the sunshine of celestial Heaven!

C. ANTHONY DUFFY.

FOR THE MONITOR.
THE BORDER LAND.

A sad old woman, nearing life's end,
Lonely and grieved—nor a kindly friend;
Has taken each day still more and more,
Her feeble footsteps very near the shore;
She presses her feet in the golden sand,
And whispers—"I am near the Border Land."

Her withered face and her dim old eyes
Shine like, when the glorious of day arise,
Yet the Blessed Gate of heaven and earth,
Who hath watched and guarded her from birth;
As she bathers each day still more and more,
Her faith deeper still answer the shore
She presses her feet in the golden sand,
Still whispers—"I am near the Border Land."
But a little while, weary-stricken and gray,
She enters the portals, so far away,
Her simple soul—Jesus—Jesus!—
In her home beyond the Border Land.

TYRONE

INVITATION TO THE SINNER.

Oh, come to the merciful Saviour that calls you,
Oh, come to the Lord who forgives and forgets;
Though dark be the fortune on earth that betalls you,
There's bright home above where the sun never sets.

Oh, come, then, to Jesus whose arms are ex-
To hold His dear children in silent embrace;
Oh, come, for the time will shortly be ended,
And Jesus will show you his beautiful face.

Then come to the Saviour, whose mercy grows brighter
The longer you look at the depths of his love;
And fear not, his Jesus, and life's cares grow lighter
As you think of the home and the glory above.

Have you dissed so sore sins in the world have
Are they blacker than all other creatures in gulf,
Oh, fear ok, fear ok, the mother that loves you
Loves you less than the Saviour whom blood you have spilt.

O sonn, then, to Jesus and say how you love him
Tell Him that thy feet you will keep in His ways
For only that is shed by a cleaner can move
Heaven;
Your sins will drop off in His tender embrace.

Then come to His feet, and lay upon your story
Of suffering and sorrow, of grief and of shame;
For the pardon of sin is the sworn of His glory,
And his joy of our Lord to be true to His name.

FATHER FABER.

GOD SAVE ALL HERE.

There is a prayer that's breathed alone
In door old Erin's land;
The utmost of the Land of Ill
Is the smile and sleeping hand;
And oft, perchance, the mourned low,
With sigh and falling tear,
The gentle prayer, that only know—
The prayer, "God save all here!"

In other lands they know not well
How pleasing is the word
That helps strife's sad spell
Old Ireland's calm door.
To those it is no empty sound
Who think with tears a tear
Of happiness, the sunshine round
The prayer, "God save all here!"

Live on, O prayer, in Ireland still!
To bless each thrashold area,
The solace of her house to fill
With sacred favour!
And guarding by the holy spell
Of Ireland's hearth and home,
The prayer—as each hours a dwell,
The prayer, "God save all here!"

"Pain's Remedy Relief is accessible to you. It is not a liquid or a sand. Sin.

Literary Miscellany.

Never Trust to Appearances.

A Story Founded on Fact.

I had taken a place on the top of one of the coaches which ran between Edinburgh and Glasgow, for the purpose of composing a short tour in the Highlands of Scotland. As we rattled along Prince Street, I had leisure to survey my fellow-travelers. I immediately opposite me was a gentleman of the first order, dressed in white cotton coats and Belcher handkerchiefs, and each with a cigar in his mouth, at which they puffed away with a marvelous complacency.

Beside me, sat a modest and comely young woman in a widow's dress, with an infant about nine months old in her arms. The appearance of the youthful mourner and her babe influenced that they belonged to the lower class of society, and although the children occasionally cast a rude glance at the mother, the look of calm and settled sorrow which she invariably, at such times, cast upon her child, seemed to touch even them, and to dismiss their coarseness.

On the other side of the window, sat a young gentleman of plain and prepossessing exterior, who seemed especially to attract the notice of the dandies. His current was not absolutely threadbare, but it had evidently undergone more than one season, and could perceive many contemptuous looks directed to his shabby hat and threadbare handkerchiefs. The young gentleman carried a small portmanteau, in his hand—a small, indeed, that it could not possibly have contained more than a change of linen. The article also appeared to arrest the eyes of a sprigs of fashion opposite, whose snap robes, in all probability, were more voluminous; whether they were paid for or not, might be another question.

The coach having stopped at the village of Cumbophine, for the purpose of taking up an inside passenger, the gaud observing that the young gentleman married his portmanteau in his hand, asked leave to put it in his box, to which he immediately consented.

"Put it fairly in the centre, guard," said one of the dandies.

"Why, Tom!" inquired his companion.

"It may cajoine the coach," rejoined the first; a salty at which both indulged in a burst of laughter; but of which the owner of the portmanteau, though the blood mounted slightly into his cheek, took no notice whatever.

While we were changing horses at the little town of Uphall, an aged beggar approached and held out his hat for alms. The dandies looked at him with scorn. I gave him a few half-pence, and the young widow poor as he seemed, was about to do the same, when the young gentleman in a threadbare hat and hard gloves, drew a purse from his pocket, and dropped a half crown in the beggar's hat, and made a sign for him to depart. The dandies looked at each other.

"Showing off, Jack," said one.

"Aye, aye, successful at our last bonds, you know," rejoined the other, and both again burst into a hoarse laugh.

At this, the young gentleman's profession, the blood again mounted into the young gentleman's cheek, but it was only for a moment and he continued silent.

We had not left Uphall many miles behind us, when the wind began to rise, and the gathering clouds indicated an approaching shower. The dandies began to prepare their umbrellas; and the young gentleman in the antcoat, surrounding the young widow, and perceiving that she was not in a covering dressed against a shower of weather, inquired of the guard if the coach was full inside. Being answered in the negative, he requested the guard to allow the young widow and her child to take a place in the coach, and concluded by offering her the use of his cloak.

"It will protect so far," said he, "and at all events it will protect the baby."

The widow thanked him in a modest and respectful manner, and said that, for the sake of the infant, she would be glad to have the cloak if he would not suffer for the want of it himself.

He answered her that he should not, being accustomed to all kinds of weather.

"Hallo! what's speed," said one of the dandies in a tone of elevated contempt, and heedless my dear, the cloak will hold you both."

The young gentleman, turning quickly round, addressed the speaker in a tone of dignity which I shall never forget:

"I am not naturally quarrelsome, sir; but yet it is quite possible you may provoke me to do so."

Both the expositions turned as pale as ashes—shrunk in spite of themselves into their national insignificance; and they scarcely opened their lips, even to each other, during the remainder of the journey.

In the meantime, the young gentleman, with the same politeness and delicacy as if he had been assisting a lady of quality with her shawl, proceeded to wrap the widow and her baby in his cloak. He had hardly accomplished this, when a smart shower of rain made it well had, consequently. Being myself provided with a cloak, the cape of which was sufficiently large to envelope and protect my hand, I offered the young gentleman my umbrella, which he at first accepted, but held it, as I remarked, in a manner but better calculated to defend the widow from blight!

When we reached West Craig's Inn, the second stage from Edinburgh, the rain ceased, and the young gentleman, politely returning my umbrella, begged to relieve the widow of his dripping cloak, which he shook over side of the coach, and afterwards hung it on the railing to dry. Then turning to the young widow, he inquired if she would take any refreshments, and upon her answering in the negative, he proceeded to enter into conversation with her as fellow-sojourner, after a short absence of two years.

"Is your father in good circumstances?"

"He will never suffer me or my baby to want, sir, while he has strength to labor for us; but he is labouring in poverty—day labor on the estate of the Earl of H—."

At the mention of this nobleman's name, the young gentleman colored a little, but it was evident his emotion was not of an unpleasant nature. "What is your father's name?" said he.

"James Anderson, sir."

"Are his relations?"

"Blind, sir."

"Well, I trust that though destitute, so far as this world is concerned, you know something of the power of Divine grace, and the consolations of religion."

"My husband, too, though a tradesman, was a man who feared God above many."

"The remembrance of this must tend much to alleviate your sorrow."

"It does, indeed, sir, at times; but at other times I am ready to sink. My faith is poverty and advancing age, my baby's helplessness, and my own delicate health, are frequently too much for my feeble faith."

"Trust in God, and he will provide for you, he assured her will.

By the time the coach was again in motion, and though the conversation continued for some time, the tone of the whole parcelled me from hearing it distinctly. I could see the widow, however, exchange looks with one another, and at one time, the more forward of two alleged sweep of the companion, in which the words "Methodist parson," also was audible.

At Alnwick, nothing particular occurred; when we got about half way between that town and Glasgow, we arrived at a place of rest, and supper, happy that he found the Sunday delight. But that we usually a year before the weeks I have repeated were over.

Her boy was none active, merry, and healthful than Harry until the work of a few months had reduced the child to a skeleton. For long weeks he lay upon a bed of pain and misery. After a time he grew strong enough to sit in an easy chair by the window, lay by day in strength increased until he could with tolerable comfort, spend the whole day in his arm-chair, leaving the lessons his sister Mary found time to hear at night, for love invented many ways by which the poor boy might have been kept happy. Mary and Harry were cousins, and "all the world to each other." Everything connected with Mary seemed fresh and cheerful; and so, although she was obliged to work all day and every day, even the darkest and dullest day of her busy working machine, in the window opposite Harry's bed, seemed a sort of contentment, like the peep of a summer sky. Strange with a sickly sister or Harry, although, had he looked at a sunny sky, he would have prepared; none could shake the fine cheerfulness of the cottage, or do anything in the place of Mary.

Discontent was ashamed to show his head near Mary's cheek.

But the Sundays—the long, long Sundays, when Harry could not leave his bed, yet could not be happy alone.

Little Mary knew how very dreary and wearisome he found them. He had said so, time for her, and in the evening they sat together reading the Bible, or the hymns, some where they hoped to meet a glorious and happy time, when they should be well and sick," and none would need a physician.

One Sunday evening, in which Harry "placed as usual in his arm-chair—saw his sister and—not a stranger's long evening of High Mass with apparent cheerfulness. Mary hoped her off, even, waving his little handkerchief only until she was fairly out of view.

Then her book his prayer book and tried humanly to fix his mind upon the words he read. But alas, the mind wandered to the great Physician, who healed so many, filled him with strangely bitter thoughts.

Wasn't our Lord just as powerful in those days as he is on earth? Why could not He heal Harry Gray as well as Jairus's mersa, and the Centurion's servant, and St. Peter's wife's mother?

How many boys could run and leap and play, and never ail, "Thank God!" How many rich boys were whole, while he, who was so strong, was helpless.

Only across the street was a handsome home, the only son of its owner—a lad of Harry's age—was lying on a bed of pain.

Didn't God make a mistake and give all the good things that should by Harry's to the rich man's son? He had power, heaven, earth, and all sorts—power to bring life and health to Harry.

"Rich! He would gladly give all his pal ty gold for the wealth of health, strength, Divine Lord to redeem you; that by timely sacrifice you may attain to eternal glory.

"The Earl of H——, sir," replied the gentleman, "is one of the best men as well as the richest in Scotland.

"The Earl of H——!" replied the dandy turning his eyes upon the speaker, "do you know him? There's an end of all chance of my being introduced to show his cousin."

"Oh, yes; we may burn our letters of introduction, and rely upon the Earl's hospitality and kindness to my friend and companion, and, silently and cost-fallen, both walked up stairs to their apartment.

A Brave Sister of St. Joseph.

If every public spirited citizen and school teacher emulated the example of one of the Sisters of St. Joseph at the Elliott street convent (called the Cathedral school in Springfield), there would be less blood and misery than one would imagine possible.

The Sister was dismissing her school at the noon hour recently, when she saw near the entrance to the school-yard a little boy with a bag slung over his shoulder of trashy papers. He alternately shouted out in the window of the building and at the fence behind him on which he placed several more bundles, and appeared as though he was confident of disposing of 1,000 of his vile shouts to the innocent children. The Sister in an instant read his purpose, and knowing full well the danger that lurked in the bundles, called him to her seats with a sharp ring of her bell. Her glance spoke to the other teachers in the building she ordered the children in two by twos and continue in that way till they arrived at State street, and forbade them to take one of the papers or speak to the boy. The children, some of them not over eight years of age, faithfully obeyed the order. No military regiment could have marched in better order than those 500 children did. The paper sam at first was thunderstruck. He was used to having the children flock around him and buy for the papers, but 100 or more passed him before he caught his breath. He then held out a dozen papers in as alluring way but no one touched them. Becoming angry, he called right into the line and tried to force the papers into the pockets of the children. Then one little sinner shouted "break ranks," and away ran the youngsters laughing and shouting at the discomfiture of the peddler, who dejectedly gathered himself and papers together and fled from the scene of his defeat.

Self Denial During Lent.

The Church suggests to us in the Divine office the following matters, in which we should deny ourselves during Lent:

1. Fast—Honor it strictly the law of the Church as modified by the Lenten Indult, and never permit yourself any further relaxation, not compatible with necessity, without permission.

2. Sleep—Rise punctually at a fixed time, both as an act of penance, and that you may wake your morning prayer with few his drowsy. Retire to rest early and at a fixed hour, according to the advice of St. Francis of Sales, who said it was an act of virtue to sleep well, that we might rise early.

3. Words—Practice the virtue of silence as you may have opportunity, as a penance for your sins of the tongue, and as a help to recollection and prayer.

4. Recreation—Avoid as much as possible all the amusements and gaieties of the world, and all that is unbecoming a time of sorrow. Do not seek pleasure, but draw in your thoughts, and consider what it cost your Divine Lord to redeem you; that by timely sacrifice you may attain to eternal glory.

5. The Senses—Maintain, during this time of penance, a strictly guard than usual over the senses. Sight, hearing, smelling, taste and touch all should be mortified and brought under command, that death may not enter in by them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by them peculiarities, the combination of remedial agents, it, the proportion, it, by the manner of preparing the given medicinal virtues. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown.

GRUMBLING AGAINST GOD.

A Moral for Dissatisfied Mortals.

"Well, well, it's Sunday again," were the first words uttered by Harry Gray as he awoke one morning. What a long, weary day it will be. Yes, wonderful, beautiful day, and pleasant to some people, no doubt."

There had been nothing particular occurred; when we got about half way between that town and Glasgow, we arrived at a place of rest, and supper, happy that he found the Sunday delight. But that was nearly a year before the weeks I have repeated were over.

Her boy was none active, merry, and healthful than Harry until the work of a few months had reduced the child to a skeleton. For long weeks he lay upon a bed of pain and misery. After a time he grew strong enough to sit in an easy chair by the window, lay by day in strength increased until he could with tolerable comfort, spend the whole day in his arm-chair, leaving the lessons his sister Mary found time to hear at night, for love invented many ways by which the poor boy might have been kept happy. Mary and Harry were cousins, and "all the world to each other." Everything connected with Mary seemed fresh and cheerful; and so, although she was obliged to work all day and every day, even the darkest and dullest day of her busy working machine, in the window opposite Harry's bed, seemed a sort of contentment, like the peep of a summer sky. Strange with a sickly sister or Harry, although, had he looked at a sunny sky, he would have prepared; none could shake the fine cheerfulness of the cottage, or do anything in the place of Mary.

Discontent was ashamed to show his head near Mary's cheek.

But the Sundays—the long, long Sundays, when Harry could not leave his bed, yet could not be happy alone.

Little Mary knew how very dreary and wearisome he found them. He had said so, time for her, and in the evening they sat together reading the Bible, or the hymns, some where they hoped to meet a glorious and happy time, when they should be well sick," and none would need a physician.

One Sunday evening, in which Harry "placed as usual in his arm-chair—saw his sister and—not a stranger's long evening of High Mass with apparent cheerfulness. Mary hoped her off, even, waving his little handkerchief only until she was fairly out of view.

Then her book his prayer book and tried humanly to fix his mind upon the words he read. But alas, the mind wandered to the great Physician, who healed so many, filled him with strangely bitter thoughts.

Wasn't our Lord just as powerful in those days as he is on earth? Why could not He heal Harry Gray as well as Jairus's mersa, and the Centurion's servant, and St. Peter's wife's mother?

How many boys could run and leap and play, and never ail, "Thank God!" How many rich boys were whole, while he, who was so strong, was helpless.

Only across the street was a handsome home, the only son of its owner—a lad of Harry's age—was lying on a bed of pain.

Didn't God make a mistake and give all the good things that should by Harry's to the rich man's son? He had power, heaven, earth, and all sorts—power to bring life and health to Harry.

"Rich! He would gladly give all his pal ty gold for the wealth of health, strength, Divine Lord to redeem you; that by timely sacrifice you may attain to eternal glory.

"The Earl of H——, sir," replied the gentleman, "is one of the best men as well as the richest in Scotland.

"The Earl of H——!" replied the dandy turning his eyes upon the speaker, "do you know him? There's an end of all chance of my being introduced to show his cousin."

"Oh, yes; we may burn our letters of introduction, and rely upon the Earl's hospitality and kindness to my friend and companion, and, silently and cost-fallen, both walked up stairs to their apartment.

A Brave Sister of St. Joseph.

If every public spirited citizen and school teacher emulated the example of one of the Sisters of St. Joseph at the Elliott street convent (called the Cathedral school in Springfield), there would be less blood and misery than one would imagine possible.

The Sister was dismissing her school at the noon hour recently, when she saw near the entrance to the school-yard a little boy with a bag slung over his shoulder of trashy papers. He alternately shouted out in the window of the building and at the fence behind him on which he placed several more bundles, and appeared as though he was confident of disposing of 1,000 of his vile shouts to the innocent children. The Sister in an instant read his purpose, and knowing full well the danger that lurked in the bundles, called him to her seats with a sharp ring of her bell. Her glance spoke to the other teachers in the building she ordered the children in two by twos and continue in that way till they arrived at State street, and forbade them to take one of the papers or speak to the boy. The children, some of them not over eight years of age, faithfully obeyed the order. No military regiment could have marched in better order than those 500 children did. The paper sam at first was thunderstruck. He was used to having the children flock around him and buy for the papers, but 100 or more passed him before he caught his breath. He then held out a dozen papers in as alluring way but no one touched them. Becoming angry, he called right into the line and tried to force the papers into the pockets of the children. Then one little sinner shouted "break ranks," and away ran the youngsters laughing and shouting at the discomfiture of the peddler, who dejectedly gathered himself and papers together and fled from the scene of his defeat.

CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

Extracts from a Paper on Charity by Rt. Rev. John Vertin, D.D., Bishop of Marquette.

We are a peoples of generous impulses it is true, remarkably so, yet as that bath with charity, we fall in the end good, we find fault with the Legislation, and complain of our taxes.

This morning too often comes from the lips of those who would be the most forward the poor of the wealthy. Those distinguished for their generosity are the most ready to find in the cities who ought to be and are bound to cherish and foster all works of charity, yet they have no great or extraordinary gifts to manifest their devotion of this noble art. Hence we find that those that they ought be instruments for the advancement of the welfare of others. He has retreated to them good things for this very purpose, and to all demand an account of the trust committed to them. If such are not distressed by the anxiety for the saints of life, the sure expect that God's holy body and soul together, if they know not what want is, it is their duty to aid in every way possible, those who are afflicted and oppressed, so that poverty may be made endurable, the repressed and humanity benefited.

No one is exempt from the duty of laboring for the welfare of his fellowman in as far as may be in his or her power. It is not for us to judge of the work of others, and the time, and to guide the numbers, to relieve the sufferer, to comfort the afflicted, to succor the distressed, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to visit the prisoner, have a care for the sick, and to care for the poor and glory of the Master, and to do all this in the spirit of love, and done earth as in heaven, we must proceed unanimously, laboring for the establishment of His authority on earth.

This implies a well directed benevolence, and a well ordered charity, and it seems to throw some light on the subject. There are some who are ready to give, but in no hurry, not even upon the humblest occasion, and yet they are ready to give, and to give in a manner which is worth little. In the case of the poor, the sick, the afflicted, the aged, the orphan, the widow, the stranger, the prisoner, the dying, the dead, the light of Faith over the Rampart of the Middle Ages, and the Faith of our own age displayed in all its glory.

The Villa Lodovisi resembles the same of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, the Prince Lord Bell, the Cardinal so presided for the Irish Institute and Society of the Holy Sacrifice Religious, the Sacred Institute, the Society of Jesus, the Society of Christian Doctrine, the Society of Christian Doctrine, the Society of Christian Doctrine

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED THIS DAY TO JUDAISM.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Amongst the twenty-one Lenten preachers in Rome is the Rev. Father Hannebin, O. P., a near relative of the late M. Leon Cambetta, the notorious anti-Catholic statesman.

—The Dublin corporation by a vote of 23 to 3 has refused to tender an address of congratulation to the Queen on the occasion of her Jubilee. The Lord Mayor intimated that the motion would be reconsidered when Her Majesty changed her advisers.

—It is pointed out as a remarkable fact that ten houses occupied by 2,500 orphans under the care of Dom Bosco suffered no damage by the recent earthquakes, though houses were wrecked around them in all directions.

—It was stated at the annual meeting of the Scottish Reformation Society in Edinburgh that the Catholic population in Scotland numbered 342,000, and that it is steadily on the increase, mainly through the immigration of Irish.

—We heartily thank our Wesleyan protege Brother McCrary for printing the miraculous cure through Knock element in last week's Advocate without note or comment! Such docile conduct augurs well for Brother McCrary, and we hope he will often treat his readers to similar selections from the MONITOR's columns!

—The distinguished writer, especially well known to the readers of the American Catholic Quarterly Review, Brother Amatus, has resigned the Presidency of the Rock Hill College at Elliott City, Md., which he has ably filled for the past twelve years, and is in Europe. Brother Aidd, a graduate of London and a noted scientist as well as an experienced educator, is announced as his successor.

—The New York Freeman's Journal reports the return of Most Rev. Archbishop Corrigan from his pastoral visit to the Bahamas. The people of New Providence have been without a resident priest for seventeen years, and the new church of St. Francis Xavier's partially built at the expense of the Archbishop himself, is their first church.

—Alluding to the coercive course adopted towards the Irish people by Balfour, the chief representative of British intolerance in Ireland, United Ireland calls him the man with the tiger's heart, and reminds him that he has certainly entered upon a downward career by attacking the Catholic Church. "In such struggles," says the Irish National organ, "the proudest dupes have been humbled into dust. Prince Bismarck, swaying the destinies of Europe, in his whole career, but once learned the bitterness of defeat, and that was when he laid his lash on the Church which counts the angels in heaven of the faithful priests and priesthood."

—Mr. Gladstone—in his speech printed on the first page—positively proclaims to the world that there is no crime in Ireland. The Judges who opened the Spring Assizes in Ireland—as detailed in our Irish news on the eighth page—all voluntarily declare that only trivial offences are to be found on each county's calendar—yet the British Tories are now engaged in attempting to pass a Coercion Bill for crimeless Ireland! The object of this unjust legislation is to drive the people of Ireland into an attitude of rebellion so that they may be shot, stabbed, brained and bulleted by the brutal emissaries of the wickedest government on the face of God's green earth!

—Many of the Catholics of France are at the present moment carefully considering a Pastoral Letter which has been issued by Mgr. Fava, Bishop of Grenoble. It deals with the question of the Concordat, and calmly surveys the prospect of a separation between the Church and State. The subject is engaging the attention of a Commission, to which it has been referred by the Chamber of Deputies, and the Bishop appears to be under the impression that the day is not distant when the enemies of religion will succeed in abolishing the agreement between France and the Holy See. Mgr. Fava considers, from all points of view, the probable effects of a severance between the Church and State, and the conclusion at which he arrives is that it would prove disastrous alike to religion and to the country.

—Alluding to the necessity that at present exists for the Protestants of Ireland to join their Catholic brethren in securing Home Rule, Mr. Gladstone says: "Nothing can be more legitimate than the appeal to the Protestants of Ireland to return and maintain the tradition of their sires. Strange as it may seem, I believe that a very large part of the English people, and no small number of their representatives in Parliament are still ignorant of that elementary fact of Irish history that down to the time [illegible] the Irish Protestants, say, even the now too famous town and people of Belfast, were the most prominent supporters of Irish nationality. They have now the opportunity of supporting that nationality within safe and constitutional bounds, and of thereby giving peace to Ireland and great comfort and advantage to whole the United Kingdom."

—Maynooth College—says the Dublin Nation—has lost another of its old guard. By the death of Dr. Hackett the number of its professors, whose work is measured by a generation, has been further reduced. The deceased was Professor of Moral Philosophy for close on a quarter of a century. He was appointed in 1862. He had already worked for nine years as Dean, so that his connection with the government of the College extended altogether to thirty-four years. Thousands of Irish priests passed through St. Patrick's during that period, and with as large an share their labors by Hackett's work extended. A fruitful life like his deserves that peaceful ending that it met, and the regard that, we also agree, it has found.

—The latest "sensation" in Rome—as described by the daily press—was caused by two ladies (one the niece) pelting each other's hair in the sudorous chamber of the Vatican! The cable correspondent is very particular in conveying the information that one of the belligerent beauties was "a German lady," and the other virago was "an American lady," so that hereafter the word "lady" will not apply solely to a gentlewoman of refinement in manners and behavior, but the title may also be given to every Amazonian street brawler of bad conduct! Those cable messages are certainly the nearest if not the greatest literary nuisance of the nineteenth century!

—The Masonic-minded manikin who manufactures the cable messages for the New York papers shows the cloven foot of his anti-Catholic hatred quite frequently. His latest effort in this direction is an attempt to prejudice the American mind against the Pope because his Holiness did not confer "Court Honors" upon Cardinal Gibbons! The cable-monger also informs the public that Cardinal Gibbons "feels a little slighted" at the Pope having nominated a "Court of Honor" for Cardinal Taschereau. It is probable—nay, we know—that the slight is all a legitimate slice of the highly-spiced sensational cablegrams which the public regaled with every morning as an evidence of the "enterprise" of the press in knowing more about Catholic affairs than does the Pope and the whole College of Cardinals.

—Whenever news becomes stagnant and sensational news scarce, there are two subjects which cable correspondents always fall back on. These are the Pope's health and Archbishop Croke's attitude on Irish affairs and the constant fear which the Holy Father has that the Archbishop of Cashel will jeopardize the Church! Last week "the greatest newspaper in America" informed its readers that Archbishop Croke's "sensationalism" was "very embarrassing for the Propaganda, which cannot, with all the very real Irish sympathies, countenance illegality," as if the Archbishop of Cashel—or any Bishop or priest in Ireland—would countenance such less command "illegality" on the part of the people against their persecutors. The dispatch also intimates that Archbishop Croke is to be called "sharply—though perhaps secretly—to order," an intimation that is on a par of impurity with the whole put-up paragraph.

—A recent dispatch says that the Centennial Baptist Church of Brooklyn has refused to accept the resignation of Her. Dr. Justin D. Fulton, who wants to devote his whole time to a crusade against the Catholic Church, but gave him an indefinite leave of absence. The members of the Baptist sect in Brooklyn have aroused our admiration for their good sense in thus throwing cold water on Fulton who would have been dumb long ago if the Fool-killer had encountered him. The Baptists of Brooklyn doubtless feel that there is so much competition in this Catholic-perverting profession that Rev. Fulton will make a miserable failure of his venture, hence they have had "the pick of the Baptist church open so he can crawl back to his congregation after he has battled his brains out trying to make bad Baptists out of good Catholics.

—A begging-letter to help a degenerate descendant of Daniel O'Connell from backsliding is going the rounds of the American press, but such a case will not avail when the truth is known that one of the bitterest enemies of the Irish National League in Kerry is the good-for-nothing grandson of whom the appeal is made. The descendants of O'Connell in Ireland may well be compared to the prodigal—the lost of Israel—undergound—and the Irish people have no use for the "dope" no matter how green they may look even in their ignorance. O'Connell himself—God rest his soul!—were he living to-day, would spurn from his presence the Whig specimen who at present resides at Derrynane, as a scorpion who tried to sting to death House Rule a few years ago when he ran for Parliament in opposition to the Parnellite candidate. Ireland's despicable deserter receiving only 115 votes against 3,000 cast for the Parnell patriot! Had this descendant of immortal "Dan" been true to the principles of his patriotic progenitor, the Irish people would never permit a bailiff to bother him. But he gave his influence to landlordism and loyalty, and now let those turn anti-Irish tyrants come to his rescue. Millions for Home Rule but not a dime for deserters from Ireland's cause!

Another Irish Priest in Prison.

England has achieved another victory in Ireland! On last Monday a cordon of constables and a squad of soldiers surrounded the residence of Father Matthew Ryan, at Hospital, near Kilmallock, in the county Tipperary, and valiantly arrested the patriotic priest whilst he was lying sick in bed! This being the jubilee year of Queen Victoria, a brass medal should be given to each peeler and soldier in order to commemorate this newest specimen of British courage! Balfour, the amiable English Secretary for Ireland has been in office only a month, and he has already immortalized his incapacity for sanking two priests to jail, imprisoning an innocent man and causing a number of women and children! Great Balfour, himself, could hardly excel this record of injustice and cruelty combined. Like Father Keller—a full account of whose case we give on the first page—Father Ryan declined to give any evidence regarding his association with the Plan of Campaign, hence he was hurried off to Dublin and there imprisoned!

The London Times now reals the brutal remark that agitation in Ireland would never be crushed until the English Government hanged a Catholic Bishop, and Balfour seems to be on the high road towards the accomplishment of that heinous crime. But meanwhile the Tory party is in the last throes of dissolution and it will disappear from public life covered with the opprobrium and condemnation of all Christian people.

Bismarck's Plan for Peace with the Pope.

It is becoming to be generally recognized by the thinking and reflecting portion of the world's intelligent men, that Pope Leo XIII. is—in point of diplomatic skill and successful statesmanship—the master mind of the whole universe. Even Bismarck—that arch-enemy of the Catholic Church—has flattered himself in the first solution of his enmity against the Church that he could dictate terms of capitulation to Rome and persecute the successor of St. Peter into subjection by means of his May Laws—even this man of "blood and iron" principles has lately begun to acknowledge publicly in a recent speech in the upper House of the Prussian Parliament, that he acknowledged peace with the Pope as fully as important as peace with any other foreign Power!

What an admission to fall from the lips of a man who for the past fifteen years has been warring against the very Papacy with which he now regards it as important to be at peace!

Bismarck initiated his unsuccessful persecution of the Church in Germany in 1872, aided by his deus ex machina reformers Dollinger, Reinkens and Cochem, and Father Falk, the infamous framer of the famous Falk Laws. The first step taken by the "blood and iron" Chancellor was to circumscribe the ecclesiastical authority of both Bishops and priests, his second step was the abolition of the Catholic Department in the Prussian Ministry of Public Worship and education. Then followed in rapid succession the secularization of the schools; the expulsion of the Jesuits, the Lazarists and the other Religious Orders; the State supervision of ecclesiastical ordination, and other anti-Catholic legislation under military and penal enactments which were calculated to make Germany a modern Galway for the Catholic Church.

Such was the programme of persecution which Bismarck carried out through the long years which God permitted his existence. But the Church of Christ—the Easter Day as well as her Good Friday—her Resurrection as well as her Crucifixion, and history has again repeated itself in the fact that Bismarck attempted the impossible and he has been brought to his knees despite his power, his influence and his strategy. His persecution has turned itself out and left nothing save the ashes of its disastrous defeat upon the Prussian Empire.

The man who boldly declared in the Reichstag in 1872, "you need not fear; we will not go to Canossa," has now not only gone to Canossa, but he proudly proclaims the fact that he glories in achieving a peace with the Pope of Rome!

Up to 1871 Bismarck was the most successful diplomat in Europe, but like all his other predecessors in persecuting the Vicar of Christ—he has dimmed his glory in disaster and drained to the dregs the bitter cup of defeat! Leo XIII. has vindicated the superior wisdom of the Vicar of Christ over the would-be world's dictator. His Holiness has brought the Church out of the Prussian persecution intact in all her members; though scourged, spit upon, loaded down with her heavy Cross and then crucified—he now arises from her tomb as immortal and as impregnable against the assaults of men as when born in the stable of Bethlehem! His whose crest bears the inscription "Christ the Conqueror" inherits the veritable Light of the World by his prudence, his wisdom, and the possession of all those necessary faculties for his high station which Almighty God always vouchsafes to those upon those whom He calls to serve Him as the successor of St. Peter.

Another Bishop on Catholic Education.

Right Rev. Bishop Kalzer, of Green Bay, Wis., in his first Lenten Pastoral calls the attention of his clergy and people to the importance and necessity for young children receiving a Catholic education. In order to carry out his instructions on this subject, he has laid down the following rules: "Children living within three miles of the church are strictly obliged to attend the parish school. All other children, except a too great distance or some other reasonable cause excuse them, are obliged to attend the parish school for at least one year before receiving First Communion. Sponsors who wish to be considered Catholic are admonished not to admit or retain members who send their children to the public school. No priest of this diocese may admit children to First Holy Communion until they have completed their twelfth year, no matter whether they attend a Catholic school or not, but all those who, having completed their twelfth year, are sufficiently instructed and prepared, but who, through the obstinacy of their parents, did not attend the Catholic schools, can be admitted to Holy Communion, but are to be deprived of the privilege of the customary solemn First Holy Communion. No priest except their own pastor, or a person to whom he grants the faculty, has jurisdiction in the Sacrament of Penance over those parents who without a cause approved of by the Bishop or the School Board, send their children to the public school while they have a Catholic school in their own parish. The Pastoral also pronounces in unequivocal language against Sunday salon keeping and horse selling.

Lee Tasil's Affliction.

A doubly-sad domestic affliction has joined with grief M. Leo Taxil, the well-known French writer, whose conversion from blasphemous infidelity was announced in these columns about two years ago, and who is now engaged in the laudable task of undoing as far as he can, and atoning for, the evil which he wrought with his too facile pen during the years he lived in Marseilles, to pay his last tribute to his wife, who last just died. On the morrow of the funeral his father, overwhelmed with sorrow at the loss of his beloved companion, died from a broken heart. He was thereforeunder the sad necessity of assisting at the interment of his father and mother in the same week. Both parents were devout and practical Catholics; and their dying years were rendered happy by the knowledge that their talented son had returned penitent to the Faith of his boyhood. Keen sympathy is felt for M. Taxil on his terrible bereavement.

The "Pacilli" on St. Patrick.

In a morning sermon of St. Patrick's Day celebration, the Pacilli of the city agree to differ with its forbearance and exhibits its ignorance by making quite unfair assertions.

The good Saint was a Briton, and lived before "Romanism" was much heard of the "Roman Catholic" had been created.

St. Patrick flourished in Ireland during the fifth century, at a time when the Church in Ireland had lived through several centuries of persecution, so the grand work of preaching the true Faith to all nations, Pacilli—in its ignorance of ecclesiastical history—would have its readers believe that Rome was authorized as the fountain head of Christianity in St. Patrick's day, and that the Irish people had nothing what ever to do with Rome in spiritual affairs at that period of the world's history. Both propositions are false, as we propose to show briefly and plainly from historical documents.

St. Palladius—the predecessor of St. Patrick in the Prelacy of Ireland—was created Bishop by Pope Celestine, the fifth successor of St. Peter in the Apostolic See, and sent to Ireland. Thus we have the first link in the chain of unity and faith which has united Ireland and Rome continuously ever since, the symbolical salvation was first pronounced in the shamrock decked sod of the Island of Saints.

St. Palladius—sent out by Rome—died in Britain shortly after his arrival. Then Pope Celestine consecrated St. Patrick to take up the work concerning the Irish people, but in order that the apostolic mission might have authority from God, it was necessary that he should be commissioned by the Vicar of Christ—the successor of Peter—and then, as now, the seat of that very "Romanism," and the place from whence was derived the term "Romanism" in full unity a century before that hybrid heresy had existed, or romanism ever entered the dissolute ears of Protestantism.

Pedesa—one of the most reliable translators of ancient Irish history—says that the first care of the future Apostle of Ireland was to obey the following, Christ's Vicar for his new career, and so he poured forth his soul to God in the following prayer:

"Wherefore, great Christ, I call you, I beg you, I ask you, I implore you, that, as you, through my ministry, be gathered to the fold of Christ."

Here we find demonstrated the great fact which St. Patrick had in the supremacy of the Roman See, as the seat of spiritual authority for all the world. Pacilli—if he wishes to correct the erroneous impression which the unmatured Protestantism makes upon its deluded readers.

St. Patrick, in the fulfilment of his prayer, went to Rome, where he was ordained Bishop by the Pope, and then he returned to Ireland to carry out the work assigning the Irish people by Pope Celestine, and, when he arrived in Ireland, in order to show to the Irish people that he was a genuine and the first Roman Catholic, he addressed those words to some of his very first converts.

"Thanks be to God you have passed from the kingdom of Satan to the City of God; the Church of the Lord, as you have learned, as you are children of Christ, as be you children of Rome."

Rome a transparent denial of the Pacilli misleading falsehood! Rome was their St. Patrick's own personal testimony—as recorded in the ancient Irish manuscript known as the Book of Armagh, revised after fourteen centuries in order to flatly contradict the falsehood of a Protestant writer who knows only enough about this subject to exhibit himself as a blind leader of the blind—so that both himself and his readers tumble into the ditch of historical error?

The Way of the Cross.

One of the most edifying devotions during this holy penitential season of prayer and penance for the feast of the Resurrection of our Saviour, is the exercise, the Way of the Cross, each Station of which leads the soul nearer to take upon the Passion and Crucifixion of our Blessed Redeemer.

This beautiful devotion had its origin in Jerusalem where it became the custom of pious people of all religions to make pilgrimages to the different localities which had been rendered sacred through communion with scenes in the life of our Lord.

From Jerusalem the devout exercise was afterwards introduced into France, Spain and other portions of Europe, and many of the many priests who had made pilgrimages to the Holy Land and who saw what ardent devotion was inspired by means of those scenes from the life of our Divine Saviour.

The Franciscan Fathers, who are the guardians of the holy places in Jerusalem, were the first to introduce the Stations of the Cross, the indulgences attached to this salutary devotion being at first confined to members of this Order and by persons attached thereto. But in 1726 Pope Benedict XIII., extended these indulgences to all the faithful.

The beatified Dominican Father—Blessed Alvarez—also promoted the growth of this devotion during his life time, having erected fourteen small chapels in which he represented each particular scene in the life of our Saviour as we now have them in the Stations of the Cross, and out of this mode of making the Via Crucis grew the custom of representing the Stations by pictures placed in different portions of churches.

The Way of the Cross is a devotion peculiarly endowed with Indulgences, thus making it in any church gaining thereby all the Indulgences which have been granted by several Popes to the faithful who visit in person the holy places in Jerusalem, provided they have made the meditations at each Station scrupulously.

—In response to the cablegram sent by Charles A. Dana as the representative of the meeting held last week in New York in order to combine Clergy and Laity in the Gladstone sent the following gratifying reply:

"I am very sensible of the value of the sympathy which, from the first, so have received from, I believe, the majority of the American people in our efforts to secure for ourselves of good government for Ireland—a sympathy which, I feel sure, will continue to extend so until that just policy shall attain its security consummation."

The Sacred Heart College Society.

The Literary and Debating Society of Sacred Heart College held its regular meeting on Monday evening. President, Brother Amon; Vice President, Master Ed. Ryan; Recording Secretary, Master E. Cadden. The Society meets every Monday evening at 7:30 sharp. Subject for next debate is "Knights of Labor and Society."

LECTURES BY REV. J. M. C. BOUCHARD, S. J.

The eminent lecturer, Rev. J. M. C. Bouchard, S. J., will continue lecturing in San Jose until Good Friday inclusive. On next Friday evening he will lecture in the Church of the Ursulines; and on Low Sunday evening (April 17), he will delivery a lecture entitled "Ancient and Modern," at St. Joseph's Church, Alameda. On Good Friday Father Bouchard will lecture in Sacramento.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE ENTERTAINMENTS.

Thanks to one of the best and well-regulated bands of Sacred Heart College (a band giving a grand literary and musical entertainment every Thursday evening), we are indebted "Robert Emmet" will be produced on the stage of the College on next Thursday evening, preceded by a literary and musical entertainment scheduled for May.

THE NEW RECTORY OF THE FRENCH CHURCH.

This new rectory will adjoin the French church on Bush street, which has been in course of construction for some time past, and when completed will be a two-story structure of substantial character. The ground floor will be occupied by the building and church; there is a wide archway between the church and rectory so as to allow of passing from one building to the upper and lower floors of the church without the cold, chilly exposure to the elements. Alterations and additions in the rear have been made to the accommodation of the sisters and Sunday school adjuncts. The lady parishioners have taken a lively interest in the parish church, and have contributed largely to the expenses of its decoration and furnishing. While full every a liberal unlimited, Mass is celebrated every Sunday at 10:30 o'clock, and vespers at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Sunday school at 2 o'clock.

CLERICAL CHANGES.

Rev. Hermann Gillmann left of St. Rose's Parish, Sacramento, on Tuesday last for San Francisco, Vallejo street, and Rev. P. Scott has come to take charge of St. Rose's parish.

THE NEW CATHEDRAL.

The interior of the new cathedral is rapidly assuming shape, and the building is now in a fair state of forwardness. The main altar is a very fine piece of workmanship, and the side altars are in keeping with the main altar. When completed the cathedral will be the finest edifice of its kind on the Pacific Coast, and in the State; and, already its superior beauties and effect strike the visitor on first entering it.

CONFIRMATION LAST SUNDAY.

Last Sunday afternoon his Grace the Archbishop gave the Sacrament of Confirmation to a large number of candidates at the Church of Visitation and Saint Ignatius. They had all been well prepared by the Rector, Reverend Father Kenny, and they did him credit.

FORTY HOURS DEVOTION.

Order of the Forty Hours Devotion in the Churches and Chapels of the Diocese of San Francisco, for the Year 1887.

APRIL.

3. Palm Sunday, Mariposa.
10. Easter Sunday. San Rafael Asylum.
17. Low Sunday. Marin Path.
24. Second Sunday after Easter. Napa City.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

April 3—Sunday—Palm Sunday.
" 4—Monday—Feria.
" 5—Tuesday—Feria.
" 6—Wednesday—Feria.
" 7—Thursday—Maundy Thursday.
" 8—Friday—Good Friday.
" 9—Saturday—Holy Saturday.

ST. CHARLES' PARISH.

First Mass Celebrated last Sunday—Subscriptions Opened.

[illegible] Service was held at Lassen's Hall, 17th and Treat streets, last Sunday, for this new parish, which has been placed in the archdiocese of Rev. Father Prendergast, recently instituted. The hall was hardly large enough to accommodate the congregation, and it was decided that a church should be built, which will be 100 feet long by 40 feet wide, with a seating capacity of 400. The first Mass was celebrated by Rev. P. J. Prendergast, Vicar-General, assisted by Rev. Father Archdeacon Scott, who delivered an eloquent sermon. He described the gain and loss of the Church of Christ, and under whose patronage the parish has been formed, and asked the blessing of God on the Church. He next mentioned the sufferings which the Apostles endured for the Faith, and said that which it is not our lot to suffer at times, the yet should imitate their zeal for the Church of Christ, and, labor to erect churches in the parish in which the Divine Sacrifice of the Mass could be offered. He ended the necessity for a parish in the outlying portions of the city by allusion to a journey which he had made the year of Father Cummings who had consented to come to the Mission, and the joy and the sorrow of the people at that time. The sermon was followed by the Offertory, when a sum of $1,115 was subscribed for the church, Father Prendergast leading the subscriptions with a personal promise of the parish, and the Vicar-General following with a generous offering of a worthy and a holy enterprise, and a proper appreciation of the grace the parish had bestowed upon them in the appointment of a pastor. The Vicar-General then announced the appointment of Rev. Father Scott as pastor of the new parish, and the fulfilment of his duties will commence next Sunday, when he will be ordained at 10:30 a. m., and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a Sunday school will be opened.

ARCHBISHOP CROKE'S LETTER.

His Grace Explains Precisely What He Means by Irish Ireland.

The gifted patriotic Prelate of Cashel produced the following letter as a recent gift of the Dublin Freeman's Journal:

"Sir—I have read with great pleasure your editorial remarks that appeared in last Saturday's issue of your journal, on the letter written by me, and published in the Freeman of the preceding day, on the subject of a national language in the Irish National Schools, with a few lines of explanation concerning some of the terms used.

"I have given time to a good deal of Irish in my day, and I have found it, as I have been willfully misunderstood by some writers who, in the interest of the Saxon, are ever seeking an alternative policy in Ireland, to be a thing of long and serious, and that the policy I propose is not a new one.

"I was quite unprepared, I confess, for this misrepresentation of my words, and most of all for the charge that I have proposed nothing. I recommended nothing. I simply expressed my individual opinion, which I think I perfectly right to do, as to the relative value of the two languages, of a certain manner, if I may compared with a certain other, and I stated that I said, as so far.

"I added, it is true, that I recommend expending the public money in collecting Irish, and in the Irish National Schools the children who impose them, and that it was a pity that it was not impossible to profitably such a course.

"Now, I have entered into my head to recommend a general uprising against the present of Irish, however, I may deplore the use to which the present Government has been converting them, or to suggest a policy which would be, if it could be successfully pursued by the Irish Parliamentary Party.

"I did not policy I am one of the staunchest of Home Rule supporters. I tried to be constitutional agitation when, some years ago, I was a young boy, for the restoration of my country's rights. As every one knows, I believe, but a feeder of a party, could not be trust in any other line of action. Not being either, as I may assure you, any the less a Home Rule supporter, I recommend, or merely limited, an action of a patriotic character, and cannot conceive how any man of Home Rule principles can be so perverse as to suppose that I had the most distant idea of doing so. I remain, my dear sir, very faithful servant.

"J. T. CROKE."

THE CHIEFTAINS TRIUMPH

Written in memory of Very Rev. Father Scully, late President of Sacred Heart College, on the occasion of the interment, April 27, 1886.

Leader of the wondrous legions!
Chieftain! Chieftain! Chieftain!
That fain would with a mere cent rejoice,
Thy Cross, thy Crown, thy Throne, thy Bride,
Thy Altar, thy Priest, thy Bible,
Vowed to service of Christ!
Thy Cross—thy Crown—thy Throne—
Blessed with His embracing!
Thy Altar—thy Priest—thy Bible—
Crown of Christ—Throne of Christ—
Cross of Christ—Altar of Christ—
Priest of Christ—Bible of Christ!
Thy Bride—thy Bride—thy Bride—
Sacrificed—thy Bride—thy Bride—
Thy Bride—thy Bride—thy Bride—
Thy Bride—thy Bride—thy Bride—
Thy Bride

Family Fun.

An Honest Farmer.

A woman was standing with her arms resting on the gate when a squint-eyed old fellow wearing the outward and inward filth of the pine hills, and carrying an enormous ax whip came along and accosted her:

"Have you seen anything air or little boy steer round kyar?"

"No."

"Er steer with or white ear in his forehead?"

"No."

"Some lumps with the left hind foot, but pretty pearl, taken altogether."

"I tell you no, the woman snapped.

"Fotch or load ax wood in this mornin an' old Dash—that's the steer's name—got out of the wagin yard an' r'lared hisen? It's the steer I bought from Ben Hardin' last fall—lean Dan. Yer know him, I reckon?"

"No, I don't."

"Well, rest easy erbout it, fur it ain't your fault, hass Dan alle squalated with mighty nigh ever woman ha kon. I don't know wh'er Dan got the steer, but that ain't none ay my bis'ness. Ain't good him hass yer?"

"I tell you no!"

"I didn't know but he would er come up hither way, fur that ole h' so tallin' whar he'll go when he gets a chance. Want over to old Jim McLauthlen's jes one day an' fall in the well. Don't know old Jim, do you?"

"No, I don't; and more than that, I wouldn't want to know him nor you either. Go on away from here."

"Oh, yer oughtenter tar talk that ar way erbout old Jim. Wy, he's the man that disco vered the persimmon pudding. Ain't signed with ole of the steer, yer say?"

"If you don't go on away from here will call a policeman."

"Ol, don't yer yerself ter no trouble on my account. I may be hoarsy lookin' but I ain't so fool. I ketched married the prettiest woman in all our neighborhood, an' when I seen a home I allus hole my wife that if I find a better woman than she is, that—well, I never expect to see one, that's all, but I have. "Madam," taking of his yallow slouch hat and making a bow, "you are that lady."

"Oh, what an old fool you are!" the woman laughingly replied.

"Yes, madam, I am er fool—er fool erbout beauty, but not erbout sense, mam. Some men ale aleared to tell er woman that she's pretty, but I ain't. Them never was nothin' ovardly erbout me. Yer tell yer the truth, I don't lost no sense, but when I used yer I had her trump up some sort er yer pears. I've got er ol'ly ax' er half er wood round hom, an' the wagin that I'm going for coal, but mam I've been talkin' ter you I've forgot all erbout the wood. You'll yer some excuse me for talkin' ter you so, for I see on ole man, while you are young enough ter be my daughter. You'll pardon me, won't yer?"

"Oh, certainly. What do you ask for your wood?"

"You may have the co'al an' er half fur the steer."

"All right," the delighted woman replied. "Bring it around here and throw it over the fence."

He drove around, threw over a quarter of cord of green pine poles, collected the five dollars, bowed to the woman and went away.

Inconvenient Charity.

A young man with one arm, representing of confederate on his foot entered a Detroit clothing store yesterday and asked to see a coat.

"I am straight business. I want a suit and clothes. Three years ago seven of us who left boy our clothes at the door. Boy I have been sent on ahead to get prison."

"Humph!"

"If I bring the other six here to buy, when will you make this 200 suit for?"

"The clothier went over and down by the stove with a disgusted look on his face.

"Didn't answer my question."

"My friend, please go out. You make me very tired."

"What's the matter with you? Don't you want me to bring the party here?"

"No, mine friend, I don't. All my sales I say goes to an orphan asylum, and I like to keep me down to a summer coat and a pair of second-hand pants. Better try der man two doors hakes."

Mark Twain on Columbus' Discovery.

I am not here to disparage Columbus. (Laughter.) New Columbus started out to discover America. Well, he didn't need to do anything at all but to sit in the stolen of his ship and hold his grip and sail straight on and America would discover Itself. (Laughter.) Then it was boring his ships across the whole length and breadth of the South American continent and he wouldn't get by it. (Laughter.) He'd got in disgrace if he couldn't help it. Nether did he have to find any particular spot of America, and when he found any portion of it his contract was fulfilled. But Mr. Stanley started out to find Dr. Livingstone, who was hidden away somewhere, scattered abroad, as you fear say, over the length and breadth of a great slab of Africa as big as the United States. It was a blind kind of a search. He was the worst scattered man. (Laughter.) He was the absentest commodity there was; he was so scarce as a tectonic by a prohibition State. (Laughter.) Now it wouldn't do to send me out to hunt a man. I shouldn't find him. I wouldn't be there when I got there. (Laughter.)—From his speech introducing Stanley.

Making the Skin Tender.

A minister with a rather florid complexion went into the shop of a barber, one of the parishioners, to be shaved. The barber was addicted to drinking, after which his hand was, in consequence, unsteady at his work. In shaving the minister he inflicted a cut sufficiently deep to cover the lower part of his face with blood. The minister turned to the barber and said, in a tone of solemn severity, "You see, Thomas, what comes of taking too much drink."

"Aye," replied Thomas, with the utmost composure, "it makes the skin very tender.

Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

Judge (to prisoner)—"You have been here before, I think?"

Prisoner—"Yes, sah."

"What was the charge?"

"Same as dis one—stealin' chickens."

"And you were convicted, too. I remember."

"Yes, Judge, I was found guilty, but it wasn't my fault. I was convicted on circumstantial abidence."

"How so?"

"A man sew me takin' de chickens an' he swore to be circumstance."

Her Opportunity.

There was a stick of the latchkey in the front door about 12:30 a. m. when Mr. Jim Stubble stole softly up stairs. His spouse had not yet begun to dream dreams, but was awaiting him.

"Seems to me you are later than usual," "Yes, a little, my dear," said Job. "You see, I was elected K. of L. to-night."

"K. of L! What's that?"

"Why, keeper of the soul, of course."

"Indeed! And about how long before I'm to be elected keeper of a seelshun morgue?"

A woman knows just when to pour cold water.

Farm and Home.

Plenty of Water a Good Thing.

Medical authorities now declare that it is of vital importance to health that the system should receive daily a sufficient quantity of water to amount to what authors would call a "flushing"—that is, sufficient to wash away the waste. Most of the matter which should be excreted is solid, and requires a comparatively large volume of fluid to dissolve it so that it may be cast off, an example of which may be seen in the case of urea said, which needs several thousand times its weight in water to dissolve, or else it crystallizes in the shape of calculi, or produces other disease. Thus fluid, not obstructed by semi-solid contents, should be taken daily by every adult, and by large people as much as four and a half or five pints, in order to keep the cells of the kidneys wall washed out, the white waste matter from the possibility of depositing itself where it may do harm, and the system in health generally.

Forgery Made a Easy.

David N. Carvalho, a handwriting expert in the district attorney's office of New York, says that forgeries by amateurs are increasing, and that they are encouraged by the best practices that have grown up in the commercial houses—the use of stylographic pens and aniline inks. Many large houses, he says, recognizing the fact that character in a signature written with a stylographic pen, have discontinued its use altogether in signing checks and papers of importance, and that the corporate's office at New York requires that the signed work is done by a quill pen. A stylographic signature is easily imitated, and when it comes to identifying the genuine signature, a difficulty is met, proceeding from the effect of the movement on the essential characteristic features. Aniline inks are still more dangerous, because they can be copied exactly by the use of copying pads, on the principle of the heliotograph.

Catholic Newspapers.

The Brooklyn Examiner offers good estate to Catholic parents in regard to having Catholic newspapers in their houses, when it says:

The boy or young man who finds a good sound Catholic newspaper on the table in his father's housekeeper week will sooner or later read it. When he begins to read it, he will begin to identify himself as a Catholic, to formly himself from the contents of such a newspaper for the innumerable arguments against, and discussions of, his religion which he hears from Protestants, instead of tamely denying his religion in silence when he should speak. No Catholic man and woman who take a newspaper without feeling that there are many more Catholics than he is personally acquainted with, or constituting "the Roman Catholics" that is a part of a religious world which his governments, his citizens, his body politic, and not least, its newspapers. Perhaps it is not too much to say that it is the duty of every Catholic head of a family to see to it that a good Catholic newspaper is regularly taken into his household, and that he is not providing for the proper education of his children.

How to be Always Happy.

A French Journal publishes the following infallible remedy against a host of ills, strongly commended to its readers, and it is said to cure cœur, mammthrgy, mocomoco, and everything else except that of the heart, the seat of the brain—in a word, all the evils that human nature is heir to, not excepting even imaginary ones—"Every day for a year, the first thing in the morning, swallow the following ingredients, mixed in a cup of pure, unsweetened coffee: One ounce of patience, two ounces of wisdom, one ounce of philosophy, two ounces of courage, and one ounce of perseverance. Add to this mixture, with two grains of indifference, Shake well, and take fast. Lastly, if you find yourself very drowsy, take any dolefy the compound with an ounce of sweet temper."

The Curse of Riches.

A few of our Catholics have made a little money, and straightway have become ashamed of our religion. They have the open sneers to high-toned society, but their religion—the religion of the poor and ignorant—is a heavy weight on their full enjoyment of social pleasures. They feel that they were born under a cloud, in having the Catholic Faith thrust upon them. When occasion offers, they hastingly apologize for the stigma, saying "they were born so, and never pay much attention to religion, anyhow." If a colony of these fools could get together and placed on a lone island, we would be willing to wager that in fifty years Darwin's theory would be incontrovertibly proven. A few generations would suffice to reproduce the original species.

Sleep a Preventive of Headache.

A scientific writer says: "Sleep, if taken at the right moment, will prevent an attack of nervous headache. If the subjects of such headaches will watch the symptoms of its coming, they can notice that it begins with a feeling of weariness or heaviness. This is the time the sleep of an hour, or even two, as nature guides, which effectually prevent the headache. If not taken just then it will be too late, for after the attack is fairly under way, it will be impossible to get sleep until far into the night, perhaps. It is so common in these days for doctors to forbid having their patients waked to take medicine, if they are asleep when the hours come around, that the people have learned the lesson pretty well, and they generally know that sleep is far better for the sick than medicine. But it is not so well known that sleep is a wonderful preventive of disease—better than sanitary regulations and stimulants.

Ice as a Luxury.

In Germany ice is precious. The ice-man takes his cart up to a customer's door and carefully weighs the ice out to him in little bunks. A grocer, who is in Minnesota world boy, say at least 500 pounds of ice, in Germany boys five pounds. The ice-man keeps his stock under lock and key, it is so valuable. The ice is chopped up fine like coal oyster, and is weighed out in a spring scale. In weighing it the dealer is careful give no more than the exact amount, just as much as the grocery man does when weighing out butter at fifty cents a pound. One wagon in Germany will supply the demands of 30,000 persons. A family ice box holds about two pounds of chopped ice, and only well-to do people can afford the luxury.

CATARRH.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious or that they are due to the presence in the living parasites in the living tissues of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has now proved this fact, and it is now made easy to free yourself from the misery in one or two simple applications made by the patient at home. Send stamp for circular describing this new treatment. Address, Lamphear & Co., 303 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request Mr. Dixon, formerly of the Metropole House (formerly Tremont) 1141 Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Old friends should send for his address or call and see him. Consultation free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

You can certainly

Stop Coughing

With 1/2 parts molasses or honey to one part of PERRY DAVIS'

Pain Killer.

Take a teaspoonful often.

TRY IT—PAIN KILLER also Cures Sore Throat, Diphtheria, Rheumatism, Neuralgia

WITH FIVE DOLLARS

YOU CAN PROCURE A WHOLE

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1870.

These bonds are shares in a loan, the interest of which half is annually premium three times yearly. Every bond is sure to participate.

Three Drawings Annually.

Until such and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond wins once one of the following premiums, at three int.

NO BLANKS.

Premium.	Florins.	Marks.	Florins.
1	45	100,000	100,000
1	45	100,000	100,000
1	45	100,000	100,000
1	45	15,000	15,000
1	45	15,000	15,000
1	45	15,000	15,000
1	45	5,000	15,000
1	45	5,000	15,000
1	45	100	67,500
4,575	45	100	457,500
4,584		Premium.	856,000
4,584		Prizes.	2,159,000

The next redemption takes place on

FIFTEENTH OF APRIL.

And every bond bought at us OR OR BEFORE THE 10TH APRIL is entitled to the next premium that may be drawn thereon on that day.

Out of town orders sent to Rosenmann Lorman, in Austria, will secure one of these bonds for us for only 5 florins. Bonds payable in monthly instalments.

Prospectus, circulars, or any other information, gratis.

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 126 Fulton St., cor. B'way, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1871.

We have for sale a limited number of these bonds at our office, 126 Fulton St., New York.

QUICK TIME

AND COMFORTABLE TRAVEL

To Eastern and European Cities

Via the Great Trans-continental All-rail Route

OF THE

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

(Pacific System.)

Daily Express and Excursion Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines to the East.

SOUTHERN ROUTE

New York & New Orleans

WITH the several Steamer Lines

TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.

PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS

attached to overland Express Trains.

THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS

are now daily, with colonist accommodations, attached to Overland Express Trains.

Additional cheapness for Sacramento Tourists.

RAILROAD LANDS

For Sale on Reasonable Terms.

Apply to, or address,

H. S. WILLS, Land Agent, C. P. R. R.

J. A. PILLSBURY, Land Agent, S. P. R. R.

T. E. GOODMAN, General Manager, No. 1 Park Place, San Francisco, Cal.

Marvellous Memory DISCOVERY.

Would enable any person to read and Wonder with astonishment. Will teach anything. Prospectus sent free. Address, PROF. LOISETTE'S Memory Cabinet, 237 Fifth Avenue, New York.

FLORAL GUIDE FOR 1887

This elegant publication of 100 pages, with Colored Plates, and many Hundreds of Illustrations, and nearly five pages of valuable information for Flower and Vegetable Growers, is the Leading Authority. It is the Ne Plus Ultra of Floral Guides, and the Best Seed Catalogue in America. It will be sent to all Patrons of the Seed Department of the Rural New Yorker, on receipt of 10 cents, and the 10 cents may be deducted from the first order for seeds. Address, THE RURAL NEW YORKER, 409 Pearl St., New York.

TAKE

Tutt's Pills

The first dose often astonishes the invalid, giving elasticity of mind and

Bouyancy of Body

to which he was before a stranger. Sharp'ns appetite.

GOOD DIGESTION,

regular bowels and solid flesh. Nicely sugar coated. Price, 25cts. per box.

Sold Everywhere.

THE DR. ZEILE

Turkish, Electric, Russian, Steam

And every kind of Medicated Bath, shower or hot air Bath.

No. 1004 Market St., cor. Stockton, S. F.

PATENTS THOS. P. SIMPSON, Washington D. C. Expert solicitor of patents and patent law. Write for Inventor's Guide.

Estey Organs

ADDED YEARS

Strengthen confidence in the Estey Organ, which is the most durable musical instrument in its sphere. Size, style, and painstaking manship have very detail by reason of its leading position. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.

ESTEY ORGAN CO., Brattleboro, Vt.

NEW YORK: 5 E. 14th St.

RUPTURE

THE SCIENTIFIC treatment of the actuality reducing, for life, is a SPECIALTY. Pamphlet, with testimonials, and a known guarantee mailed free. Without, surgical operation, or detention from business. Consultation free. Address, DR. J. A. SHERMAN, 691 Broadway, New York.

Show this copy of the MONITOR to your Catholic friends and neighbors, and ask them to subscribe. Only 50 a year when paid in advance.

EVERYTHING THAT IS NEW AND RARE IN SEEDS AND PLANTS

is offered and CATALOGUE No. 139, which this year we send out to its thousands upon the regular mailing lists of the Seedsmen, is the most elaborate and costliest work of its kind issued by any house in the world. It contains 3 beautiful colored plates, and very full instructions as to the culture of the various novelties offered in it, and, as before, is the most complete publication of its kind ever issued.

Mailed free to all who order Plants or Seeds to the value of $1 or more, or to others who shall send 10 cents (in stamps) on account, which may be deducted from first order. Plants or Seeds to value Collins' Catalogue will be mailed free to all who shall send 25 cents (in stamps) on account.

PETER HENDERSON & CO., 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

"THE DONAHUE SMOKE LESS ROUTE."

COMMENCING SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1886, AND until further notice, Steam and Narrow Gauge Trains will leave and arrive at San Francisco Passenger Depot, Sansome street, W'harf, as follows:

DEPARTURE	ARRIVAL	DESTINATION	ARRIVE S. F. A.	ARRIVE S. F. P.
8:00 A. M.	3:45 P. M.	Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Fulton, Windsor, Cloverdale, Ukiah, and Way Stations.	10:50 A. M.	6:50 P. M.
1:30 P. M.	8:00 P. M.	Guerneville.	9:15 P. M.	5:00 P. M.

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for White Springs, Springs, Sweitzer and Black Wom Springs; at Healdsburg for Skaggs Springs; and at Cloverdale for Highland Springs, Kelseyville, Soda Bay, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Upper Lake, Pomo, Potter Valley, Ukiah, Orr's Springs, Yokes, Bucknell's, Orr and Ala Springs.

EXCURSION TICKETS from San Francisco to Petaluma, $1.25; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $4.50; to Guerneville, $3.00.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sunday only—to Petaluma, $1 50; to Santa Rosa, $2.50; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $4.50; to Guerneville, $3.00.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon—Week Days—7:00 A. M., 8:00 A. M., 9:00 A. M., 10:00 A. M., 11:00 A. M., 12:00 M., 1:00 P. M., 2:00 P. M., 3:00 P. M., 4:00 P. M., 5:00 P. M., 6:00 P. M., 8:00 P. M., 10:00 P. M.

Sunday—7:00 A. M., 8:00 A. M., 9:00 A. M., 10:00 A. M., 11:00 A. M., 12:00 M., 1:00 P. M., 2:00 P. M., 3:00 P. M., 4:00 P. M., 5:00 P. M., 6:00 P. M., 8:00 P. M., 10:00 P. M.

PETER J. MOLLTHE, Gen. Pass. & Freight Agt. H. C. WHITING, Gen'l Manager.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD

STEAMER JAMES M. DONAHUE LEAVES San Francisco and connects with the Sonoma Valley Railroad at 4.00 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) from Washington Street Wharf, foot of Vallejo, for the ferry of Sausalito. Close time and Way Points.

SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.

8.15 A. M. Sundays only, from Washington street wharf, foot of Vallejo, for the ferry of Sausalito. Close time and Way Points. Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 00 for Close Sonoma.

PETER J. MOLLTHE, Gen. Pass. & Freight Agt. H. C. WHITING, Gen'l Manager. Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 00 for Close Sonoma.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

PAINTS, OILS and GLASS

112 and 114 California St.

SAN FRANCISCO.

A. F. KNORP,

MAIN STREET MILL,

120-132 MAIN ST., Bet. Mission and Howard

San Francisco.

Planing, Sawing, Turning, Shaping

Wood Carving, Moldings, Brackets, Door and Window Frames, etc. Elevators, Railroad Cars, Mill Work, Stairs, Blinds, Doors, Sashes, Private Residences, Office Work, Lodge Rooms, Fitted up and Repaired. Screws and Octagon Turning a Specialty.

DR. WINDELE

HAS REMOVED TO

30 Post St., - cor. Kearny.

JOS. PESCIA,

Physician and Surgeon

RESIDENCE, 1320 Taylor Street.

OFFICE, 613 Washington street.

Office Hours—8 to 9 A. M., 1 to 3 and 7 to 8 P. M.

JOHN F. LYONS,

NOTARY PUBLIC

—AND—

Commissioner of Deeds

For all the States and Territories.

OFFICE, - 423 Montgomery St.

Residence, - - 1212 Polk St., Bet. Pine & California.

BEST PIANOS.

Antisell.

Dunham.

Bhoninger.

Schuman & Sons

Billings & Co.

Standard.

Cable.

Steinway

Knabe.

Chickering.

Steck. Weber.

$500 Pianos from $50 upwards.

New Pianos as low as $150.

Antisell Famous Pianos gained highest award over 100 others.

All Pianos sold by us guaranteed for 7 years. Backed by half a million dollars capital.

CALL ON

T. M. Antisell Piano Co.,

7th and Market Sts., (O. H. Hall.)

KNABE

PIANOS.

Unequalledly and Emphatically the Best Piano in the World.

A. L. BANCROFT & CO., 116 Post St., S. F.

Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

ESTEY

PIANOS

Superior in Tone and Finish,

UNEXCELLED IN DURABILITY.

BENJ. CURTAZ & SON,

Agents.

20, O'Farrell Street, San Francisco

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary,

WOODLAND, CAL.

This Academy, conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, is beautifully situated in the Sacramento Valley, within easy reach of Woodland. The building is large and well supplied with all the modern improvements and conveniences for the health and comfort of the pupils. The course of instruction is extensive and thorough, and the moral and religious training and culture of the young ladies is the object of special attention. The next term will open on the first Monday in August and close about the last Friday in May. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

YEARLY

For quarter, (payable in advance.)

Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Latin, including bed and bedding, per quarter ... $100 00

Washing, per quarter ... 20 00

Tuition in Music, Vocal and Instrumental, per quarter ... 20 00

Tuition in Drawing, per quarter ... 10 00

Painting in Water Colors, per quarter ... 10 00

Painting in Oil, per quarter ... 10 00

Use of Instrument ... 10 00

Graduation Fee ... 10 00

Physician's Fees (in case of sickness) ... 10 00

Bills are payable at the end of each quarter, and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SEMI-ANNUAL

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d College Classes ... $ 10

Tuition in the 1st and 4th College Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes ... 1 00

Music (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing Painting and Private Elocution lessons, each one lesson, at the Boarding Schools, for 30 lessons in French and Spanish are given, gratuitously; as also in Plain and Fancy Needle work.

N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, whenever rates, for the convenience of people residing in the country, or at a distance.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary,

SAN LUIS OBISPO - - - CALIFORNIA

BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR FOUR YEARS' COURSE.

Pupils received at any time. Terms, $25 per month, including bed and bedding, washing, and tuition in all the branches of a superior Christian education.

Pupils will be received for a shorter period than one year, at the rate of $30 per month.

Music, Drawing, Painting, Fancy Work, and Plain Sewing are taught free of charge.

Pupils may be received for a shorter period than one term of five months, at the rate of $35 per month.

Pupils will be required to bring with them complete Toilet and Table setting, also a silver plated spoon.

TERMS OF ADMISSION.

Entrance Fee, $10 one time only ... $10 00

Tuition in Primary Class, per month ... 1 00

Tuition in Intermediate Class, per month ... 1 50

Tuition in Grammar Class, per month ... 2 00

Boarding and Drawing, per month ... 6 00

Washing, per month ... 2 00

Fuel, Water, per month ... 1 00

No deduction made for temporary absence.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.

Studies will be Resumed Aug. 30th

THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, is chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of similar Colleges. Its Course of Studies is extensive.

Reference required. For terms and particulars address,

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, Marysville, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE

SANTA CLARA, - - - CALIFORNIA

This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasium, and spacious playing ground. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Natural History. Thorough practical instruction in Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography, and Mechanical Drawing. For the benefit of those who have not been boarded in the College, there is a Boarding School.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $ 15 00

Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches taught in College, and Washing ... $ 250 00

Bed and Bedding ... 20 00

School Stationery, medical attendance and use of Medicine, Baths, etc., per session ... 20 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 244 Dupont St., San Francisco.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J.

President.

ja5

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, - - - CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING PERSONAL care and a home education to young ladies, has been established and extensively endowed, is located in 1851, and has ever been under the patronage of the Archbishops of California, and subsequently, the same body as extended the charter of the Institution, and conferred the usual rights and privileges of Universities.

It occupies large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, and possesses every thing to make a home pleasant and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough in all the Departments. Every facility is afforded to those who desire to pursue a course of study equal to that of the best colleges in the country. The scholastic year commences on the first Monday in August and closes about the last Friday in May. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

YEARLY

For quarter, (payable in advance.)

Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Latin, including bed and bedding, per quarter ... $60 00

Vocal Music, Class Lessons ... 30 00

Vocal Music, Private Lessons ... 60 00

Instrument, per session ... 30 00

Drawing (per quarter) ... 5 00

Painting in Water Colors, per session ... 10 00

Painting in Oil, per session ... 10 00

Use of Instrument ... 10 00

Graduation Fee (one time only) ... 10 00

Bills are payable half at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SEMI-ANNUAL

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d College Classes ... $ 10

Tuition in the 1st and 4th College Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes ... 1 00

Music (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing Painting and Private Elocution lessons, each one lesson, at the Boarding Schools, for 30 lessons in French and Spanish are given, gratuitously; as also in Plain and Fancy Needle work.

N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, whenever rates, for the convenience of people residing in the country, or at a distance.

Convent of the Sacred Heart,

OAKLAND, - - - CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY

The Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED in the most fashionable part of Oakland, and combining an extensive frontage on the lake. The building is supplied with all the modern improvements and conveniences for the health and comfort of the pupils. The course of instruction is thorough and extensive.

Pupils will be kindly embraced the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

TERMS

(Payable half in advance.)

Board and Tuition in English, French, Spanish, Washing ... $90 00

Bed and Bedding, per quarter ... 20 00

Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to

MOTHER SUPERIOR

School of the Holy Cross.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF CHARITY, 1 Salem Place, Sutter Cross Cut, San Francisco, Cal.

For particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

Offers Every Facility for Acquiring a Thorough Education, Whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL COURSE receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, B. C.

The Commercial course has been established for those who desire to have a thorough practical education in as short a time as possible.

While every care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, special attention is given to the moral training of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly examined and corrected in the class room.

TERMS.

(Payments, invariably in advance.)

Board, Tuition, Medical Attendance, Books, Stationery, Washing and Mending, per term of Five Months ... $150 00

Bed and Bedding ... 20 00

Use of Instrument ... 10 00

Extra Charge for Music and Drawing ... 50 00

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CALIFORNIA STREET, CORNER OF LARKIN STREET.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1851, chartered in 1858 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and endowed by Order of the Legislature, is situated on the Western Addition, in the Old Mansion, the residence of the Spanish Governors of California.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary for the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

TERMS:

Tuition, Board, Washing and Bedding, for one term ... $150 00

EXTRA CHARGES

Piano, with use of Instrument, per term ... $60 00

Vocal Music, Class Lessons ... 30 00

Vocal Music, Private Lessons ... 60 00

Painting, per session ... 30 00

Drawing, per session ... 30 00

Painting in Oil, per Lesson ... 1 00

Vocation spoken of the College ... 10 00

Graduation Fee ... 10 00

Bills are payable half at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SEMI-ANNUAL

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d College Classes ... $ 10

Tuition in the 1st and 4th College Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes ... 1 00

Music (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing Painting and Private Elocution lessons, each one lesson, at the Boarding Schools, for 30 lessons in French and Spanish are given, gratuitously; as also in Plain and Fancy Needle work.

N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, whenever rates, for the convenience of people residing in the country, or at a distance.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,

RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THE ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the charge of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, is situated in the town of Rio Vista. The location is remarkably healthy, and the place is well known for its mildness. The course of instruction includes all the usual branches, taught in a practical manner. The Academy is supplied with all the modern improvements and conveniences for the health and comfort of the pupils. The next term will open on the first Monday in August and close about the last Wednesday in June.

TERMS:

Terms per month, in advance

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes ... $ 10

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate Classes ... 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Grammar Classes ... 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes ... 1 00

Music (Vocal and Instrumental) Drawing, Painting and Private Elocution lessons, each one lesson, at the Boarding Schools, for 30 lessons in French and Spanish are given, gratuitously; as also in Plain and Fancy Needle work.

N. B.—A private conveyance is furnished, whenever rates, for the convenience of people residing in the country, or at a distance.

MT. ST. MARY'S,

GLASS VALLEY, - - CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of Mercy, is legally incorporated, and empowered to confer Academic Honors. The Academy has one of the finest locations in the State, which opens August 16th and closes about the last Wednesday in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

Terms are required to bring with them complete Toilet and Table setting, also silver plated spoon.

TERMS OF ADMISSION.

Entrance Fee, one time only ... $10 00

Tuition in Primary Class, per month ... 1 00

Washing, per month ... 2 00

Fuel, Water, per month ... 1 00

Boarding and Drawing, per month ... 6 00

Tuition in Intermediate Class, per month ... 1 50

Tuition in Grammar Class, per month ... 2 00

No deduction made for temporary absence.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.

Studies will be Resumed Aug. 30th

THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, is chartered by the State Legislature, and endowed with all the rights and privileges of similar Colleges. Its Course of Studies is extensive.

Reference required. For terms and particulars address,

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, Marysville, Cal.

JOB PRINTING.

Any of the Best Styles, Principals of schools Society officials or Business men who desire save money by having their Job Printing executed at the Lowest Rates, at the Monitor Office, 710 Mission street, the most profitable place in the city. ☞ Call and get estimates and be convinced.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY.

MANUFACTURERS OF

Hall's Patent & Fire Barrier Proof Safes, 611 and 613 California Street.

Safes made by church and other cases. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

BOOKS DUPONT AND SOLD, BY A. BUCHOU & Co. Dupont Monopoly street.

Our Young Folks.

☞ Short, original contributions of profit will be accepted for this department.

The proper name and address of contributors should be given in full.

Communications should be written on one side of the sheet only, with pen and ink, and in a legible manner.

A Soft Answer.

"You coward! how dare you strike my brother?" cried little Sallie (Sara), standing up before Willie Lowry.

"He broke my egg," said Willie, sullenly, "I know he meant to do it."

"His dolly," cried Sally. You were a man coward to strike him, because he is younger and weaker than you are. You would be afraid to strike me."

Willie was a stout, strong boy, and he could not help smiling at little Sally's defiance.

"You may laugh," cried Sally, with the greatest indignation, "but I mean what I say. You didn't mean to drop your egg, and you had no right to strike him."

"Indeed! I didn't mean to drop it, blackbared Tom, who was two years younger than Sally.

Willie was a generous, good-hearted boy, but hasty and quick tempered.

A little reflection convinced him that he had acted unjustly in striking Tom Grace. He was strong, and pride scorned to him not to acknowledge it to a girl.

But he was a manly boy, and a blush came to his face frankly.

"Tom, I am sorry I hit you. I beg your pardon with all my heart. I get into a temper too easily, and I would rather I had been hit myself."

It was wonderful how the few words acted like oil on troubled waters.

Sally fell all her indignation pass away in tears.

"How good of you to say that," she cried. "I have been very cross to you and to Tom ever since I got home. I didn't mean to let your egg drop, but I had no right to aggravate you as I did.

So a reconciliation was effected at once, and the two boys, who might have grown up to be enemies, became lasting friends.

A few days afterwards, when Sally was out in the fields with Minnie Willis, collecting flowers to deck the Easter altar in the chapel little Minnie said:

"I was glad Willie spoke so to did. You were very angry yourself, but how true it is that a soft answer turns away wrath."

A Pretty Good Bad Boy.

A good, busy years ago now, a small, bare-legged boy set out from his home in Portsmouth, N. H., for an adventure upon a gun. He rambled along, as boys will, with his eyes wide open for everything that came under them, as well as for game that was the special object of his expedition, and he had not gone far when he saw a dress approaching, driven by the Governor of the State.

The Governor was a very popular and distinguished man, who was being called for the Presidency, and we should not have liked the small boy if he had not given to let stareward by finding himself alone in the presence of so eminent a personage. He was equal to the occasion, however, and when the chaise reached him, he stood aside to let it pass and gravely presented to the Governor at once pulled my his horse and bolted with the chaise, and the little fellow standing there as serious as a sentry, with his gun held rightly before him.

"What is your name? said the Governor.

"Jack Bunker," he replied the boy, with a military salute.

He was invited into the chaise, and though he lost his shooting, he was not in companionship with the distinction of riding into Portsmouth Town with Governor Woodbury!

This was forty years ago, and since then Thomas Bailey Aldrich, who served a place among the foremost of American authors by a series of books, some in prose and some in verse, which are distinguished by the purity of their tone, the refinement of their style, and the picturesqueness of their invention. One of them is called "The Story of a Bad Boy," and except that some of the names of persons and places are changed, it is so faithful a picture of the author's boyhood that it might be called an autobiography.

God Sees Us.

A man once went out to steal some corn. He took his sack, a bright little fellow of eight years along with him. When they came to the edge of the corn field from which the father expected to steal, he said to the little boy, "Go down the road to make sure that there was no one to

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

CABLEGRAMS FROM ALL COUNTRIES.

DRIVING THE IRISH TO DESPERATION.

An Innocent Man Murdered by the Police

LONDON, March 22.—There can be little doubt that the Government is anxious to goad the Irish into overt opposition in order to influence public opinion in England and Scotland against them. A telegram of Balfour to Captain Plunkett was the direct incentive to the murder of a man in Ballina. In that town a crowd composed mainly of boys and women had paraded the streets to protest against the recent evictions and vacatedal prices because he declined to become a witness in the Bankruptcy Court where it was hoped that he would betray secrets confided to him in the confessional. In defiance of the protests of the local magistrate the police were ordered to charge the crowd with fixed bayonets. The crowd at once fled, but they were pursued by the police and a man in his flight was killed by bayonets and died of his wounds.

Let my one consider what indignation all this would have created, had it taken place in Ireland and he will realize the bitter hatred which such atrocities evoke in the Irish. There is nothing more dangerous than a body of men armed and trained with power and urged to a state of frenzy by their adherents. The Tory Government seem to side of women who are ready to plead blindly into my cause to prove that they are more Tory than Tories.

TO DEFEAT COERCION.

An Appeal to the Friends of Ireland in America.

LINCOLN (Neb.) March 26.—The Executive Board of the Irish National League of America to-day issued an address to the "American Public and the Irishmen of America." The address recites the history of the Land League and the persecution of Ireland, to be Christian world for a protest of humanity against the unchristian treatment of the Irish people by the British Government; review the present political situation, and urges the friends of Ireland to use their influence and pass and people to pass their circles and say fidelity if the Irish have not displayed all the forbearance that human nature is capable of by their passive resistance to such inhuman laws as those to which the British Government would force them submit.

The address says that if nothing will satisfy the British Government but the destruction of the Irish people, Ireland will be justified before God and the world in the use of the means given her for her own defense, and in such a case every weapon the humanity of man can place in her hands. Condemnation of the policy of the British Government by the American public is asked in order to avert such a calamity.

The address urges the re-organization of disbanded branches of the League and the establishment of new ones, and asks that Irish people living in towns too widely separated from each other to form branches send their names and addresses to Rev. Dr. O'Reilly of Lincoln, who will acknowledge the same through the press. The address is signed by John O'Mahoney, President of the League.

DILLON'S DEFIANT SPEECH.

He Scorns Bulldoze and Defies the Tories to Arrest the Convention.

LONDON, March 25.—In the House of Commons to-night Dillon replied to Balfour. He said that the Government will never succeed in his case. [Irish cheers.] He believed that if the people of Ireland were capable of exercising the manacles he would give up forever the cause of sense the Irish people had shown. The Irish people would be slaves, instead if they consented to it. Balfour he would leave a country to be intimate could live unless he lived in a country where he could speak his mind. [Cheers.] The speech and hands to Turner years, [Cheers.] The speech and hands to Turner years, Chamberlain, and Balfour, whether he lies in the Tower or not, he would rather be in the Tower than lived like a man. He would not have the Government have conferred on him the distinction they have conferred on him. [Cheers.] Dillon, belittering his life to the cause of Ireland, he would not be a slave to the Government, he would not be a slave to the Government, he would not be a slave to the Government

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THIS, TOO, MUST PASS AWAY.

RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO "MARIE."

Far from the vale of Cashmere,
Across the sapphire sea,
Rich with spice and savory,
This thought comes home to me:
Thick with dust and solitude,
Off the shell of Time,
Sung by lands and sages
Through every land and clime:
So let it be—perhaps in play—
Of quaint, Arabic fancies,
This, too, must pass away.

I glance from out the window,
Walls I set here by the hearth,
First at the sky above me,
Then, on the smiling earth.
I see that jolly fellow—
The sky, old, roguish eye,
Kiss the pretty maidens,
With eyes, just full of fun;
I look out on the ocean,
Where sea-gulls flit and play,
And whisper half in wonder,
This, too, must pass away.

Look out the dusty window
Gladys, bright and rosy,
With a wealth of raven hair;
I see a rose-bush nobly,
In the sweet's golden light,
Lavish with its perfume, on the breeze,
Its beautiful and bright;
I sigh to save upon them,
These sweet, idyl's great play;
Ah, youthful Love and Beauty,
Yes, too, must pass away.

As roses flow on forever,
The heart will ever move wise,
We have looked on buried,
Our youthful hopes and sighs
For, from you happy heaven,
Back to our earth again,
Of creatures, or their talents,
Not a soul returns to tell
For the Mighty Lord of Heaven,
And the souls we have to-day,
Alas, will pass away.
All else must pass away.

ZARE.

March 21, 1867.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

A PETITION TO MARY.

DEDICATED TO S. C.

Mary, holy one, Mary save me,
Mary, Mother, guide thou me
Let thy sweet smile light the pathway,
Bring me safe to heaven and thee.
Sorrow deepen, shadows gather,
She's dark pall obscures the light;
Mother, let thy loving presence
Chase from life this monster blight;
Take me to the same place Jesus,
Pray that I my crosses bear,
Let not Vice's siren precepts
Turn my heart thy image tear.
Pray to Jesus—He will hear thee,
He will give whate'er you ask,
Heaven or Heaven, Mother Mary,
Make my wayward soul be meek;
Ask Him, Mother, to vouchsafe me
Strength to fight until the end,
Lay every sinful thought, sweet Mother,
To my death a sanctified end.
Hide me safely from sin's portal,
Let not sin, Satan, tempt me more,
Star of sea thy Son's dear presence,
Give me pardon, never again.
When I falter, Mary, help me,
When I stumble, Mother mine,
Let me not, Oh, I implore thee,
Fall from Jesus' grace divine.
If a Father should be stern,
And its sweet mystery hear,
Tries, sorrows, doubts, tempt's me,
And the dark hour-weak of care;
Mother, let me then be patient,
Let my soul submissive be,
Give me courage to endure, Oh,
Let me offer them to thee;
Let me bear them patiently,
To our God's almighty will,
Knowing that He does things rightly,
Though we see not the reason why;
When the shores of life are fading
Pray my mortal frame, pray,
Mary, Mother of our Saviour,
Bear my soul beyond the skies.

CLOTHO.

March, 31, 1867.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THAT BABY.

Sweet little dimpled, pretty creature,
Two relics of each parent's feature,
Too young to heed a guide or teacher,
O, that baby.

When night comes on, and drowned in slumber,
Shake every head with care encumbered,
It rings the rules once, or somebody,
O, that baby.

When morning breaks no! long black wishes,
Its drowsy parents, sleep forsaken,
Behold their treasure, love's criterion
In that baby.

When mother's eyes look down with sadness,
Fill them on shade of grief or sadness,
For all its trials of infant sickness
Or that baby.

A store of love walls up within her,
Which ought to smile as cold as ice be,
To change from of that little sinner
Of a baby.

Now ever prayer accompanies,
With many a hope of bright to morrows,
And many fears of future sorrows,
Every baby.

San's Rosa, March 24, 1867.

GOOD FRIDAY.

Oh! Heart of Three in the evening,
Yet another the hour—or sweet hour!
He leaned on you in His sorrow,
And rested you when dead.

At Jesus' side—Oh! Heart dear,
He can you slay on Calvary,
And Mark you "His own last hour."

Oh! Bow of Three living crowns,
Then wreated a crimson crown;
Thou art Friend of the hours forever,
And thy voice, as then great down

The cries of time, still murmure
"I hold thy hands the Eternal,
"I hold thy hands the Eternal,
Is the hour—Oh! Heart dear!

Oh! Heart of Three-in-the-evening,
Miss hours with thine—to-day!
Thou felest the elder sleep,
I hand—and I weep and pray.

FATHER HEAR.

IRELAND.

My first dear love, all dearer for the grief
My land, that has no peer in all the sea
For verdure, valor, glory, flower or fair!
If God be so mine after Jesus first to me!
May love may mean with the first the first
It depent not—Ah—the whole—the whole and entire Like that first face and heart where I was
In my poor land, the Nl-lee of Isles.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

Literary Miscellany.

Where the Breakers Meet.

A Beautiful Catholic Story. Written by the Sister F. Ezra.

Thaw is a point in the Long Island coast where trial was seen to meet. The Atlantic waves rush on other Atlantic waves across this stretch of sand. Thus row of islands comes from the direction of the great city, while the other comes from the direction of the open sea. The point is known by sailors in the fine light of the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty,—whose fresh beauty is lessened when compared to the crown that surrounds our Blessed Lady in the West. Disasters being rare have glanced at those waves as they glistened silvery in the sunlight near a hundred pleasant summer resorts.

The other row of white capped monsters has toward against the propeller of many a steamer rushing manfully homward, and sank and rose under the eyes of many a heart-sick passenger longing for his native land. And here they meet, stirring, crushing, like gladiators,—and the air on gray and windy days is full of their groans. No victory is ever gained; it is a perennial conflict.

Here at the point lives Richard Alworth and wife. They have worked hard in their position. Alworth was Rear Admiral, and was made up of devout Catholics; and, when he married him, the ceremony was performed by a priest, and he made the usual promise. But when Austin, their only child, was born, a Protestant lady was engaged for a "Nurse." It was to rain that poor Rose protested and entreated. Rubbers was obdurate, and for reason that she was very fond of giving. He asserted that he himself did not care anything about religion; a "square" man would come out all right, anyhow; but nearly all the Catholics at the Point were of the opposite political party, and "Dick Alworth wasn't going over to the enemy by having his son baptized in the Romanish Church."

Rose found no consolation in her own relations. They had opposed the marriage, and they told her that they had washed their hands of the consequences. Gradually she had become separated from them. Many several attempts to have the child baptized, but her husband was too clever for her; once, when he was ill—he was a very healthy child, generally—she tried to baptize him herself, but Pichard, out of pervexity, kept a watch over her all the time and prevented it.

The boy was early taught to say things against his mother's faith. To do him justice, he did this thoughtlessly, because his father told him it was "smart;" and when he saw the pain expressed on his mother's face so real and deep, he tried to make up for his careless words.

The life at the Point was an open air life. Father and son were much together; and the boy seemed to be drifting away from his mother. His prayed and begged. It was a pathetic sight to see her, tossed and buffeted by the wind, starting along the coast towards the church on Sundays, and on every day when Mass was celebrated at the out-of-the-way place three miles from the Point.

Austin wanted to go with her often; but his father sternly forbade it. But the boy, though he was laughed and jeered at, always were the medal of the blessed Virgin his mother had tied around his neck.

The days passed drearily at the Point. In summer the blue fish came, and the varying duties of spoiling the sea of its treasure and forcing the fishes to yield their gold. Lord Austin and his father busy. The winter was the unhappy time. Then the men at the Point were much at home; they smoked, and talked, and read the newspapers, and "women folk" declared "they wished there wasn't a man in the world." It was during the long winter days that religious prejudices seemed fervently in the Alworth house. Richard, who was proud and overbearing, generally provoked them. Rose retorted to the common allusions he heard against the Church and the Jesuits. She lost her temper often and took refuge in sullen silence. Austin sometimes found this a tried and like more pleasant than the turmoil within. He went out with his gun after rabbits or put to sea, just for the pleasure of forgetting the unkindness that oppressed him.

"Father," he said on one gray afternoon, when there was a storm brooding over the sea, "why don't you get another church alone? If you don't believe in them, why don't you—you know quiet about it?"

Richard Alworth look his pipe from his lips in amazement. What did the boy mean? What had he ever done to make his own child think that he was an atheist?

"Do you mean to say that I'm an infidel, you impudent puppy?" he burst forth.

"It's against the conceptions of Romanism I've been talking and not against religion. Haven't you sense enough in your stupid head to see that?"

"No, I haven't!" said Austin, unabashed, for his father's constant example of disrespect to his mother had not had the effect of making him respectful to anybody.

"Everybody you say is dead against religion. And I can see that mother's church tries to make her good, and she is good wherever she holds by its teachings. She'd make home happy enough if you let her. She doesn't attack you. And I tell you this, if I were twenty years, and had the boys that go to the priest and be baptized, just to please her."

"You'll leave this house, then, sir" cried Richard Alworth. "I shouldn't object to your being a professing Christian of any church, if you want to. But one Papist in my house is enough, and there will never be another by my consent."

His wife had trembled during this snatch of dialogue. She feared, above all things, the alienation sure to between the father and son; they were too much alike in disposition.

"You may be a Papist yourself, someday," said Richard's son, in the same spirit of aggravation "that sometimes moved his father.

The elder man's face reddened. He repulsed his wrath and were so wrath that made his wife put her hands to her ears. His son only laughed.

So you mean to say, dad, that could make you a Papist if he wanted to?"

Richard Alworth dropped his clay pipe. It broke into three or four pieces. He was too angry to answer at once.

"Don't know anything about it," he said, "unless the almost killed me first. I tell you, Austin, that I have to strike—or with lightning and burn up the kind of heart I have, or be a Papist—I will do it."

"Well, I am going out, dad" Austin cried, letting in a great gust of cold wind as he opened the door.

Richard Alworth's temper seemed calmed by its outburst.

"I hope the boy won't go out in the boat," said his wife, anxiously. "It looks bad, I wish we could make Rose promise for him. He's always out."

"I don't wonder he likes the noise of the breakers on the Point more than your tongue," answered her husband. "Rose's forever opposing me."

A bright red spot burned in his wife's cheeks, but she was silent. She prayed for patience. Her eyes grew mobile as she saw the wrath of Jonas Hunter, as the wind raised from a low moan to a shrill howl.

"If he must go young, she prayed, "let him not die so far in—to lose he come as baby of Heaven.

The prayer seemed vain. Austin Alworth did not come home. His staff was seen in the quiet water of the "Cove," just before the storm reached its climax. Two days after a lot of board was carried almost to Richard Alworth's door and stuck in the beach, looking wistfully for some trace of his lost boy. It was a splintered piece of the boat. Around it, caught in a crack, was a shining thing. It was the medal that Rose had blessed.

The father had laughed and sneered at it. He had called it all the scornful name he could think of. He picked it up and then sank with a groan on the sand. It was as if lightning and of the clear sky had struck his heart. The designed symbol was at once the only relic of Austin and the message that told of the boy's death. He kissed it and wept over it as he had not wept for years. The great waves broke at his feet, dashed back on his knees.

For weeks he hardly spoke. No news came from Austin. He was dead—of course he was dead. For who could live in a storm like that dreadful Point.

* * *

One day Richard Alworth went to church with his wife, and it almost made her feel happy to see him there. The priest evidently announce his intention of becoming a Catholic.

"If I doubt it," he said, "tried will never forgive me. I know that, if Austin is dead, he is—though say pride and my hatred of your church—kept out of Heaven. Oh, yes, I'm always believed in Baptism and Rome, this is the biggest sacrifice I've ever made; how the folks at the Point will jeer at me! But I don't care—I'm sick of it. I'm tired of the sea. I'm tired of the cruel storms; but I can stand it, if Hell only bring Austin back again, so that the lad can the over again a Christian."

Rose knelt down and prayed.

* * *

Six months had passed. One day a boy came to Richard Alworth with a letter from the postoffice. It was postmarked "Rio de Janeiro."

Richard opened it and said coolly to his wife:

"It is from Austin. He was picked up by a big fine ship off the Point and carried to Rio de Janeiro. He is coming back in the Sphen Star. God crushed me. Rose, I'll still raise no up again.

His wife could only sob as if she was sorry, instead of happy.

* * *

The breakers are at their worst. The rush on each other with thunderous roar. You can see a line of white horses meeting each other out at sea as far as the eye can reach. There is a ship out there, too, tossed like a toy.

Richard Alworth has used his glass all the afternoon. He knows it is the Sphen Star back, bound to New York. No boat could live in the storm. He stands alone, watching the vessel as it struggles hopelessly.

The sea surges around his knees. He does not move. Suddenly a speck appears on the white foam. It is a boat. But it seems to be a speck of humanity, and he knows how it reel!"

"Can I row?—can I row, my man? I really think I can. Long ago the Brothers used to take me with them in a boat, and used to look at the pictures and prayers in the water. Oh, I'm so glad! I'm so glad that this was a long while ago." St Philip turned his New Testament from the shelf, and opening it gave it to the boy. "Read, my friend, only read these four verses, and I'll pray for you—I'll pray for you, and see no sight days.

"Read, my friend, four verses in order to be—a saint! You are joking.

"No, no, my friend, I am very serious, and I want you to read these four verses in order."

"My saint, I promise you, I will, and I shall be back in eight days.

"Read, my friend, read, read, my New Testament. He had been a soldier for a while in early youth, and now said "my saint," just as he soldiers said "my corporal." At the end of eight days he was gone.

"Good day, my friend," said St. Philip, as he opened the door to a stalwart figure.

"These four verses—these four verses—I have to read them."

"How is that?"

"Look at them, show four verses, pray to find . . . do not aware

"Why, do you think that easy to do?"

"Oh! I have done something, let it takes a long time, I'm sure, to find myself."

"Well, well, my friend, said St. Philip, "you are on your way to holiness. Hunt for your four verses, and when you find them, only now you must take up your cross."

* * *

They remained some time in conversation. St. Philip entertained the greatest hopes. The soldier was a fine fellow, and had been a man of a happy result. As he was leaving, he received his four verses, and, with good-byes and promised to return again within a fortnight. The eight days passed but he did not return. St. Philip was in great anxiety and prayed hard for his friend. Eight days more passed and he did not and still he did not returned. St. Philip was now very much troubled and almost gave up all hope. The porter, he fancied, had been a mistake in the man. He had been worn disheartened, and had now, no doubt, thrown in the winds the lessons of four verses. At length, however, you had to be working there and reflection he found the sick and well nourished stop of a man coming into the outside, and almost at once a knock was heard at the door.

"It is he," cried the saint, hastening to waste the door to open it. It was indeed the porter, but in what a pitiable state! The poor man supported himself with a cane. A bandage passed under his arm, and the cross of his head. His cheeks were marked with a deep red line, the blood which reached to the bridge of his nose. He was pitiable to see, and he was only three days which were only healing.

"What happened you, my dear friend," exclaimed St Philip, "who could have treated you like this?"

"It is my . . . the porter replied, "don't try to put the blame on any one else."

"How?" said St. Philip, "it is! Explain yourself."

"You will soon see," said the porter, "it is all very simple. I was going with my pack along the Atlantic Road, carrying with commission, when I met a curious with two boxes. At the sight of my pack the horses turned, reared and ran also a stick and beat in the ground. The man who was driving freed himself of seven or eight of the boxes and stuck them in the mouth. Then he leaned on one of the boxes and I fell down on the concrete. At, my saint, if I wanted to I could have crushed that fine young fool, you know! I could have pitched him at his horses or turn the man his eye his broken carriage with the pieces. Just see so, saint, my big muscles!" Saint Philip looked at the pack frightened he knew! Could I get rid of it? Could I throw it away from my pack? It is my only way of making a living. Yes, my saint, I could have crushed the man, I could my long curses, and thus and "He good to them that curse you." I can't stretches you on the right cheek turn on him . . . I can't do it. I had no need of turning the other. He found fault with you, I believe. I can say a word. I only gathered myself to go this a little while to left, and it is now fifteen days since I went to the hospital. I left only this morning. Is this what I should have done, my saint?

St Philip was moved to tears at the porter's story. He pressed him to the bed and embraced again and again the poor man who had suffered so much for his faith. He felt that they must never separate again. The saint proposed to the porter that he should become a Religious and remain in the convent. The Brothers have always been kind to him. He had never imagined that the saint could make him so happy a proposal.

He became a Brother distinguished for the most striking virtues. He was a model of humility, prayer and obedience. He had been saved from a great sin, and the Word of God had told him the means. After about twenty years he died, full of days and good works in the odor of sanctity. The Church has canonized the humble porter. I hope only to be able to do so.

Catholic Messenger.

THE NUMBER TEN.

The reason why ten is a favorite with God, and favorite number in church, is because it is the number that is left over enough, small that no one has any excuse, and thus said—"Do good to them that curse you." Ten is a large number of things to count, say a flock of sheep, or a number of years, or dollars, or perhaps into account, if the number is large, or the collection of lions are naturally grouped together in a large hundreds. A further grouping of ten is made, and we have ten tens. Then we get the ordinary system of numbers. Ten is a number of completion, and ten tens is a complete system of numbers. Ten is the number of the system of counting was first made, and the system of counting was first made by the simple elementary fact of the number of the digits on the human hand. Ten is the number 12 has its name as a favorite number, and 12 is a favorite number, and the reason probably is that 12 is a number of which ten is an aliquot part, which in many cases is a great convenience. Ten is the number of dozen bottles in a convenient quantity to be carried in a man's hand, and ten is just half the standard number, or of the unit of measure, which is the number twelve. In the measure of time, in fact, 12 is one of nature's units, for it is the number of months in which for many purposes we divide the year, and 12 is the number of hours in which we divide each of the day and night. Hence the great divisibility of 12 is a great fact in the world's history, and ten is the most notable instance of its use. Ten is the number of the commandments, in a year, we need some further explanation. The reason why ten is the number of days between two successive full moons is because it is measured by 29 days. Hence there are 348 days in the year, and the year consists of twelve months, and the reason why the Church rightly assigned to the feasts of the Church, and the reason why the Church rightly assigned to the feasts of the Church, and the reason why the Church rightly assigned to the feasts of the Church

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF PUBLICATION

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Almighty God judges man through his soul. Now, as we wash our faces and hands daily, is it not well to give the soul a good plunging bath in the cleansing waters of mercy at least once a year—during this Easter festival?

—The cable announces the death during the aloe of March, of a cold-cold Irishman, Mr. Daniel Sullivan, of Bantry, county Cork, father of Hugh Hoe, Timothy Daniel Sullivan, Lord Mayor of Dublin, of his brothers the lamented A. M and Richard, also Daniel Sullivan, M. P.

—The Catholics of Holland are about to present a splendid album, called the Nederlandsche Catholiek, to the Pope as their Jubilee offering. It contains an account of all the Catholic foundations in the Low Countries, printed in Dutch type of the sacentieenth century, and is illustrated with illustrative paintings of the most interesting Catholic edifices by the first artists of the country.

—Gladstone's mission regarding the Catholic Church seems to be embracing great change. In his "Studies of Homer," he thus eulogizes the representative of God in the world: "She has marched for fifteen hundred years at the head of human civilization, and has harnessed to its chariot, as the horses of a triumphal car, the chief intellectual and material forces of the world: its genius the genius of the world; its greatness, glory, grandeur, and majesty have been almost, though not absolutely, all that in these respects the world has had to boast of."

—We are glad to know that the many friends of Master Eugene O'Connell, the juvenile musical prodigy of Oakland, are about to give a seminal entertainment after Easter for the purpose of procuring funds in order to send this California musical phenomenon to Europe, so that his wonderful musical talents may be thoroughly developed. As soon as the date and place is decided on, we will call the attention of our readers more fully to the merits of this promising youth, but in the meantime we hope that hundreds of our Oakland and city readers will make my their minds to attend the concert when it does take place.

—If some English Catholics could control the mansions of heaven, we verily believe they would place over the principal gate this thoroughly English sign: No Irish need apply. Nearly every issue of the London Tablet contains some acrrrlous allusion to Irish Catholics similar to the following samples. At a Tory meeting held in London Mr. De Lisle—an English Clerkhole is reported to have uttered this spiteful piece of insulting impertinence:

"As a Roman Catholic he (Mr. de Lisle) considered the conduct of the Roman Catholic Bishops of Ireland; instead of being Hierarchs, they were Anarchists (loud cheers)."

Another anti-Irish Anglo-Clerkhole named Angus, expressed his disgust for his nationalist co-religionists in this pleasant way:

"Let us know where we are. Our unfortunate connection with our Nationalist co-religionists, and the satyrs and dotage of those persons expose us to a vast amount of obloquy."

And yet it is solely to the Irish that these Anglo-Orthodox owe the fact that there is a Catholic Church in England to-day or that they have a Tablet to trouble them in the days of the best, bravest and truest Catholics in the world.

—The American College in Rome is on the eve of a new development; the building now occupied by that Educational Institute which ranks as one of the first in Rome both as to importance and organization, has become too restricted as to space and as to the requisite accommodation and comfort of the daily increasing number of the students, already over seventy; as also to the furtherance of the oft-expressed will of the Sovereign Pontiff that resources be taken to enable the said college to offer fitting hospitality to the members of the American episcopate during their respective visits to the Eternal City. Consequently a site has been wanted to purchase a proper site whereon to erect a spacious and commodious college to which will be attached a handsome edifice to be known as the "National American Church," and to serve as a centre for the citizens of the United States where they can find English-speaking confessors. The project has met the entire approval of Cardinal Simeoni and other authorities of the Propaganda, and Cardinal Gibbons is actually engaged in the perfection of the plans. Meetings have already been held to consider the matter, which, when closely outlined will be submitted to the Board for their approval. Some American Catholics of wealth and social position have already expressed their desire to co-operate in the proposed undertaking, in order to enable the Catholic Church of this country to assume her fitting place among other National representative institutions in the Eternal City.

Cheap Lands for Settlers.

The attention of the Secretary of the State Immigration Society having been called to the statement of an intending settler that no lands other than those in the hands of speculators could be procured in California, he informed a newspaper representative last week that high-priced lands in this State are the exception rather than the rule. The great majority of the good land of this State—the Secretary said—is now below $10 an acre, and, besides this, there are about 10,000,000 acres of public land which may be had for nothing—just for the mere settlement upon them. He also asserted that there are 40,000,000 acres of agricultural land which may readily be had for less than $20 an acre, and if the people want proof, all they have to do is to come to him and get it. There is any quantity of good land—flat land—right in Yolo county to-day, that you can buy for $5 an acre. There is lots of land on the hillsides—just the land for vines and fruit. There is plenty of land in Colusa county and many others—added the Secretary—I don't like to mention localities. And I say this, not to injure high priced land in any way, for this high priced land is not above ground. We wonder if there is a man, and in many cases is worth more. But I say there is just as good land—speaking of the well—outside of those few districts that have been boomed recently. The work of the association has been to deal especially with cheap lands and Government land so plenty even in property of higher price.

It may also be important for immigrants to know that the State Immigration Society has formulated a plan for disseminating information concerning private lands, and the association will hereafter permit holders of private lands in this State to offer them for sale through the association. This is not intended in any way to interfere with the purposes of the association to settle Government lands, but is intended to reach new comers who are seeking improved property. Parties having improved farms for sale or unimproved lands suitable for colony settlement may be able to dispose of them by placing plats and descriptions on file in the office and supplying the necessary information. The association will make a charge for this service, and the revenue derived will be used to further promoting immigration.

Who Are Responsible for Such Journalistic Villainies.

It is singular with what cunning Protestant writers try to cover up their religious error by raising a cloud of dust around the head of the great prelate who has so valiantly upheld the truth and hurled the shafts of error into the face of the fanatic who thought he would "make Rome howl" by coining a lie against Cardinal Newman and by using the sectarian sound before whom he felt convinced it.

In the Oroville Mercury of a few weeks ago the following article appeared, and it might have passed down to posterity unchallenged except for the fact that it was copied into the Sacramento Bee of the 24th ult., and this came under the notice of Rev. William H. O'Connor, Rector of St. Mary's Church, in that city, who accordingly petitioned an appeal and to whom we tender the thanks of every Catholic in California for the neat manner in which he has "turned the tables upon the tradducative Methodist preacher who perpetrated this monstrous and unchaste calumny.

THE FALSEHOOD.

What is Said About a Baby's Experience with Sisterian Clergy.

A year or so ago in the city of Stockton, San Joaquin county, California, United States of America, Rev. John Kirby, an American citizen, ordained as a minister by the Methodist conference, and recognized by the Constitution and laws of this State and of the United States as duly qualified to solemnize and legalize marriages, performed that ceremony for an American gentleman and lady. The wife of that gentleman is a Catholic. Some months ago a child was born to the said so, and last week when Rev. Kirby was in Stockton the father of that child requested him to baptize said child. Protestant and influential priest of Stockton hearing of the proposed ordination, went to the gentleman, told him that his child was illegitimate, that Kirby was a counterfeit, that unless he was married by a Catholic priest the child would be bastardized, and that he and his wife would continue to live in concubinage and under the anathema of the Church of Rome. The young man was called a Catholic but renounced his allegiance when he became of age. His wife is a Catholic and the two are now completely demoralized. The young man venses that his wife isn't a prostitute, that his child isn't illegitimate, and that he will not submit to remarriage. Mr. Kirby will go to Stockton and explain the matter to the father, to the young man and his wife can matter courage to break the water of that Catholic priest.

Mr. Kirby preached an onslaught last night against such effrontery and paid the Mercury a high compliment for its course in regard to the matter. Sacramento Bee.

Mr. Kirby preached

Farm and Home.

Health of European Cities.

The Revue d'Hygiene for October 20, 1886, contains an interesting article by Dr. Bertillon, the Chief of the Statistical Bureau of Paris, on the comparative healthfulness of the principal European cities for the year 1885, from which we take the following:

Typhoid fever was more frequent in the French cities than in others. At Rheims it caused, per 100,000 inhabitants, 151 deaths, at Marseilles 149, at Nancy 133, at Toulouse 79, at Havre 74, at Paris 63, and at Lyons 42. In Brussels the proportion was 19, in Amsterdam 11, in Munich 18, in Berlin 17, in Leipsic 16, in Kenigsberg 36, Dantzic 33, Heisiberg 32, Vienna 14, Copenhagen 8, St. Petersburg 90, London 17, Manchester 21, Liverpool 21, Edinburgh 34, Dublin 50. In New York the proportion was 26, Brooklyn 25, Baltimore over 30, and Philadelphia 54 per 100,000 inhabitants.

On the other hand, scarlet fever has been less fatal in France than in other countries, the only French city in which it caused a notable mortality being Marseilles, where it was 23 per 100,000 inhabitants. In Leeds it was 68, in Liverpool 33, Glasgow 56, Dublin 50, New York 40, Brooklyn 84, Philadelphia 30, Berlin 39, Dantzic 41, and Christiania 48, 131 per 100,000.

For diphtheria the figures are per 100,000 inhabitants: Marseilles 98, Amiens 113, Nancy 97, Toulouse 65, Lyons 29, London 22, Liverpool 23, Glasgow 22, Edinburgh 17, Manchester 8, Dublin 6, New York 94, Brooklyn 77, New Orleans 59, Philadelphia 42, Berlin 35, Cologne 31, Dresden 147, Leipsic 137, Munich 71, Strasbourg 55, Stockholm 122, Christiania 424, and Copenhagen 57.

Unfortunately, the reports are not so given that such a comparison can be made. A disease is by no means always contracted at the place of death. On the other hand, a certain proportion of those who contract the disease in a large city go to their old homes in the country or to various health resorts to die, leaving the former place free of consumptive invalids. Taking the figures as given, however, we find for each 100,000 inhabitants the deaths from typhoid fever 434, Lille 463, Paris 453, Nancy 361, Rheims 340, London, 205, Berlin 346, Breslau 361, Hamburg 309, Dresden 390, Leipsic 365, Munich 414, Nuremberg 476, Vienna 477, Buda-Pesth 642, St. Petersburg 553, New York 371, New Orleans 294, and Philadelphia 398.

Weak Nerves in the Young.

Nervous prostration has become one of the prevailing diseases of the day. Especially are young girls, who ought not to know that they have any nerves, the helpless victims of it. But when we think what is expected of school girls now it does not seem so strange that many droop by the way. Read the list of studies pursued in our best schools, which it is expected will be mastered, or rather "goes through with," in a specified time. History, literature, art, science, language, music, painting, drawing, &c.—the sum is appalling. A recitation required in nearly every division of the school hours, making necessary either practice or study every hour at home. No wonder the poor girl's nerves are protested before she leaves the school-room. She cannot think; she has no time for it; she cannot sleep, the whirl of the tired brain will not stop long enough. It is not necessary that girls should attempt to master all the objects. A thorough knowledge of a few things is better than a mere superficial view of a dozen. Health, strength, and a good constitution are more conducive to real happiness than a mere smattering of all the sciences. A vast amount of nervous force is wasted in trying to gain a knowledge of many, when Nature has not bestowed so far it, and the fashionable ones for painting, embroidery, crochet work, and hammered brass, which have filled our houses with so called ornaments unlike anything in heaven above or earth beneath, is responsible for many exhausted nerves prostrated, and their furrowed, but not by age.—Family Darlen.

Preservation of Eggs.

Australian eggs are preserved in the following simple manner: The vessels in which the eggs are to be placed are glass jars with patent stoppers, vulcanized India-rubber plates making them perfectly air tight. As soon as the eggs have been collected, the jars are stood in hot water for some time, and left until the air in them has become thoroughly warm and rarefied. The jars having been heated, the eggs are cropped up in paper to prevent their knocking together, and placed in a warm apartment, their pointed ends being uppermost. The jars are immediately closed up, and then, and until then, are removed from the hot water. It is said that if this process is skillfully carried out, the eggs will be as fit for breakfast table as the day they were laid, many months after they were put in the jars. The great secret of success", carrying out this method is, no doubt, to thoroughly heat the air in the jars. The eggs will stand a better chance of keeping, if the place in which they are packed is previously baked and sand warm. Patent stoppered jars are not absolutely necessary, any cooper answering which effectually excludes the air. At the late Birmingham, Eng., cattle show, prizes were offered for the best dozen of preserved eggs, and they were given, as was the case the year previous, to those preserved in simple lime and water, or packed in dry salt. Samples were shown covered with melted suet, beeswax, oil, or lard, and all these were good. But strange to say, one exhibit which had been rubbed over with pure vaseline was at once so bad, was the a case of all. All the eggs were putrid.

Speech Perfect in a Man's Life.

If the period between twenty and forty is critical one in the formation of intellectual and professional habits, the period between twenty is more important still for the fixing of personal habits, properly so called, such as vocalization, gesture, motion and address. Hardly ever is a language learned after 30 spoken without a foreign accent; hardly ever can a youth transferred to the society of his betters unlearn the vocality and other vices of speech bred in him by the associations of his growing years. Hardly ever, indeed, no matter how much money there is in his pocket, can he ever learn to dress like a gentleman-born. The mechanic after thirty warms as eagerly to him as the tenant "serfs," but he simply can't buy the right things. An invisible law, as strong as gravitation, keeps him within his orbit, around this year as he was last; and how his aristocratic acquaintances contrive to get the things they wear, will be for him a mystery till he dying day.

The great thing, then, in all education is to make automatic and habitual, as early as possible, as many useful actions as we can, and to guard against the growing into ways that are likely to be disadvantageous to us, as we should guard against the plague. The more of the details of our daily life we can hand over to the infinite and efficient custody of automatism, the more our higher powers of mind will be set free for their own proper work. There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision, and for whom the lighting of every cigar, the drinking of every cup, the time of rising and going to bed every day, and the beginning of every bit of work, are subjects or express volitional deliberation. Full half the time of such a man goes to the deciding, or regretting, of matters which ought to have been so thoroughly ingrained in him as practically not to exist for his consciousness at all.

They Took Tintypes Instead.

A man and woman were loudly disputing in a doorway on Gradiet street yesterday when Detective Hoberlin happened along and asked what was the trouble.

"He's just this," replied the farmer. "She's my wife. We live out here about seven miles and she's had the toothache for three days and nights. We drove in this morning to have the tooth pulled, and now she wants to back out.

"But it has stopped aching," protested the wife.

"Yes, but it will begin again as soon as we get home."

"No, it won't."

"But we can't drive fourteen miles and lose half a day for nothing."

"You might have your tintypes taken," suggested the detective. "That will be the next thing to having a tooth pulled."

"I'll agree to that," promptly replied the wife. "I'm willing to suffer, but I'm no use to pull a tooth unless it aches."

"Well, we'll do that, then," observed the husband, 'and I'm much obliged to you, stranger, for the suggestion. There's a place right over there, and I guess we can be performed on and get home in time for dinner."

He Thought It was Tremens.

"What's your dad's doin' now?" asked a Newport tock farmer of a Newman boy.

"He's asleep anyway," replied the boy.

"Well, how does he make a livin'?"

"Oh, he has a sincure."

"He-he, he-he! I kin tell he's had em of he didn't stop drinkin'!"

Gaelic Conception.

It is admirable for brethren to dwell together in unity, but when the unity becomes individuality it no longer commands our admiration. The following rumor from one of Jack Robinson, who, because he was not invited to take part in a shooting match, got up one of their entertainments on his own account, and invited not a solitary person to it.

"Is the Gaelic service over yet?" asked a visitor to the Hons shire Spa, of the beadle of a church, to which he had walked for the good of his health, and to hear a sermon in English.

"No; it will not be over yet.

"Will it be long?"

"No; not verra long. You will just take a walk near till it will be over. I will wave my hand when it will be time for you to come."

In a little while the old man was seen waving his hand and the stranger returned.

"Hes is the Gaelic service over?"

"Yes."

"And is the songregation gone?"

"Oh, ay; the songregation will be gone, surely."

"But, I have not seen them hearing; which way have they gone?"

"Which way?"

Then pointing to a solitary man slowly walking away at some distance, "You's hum."

Names That Matched.

The following, says the Hampshire Advertiser, are reported to have been joined in matrimony last year in Scotland: Thomas Black and Mary White; Peter Day and Ellen Night; Solomon Bank and Catharine Vale; James Hill and Sarah Dell; Peter Slater and Julia Thatcher; John Baker and Mary Butcher; Hugh Sweet and Nancy Hunt; William Stately and Jessie Smart; Joseph Reed and Julia Hay; Thomas Spring and Mary May; Joseph Brown and Kitty Green; John Hobbs and Ann Hobbs; William Castle and Nancy Hall; Peter Chatter and Jennie Call; Joseph Man and Eliza Child; James Morrow and Lucy Wild; Thomas Brain and Mary Boar; James Fox and Catharine Hare; Andrew Clay and Lucy Stone; Michael Blood and Lizzie Bone; John Cook and Julia Hood; Edward Cole and Nancy Wood; James Broom and Helen Birch; Charlie Chapel and Susan Church.

This rather peculiar list of names was furnished us by Samuel Cromwell, of Wharton township, who copied them from the Advertiser, in which they were published, and he vouches for their accuracy.

Our Modern Diamonds.

Last month a beautiful girl received a present of a diamond cluster ring from her husband. She took it to a jeweler and ascertained that the gems were rhinestones, worth about $1.75. During his absence the following evening so allusion was made to her discovery, but having inclosed the ring in a note she managed to slip it into her coat pocket surreptitiously. On reaching home the very first thing that he should see was her missive, which read as follows:

I have no right the place in which they are packed is previously baked and sand warm. Patent stoppered jars are not absolutely necessary, any cooper answering which effectually excludes the air. At the late Birmingham, Eng., cattle show, prizes were offered for the best dozen of preserved eggs, and they were given, as was the case the year previous, to those preserved in simple lime and water, or packed in dry salt. Samples were shown covered with melted suet, beeswax, oil, or lard, and all these were good. But strange to say, one exhibit which had been rubbed over with pure vaseline was at once so bad, was the a case of all. All the eggs were putrid.

Speech Perfect in a Man's Life.

If the period between twenty and forty is critical one in the formation of intellectual and professional habits, the period between twenty is more important still for the fixing of personal habits, properly so called, such as vocalization, gesture, motion and address. Hardly ever is a language learned after 30 spoken without a foreign accent; hardly ever can a youth transferred to the society of his betters unlearn the vocality and other vices of speech bred in him by the associations of his growing years. Hardly ever, indeed, no matter how much money there is in his pocket, can he ever learn to dress like a gentleman-born. The mechanic after thirty warms as eagerly to him as the tenant "serfs," but he simply can't buy the right things. An invisible law, as strong as gravitation, keeps him within his orbit, around this year as he was last; and how his aristocratic acquaintances contrive to get the things they wear, will be for him a mystery till his dying day.

The great thing, then, in all education is to make automatic and habitual, as early as possible, as many useful actions as we can, and to guard against the growing into ways that are likely to be disadvantageous to us, as we should guard against the plague. The more of the details of our daily life we can hand over to the infinite and efficient custody of automatism, the more our higher powers of mind will be set free for their own proper work. There is no more miserable human being than one in whom nothing is habitual but indecision, and for whom the lighting of every cigar, the drinking of every cup, the time of rising and going to bed every day, and the beginning of every bit of work, are subjects or express volitional deliberation. Full half the time of such a man goes to the deciding, or regretting, of matters which ought to have been so thoroughly ingrained in him as practically not to exist for his consciousness at all.

Number Four in a Man's Life.

"And now," concluded the revivalist, "if there is any one here who wants to ask any questions, let him be heard." "I'd like to know," said an old bald headed sinner, rising in the back seat, "how many marbles have been dropped in my hat by these sermons in the gallery? I'm mighty present."

An Intelligent Parent.

"Father," said Johnny, "this paper says that many preventable diseases are now ill with prosecution and kindred diseases. What is a kindred disease, father?"

"Why, my son," said Smithy, "a kindred disease is one that runs through an entire family—kindred, relation, you know. Surprised you didn't know that, Johnny.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are the result of diathetic taint in the blood, and that they are incurable by local treatment. Catarrh is a local manifestation of a general disease, which when once established has proved obstinate, yielding to no made easy to cure this curse of our country. Hundreds of testimonials attest the efficacy of this patent at home. Send stamp for circular describing this new treatment to A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request, Mr. Dixon, Sr., is staying at the Metropolitan House (formerly Tremont) 1011 Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Prof. Jerome should send for his treatise or call and see him. Consultation free.

—Sister M. Juliana died recently at the convent of Notre Dame Chartreuil. She was 37 years of age and a native of Cleveland. She was the eldest of a family of 10 children, all of whom survive. Her father, who died in 1882, was interrupted in "Tom Brown's School Days." Her mother, who survives her, is a sister of Rev. Father Lamy, the first Catholic bishop of New Mexico. Her brother, Rev. Father Lamy, is a member of the Society of Jesus, and is now stationed at Los Angeles, Cal. Her sister is a member of the Order of Mercy, and is now in charge of the Convent of Mercy, Los Angeles. Her death was caused by a cancerous growth in the throat, which had been of long duration, and was borne with the greatest patience and resignation to the will of God.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Can Colds, Croup, Coughs, Cramps, be CURED? OH YES PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER Will do it every time Your druggist sells it. WITH FIVE DOLLARS

THE SAN ANDREAS BOOK

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1879

These bonds are shares in a loan, the interest of which is paid out in premiums three times yearly. Every bond is entitled to

Three Drawings Annually,

Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond is sure to win one of the following prizes, as there are

NO BLANKS.

Number	Prizes.		Amount	Floring.
1	at	100,000 florins	equals	100,000
1	at	50,000	"	50,000
1	at	25,000	"	25,000
1	at	12,000	"	12,000
1	at	10,000	"	10,000
1	at	5,000	"	5,000
1	at	2,000	"	2,000
1	at	1,000	"	1,000
1	at	500	"	500
Together	1,000	prizes, amounting to		1,100,000

Florins. The next redemption takes place on the

FIFTEENTH OF APRIL,

And every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THE 15TH APRIL is entitled to the whole premium of the current year, and

Out of two orders sent to Emperiean Lottery, in money $6 will secure one of those bonds for the Lottery. Bonds are payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

109 Fulton St., cor. B'Way, New York City.

Bonds Sent Free of Charge.

Our Government Bonds are not to be compared with Lottery Bonds, as they are redeemed by the Court of Austria, and do not conflict with any Lottery or Gift Enterprise.

Parties in Europe please state that you saw this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

DOZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL Commission Merchants N. E. CORNER FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS., SAN FRANCISCO.

Wool Sage, Tallow, Shoots, Hops and Gift articles acquired by Wool Growers kept on hand and supplies to Consumers at the Very Lowest Rates. Cash Advances on Consignments of Wool, Hides, Tallow, &c. Low Rates of Interest and prompt returns made

Post Office Address 2221 San Francisco

Intelligent Readers will notice that Tutt's Pills are not "recommended to cure" all classes of disease, but only such as result from a disordered liver, viz.:

Vertigo, Headache, Dyspepsia, Fevers, Costiveness, Bilious Colic, Flatulence, etc.

For these they are recommended as a specific, and are warranted to cure or at least relieve, in most cases. Price, 25 cts. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL. THIS WELL ELASTIC TRUSS

Is the best in the world. Cures Rupture. Sent by mail. Circulars free. Address, THE ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 1 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

THE DR. ZEILE Turkish, Electric, Russian, Steam AND HAYF. THE ONLY PLACE IN THE CITY WHERE LADIES and Gentlemen will find good and pure, quiet or large as may be desired. Open all day and evening. Bath, hot or tepid and continuous stream, 50c. 1008 to 1016 Pacific Street, bet. Montgomery and Kearny.

Show this copy of the MONITOR to your Catholic friends and neighbors, and ask them to subscribe. Only $1 a year when paid in advance.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO., IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF PAINTS, OILS and GLASS 112 and 114 California St., SAN FRANCISCO.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS Artificial Flowers, Bouquets, PLANTS AND ORNAMENTS, FOR CHURCH ALTARS In the Lastest Imported Designs. MANUFACTORY AT A. GOERING. 918 Mission Street. Near Fifth. Opposite U. S. Mint

B. BRADLEY, Painting, Whitening, AND PAPER HANGING, 923 Mission Street, 923 Telephone No. 3664

A. F. KNORP, MAIN STREET MILL. 138-142 MAIN ST., Bet. Mission and Howard San Francisco. Planing, Sawing, Turning, Shaping Wood Carving, Molding, Brackets, Panel and Window Frames, Sash, Doors, Balusters Turn, Mill Work, Office, Stairs, Brackets, Scroll Work, Fancy Mantels, Cabinet Work, and Hard Wood Finishing a specialty.

PATENTS TRUE & SIMPSON, Washington D. C. Before actual patent solicited. Send "Hints for Inventors" Gratis.

JOS. PESCIA, Physician and Surgeon RESIDENCE, 1320 Taylor Street. OFFICE, 611 Washington street. Office Hours—8 to 9 a.m., 1 to 3 and 7 to 8 p.m.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

BEST PIANOS. $500 Pianos from $250 upwards. New Pianos as low as $150. Antiseil Famous Pianos unequalled highest award over 500 makers. All Pianos sold by us guaranteed for 7 years. Backed by half a million dollars responsible. CALL ON T. M. Antiseil Piano Co. 7th and Market Sts., (O. F. Hall.)

KNABE PIANOS. Unequalled for Durability, Emphatically the Best Piano in the World. A. L. BANCROFT & CO., 116 Dupont St., S. F. Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

ESTEY PIANOS Superior in Tone and Finish. UNEXCELLED IN DURABILITY. BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, Agents. Warerooms, 25 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, WOODLAND, CAL. THIS ACADEMY PLEASANTLY SITUATED IN the Sacramento Valley offers every advantage for a thorough English education. The board of the academy is furnished with all the comforts of a home. Terms, $150 per annum. Pupils received at any time during the year. For further particulars apply to the SISTER SUPERIOR.

Book and Job Printing NEATLY, CHEAPLY AND QUICKLY.

RUPTURE Positively Cured by the astonishing medicine, for 120 years generally prescribed and now without rival. Cures guaranteed or money refunded. Sent by mail, $1 per box, or 6 boxes for $5. Circulars free. Address, Dr. JAMES, Box 2, Jersey City, N. J.

Marvellous Memory DISCOVERY. Would astonish Hercules in Strength. Wonderful in Results. Cures Lost Memory, Idiocy, Nervous Debility, Dullness, Impotency, Lost Manhood, Wakefulness, Aversion to Study, Blushing, Stammering, Diffidence and others, and Fits, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, Nervous Exhaustion and others, and Fits. Prof. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Avenue, New York.

JOHN F. LYONS, NOTARY PUBLIC —AND— Commissioner of Deeds For all the States and Territories. OFFICE, - 413 Montgomery St. Residence, - 1123 Polk St.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE SANTA CLARA, - - CALIFORNIA

This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies its large buildings, with extensive, shady playgrounds, covered promenades, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a non-sectarian Philosophical, Chemical, and Philosophical Collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has a Museum of Natural History, a Library containing 15,000 volumes, a Commercial Hall, and a Gallery for the Fine Arts. The building 160x40 has just been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once $ 15 00

Tuition, Ancient and Modern Languages, Reading and Reciting, Arithmetic, Geography, Use of Globes, Elementary Drawing, Vocal Music, Use of Piano, Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending of Linen, Bed and Bedding, Use of Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, Use of Library, Fuel, Lights, Doctor's Fees, Use of Bath, per session of ten months, per session $50 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Br. Ignatius Conzen, 214 Hayes street, San Francisco.

REV. R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION OFFERING PECULIAR advantages to young ladies wishing to combine a solid and refined education with the study of the Fine Arts, is conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame, and is under all the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions.

It occupies large buildings, with extensive grounds, and possesses every thing to make a home pleasant and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the Departments. Every facility is afforded to those who may find it desirable to devote their whole attention to some or the study of the Fine Arts.

The scholastic year begins on the first Monday in August, and continues for ten months.

TERMS:

(Payable in advance.)

Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and if desired, Drawing, Use of Bed and Bedding and use of Bedding $175 00

Washing, per month 1 50

Use of Piano, per month 1 50

Use of Harp, per month 1 50

Use of Bath, per month 1 50

Use of Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, per session 10 00

Use of Library, per session 1 00

Physician's Fees (in case of sickness), per session 10 00

Bills are presented and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2nd Collegiate Classes $ 20

Tuition in the 3rd and 4th Collegiate Classes 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Preparatory 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Primary Classes 1 50

Drawing, Instrumental Music, Painting and Vocal Music, Each Class 1 50

Use of Piano, one hour per day 1 50

Use of Harp, one hour per day 1 50

Painting in Oil, per lesson 1 50

Use of Instrument of Music, per lesson 1 50

Extra charge for Music lessons, per lesson 1 50

For further particulars, address

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, San Jose

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY, RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is pleasantly situated for its attendants in the pleasant and accessible town of Rio Vista. The building is large and well adapted for the purpose, and has been erected with a view to the health and comfort of the pupils. The grounds are extensive, and afford ample facilities for healthful exercise. Pupils of all persuasions are received, and no pains are spared to promote their moral and intellectual improvement. Pupils received at any time during the term, and will be charged only from the time of entrance.

The scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five and a half months each. Terms payable in advance.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance.

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding $175 00

Washing 15 00

Use of Bedding (private rooms) 10 00

Use of Piano, per session (Music, Vocal and Instrumental) 15 00

Use of Harp, per session 15 00

Use of Bath, per session 10 00

Drawing and Painting, per session 15 00

Tuition in Music, per session 50 00

Use of Instrument, per session 15 00

Tuition in Vocal Music, per session 15 00

Tuition in Drawing and Painting, per session 15 00

Use of Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, per session 5 00

Use of Library, per session 1 00

Physician's Fees (in case of sickness), per session 10 00

Bills are presented and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Collegiate Classes $ 20

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Collegiate Classes 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Preparatory 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Primary Classes 1 50

Drawing, Instrumental Music, Painting and Vocal Music, Each Class 1 50

Use of Piano, one hour per day 1 50

Use of Harp, one hour per day 1 50

Painting in Oil, per lesson 1 50

Use of Instrument of Music, per lesson 1 50

Extra charge for Music lessons, per lesson 1 50

For further particulars, address

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, San Jose

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY, GILROY, CALIFORNIA

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

For terms, etc., apply to SISTER SUPERIOR.

ACADEMY OF OUR LADY OF LOURDES, EAST OAKLAND, CAL.

THIS ACADEMY CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS of Mercy, is legally incorporated and empowered to confer Academic Honors. The Academic year commences on the first Monday in August and ends the last Friday in June. The second term commences on the first Monday in January. Pupils are prepared for entrance into any College or Academy.

TERMS OF ADMISSION.

Board and Tuition for scholastic year $150 00

Tuition, Fee (pupils not boarders) 10 00

Use of Piano 15 00

Use of Harp 15 00

Painting and Drawing, per month 5 00

Vocal Music, per month 5 00

Use of Bedding (only for temporary absence) 10 00

No deduction made for temporary absence.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME MARYSVILLE, CALIFORNIA.

Studies will be Resumed Aug. 30th

THIS INSTITUTION, ESTABLISHED IN 1868, is chartered by the Legislature of California with the additional privileges of similar Collegiate Institutions in the United States.

Reference required. For terms and particulars address

SISTER superior.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

Offers Every Facility for Acquiring a Thorough Education, whether Classical, Business or Commercial.

THOSE WHO CONSIDER THE TIME SPENT at College as the most valuable portion of their lives, will find in the Commercial Course, as taught in the Christian Schools, a course of study which affords a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our Language classes receive special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class room.

TERMS:

(Payments, invariably in advance.)

Board, Tuition, Medical Attendance, Books, Stationery, Washing and Mending, per term of Five Months $150 00

Day Students 40 00

Vacation at College 50 00

Extra Charges for Bedding and Use of Bath.

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME (IN SAN FRANCISCO).

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1868, chartered in 1878 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Do-lores street, between the Old Mission Church and the Convent of Mission Dolores, and affords a beautiful view of the City and Bay.

The building is large and well adapted for the purpose, and has been recently improved and refitted with every modern convenience for the health and comfort of the pupils. A complete Philosophical Apparatus, a Cabinet of Natural History, and a Library of 1500 volumes, are at the disposal of the Professors.

Instrumental Music and Vocal Culture, and Drawing and Painting form no extra charge.

EXPENSES PER TERM—PAYABLE IN ADVANCE:

Board, Tuition in English, French, Drawing, and Use of Bed and Bedding, $175 00

Washing, per month 1 50

Use of Piano, per month 1 50

Use of Harp, per month 1 50

Use of Bath, per month 1 50

Use of Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, per session 10 00

Use of Library, per session 1 00

Physician's Fees (in case of sickness), per session 10 00

Bills are presented and are payable at the beginning of each half session, in advance.

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (paid in advance.)

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Collegiate Classes $ 20

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Collegiate Classes 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Preparatory 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Preparatory 1 50

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Intermediate 1 00

Tuition in the 1st and 2d Primary Classes 1 00

Tuition in the 3d and 4th Primary Classes 1 50

Drawing, Instrumental Music, Painting and Vocal Music, Each Class 1 50

Use of Piano, one hour per day 1 50

Use of Harp, one hour per day 1 50

Painting in Oil, per lesson 1 50

Use of Instrument of Music, per lesson 1 50

Extra charge for Music lessons, per lesson 1 50

For further particulars, address

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, San Jose

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY, Gales Gate Ave. San Francisco

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC.

THIS ACADEMY PLEASANTLY SITUATED IN the Western Addition, offers every advantage for a thorough English education. The board of the academy is furnished with all the comforts of a home. Terms, $150 per annum. Pupils received at any time during the year. For further particulars apply to the SISTER SUPERIOR.

URSULINE ACADEMY, FOR YOUNG LADIES, SANTA ROSA, - - SONOMA CO., CAL.

For Particulars Address the Superior of the Ursuline Academy, Santa Rosa.

Seventh Annual Session Begins August 1st

Academy of Our Lady of Angels, SANTA CLARA, - - - CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords an opportunity of preparing for young ladies, a refining expense, a moral and intellectual education. Due heed is paid to particular that should recommend the Academy, to the influence accredited to the people, to views and habits of society and to render them useful members of the Church and State.

The scholastic year, comprising 10 months, commences on the Monday of August and ends in June.

Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

For quarter, payable in advance.

Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid once for all.

Tuition, Reading and use of Bedding, $20

Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Elocution form extra charges.

Needlework, French and Spanish lessons free.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY, GENESTA, SOLANO, CO., CAL.

Conducted by the Sisters of St. Dominic.

Address all Communications to SISTER SUPERIOR.

JOB PRINTING.

Any of the Bay Clergy, Principals of schools Society officials or Business men who desire to save money in having their Job Printing executed at the Lowest Rates, at 1 and McCormick Bros., 410 Sansome street, are most cordially invited to the office to patronize. ☞ Call and get estimates and be convinced.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY. —MANUFACTURERS OF— Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes. 511 and 513 California Street. Safes made for church and other uses. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

IRON MOUNTAIN AND SOLD, ST. A. SOLBUCKS Dust Management.

Our Young Folks.

☞ Short, original contributions on morals will be accepted for this department.

The proper rules and scheme of contribution should be understood:

Compositions should be written on one side of the paper only, with pen and ink, and in a legible manner.

LA SALLE'S PRESENTIMENT.

How the Wonderful Explorer Met His Death

La Salle, the most indomitable of French explorers in the New World, with wonderful courage and perseverance—was on his way from Texas to Montreal with twenty or more followers. La Salle himself and some half a dozen more were bringing several mules in advance of the main body. Night had overtaken them and each party had travelled for the rest on its own ground. During the night the surgeon of the party, with two accomplices entertaining against La Salle a feeling of hatred, had determined to assassinate him. Prudence in this step, however, it was necessary to kill several others, among whom was a trusted nephew of La Salle. The company being divided—La Salle in one camp and the nephew in the other—resolved him to carry out his design with little danger of detection. Thus he did with the Indian Victims early asleep, by crushing their skulls with an axe. Two days had passed. La Salle had not seen his nephew, and become suddenly to the Prior Divay he inquired of his fate and noticed of him that Duhaut, Sagot, and Heine were showing signs of discontent. Singularly enough these were the three who aims of his nephew and his most trusted friends, the very men who had agreed to assassinate La Salle himself. Unable to endure the impression that was haunting his mind, he turned over the command to his little party to Cloutel, his faithful follower, and in company with Prior Divay rode back in search of the larger party and his nephew. "All his way long he talked to Friar. "La Salle talked of nothing but thankfulness to God, who by Prior Divay's mind dangers preserved him. Suddenly he was overcome with a profound sadness for which he found no cause, and which he was at said nothing of what was engrossing his thoughts. He was not in fear of death, but scarcely knew him. But his soon recovered its usual calmness and they moved on. Unusually La Salle fired a pistol to indicate his approach so as to prevent his being so boasting. Another party were on the opposite bank of the river, but out of sight. On hearing the pistol the three conspirators crossed the stream with the death and secrecy of savages, concealing themselves, as they easily could, among the tall grass. At last one of the party appeared in view. La Salle hailed him to know where was his nephew. His reply was evasive and instantly advanced towards the mule to demand an explanation. As he drew near the two men in the grass who had not yet revealed themselves fired simultaneously, and the poor man fell dead. La Salle rushed to his brains. His assassins then stripped the body of what was worth stealing into the bushes, left it a prey to the wolves and buzzards. Thus died at the age of forty-three, one of the most wonderful men—wonderful in courage and in his ideas—one of the most wonderful men—wonderful in courage and in his ideas—one of the most wonderful men—wonderful in courage and in his ideas—

THE DUTY OF CATHOLICS TO THE POOR.

[DEPOSITORY FROM FIRST PAGE.]

to carry on his work. Such is the complaint of the suffering Catholic poor, silently addressed to God, and we in their name and the name of Good hereby invite the well-to-do Catholics of every mission to lend them all the assistance that they can.

NOW FOR THE WORK.

We ought to have societies or organizations of men and of women who, under the general direction of the clergy should visit the sick and the poor, either in their own homes, or in hospitals, workhouses, and other institutions. Where these societies exist the work will be done more thoroughly and with a far greater economy of time, labor, and money, than where individuals are left to themselves and there is no subdivision of labor. The Society of St. Vincent de Paul for men ought to be far more widely extended than it is. And quite as important as a society for men, would be the establishment of a society for women to visit the poor in their homes and public institutions. No words can say how valuable is the influence of devout women; how noiselessly, quietly, and deeply it penetrates where the vision of no man will reach and persuade. We do not hesitate to declare our former judgment that thousands of souls, among the young and the old, would have been saved to the Church was, [illegible] if, however, we had developed the early institutions of the Apostolic Church, which made so wide a use of the religious activity and influence of devout Christian women living in the world. It may be asked, Have we not communities of religious women? We have; and they render invaluable service, which we pray God we may praise; but there is not one of them which is not already overtaxed. Have we not clergy? Yes; but their number is far below the needs of their pastoral work. You of the laity who, though not rich are well to-do, who could find time for a little charity towards your neighbor—you cannot discharge your duty by entirely abandoning the poor to the care of others. You cannot claim love for the poor without good works of your own. We well remember that the Catholic Church in this diocese will never acquit herself of her great Christian obligation until the multitude of her well-to-do children are in some way or other really engaged in the love and service of her poor. Though St. Vincent de Paul founded a congregation of Priests and another of Sisters of Charity to serve the poor, though the clergy were numerous in his day, he felt the absolute need of the cooperation of laities living in the world. He therefore established the "Confraternity of Charity," which was composed of married and single women. He drew up admirable rules for their guidance which bound them together, and he has left his plan as a legacy to all who will. In Manchester and Salford a beginning has been made in this direction. The Lady Associates of the Catholic Girls' Mutual Aid Society, and the ladies who visit the hospitals and workhouses and the poor in their homes, are already walking in the glorious footsteps of St. Vincent de Paul. Our most earnest desire is to see their work developed, extended and consolidated in connection with St. Vincent de Paul through the Sisters of Charity.

IN MEMORIAM.

REV. W. P. DOLAN.

DOLAN—In this city, March 30, 1887, Julia Ann Dolan, wife of W. B. Dolan, a native of the Parish of Donaghmore, County Cork, Ireland, aged 40 years.

Only a little sentence in the mortuary column of the daily press—conveying no meaning to the stranger, save that another soul had crossed the bourne and passed from time to be with us no more in this life. Yet it has a world of meaning to the children, relatives and friends of the departed—children, relatives and friends. Husband and wife were devoted to each other that their interests were always identical. For more than twenty years, they had jogged along life's pathway, not always smooth perhaps, but always happy and that are the common heritage of all, but sugar-coated by memories of great unhappiness. It was ordained that the husband should be taken from the wife, the children from the mother, the friends of the deceased what an admirable model Husband and Father she would have been had little children been given her. But she took up her cross and bore it with the patience of an angel, and God called her home to give her her other but larger. The more they were neglected by those who should have and have been to one for them, the greater seemed to be her desire to make them, for all she was worth, happy in their happiness. I had the pleasure of teaching a deceased friend of mine Mrs. Dolan pray a tribute he has memory not fettered either, for it was in the presence of the sacred dead. He said, "I have for many, many years been almost a bereaved parent in her sorrowful home, and it has been my privilege to see some of the thousand little attentions and kind words bestowed her produce the greatest happiness, comfort, and solace, that can world which, alas! is so full of sorrow. I have seen her, even when sickness by the bed-side brought tears her own home, washed, given toys to her children to amuse themselves, entertained by their good mother for hours, and finally sent to their homes to sleep, with a smile on their face, a loaf of bread, or other necessities, which the children would tell her were wanting at their own table. She seemed to realize in its fullest intent the meaning of the Master in my reading "Suffer little Children to come unto Me." Her charity and her kindness was not circumscribed however, all were the recipients of her bounty, and I have seen the poor tramp or beggar lay his burden down in the dear old cottage and have looked tired, and the little shock nearly exhausted, if she knew the person to be poor or old, and blessed and have needing rest, Miss Dolan would place his stock and need there off, rejoicing in what she was pleased to think was discriminating benevolence. Many a poor family in this city she relieved in her own quiet way, and many in humble man and woman who found work for through her own earnest personal solicitation." Mrs. Dolan was a devout Catholic and by her example and teaching gave a number of her children to the Church of our Father. She was an active member in the performance of the duties required by the Church, and her death was lamented by all the leading Catholics of the city. The illness of Mrs. Dolan was of but short duration. On the Sunday previous to her death, which occurred on the following Wednesday, Mrs. Dolan and her husband attended Divine Mass, Communion, and after the service they left the church together. She seemed in cheerful. Indeed, unusually so not was compelled for her own baby by her living husband and a party of friends whom they met. The refusal for the night at 11 p. m. in perfect health. At about 2 a. m. she complained of being very ill, and her husband was immediately called and everything that could be done to stay the ebbing tide of life was resorted to in vain. On Wednesday at noon, the angels opened wide the gates to receive and she departed home with them.

"In such prepared the passage is a breath
From time to eternity, from life to death."

Dying without pain and surrounded by weeping friends and relatives, she will go to the power of life, was called from them to receive the reward of its labor. Mrs. Dolan leaves her husband, a son and a sister, the wife of Mr. Thomas Ryan, the well-known sheriff of Sheriff Matthew Ryan during the two terms of office, and also an married sister.

"How far the than inspired the wretched out, And round the offices of death the sacred light."

Her remains were followed to the grave by a Bench not their bread to feed they prize, Or mix their plying tears with those that weep.

DANIEL RYAN.

RYAN—On the Feast of St. Joseph, David the beloved son only surviving son of M. and Ann Ryan, of Spring Cross, Kimbolton Corner, Washington Street, in aged 1 yrs. 3 months and 18 days.

The MONITOR extends its heartfelt sympathy to the relations and friends of the world's people from whose bourne has been torn this little angel lamb of the heavens; if I dare, Dr. Dowling, Bishop present than afflicted there is the sweet consolation of knowing that another little treasure has been added to the angelic choir that chant the praises of God in Heaven; another little plea for us with the Eternal Father and His Immaculate Mother. Dear little David, we miss you, and we feel something than prayer and the blessings to make up for the loss of that little smile, that many may all be united in prayer in Heaven from to-day on they were united in the bonds of filial love on earth.

Another but—though blighted in manhood—
Her hopes in heaven eternal bride.
Another and yet fairer bloom, set here
But green twig to Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—The tenants of Sir Richard Wallace have decided to accept the miserable reduction of 10 per cent. which he offers.

The tenants in the townland of Glentaggart, county Antrim, under Sir Hugh Smyth, have just concluded arrangements for the purchase of their farms from the Misses Martin, Ballymena, at sixteen years' purchase of the judicial rents.

CAVAN.—There were only three bills, and those were of an unimportant character—to go before judge Fallon at the Cavan assizes.

CLARE.—Mr. David Sheehy, M. P., who has been sojourning this country on the Grifith estate at Mullough, West Clare, in pursuance of his "Plan of Campaign," was present on Sunday, March 6, at a demonstration on the farm of a man named Mc Mahon, who was evicted by his landlord, also named McMahon. The meeting was held at Kilmurry, about 4 miles from Mullough. No public advertisement was issued, and, as usual, the police were out-manoeuvred. The attendance was very large, contingents, with bands and banners, being present from Ballyvaughan, Kilfenora, Killinaul, Lahinch, Miltown Malbay, and other districts. Kilmihil was further represented by about 200 horsemen. The districts were represented by 21 policemen. There was no Government interference without prosecution. Mr. Sheehy delivered a manly speech, and the "Plan of Campaign" was endorsed. The tenants on the property of Mr. R. W. C. Reeves, D. L., Rockbrook House, Killinah, have been granted a reduction of 20 per cent. in their rents.

CORK.—The work of filling the forms of income tenants on the Fermoyle estate who have been singled out for law proceedings, has been completed.

A meeting convened to express condemnation of a landlord (Captain Leonard, of Lisfin Island), was suppressed at Macroom, on Sunday, March 6. In the evening the band turned out, as its custom is, to entertain the population with a few brisk tunes; an incident was forthwith put upon the music by the local magistrates. This reminds one of the played-out Roman system in Wexford. It is improper, forsooth, to tootle on a clarionet or the trombone as a terrible instrument of treason. Yet the Salvation Army bangs and whacks away opposite our windows every Sunday morning, and the Social. ists flaunt their red flags and spout fiercely anarchy, and we must hold our peace. What a happy privilege it is to be a mere Irishman in mere Ireland!

A movement has been set on foot for converting Cork Harbor Docks at Passage into public docks, the same as in Liverpool.

On March 2, at the Convent of St. Joseph, Kanale, Miss Julia O'Shea, in religion Sister Mary Michael, eldest daughter of John O'Shea, Youghal, made her solemn religious profession.

DERRY.—The tenants of Mr. C. C. Dolling (Dublin) have resolved to accept the "Plan of Campaign" in the event of the landlord refusing to give them a reduction of 20 per cent. in the rent.

DONEGAL.—The Donegal tenantry of the Doles of Ballycarry have resolved to accept for a reduction of 25 per cent. in their rents.

DOWN—The consecration of the Very Rev. Dr. M'Glynn as Coadjutor-Bishop of Dromore took place on Sunday, March 6, in the Cathedral, Newry. The Most Rev. Dr. Leahy presided. The consecrating prelate was the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clogher, who was attended by the Very Rev. Archdeacon Maginn, P. P. Donaghmore, and the Rev. Thomas Gallery, Adm., Newry. The assistant prelates were The Most Rev. Dr. Logue, Bishop of Raphoe, attended by the Very Rev. Canon Dougherty, P. P. Colman's College, Newry; and the Most Rev. Dr. Jordan, Bishop of Ardagh, who was attended by the Very Rev. Dr. Henry, Administrator, Cathedral, Ardagh. The Most Rev. Dr. Thomas Gallery, Adm., Newry, and the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clogher. The Rev. Dr. Henry, P. P., Clonallon, acted as chaplain at the Throne.

GALWAY.—Riotous was renewed at Galway on the night of March 7, when soldiers were attacked by a mob armed with sticks and stones. One soldier was struck on the head with a stick and another was knocked down and kicked. They took refuge in a house and private house, not for the interference of the police matters of the Rev. F. J. Coen, P. P., Woodford, has received a sum of £15 from the Most Rev. Dr. Duggan, the patriotic Bishop of Clonfert, in aid of the Woodford Prisoners' Defence Fund. The amount was subscribed by the priests and people of Loughrea.

KERRY.—Thirteen persons, charged with being concerned in the murder of Geraldine Murphy, near Killarney, were, on March 8, brought before two magistrates at Killarney. Two were discharged and eleven further remanded.

LIMERICK.—Justice O'Brien, in addressing the Grand Jury of Limerick City, on March 8, said, "there was substantially no crime at all with which they would be called upon to deal."

A disgraceful outrage has been reported from Athlone, Nawassala West. It appears that on Sunday night, March 6, the Memorial Church, some distance from the village, which has erected about twenty cottages for the late Archdeacon Goodall, and who was a prominent Home Ruler and Nationalist, was attacked by some ruffians, and the windows of the residence were completely smashed. Indeed, unusually so not was compelled for her own baby by her living husband and a party of friends whom they met. The refusal for the night at 11 p. m. in perfect health. At about 2 a. m. she complained of being very ill, and her husband was immediately called and everything that could be done to stay the ebbing tide of life was resorted to in vain. On Wednesday at noon, the angels opened wide the gates to receive and she departed home with them.

"In such prepared the passage is a breath
From time to eternity, from life to death."

Dying without pain and surrounded by weeping friends and relatives, she will go to the power of life, was called from them to receive the reward of its labor. Mrs. Dolan leaves her husband, a son and a sister, the wife of Mr. Thomas Ryan, the well-known sheriff of Sheriff Matthew Ryan during the two terms of office, and also an married sister.

"How far the than inspired the wretched out, And round the offices of death the sacred light."

Her remains were followed to the grave by a Bench not their bread to feed they prize, Or mix their plying tears with those that weep.

DANIEL RYAN.

RYAN—On the Feast of St. Joseph, David the beloved son only surviving son of M. and Ann Ryan, of Spring Cross, Kimbolton Corner, Washington Street, in aged 1 yrs. 3 months and 18 days.

The MONITOR extends its heartfelt sympathy to the relations and friends of the world's people from whose bourne has been torn this little angel lamb of the heavens; if I dare, Dr. Dowling, Bishop present than afflicted there is the sweet consolation of knowing that another little treasure has been added to the angelic choir that chant the praises of God in Heaven; another little plea for us with the Eternal Father and His Immaculate Mother. Dear little David, we miss you, and we feel something than prayer and the blessings to make up for the loss of that little smile, that many may all be united in prayer in Heaven from to-day on they were united in the bonds of filial love on earth.

Another but—though blighted in manhood—
Her hopes in heaven eternal bride.
Another and yet fairer bloom, set here
But green twig to Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

President, R. H. McDonald. Vice-President, R. H. McDonald, Jr. Cashier, S. G. Murphy.

Capital, $1,000,000. Oldest Established Bank on the Pacific Coast Surplus, $550,000.

BUYS AND SELLS BILLS OF Exchange ON UNITED STATES, ENGLAND, IRELAND, Scotland, and EUROPE. ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

ISSUES LETTERS of CREDIT Available THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. Collections MADE PROMPTLY EVERYWHERE AT LOWEST RATES.

PACIFIC BANK, Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, Cal.

DIED.

DERRY—In Lincoln, March 31, William Grimes (Sagar), a native of Germany, aged 18 years, 7 months and 7 days.

MALLON—In this city, March 31, John Mallon, a native of Ballyhaise, County Cavan, aged 70 years.

COURTNEY—In this city, April 1, Mary, beloved wife of Timothy O'Connor, native of Ballymacadam, County Cork, aged 50 years.

COLLIER—In Oakland, April 1, John, beloved husband of Mary Collier, a native of Ballycastle, County Antrim, aged about 70 years and 9 days.

LOWE—In San Jose, March 30, Mary Lowe, daughter of James S. Lowe, aged 20 years.

FLYNN—In this city, April 1, John Flynn, a native of Ballymacadam, County Tipperary, aged 70 years.

MOORE—In this city, April 1, Mary, beloved wife of James Moore, a native of Kilmore, County Cavan, aged 50 years.

HOLTON—In this city, April 1, Elizabeth, beloved wife of Thomas Holton, mother of John, Robert, Caroline, Mary, Lizzie and the late James Harrington, a native of County Kerry, Ireland, aged 47 years.

DUNDON—In this city, April 1, Hanor, beloved wife of Jeremiah Dundon, a native of Ballymacarbry, County Waterford, Ireland, aged 70 years.

DAVIES—In this city, April 1, Bridget, beloved wife of James H. Davies, a native of County Tyrone, Ireland, aged 60 years, 7 months and 11 days.

—For surgery, all clothes, etc., go to Sayre & Thompson, 536 Market street.

Mr. R. Sharborn manager of the popular dry goods firm of Barker & Co., takes great pleasure in informing his friends and customers that he has now fully recovered from the inconvenience and pain he suffered from a severe attack of Piles, which he was for some time unable to attend to his business. He now feels as well as ever, and can recommend Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt to any person suffering from Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Impotency, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lame Back, Kidney Troubles, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Piles, Female Complaints, Epilepsy, Fits, Paralysis, Wasting Diseases, Insomnia, Premature Decay, Want of Nerve, Want of Ambition, Want of Vitality, Want of Memory, Want of Energy, Want of Vigor, Want of Flesh, Want of Blood, Want of Life, Want of Sleep, Want of Rest, Want of Appetite, Want of Strength, Want of Vitality, Want of Nerve

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE ULALU.

Like the mole of a star—
Low sight'd and soft and far,
As the wind soke o'er the deep,
Pale breathing banshee song
The song of the Ulalu.

Within me oft—and low,
As—toiling long ago
It wept o'er hard and chief—
I hear the wild, wierd grief,
The wail of the Ulalu.

I hear it in Teen hosel,
In the piping of a bird;
As moaned the an-eyed hosel,
With eulogies and priest,
I hear the Ulalu.

And darkly telling still—
Of power and of ill,
Of beauty wak'd to wed
With glory tomb'd and dead,
I hear the Ulalu.

From hearts forever hush'd,
By strength and triumph crush'd—
Spirits sanshrl could touch,
Wight from peace and doom,
To sing the Ulalu.

And now I hear more
The tone of the Ulalu,
In a sweay tiere's lair,
And month'd by a polar bear,
Blazed on a tawful strand,
And lead in crystals grand,
I hear the Ulalu.

In thunders in the sky,
Thats wake and speak and die,
And wake again—and will!
Cloud-scaffolds like a child,
I hear the Ulalu.

In blame and in fame,
In merriment—in pangs,
In sorrow and in joy,
In the maiden and the boy,
I hear the Ulalu.

In the present and the past,
In here hearts down-cast,
In the aged and the young,
In the acold with mother's tongue,
I hear the Ulalu.

In the household and the tomb,
In sunshine and in gloom,
In poverty and pall,
And'on sthins myself,
I hear the Ulalu.

With streaming eyes and hair—
The banshee o'r yewhere,
For all my blood and me
Blaze eternally—
The tree of the Ulalu.

P. S. DORSEY.

"Death sing of the ancient Irish.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

GOOD FRIDAY.

To-day the Saviour died—suffered the Crucifixion, and would His failing eyes see this repentant one, Saying: "In Paradise thou shalt with Me appear."

"Father, forgive! He prayed; such blessed words He said,
"They know not what they do." This is the face of death,
This are His enemies, nailed with His latest breath
Yet do His children now turn from His face and shun Him!
Not to this lonely one; down to strange gods to run
And in their lust and pride, still is His crucified.

How long will they profane His pure and sacred name?
Piercing His holy sign, His emblems so divine,
In midst of mockery, on each unhallowed temple
"I thirst!"—to each poor heart, struck by the poisoned dart,
Trending the narrow way—ready to falint and fall
To the parched lips that cry, earth gives her bitter gall.

Come, the Prince of Peace," when shall thy offering stay?
Dark roll the waves of death; on we the current sweep!
Resting at last Thy face—touching Thy garment's fold!

Oh, let us kneel to-day! kneel in the dust and pray,
Close to His bleeding feet; sobbing our souls' repentance!
In deep repentant grief—s'on the Afine the dying thief!

Pardon and life vved Thy outspread arm have, blessed Jesus!
Hold christ not forgive; into Thy hands receive
At death our corrupted souls, that they may live.

Today the Saviour died—suffered the Crucified.
Yet He, the expiatant, bowed, and He could pray:
"Forgive!"

Saying: "Ts Paradise, to-day, thou shalt be with Me."

ANNA MORRISON REID.

Friday, April 8, 1887.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

CAPTIVE.

A bird in its cage—the sky of blue—
The little waters played around,
The waves but dallied o'er the ground—
A tempting sparkle, nothing more,
Tantalizing to break the shore.
They lapp'd and laughed on either side,
And mocked me with a taunt of pride,
A semblance of the power to save,
Yet bent the strength to catch the wave
Yet near one sobbing, the thought alone
(Alas! there was no helping hand)
Thy hole in the prison cell around at least,
Seem to come fatal moment past,
Still with no light to crisis the way,
A midnight hope, twixt night and day—
A feeble star in changing sky,
Yet mocked me with a taunt of pride,
A semblance of the power to save,
Yet bent the strength to catch the wave
Yet near one sobbing, the thought alone
(Alas! there was no helping hand)
Thy hole in the prison cell around at least,
Seem to come fatal moment past,
Still with no light to crisis the way,
A midnight hope, twixt night and day—
A feeble star in changing sky,
Yet mocked me with a taunt of pride,
Before a throne, where darkening stand
Capitoleon. The thunder cloud
Not vented its efforts to be free,
And mid its brightness on the other sea.
Be hoat or star, the storm days,
Propitious leaves alone on I at
Cloud-bound star in captive boat.

THERMA.

A Chore

is a myth, but solid reality will be known by those who write to Hulett & Co., Portland, Maine, thereby learning a free, about work that they can do, and live at home, wherever they reside, at a profit of from 5 to 25 cents per hour daily. Some have earned over $50 in a day. Capital not needed. Hulett & Co. will prove this. Reader, if you want work, write to them at once. Delay not. Pay absolutely sure from start. Wealth awaits every worker. Both sexes.

All ages.

Pile Ointment

Is a sure cure for Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia, Pa., sole proprietors, 330 North 2d St., S. F.

Literary Miscellany.

Only Easter Eggs!

Queer Conduct of a Miner Toward His Nephew.

"Old Uncle Flint," as he was known, was a very rich man in Pennsylvania, but very parsimonious and eccentric. He spent most of his time in his dingy office, and year in and year out sat there counting up figures and looking over musty papers, until he came to look like a worn piece of parchment himself. His nephews, Reuben, Seth and Tom, had no reason to have any great love for their old uncle, and on old Flint's sides there seemed to be little, if any regard, for them. When he was a young man, so it was told, he had been crossed in love, so, too, knew why, but he had never married, and now he appeared to think of nothing but making money.

He had sold an old mill to his nephews, who by dint of economy and hard work managed to meet their monthly payments, though there was often but little left them when this was done. Their uncle never offered them any assistance and was as exacting of every penny due him as if they had been strangers.

One Easter, however, what was their surprise to receive from him some Easter eggs—some apiece—and for Reuben and Seth, who were married, one each for their wives and children. They were gaily ornamented, contained only one of the old man's treasures and the eggs were carefully laid away on the mantelpiece, where they could be seen if it should happen to call.

Tom was the youngest of the brothers and it was thought that if any of them was with favor in the old man's eye, it was he. The young man had more regard for his uncle than both his brothers combined, and they had become a little jealous of him, and were wont when they were hard pressed for money, to insist him with trying to get into the good graces of the old man with a view of being handsomely remembered in his will, from which they feared their names might be omitted. Tom paid but little attention to his brothers' slurs other than to say he would much rather they should have all and he nothing, than that they should think so meanly of him. True, he went to see his uncle more frequently than they, who rarely saw him except on pay-day, but he pitied the lone man, and even liked him, in spite of his cleoseness and oddities.

"Tom," said old Flint one day when his nephew had dropped in to see him, "I hear you are going to John's Lawson's pretty often nowadays," and he had black eyes fixed themselves on Tom's face which reddened up to the roots of his curly hair, for somehow he felt uneasy under the close scrutiny of those piercing eyes. "But he answered truthfully.

"Yes, I do go there frequently, Nellie Lawson is an uncommonly sweet girl, and I meant to tell you that if she will have me I want to marry her."

"Don't go there any more, my boy," said old Flint, shaking his finger firmly at Tom. "It will do you no good. Tell her you have no money and expect none. Ha, ha" he exclaimed, more to himself than to his nephew, "see what she'll say then." With this cause a far-off look into his eyes, which for a moment lost their piercing, but his face still held its stern expression. "When I was your age, he resumed, "I was foolish, too—and big, I was, for the one we met she found I had no balance at the bank. That I was dissatisfied because I had less money than my rival, who laughed at me because of my poverty. Mark you, I can now count my dollars where he has one. Do you hear? Ha! Ha! Ha! the same dry chuckle again, the worn, wrinkled face became more serious, the thin lips closed tightly, and again a look of asterity came into his eye.

"I'm sorry—very sorry, boy, that you have fallen in love with a girl who is so poor. Why, I'm worth—I don't mean to go against you, remember, but it seems to me you had better wait until you are a little further along in the world before taking a wife. I know Nellie has a comfortable home now, and she had better remain there for the present. This is my advice and my will.

All the proud spirit within Tom's breast rose up in rebellion at this. He understood the full import of what his uncle had said to him the day before, some of which fell on his ears at the time. But, remembering where he was and to whom he was speaking, for Nellie's sake he checked the angry words that came to his lips.

"So I am to understand that you refuse your consent to our engagement?" said he, rising to take his leave, without making the slightest apology in his own behalf or waiting a moment in his determination.

"I think it is as well," was John Lawson's short answer, and he turned upon his newspaper, as if everything had been settled to his satisfaction. "Good-night, sad he.

"Good-night, said Tom, as he passed out to the street, where Nellie was anxiously awaiting him.

"If I am so sorry," she exclaimed when he had reported the interview. "I wish I could do something."

"So you can, darling, by keeping your promise to me and my wife, whatever comes," was his comforting assurance. The answer was his satisfaction, and when they parted they had mutually cheered each other.

The days that followed were happy ones for Tom Flint, and it was with a lighter heart and step that he went about the old mill to see to the wants of his men. Some trouble, for now he had some one to share his anxiety and make the burden lighter.

Uncle Flint began to fail in health and brothers saw him more than once in close conference with Lawyer Hopkins and with Mr. Wilkins the banker, and they did no doubt feel no little uneasiness lest old He would often be seen chuckling to himself as he rubbed his hands as his knees while thinking of his nephews, for Reuben and Seth had been more solicitous since their uncle had begun to show such signs of failing. Tom did not discontinue his visits, but went as before, for, notwithstanding the displeasure depicted on his uncle's face, he felt they were welcome, and he was warm spot in his heart for the lonely old man.

Nearly a year had passed and Tom had married Nellie in spite of her father's opposition—which, however, went no further than his protest—and had of increasing his uncle's displeasure. They had been settled in a neat little cottage on the high road leading to the mill about two months before Easter. The week before Uncle Flint was very busy making his customary preparations of the eggs intended for his nephews and their families. This time there was an addition to the number. This one was for Nellie, and when it came with Tom's, bearing her name, it gave him a little start, as, she said, as she handled the dainty shell.

"I am so glad. Want it nice of him to send us one, too, and how beautiful he thinks I am, I guess, for only like the ones he has sent me on previous Easters. I have worn them lilacs because they are so old and they always seem to be my eggs as." He was much pleased over this offering by his uncle Tom. "Walking smoothly along toward the mill he listened to his wife's prattle, occasionally he his wife, whatever might happen. They could wait and bear the storm. (Alas! there was no helping hand.)

Tom had but little attention to his brothers' slurs other than to say he would much rather they should have all and he nothing, than that they should think so meanly of him. True, he went to see his uncle more frequently than they, who rarely saw him except on pay-day, but he pitied the lone man, and even liked him, in spite of his cleoseness and oddities.

"Tom," said old Flint one day when his nephew had dropped in to see him, "I hear you are going to John's Lawson's pretty often nowadays," and his hard black eyes fixed themselves on Tom's face which reddened up to the roots of his curly hair, for somehow he felt uneasy under the close scrutiny of those piercing eyes. "But he answered truthfully.

"Yes, I do go there frequently. Nellie Lawson is an uncommonly sweet girl, and I meant to tell you that if she will have me I want to marry her."

"Don't go there any more, my boy," said old Flint, shaking his finger firmly at Tom. "It will do you no good. Tell her you have no money and expect none. Ha, ha" he exclaimed, more to himself than to his nephew, "see what she'll say then." With this cause a far-off look into his eyes, which for a moment lost their piercing, but his face still held its stern expression. "When I was your age, he resumed, "I was foolish, too—and big, I was, for the one we met she found I had no balance at the bank. That I was dissatisfied because I had less money than my rival, who laughed at me because of my poverty. Mark you, I can now count my dollars where he has one. Do you hear? Ha! Ha! Ha! the same dry chuckle again, the worn, wrinkled face became more serious, the thin lips closed tightly, and again a look of asterity came into his eye.

"I'm sorry—very sorry, boy, that you have fallen in love with a girl who is so poor. Why, I'm worth—I don't mean to go against you, remember, but it seems to me you had better wait until you are a little further along in the world before taking a wife. I know Nellie has a comfortable home now, and she had better remain there for the present. This is my advice and my will.

All the proud spirit within Tom's breast rose up in rebellion at this. He understood the full import of what his uncle had said to him the day before, some of which fell on his ears at the time. But, remembering where he was and to whom he was speaking, for Nellie's sake he checked the angry words that came to his lips.

"So I am to understand that you refuse your consent to our engagement?" said he, rising to take his leave, without making the slightest apology in his own behalf or waiting a moment in his determination.

"I think it is as well," was John Lawson's short answer, and he turned upon his newspaper, as if everything had been settled to his satisfaction. "Good-night, said he.

"Good-night, said Tom, as he passed out to the street, where Nellie was anxiously awaiting him.

"If I am so sorry," she exclaimed when he had reported the interview. "I wish I could do something."

"So you can, darling, by keeping your promise to me and my wife, whatever comes," was his comforting assurance. The answer was his satisfaction, and when they parted they had mutually cheered each other.

The days that followed were happy ones for Tom Flint, and it was with a lighter heart and step that he went about the old mill to see to the wants of his men. Some trouble, for now he had some one to share his anxiety and make the burden lighter.

Uncle Flint began to fail in health and brothers saw him more than once in close conference with Lawyer Hopkins and with Mr. Wilkins the banker, and they did no doubt feel no little uneasiness lest old He would often be seen chuckling to himself as he rubbed his hands as his knees while thinking of his nephews, for Reuben and Seth had been more solicitous since their uncle had begun to show such signs of failing. Tom did not discontinue his visits, but went as before, for, notwithstanding the displeasure depicted on his uncle's face, he felt they were welcome, and he was warm spot in his heart for the lonely old man.

Nearly a year had passed and Tom had married Nellie in spite of her father's opposition—which, however, went no further than his protest—and had of increasing his uncle's displeasure. They had been settled in a neat little cottage on the high road leading to the mill about two months before Easter. The week before Uncle Flint was very busy making his customary preparations of the eggs intended for his nephews and their families. This time there was an addition to the number. This one was for Nellie, and when it came with Tom's, bearing her name, it gave him a little start, as, she said, as she handled the dainty shell.

"I am so glad. Want it nice of him to send us one, too, and how beautiful he thinks I am, I guess, for only like the ones he has sent me on previous Easters. I have worn them lilacs because they are so old and they always seem to be my eggs as." She

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF ARCHDIOCESE.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

— A new Bishopric is to be established in Aguascalientes, N. M., by order of his Holiness the Pope, at the recent Consistory.

— His Grace the Most Rev. Dr. Carr, Archbishop of Melbourne, received the Pallium from the hands of the Holy Father on the Feast of St. Patrick.

— Amongst the recent visitors to Lourdes have been Mr. and Mrs. Michael Davitt. "Who hope," says the Journal de Lourdes, "to see them here again in August with their friend the Archbishop of Cashel."

— Most Rev. John McCarthy, Bishop of Cloyne, in order to attest his sincere admiration for Father Daniel Kelleher, the unprincipled friend of the Irish tenant farmers, has bestowed upon him the appointment of Canon in his diocese.

land, and the attitude of the Irish clergy on the Irish question, the Pope has charged Cardinal Simeoni to make thorough inquiry of the whole matter, and draft instructions for Irish Bishops.

— The injunction sent out by Bishop Junger of Nesqually Diocese, Washington Territory, praying that the United States military authorities be restrained from encroaching upon the lands of the Catholic Mission at Vancouver, has been dismissed. Bishop Junger has now entered suit for the possession of the land, and the case will be tried upon its merits at the next term of the court.

— We ask the prayers of all our pious readers for the repose of the soul of Edward D. Dalton, who died on Good Friday last in this city. Deceased was a most exemplary Catholic; being a member of the Blessed Virgin's Sodality, of St. Mary's Conference of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and the Catholic Young Men's Mutual Aid Association. His funeral took place on Easter Sunday, and we sincerely hope that it was in truth a Resurrection-feast for his faithful soul.

— Is it not somewhat singular to see so many Protestant sects celebrating the festival of Easter, when the last "revising" committee of the Protestant bible expunged the word "Easter" from their spurious scriptures! In this instance, at least, Catholic example is more powerful than the protests of Protestant preachers—hence Easter will continue to be observed regardless entirely of the bible—man without faith left in or taken out of the bogus sectarian bible.

— News comes from London this week that there is a strong emigration movement being organized there to establish English colonies in the neighborhood of Los Angeles, and to induce settlers to go to Southern California. Several English sects are canvassing the idea of buying tracts of land upon which to build churches, while at the same time selling out land in parcels to sectarian Christians. If the Convention be true there will be increased emigration from Ireland. There is great distress throughout England among the working classes, and emigration agents have no trouble in getting up shiploads of skilled workmen to emigrate. In the mean time, it may well be asked, can not much of this land be secured for Catholic colonies if some effort is made in that direction!

— Right Rev. Alfred A. Curtis, Bishop of Wilmington, which comprises the State of Delaware and the Eastern shores of Maryland and Virginia, preached recently in St. Matthew's Church, Washington City, D. C., and in the course of his sermon he thus manifested that spirit of self-sacrifice which is peculiar to ecclesiastics in the one true Church. "I believe," said the Bishop Curtis, "to be the Bishop of the poorest See in this country. There may be a vicariate as poor as my diocese, but as yet it is simply a vicariate, and I thank God that if I am to be a Bishop that I am the Bishop of a poor diocese. I thank God that I was born poor, will live poor, and die poor. Had I been born rich, with all the luxuries and pleasures of life around me, I would probably have been lost." What a lesson for the gold-grasping Catholics of every community! A Prelate proud of his poverty! How such sanity sentiments help to elevate the true faith and add to God's greater ragged on the mass, poor, partner to use more spiritual blessings, and come under the same spiritual censures. How different it is among our separated brethren where "sanctity" is recognized by the purple and fine linen, but there is no room for the ragged among the Reformed religions.

— Protestant preachers are proverbially the most helpless human beings in the midst of danger. They are no good to themselves nor anybody else. This fact is well illustrated by the following anecdote related in an Eastern magazine:

A minister crossing the ocean was so unfortunate as to be caught in a severe gale on his voyage out. The water was exceedingly rough, and the ship persistently buried herself in the sea. The rolling was constant, and at last the clergyman got thoroughly frightened. He believed they were destined for a watery grave. He asked the captain if he could not have prayers. The captain took him by the arm and led him down to the forecastle, where the tars were singing and swearing. "There," said he, "when you hear them cursing you may know there is no danger."

He went back feeling better; but the storm increased his alarm. Disconsolate and unassisted he managed to stagger to the forecastle again. The ancient mariners were swearing as ever. "Sculpins," he said, as he crawled into his berth; "a sympathetic wife, after taking us from a wet deck, "Sculpins, Bound Girl Boy is coming up!"

A Presbyterian Paper on Easter.

Presbyterianism may be styled the religion of prejudice. Its so-called Christianity comprises a mixture of the crankiness of Calvin with the bigotry of Baliol. Each one of its preachers is a modern Bergetton—every man has his hob, outside of which there is no truth, justice, honesty or holiness in the world. This is Presbyterianism pure and simple.

The Presbyterian organ in this city is the incubus, and it is a good representative of the rancor, venom and bitter prejudice which forms the only virtues of any value in the composition of a Presbyterian preacher. Whenever it alludes to the Catholic Church it gratifies its Satanic spleen by using the word "Romish," and whenever it speaks of Catholic festivals it waxes wrathy in fanatical fury at the foolishness and idolatry—featuring if the silly Romish priests add their more silly worshippers! Such is the Church of Christ in the purblind vision of pharisaical Presbyterianism!

The Herald knows no religion save that which partakes of the crudities of Calvin—the murderer of Servetus, the inhuman debauchery and immorality of John Knox, one of the murderers of Rizzio; and, if it had away in San Francisco, it would imagine Christianity consisted also in Calvin's 1537 Reformation, where even the capital crime of the murder of an innocent Catholic was condoned by Presbyterian "saints" of the John Knox type as "a just act, and most worthy of all praise."

Holding such views, diametrically opposed to the teaching of Christ, we Catholics need not wonder if the followers of Calvin and Knox in our day vent their venom against our Catholic Church and try to cover it with the slime of their calumny. A true Presbyterian is the slave of prejudice. He lives in a groove not wide enough to permit a single atom of God's grace to enter; his heart is a hard lump of bigotry as black as it is base; and, when he dies, his last hope is that no "Romish" priests or people may be permitted to enter the damned roof "mansion" prepared—as he egotistically believes—for Presbyterians from the very beginning!

We are never surprised, therefore, when we open the Herald and find therein a fanatical faulfide fired at the Catholic Church, well knowing the virulent nature of the system of sectarianism from which it emanates. Hence we were not surprised to read in last week's Herald an article on Easter, which took the regular Simon-pure Puritanical Presbyterian view of that august Christian festival, by throwing doubts upon its authenticity and its mode of celebration.

Presbyterianism is the religion of gloom. It is a species of long-faced sectarianism just suited to Puritans afflicted with jaundice! Cold, stern and selfish, it has no place in its bigoted breast for that charity which believes for its fellow-man without, but it is merely as atomless nothingness in the sight of God! Hide-bound and hypocritical—it thinks itself the essence of consistent sanctity, and in its jaundiced eye every man outside its paw-line lacks the religious cerebrum which is patented solely by the Presbyterian "class!"

Is it any wonder then, that Presbyterians should fail to realize the sublime and supernatural spiritual joy which always accompanies the recurrence of Easter in the hearts of all true disciples of the gloriously-risen God! Those who are corporeally blind cannot see, and—in the same manner—those who have destroyed their spiritual vision by error and prejudice, can have no appreciation whatever of the superb supernatural sights seen through the eye of Faith, by the children of the true Church of Christ, as they follow Him, year after year, from the Crib at Bethlehem to His Resurrection from the tomb at Easter.

It is this that means love for libelling the Catholic Church—which is the result of Presbyterian intolerance—this Occident regales its readers with this specimen of literary abomination:

> Because the Romish church fosters idolatry and the taking-money and nonsense of her priests and more silly worshipers, even in this intelligent city, pretending to have for year by year, the body of our Lord alive in state, there is no reason that Presbyterians should be therefore example of their Scotch two fathers and refuse to join in the broken revelation, because "The Lord is Risen."

If this silly sectarian scribe who sanctioned the foregoing silly slander out of his silly head, had reflected for a moment before commencing such a silly act of supersoulfly, he would have remembered that had the diabolical envy of Calvin and Knox become supreme, there would be no Christian God left for man's adoration. The god of Calvin and Knox was more of a Demon than a Deity. Their god was born to blight man's life while the real God designed to bless. Calvin's God was nachrisian, undoubtedly sub-ordinate, while the God of Christianity is the difference between the base and the true, the counterfeit and the real, the man-made ideal of Presbyterian bloodthirsty bigotry, and that Most High and Holy God whom Catholics adore as He appears really and truly in the most august Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist!

There is no "pretense" whatever—nothing Occident—concerning the reality of the Lord's Real Presence in Catholic churches, because "pretense" has been believed in by all the whole Catholic world for more than eighteen centuries, ever since the Lord hopped of our Lord. Thousands of martyrs, have died proclaiming their faith in this doctrine, and thousands more are ready to die for it if necessary even in this twentieth century. Clearly, then, the word "pretense" is merely the outpuffing of the gutted prejudice of Presbyterianism, and it will not pass current in any Christian community.

When murderous hearted men like Calvin and Knox undertake to form a Deity for their followers to worship, they naturally endow their man-made divinity with all the attributes most prominent in their own characters. Hence the natural result is that Presbyterianism is a most repulsive system of religion in the eyes of all large-souled and liberal-minded men among the non-Catholic element of every civilized nation, and even men who have been raised under its cold, cheerless, unchartable and unchristian influences have borne testimony to its baneful influence upon their lives.

And such is the sallow faced, sullen, ungenerous, saturnine and Satanic system of sectarianism which has the hardihood to call itself the church of Christ, founded on earth! What a scene for Christian contemplation! A gorilla mocking God! A murderer mocking the agonies of a martyr! A Nero fiddling while his victims writhed on the funeral pyre! Protestantism has many ills, but among the worst cancers that cover its leprous carcass there is one huge blotch which is blacker and more venomous than all the rest, and that is the pustule of Presbyterianism.

Popular Condemnation of Coercion.

Judging by the numerous expressions of the people of America, England, Scotland, Ireland and other portions of the globe in condemnation of the proposed Tory measure of Coercion towards Ireland, it may be united with certainty that if such a stringent measure is applied to the Irish people, the Tory party in England will be limited from secured Home Rule for Ireland.

So ominous is the Coercion bill to the English democracy, who hitherto have not been active in their friendship for Ireland—that vast mass meetings were held in several of the largest towns throughout England last week, at which tens of thousands of people proclaimed upon hostility to that drastic measure as destructive of every right to which civilized man is entitled from his fellow-man.

The Pall Mall Gazette in laying before its readers the latter injustice which such a measure would work against the people of Ireland, by depriving them of the right of trial by jury, truly styles this measure a flagrant violation of the ordinary principles of even the elements of English common law. "It is a fraud," say the London journal, "and English people can easily form some idea of the essentially fraudulent character of the proposal by asking themselves what confidence they would have in the administration of justice in this country if it were the law that policemen should always be tried by a jury of Irish-men, Protestant lecturers by Catholic jurors, and Social Democrats, by rabid Tories. The essential principle of trial by jury is to prevent the administration of justice by filling the jury box with men who are drawn from the same social, religious and political strata as the man in the dock. To alter this is to destroy the spirit of the institution while paying hypocritical homage to its outward form."

Against the operations of such an unjust law every voice of the people of all lands should be raised, so that the spirit of "equal and exact justice to all men" may not be trampled in the dust whenever England desires to punish Ireland for daring to persevere in her aspirations for freedom.

Conduct in the House of God.

Last week while looking over a copy of the Catholic Penny Magazine, published in Ireland fifty-three years ago, we came across the following rules for the guidance of Catholics in the House of God, and as we know from actual experience that there are many Catholics who do not observe that reverential adoration due to God in the Real Presence, we print them so as to show such careless Catholics how particular their progenitors were in their personal appearance and their conduct whilst they remained in the sanctuary in which Almighty God is ever present:

Catholics who believe in the Real Presence of Jesus Christ in the Holy Eucharist, cannot show too much respect to the Temple of God. A few practical hints on this subject may be better than a dissertation on an admitted truth.

1st. Persons whilst in the church should as much as possible avoid coughing, spitting and all manner of noise.

2nd. They should be remarkably clean in their dress and person, and avoid the slightest appearance of foppery or indiscretion.

3rd. They should look only on the altar or at the priest, and recollect that it is to speak to God and not to man they appear there.

4th. Whilst they appear in a respectful posture, they should avoid all ridiculous gestures or forms.

5th. All who can read should use their prayer books, unless when meditation may be preferable.

6th. Mothers should take care not to disturb the congregation by bringing children under the age required.

7th. Catholics should take care never to be a respectful posture.

8th. Children serving at Mass should not be allowed to answer the priest in a burlesque manner, but in an edifying way.

9th. Communicants should approach and retire from the altar in the most recollected manner, and also to and from the Confessional in a similar way.

10th. It is an edifying sight to see all stand when the Gospel and Creed are read, and all kneel together at the same time when they come to the words, "and was made man," etc.

11th. Communicants should take care to hold the communion cloth in a proper manner, and on no account turn out of the church in haste after approaching the holy altar.

—A Cork colleagues of the 11th gives the Cork Herald as an authority for the statement that the suspicious vessel seen off Youghal is the Dalmar, which left an American port ten days ago. A correspondent says that it is part of the Government's plot to treat the people to a scare in order to assist in passing the Coercion bill, and that the vessel will cruise between Queenstown and Youghal and try to entrap men to assist in the landing of dynamite, when Government agents will be ready to seize them. Mr. Kennedy asserts that the plot was originated at Dublin Castle.

A Catholic Mother Promotes Charity.

One of those noble mothers which shine like so many brilliant gems in the coronet of the Catholic Church, writes to the Mentor this week suggesting a system of charity which can be productive of much good if adopted by other Catholic mothers similarly situated. The plan which this thoughtful lady has outlined can best be told by the following extract from her communication:

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR.

Dear Sir—I beg your pardon for thus trespassing on your time which I know is that of all the readers of that household treasure—the Star Of Monitor. My justification is that I want to know the address of the secretary of some charitable society, and from long reading I—exclude that the Editor of the Monitor has the cause of charity greatly at heart and will be willing to give a short space in his columns for this purpose. I have read in your paper of the noble-hearted ladies of some other mother's clothing with other donations, and have heard many comments in the young, mostly children's—I know of thing, would take real pleasure in sending them where they would make a little lighter the burden on the overtaxed shoulders of some poor widow, father, brother, having to earn bread for her half-clad children.

I would also like to ask other Catholic mothers, who read our dear MONITOR, to join with us, and, if they have poor working mothers, or children, to have their poor working mothers, or children, to have their clothing with other donations, and have one to be greater H, for Christ's sake, we clothe the poor little clothed lamb of some other mother's darling in the same clothing we wore by one in the country where none are rich, yet none very poor, and there being none in which to carry alive such things, in a few years there is great accumulation of clothing of all kinds and if you will but give the name and address of a secretary to whom such donations will be acceptable, it would be a great relief to all such who have some things that are worn or old fashioned to dire want. The story of her mother from affluence to poverty and death, told by a correspondent of the Chicago Citizen.

The story of her mother was so very simple, and it shows that she is one of the noble-hearted ladies of the Sacred Heart. Her husband, Sir William Wilde, now dead many years, was an eminent surgeon in Dublin. He made a great fortune and lost it by his practice, but unfortunately for them he left no life insurance, and died a poor man. He bought two estates in Ireland for Wilde and his wife, the rent of which he paid $1,500 yearly. For some time after his death, she received the rent of the Wilde. She was able to live comfortably and to keep her daughter at the best education that could be procured, but the land war began, and now for six years she has not received a farthing of rent.

Are sure that the public in general, rather than of Ireland, will be interested in the sad distress in which Speranza is at present. It was in a letter to her that I learned of the sad that she and her mother reached so low down as to be obliged to hire the money in which she had for years spent in charity for hidden in hunger, and it was remarkable that the day I read the letter I was going to do, and if they are going to allow me to do so, I will write to the Sisters of Charity to see what they can do for her.

Speranza is a poetess of no mean order, and I know that many people would be willing to pay a dollar for a book of her poetry, if it could be published. Father Doyle, of Dublin, will be pleased to publish it.

Immediately after the ordination Father Gallagher commenced his pastoral labors in Dunsyngan and Lisdoe, and he continued his labors until 1860, when he became assistant to the late lamented Dr. Blake, pastor of the Irish congregation, as he generously offered his services to the Archbishop of Dublin, and was ordained in Gaelic rite on Sunday, July 29th, in the year, when the deceased brother, Rev. Hugh Gallagher, was ordained to the priesthood, and to which he was appointed assistant.

In the latter part of that Father Gallagher was appointed by Lord Harrington, ward guardian of the Liverpool workhouse, and there were large numbers of Catholics among the inmates, and he was enabled to minister to their spiritual wants.

In the following year Father Gallagher was of the bench sheets at Ashton, Power county Wales, and remained there for two years, when he was appointed to Holyhead, on the Island of Anglesey, Wales, where he remained until 1870, when he was appointed to Holywell, in the county of Flint, Wales, where he continued for a few years, when the deceased brother, Rev. Hugh Gallagher, died, and he was appointed to succeed him as pastor of Holywell, and he remained there for a few years, when he succeeded brother, Rev. Hugh Gallagher, as chaplain to the convent of the Sacred Heart, Roehampton, London, where he remained

Farm and Home.

France's War Pigeons.

General Boulanger has recently given prizes to the best trainers of carrier pigeons in the department of the Seine. Pigeon training in France has become a branch of the military service, and plenty of well-trained birds are to be found in the beautiful little establishments built for them. They are furnished with modern improvements that vulgar and ignorant pigeons could never appreciate. Among the pigeons now in possession of the Government are several veterans of the siege of Paris, and one among them is a genuine old hero. In 1870 this pigeon was sent from Paris in a balloon called Neptune, and was captured by the Prussians. Prince Frederick Charles sent him as a present to his mother, the Princess Charles of Prussia, who put him among her own collection of birds, where he was treated with all possible kindness. But he was a patriot. The bitter bread of exile did not agree with him. He flew away and reached his home in a pigeon house in the Hohenzerd Chefy. The owner of this establishment handed him over to the authorities, and he is now once more in the service of his native country.

Cleanliness and Health.

People who have no opportunity to enjoy sea bathing will be glad to know that a substitute exists, if we may so call it, in an invigorating solution whose strengthening effect can only be compared to a plunge in the surf. To wash pores this is recommended as an incomparable luxury and tonic. It cleanses the skin and stimulates it wonderfully, and leaves the flesh as firm and cool as marble. More than this, the sensation pervades the body from all odor of perspiration. Those in whom the secretion is suppressed will find relief by using a spoonful of the tincture in a basin of water and washing each part of the body as may be necessary.

May persons find great comfort and benefit from salt water baths, arranged in this way. A coffee cup of the fine distilled salt mixed with a gallon of water, and with a hair glove or coarse towel, the body thoroughly bathed with the mixture, rubbing till the body is aglow. Then follows an exhilaration akin to surf bathing. For a delicate child such a bath is recommended as speedily beneficial.

Good Order in the Kitchen.

Kitchen workers would save themselves millions of wasted steps if they would keep more of the weapons for carrying on their warfare within easy reach, on shelves and in cupboards arranged along the kitchen walls instead of carrying them back and forth from the pantry or storeroom every time they are used.

There should be open shelves for such articles as are not injured by exposure to the dust and dampness that are liable to prevail at times, and also closed shelves with horizontal flaps opening downwards.

Shelves of this kind have obvious advantages over drawers, or common cupboards.

No intelligent carpenter or other mechanic thinks of picking away the implements of his calling simply because they are not in actual use.

His idea of good order does not consist in keeping his tools out of sight, but rather in having them close at hand and ready to be taken up at a moment's notice.

The work of the kitchen should be managed like that of any other workshop or manufacturing establishment where the best results are obtained by employing the most skillful workers, by using the most modern and complete machinery, the sharpest tools tools and the most suitable materials. Broad winning is no mere essential to comfort and prosperity than broad making and broad saving.

The Nose as a Indication of Character.

Maj. Sophus Schack, an officer in the Danish army, on the subject of physiognomical indication, agrees with Aristotle in putting his faith in noses. He can make a good guess at a man's character from the size and build of his nose. A large nose, for instance, almost invariably indicates superior class and capacity for intrigue. It is a still more accurate index to mental qualities, for, belonging as it does at once to the most and least mobile portions of the face, it faithfully reflects the most fugitive movements of the mind. It is not till the intellectual faculties come into play that the nasal organ acquires its characteristics. Savages have no noses worthy of the name. Maj. Schack's observations lead him to conclude that a small and retrorse nose betokens cunning and fleeness; a straight and thin nose, taste and delicacy; an aquiline nose, judgment, reason and opinion; while a shapeless and of course nasal proboscis, almost always indicates intellectual dullness and want of "moral force."

At Home.

Don't entirely banish politeness from the home circle. We do not advocate an etiquette so rigid as to be burdensome. Yet it may be the means of teaching politeness to children. Those who have an instinctive politeness easily fall in with the rules of etiquette; but all have not this instinct. Boys are careless, rude, selfish, inconsiderate. These need discipline. To give this is not to lecture on the rules of good order or politeness. It must be instilled more by example than precept.

Just when the parents are careful to that it would be shown in public society should mark intercourse at home; and if husband and wife are courteous, children imbibe and practice it. Example is the great teacher in this line.

Feeding the Farmer.

The following from an exchange shows the way in which the farmers of this vicinity may be duped if they do not have a care. This time it is the "Wyo-Fomo Man." He sells upon a farmer to ask of his permission to exhibit to the farmers of the vicinity his new fence-wire stretcher upon his farm. In consideration for this privilege he will build for the farmer thirty or forty rods of good fence, whenever he may want it. All that he asks of the farmer is, to travel him, to go for the machine, not over three dollars. In order to have it all understood, the farmer is asked to sign a contract to the above things, written on a postal card, which the fence man sells in his spare time. After the machine arrives, a new man turns up to demand $200, the price of the machine. The farmer then learns to his astonishment that the "contract" for board, etc., that he thought he was signing, was really an order for the machine, at the price of $200. The last comer claims to be the attorney for the company making the machine, and by threats of bringing a suit in the United States Court forces some kind of a settlement of his fraudulent claim.

—100 Dozen One Dollar is temporarily connected with Hood's Sarsaparilla and no other medicine. A bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses, and will last a month, while others will scarcely last a month. Use only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Family Fun.

At the Breakfast Table.

"Ah, Mrs. Fogg," said the professor, placing the biscuits in front of him, "I never ignore your rolls, whatever else I may do."

"Indeed, professor, your words charm my soul. As the poet says: 'Every sarsin is filled with the sweet music of applause.' But I have noticed that there is one of my rolls for which you seem to have a chronic aversion."

"And that is, my dear madam?"

"The pay roll," responded the landlady, with a smile that reached over and behind the whole character of that is laughed.

A Congressional Annex.

"My dear," said a congressman to his daughter at breakfast, "wasn't young Brown here last night until 12 o'clock?"

"Yes, papa," she replied with a pretty little blush.

"Well, my dear, you should not permit it. It has been that way for several nights, hasn't it?"

"Yes, papa."

"Don't you know that is hardly the proper thing?"

"Yes, papa."

"Then why do you do it?" he asked impatiently.

"Because he wants to see me extra session."

Bill Nye's Cow.

"Going to ill health," says Bill Nye, "I will sell at my residence in town 29, range 15, west, according to government survey, one crushed rusty colored cow, aged six years. She is a good milker and is not afraid of the cars or anything else. She is a cow of undoubted courage and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a good boon. She is very much attached to her home at present, by reason of a trace chain, but she will be sold to any one who will agree to treat her right. She is one fourth shorthorn and three-fourths hyena. Purchaser must be identified. I will also throw in a double-barrelled shotgun, which goes with her. In May she generally goes away somewhere for a week or two, and returns with a tall, red calf, with long, wabbly legs. Her name is Rose, and I would prefer to sell her to a non-resident."

Crushed Hopes.

"Papa," she said softly and blushingly, "young Mr. Simpson is in the parlor and wishes to speak with you." Then she slunk into an easy chair and her heart beat so fiercely that it made the gas fixtures rattle. Presently the old man returned.

"Papa," she said, "did he—was he—did he want?" "He wanted to borrow $5," said the disappointed old gentleman.

A Milky Mistake.

A lady living near Baltimore, who is very deaf, stopped a milkman as he was passing the house the other day and asked him how much he charged for a quart of milk, and then put her ear trumpet to catch the reply. The man drew a quart of milk and emptied it into the trumpet, and the result has been that he has to give three miles out of his way to keep out of sight of the lady's son, who sits at the front door waiting for him to pass.

A Woman's Way.

An agent with three or four rugs in a strap had called at a house on National avenue and asked if the lady wanted any, anybody, when a woman called to him from the street:

"No use ringing there."

"Lody gosa?"

"They are too poor to buy rugs."

He was about to pass on, when a chamber window was raised, and a woman stuck her head out and said:

"I'll show you whether we are or not! I think a carpenter's wife is just as good as a drayman's wife, and has just as much money for fine things. Which is your best rug?"

"This one, ma'am—for night dollars."

"Hang it on the fence, where everybody can see it. Now take this twenty dollar bill and call at all the houses around here and ask for change. You won't get it, but I have the right amount to hand you when you come back. If you happen to say to you as you go around that this is the first eight-dollar rug you've sold within a mile of here I'll give you a piece of pie and a glass of milk."

Only by Reputation.

She—Have you read the article on Henry Clay in the December Century?

He—No, but I would like to very much.

She—You admire him, then?

He—I have never met him personally, but I have smoked a great many of his cigars.

A Cautious Major.

Several evenings ago Major Stofah went up on Sixteenth street to see a young lady to whom he has been very a tonitre for some months. She was not visible at first, and her visitor was left to pass the time as best he could. After various questions the lady remarked:

"You ain't contagious, are you?"

"Why, Johnny, what do you mean by that?" asked the Major, with an inward shiver. "I have been exposed to the cars all winter, and I don't think so."

The Major remained the rest of the evening, but hasn't been back since Lent began.

Cried in the Wrong Place.

An attendant at Mount Vernon, not long ago, found a lady weeping most bitterly and audibly, with her handkerchief at her eyes. He slipped up to her and said: "Are you in trouble, madam?"

"O, yes, sir," she sobbed.

"I saw you weeping."

"Ah," said she, "how can one help weeping at the home of the Father of his Country!"

"O, indeed, madam," said he, "that's not it. The tomb's over yonder. This is the ice-house!"

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that their complaints are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and we are now able to cure this curse of our race by the use of our simple applications made by inflating the nose. Send stamp for circular of Dr. Nasal Air Inhalant to A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 Wrightsville Avenue, Baltimore, Md. For special report Mr. Dixon, Sr., is staying at the Metropolitan Hotel, Toronto, Canada, for a short time. Sufferers should send for his genuine or call and see him. Consultation free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, bathe the parts affected freely with Perry Davis' PAIN KILLER. Taking also a teaspoonful in sugar and water 3 times a day, and you'll get relief at once and a cure after faithful use of this remedy. Pain-Killer Cures Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Diphtheria, Frost Bite.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS
THE DAY BREAKS A RUDE AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND.
INDEX OF 1879.
These bonds are shares in a loan, the interest of which is paid out in premiums three times yearly. Every bond is entitled to
Three Drawings Annually,
Until such and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bone after one of the following premiums, so there are
NO BLANKS.
Premiums 45 Premiums 150,000 equals Premiums 150,000
45 " 120,000 " 120,000
45 " 90,000 " 90,000
45 " 60,000 " 60,000
45 " 45,000 " 45,000
45 " 30,000 " 30,000
45 " 15,000 " 15,000
45 " 9,000 " 9,000
45 " 3,000 " 3,000
45 " 1,500 " 1,500
4,275 " 141 " 602,925
Together 4,650 premiums, amounting to 1,179,900
Premiums. The next redemption takes place on the FIFTEENTH OF APRIL.
And every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THAT DAY is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn on that day.
Out of every one hundred bonds, Messrs. Lorenzo, to the value of $5 will secure one of those bonds for the next drawing. Bonds payable in monthly instalments.
For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,
INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,
Jos Pulitzer St., corner of Way, New York City.
ESTABLISHED IN 1874.
Mr. Lorenzo Government Bonds are not to be confounded with any Lottery Bonds, and Lottery Bonds of the Government of Austria, and do not meddle with any of the laws of the United States.
N. B.—In writing please state that you saw this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

DOZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL Commission Merchants N. E. CORNER FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS, SAN FRANCISCO.

Tutt's Pills CURE Fever and Ague, Wind Colic, Billious Attacks. They produce regular, natural evacuations, a healthy appetite, and healthy business. Their gentle action, they should be in every household. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

OUR GEM ORGAN
Best organ in the world. Sent on 10 days' trial. Illustrated Catalogue free. Address, BEATTY, WASHINGTON, N. J.

TRUMBULL & BEEBE, Growers, Importers and Dealers in Seeds, Trees and Plants 419 & 421 Sansome Street, between City and Commercial, San Francisco.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD
"THE UNBROKEN FREIGHT GAUGE ROUTE."
COMMENCING FEBRUARY 10, 1889, AND UNTIL further notice, Sunday excepted, Ferry leaves and arrives at Market Street Ferry Depot, Marion street Wharf, as follows:

Leave S. F.	Leave Sausalito.	Arrive Lv. S. F.
7:00 a.m.	8:00 a.m.	8:50 a.m.
1:30 p.m.	2:30 p.m.	3:20 p.m.

Train connects at Sausalito with Ferry Leaves San Francisco at 7:45 a.m. and 1:45 p.m. daily, except Sundays.
Stages connect at Sausalito for White Sulphur Springs, Bolinas, Stinson Beach, Point Reyes, Olema, Tomales, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Ukiah, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Saratoga Springs, Blue Lakes, Upper Lake, Nevarro, Kelseyville, Soda Springs, Glenbrook, Calistoga, Napa, Sonoma, Glen Ellen, and Santa Rosa.
EXCURSION TICKETS from Sausalito to Mendocino, to Petaluma, $1 75; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $4; to Ukiah, $5.
EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only—to Petaluma, $1 50; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $4; to Ukiah, $5.
From San Francisco to Point Tiburon and San Rafael, week Days, 7:45, 8:45, 9:15, 11:00, 2:30 p.m., 4:15, 5:00, 6:15, 8:00, 10:00 p.m. 7:30 a.m., 11:00 a.m., 2:30, 4:15, 5:00, 6:15, 8:00, 10:00 p.m. Sundays—8:00, 9:00, 10:30, 11:30, 1:45, 3:45, 5:15, 6:45, 8:00, 9:30 p.m.
To and From Sausalito Ferry—Week Days, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 11:00 a.m., 12:45, 2:45, 4:00, 5:00, 6:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00 p.m. Sundays—8:00, 9:00, 10:00, 11:00 a.m., 1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 6:00, 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00 p.m.
PETER J. MOGLYNN, Gen. Pass & Tkt. Agt.
H. C. WHITING, Superintendent.
Ticket offices at Ferry, 222 Montgomery street and No. 2 New Montgomery st.

San Francisco & North Pacific R. R.
"THE UNBROKEN FREIGHT GAUGE ROUTE."
(COMMENCING MONDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1886, AND UNTIL further notice, 6:15 a. m. train on each day of the week (except Sundays) will leave Tiburon for San Francisco, at 6:30 a. m. daily.
PETER J. MOGLYNN, Gen. Pass & Freight Agt.
H. C. WHITING, Superintendent.
Ticket office at Ferry, 222 Montgomery street and No. 2 New Montgomery st.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD
STEAMER JAMES M. DONAHUE LEAVES San Francisco and connects with Trains at Sonoma Daily, except Sundays.
4.00 Fare to Sonoma (round trip) from Washington street Wharf, for the town of Sonoma. Glen Ellen and Way Points.
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.
$.15 Sonoma only, from Washington street Wharf, 10:30 a.m. Return leave Sonoma 3:30 p.m.
$.25 Sonoma, Glen Ellen and Way Points. Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 00 to Glen Ellen, $1 50.
PETER J. MOGLYNN, Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agt.
H. C. WHITING, Superintendent.
Ticket office at Ferry, 222 Montgomery street, and No. 2 New Montgomery street.

QUICK TIME AND CHEAP RATES
To Eastern and European Cities
Via the Great Trans-continental All-rail Route
SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.
(Pacific System.)
Daily Express and Tourist Sleeping Cars make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East.
New York & New Orleans
with the several Steamer Lines
TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.
PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS
attached to Overland Express Trains.
THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS
are run daily with Overland Emigrant Trains.
Emigrant Sleeping Cars Rented to Third class Cars.
For information, rates, etc., call at Company's Offices, where passengers may also secure Sleeping Car tickets, choice of routes, etc.
RAILROAD LANDS
For Sale on Reasonable Terms.
Apply to, or address,
W. H. MILLS, Land Agent, C.P.R.R., S.F.
JEROME MADDEN, Land Agent, S.P.R.R., S.F.
A. N. TOWNE, General Manager.
T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt.
No. 1 Sansome St., San Francisco, Cal.

REMOVAL NOTICE.
McCORMICK BROS., Book and Job Printers, In Consequence of the Great Increase in their Business HAVE REMOVED To Larger Premises, 410 SANSOME STREET, 410 (Corner of Commercial.) Where they will run their presses By Steam, and where they will be provided with every facility than ever for doing all kinds of Book and Job Printing NEATLY, CHEAPLY AND QUICKLY.

RUPTURE
CURED IN 60 DAYS. No Cure, No Pay. Dr. J. A. SHERMAN, Sole Inventor, 691 Broadway, New York. Sherman's Patent Improved Elastic Truss is the best invention for the cure of Rupture. It is worn with perfect ease and comfort by all classes, and is pronounced by all who have used it to be the most wonderful and successful cure ever discovered. Its wonderful curative powers are due to the fact that it is the only Truss that will hold the rupture in the most difficult cases, and at the same time it is so easy that it can be worn by children or persons of the most delicate constitution. Sent by mail to any part of the world. Circulars free. Beware of imitations. Genuine only at 691 Broadway, New York.

DROPSY TREATED FREE.
Dropsy treated free. Dropsy and its complications with the most wonderful remedies discovered in the world. Three to five days' treatment free. Dropsy, Heart Disease, Liver Complaint, Kidney Disease, Rheumatism, Nervous Debility, Fits, Spasms, Sleeplessness, Female Weakness, Loss of Flesh, Appetite, Strength, Nervous Prostration, Loss of Memory, Wakefulness, Pain in Back, Side and Limbs, Pimples, Blotches, Salt Rheum, Eczema, Ulcers, Boils, Tumors, Piles, Fistula, Gravel, Stone in the Bladder, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Brain Disease, Epilepsy, Fits, Spasms, Sleeplessness, Female Weakness

Future of the Church in America.

RELIGION'S INFLUENCE FOR PUBLIC GOOD.

PROTESTANT PREJUDICES RAPIDLY DISAPPEARING.

The Church the Best Ally of the State.

A Catholic writer in the Buffalo Express, answering a bitter attack by the Protestant Bishop Coxe, 1887 his views with much force and earnestness. He says:

In the near future America will occupy the highest rank among the nations of the earth. One of the many qualities which mark a nation destined to reach the highest eminence is a willingness to learn. Nations, like individuals, cease to be progressive as soon as they imagine that they have attained the highest degree of perfection. Progressive civilization cannot surmount the haughty barrier of pride; but it seeks new and more favorable paths, leaving the proud ones in possession of their stagnant stupidity. To a keen observer of national character, nation it must be a source of pleasure to notice that genuine Americans are ever willing to learn and to improve themselves. They are sympathetic and generous; and they would be glad to see everybody situated as happy as themselves. And it is certain that if the Church can devote herself principally to the spiritual welfare of her children her power for good must be incalculably greater than were it under the old system. During the last eighteen centuries the Catholic Church has nowhere enjoyed such true freedom as she may enjoy in America. And if she does her duty she will undoubtedly achieve her most brilliant success in this country. Her faith never changes; yet there is a continual development in her organization towards a higher perfection. Liberty is the place where a new age and higher civilization is developing itself both in Church and State.

A few words more about some of Bishop Coxe's latest statements. It is positively painful to see how an educated man tries to torture the plain and pure teachings of the Catholic Church into a bungle of revolting bloss. The prohibition, he held by St. Ligori, and approved by the Church, means this: When two opinions are equally probable or nearly equally probable, either opinion may be followed as long as there is doubt as to the existence of the law. When there is certitude as to the existence of the law, or when one opinion is notably more probable than the other, the most probable opinion must always be followed. A similar doctrine holds good in civil law, with this difference, that the civil law is less strict than the Catholic theology. Thus there is some doubt as to the guilt of an accused person, the opinion of one juryman is as good as that of any one of the other eleven. Yet nobody thinks of accusing the eleven of perjury. Perjury, in the language of the gamesters and all of a chapter of Catholic theology.

The Parliament of Paris in 1762 was far from being composed exclusively of Roman Catholics." It was composed of a number of members of the Jansenist sect, bitterly opposed to the Jesuits. When the Jesuit confessor of Louis XV. refused the Sacraments to the King because the latter would not dismiss Mme. de Pompadour, the then reigning mistress of the Bourbon family in Spain, Italy and France joined the alliance against the Jesuits, and with revived in hand compelled Clement XIV. to dissolve the Society of Jesus. In the brief relaxing issued to that effect the Pope said:

"The aim we end at is, in the first place, to secure the advantage of the Church and the tranquility of the nations; then to bring aid and consolation to the exiled members of the Society of Jesus, whose person we love in the Lord, in order that henceforth, being delivered from all that henceforth, have terminated others, and from many decrees and accusations, they may the more fruitfully cultivate the vineyard of the Lord, and more abundantly work for the salvation of souls."

SITUATION WANTED

As porter in a store; can do anything to suit an employer. P. CASEY, 1182 Bush st., San Francisco.

A Tribute to Abbe Kneipp Genius were the sweet sacrifice of Liverpool and Edinburgh of Kneipp Tonic Bitters, Kneipp Tablets, Pharmaceutical Chemists, and Proprietors of Jensen's Capsules Tablets. These plasters are the only reliable medicinal and pharmaceutic as sedic, rheumatism, and fevers of nervous affections by oxalate.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—The death is announced of Sister Mary Angela O'Hara, of the Convent of Belfast, who died at the Convent of the Sisters of Nazareth, Nazareth House, Hammersmith, London. After the Requiem Mass, the remains were carried by the Sisters to the Convent cemetery, adjoining the cell-sailing chapel, the community, Mgr. and Mrs. Connolly (brother-in-law of the deceased, M. P. Kane, Antrim, Esq., and by relatives of the inmates, old people, and children.

CLARE.—The Ennis Board of Guardians have passed a resolution condemning the Government for the removal of The O'Donnellan Blake Foster from the Commission of the Peace, and calling on the Catholic National nominees in the county of Clare to throw up the Commission of the Peace as a mark of their disapproval of the tyrannical action of the Government towards one of their body. Mr. Foster was present at a National League meeting, and this led to his removal from the Commission.

There is more land now being broken up in the counties of Limerick and Clare than for years past, and it is hoped that the tillers of the soil will be left undisturbed.

CORK.—It is said the "honor" of knighthood is about to be conferred on Alderman Scott, J. P., of Cork.

The Very Rev. Canon Walsh, P. P., Coman, County Cork (Cloyne diocese), died on March 19th, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Mr. Glasser, Sub-Sheriff of Dublin, has sent Father Kelleher a cheque for £10 for the family of Hanlon, who was forwarded to death by the police. This was the sum amount which he received for his services in serving the arrie of mire fortas on Messrs. Dillon, Kearney, etc.

The Rev. T. Murray, P. P., has been presented with an address by the National Teachers of Drimdeagan on the occasion of his appointment to the parish of Donagh, County Cork, in succession to the late Rev. Canon Scannell.

DUBLIN.—The recent death is announced of the Rev. Thomas Keating, S. J., formerly rector of Clongowes Wood College. Father Keating died at St. Aloysius College, New South Wales.

The Rev. Thomas O'Dwyer, P. P., Enniskerry, died on March 19th. The deceased clergyman had resigned the rights of eighty two years, of which fifty-four were spent in the sacred ministry. During half a century he labored among the people of Enniskerry, and his labors from had abundantly in works that remain to tell of the zeal and piety of the devoted priest, who has passed to his reward. The beautiful church, presbytery, and schools of the picturesque village were erected by him, and it will be remembered that one of the first public acts of his Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, after his return from Rome, was in connection with Enniskerry Church.

Sir Edward Guinness having turned his brewery into a company, as about to be in Ireland and settle in Norfolk, where he has rented Sanacre Hall for three years from Sir Alfred Corck.

DONEGAL.—The tenants on the estate of David J. Gilleland have adopted the "Plan of Campaign." They ask an abatement of only 25 per cent., and the property was that no reduction would be granted. The tenants held a meeting, and every man of them, except three, lodged his money in the hands of trustees. On March 9, at an early hour, horses were blown as a signal that the land court was in session. The "scissors" was to be ploughed. At noon the plough were at work, and two hours the land was finished. There were engaged at the same time 80 stalwart men with implements along the farm. Early in the morning a procession was formed, and the crowd marched to the Sessions House in the Isle of Doagh, where a meeting was held. Cheers were given for the "Plan of Campaign," the men who joined it, and Mr. Dillon, Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Parnell, and the Irish Party.

DERRY.—Mr. Justin McCarthy took the oath and kissed for the city of London-derry, in the House of Commons, on March 18th, while Sir Charles Lewis tried to look on indifferently over his sneer and high-or civilization is developing itself both in Church and State.

In Derry, on St. Patricks Day, the Nationalist procession was attacked in a cowardly manner. The police allowed a crowd of the Orange party to assault at the corner of Fountain street, and the party kept waving emblems at the processionists as they passed. When the band came to this point showers of stones were thrown, and several persons, including constables, were knocked down. The police at long has turned and charged the crowd back. At the present season the Grand Jury granted a substantial sum to Mr. O'Hanlon, M. P., for evidence in connection by an Orange mob at the same point, but notwithstanding this a second or a similar character was allowed to assemble with the men described. The procession was attacked at other points, and a cry of "Kick Biddy" caused remonstrance for a time. The marshals of the procession exercised themselves to the utmost of their power towards the preservation of public peace. Three wanton attacks have created a little alarm. It is worthy of note that the Orange party are now in a minority. The corn and flax millerf Mr. James Magee, situated near the town of Moneymore, were discovered to be in flames. The fire was first discovered by Mr. Hugh Hegan, proprietor of the body, who at once gave the alarm. In a short time a large number of the inhabitants had gathered, and every possible effort was made to subdue the conflagration. The flames, however, had got too great a hold on the premises, and very little could be done. The mills, which were entirely driven by water power, were well stocked with corn and flax from the various farmers of the surrounding district, and this, together with the machinery, and building was entirely consumed. The premises were not insured.

GALWAY.—The village of Inishtown, the birthplace of the Land Leagues, on March 17th, was turned into a great demonstration held to emphasize a loyal Nationalism in the Land Leagues. Mr. P. J. B. Daly, solicitor, Ballinrobe, who retired from the bench a few years ago, presided. The meeting had also for its object the support of the National Leagues in the neighborhood. Some thousands of Connaught people assembled beneath the old Land League flag to meet the popular member for the northern division of the county, who travelled there from Dublin to address them. Mr. Crilly was followed in his drive from Clarenaccity to the place of meeting by a few miles of policemen, well armed. The tenants who were evicted have all retaken possession of their holdings. On Monday of Mr. James Daly, accompanied by Mr. Daniel O'Connor, P. L. G., the chair was taken amidst loud applause, by the Rev. J. Cunnamon, P. P.

KERRY.—The inhabitants of the prosperous town of Tralee are fond of the fine and important section of the county Kerry, comprising the district of the Barony of Corcomroe, extending from Kenmare to the town of Sneem, and the correspondence. Most of the Barony of Dunkerrin is the south of Kerry, are to raise a railway from Kenmare to Sneem. Mr. Hoffman, estimating the position of the south Kerry with the Sisters of Cork and with the Island of Ireland.

LIMERICK.—At the meeting of the Longford Board of Guardians, on March 16th, Mr. Joseph Moore presiding, the usual business was transacted. The Board resolved to offer land of Ballinamuck, were found at the Otter fort were from the estate of Robert O Brien, solicitor, of Mahill in reference to the Guardian minority, the Sub-Commissioners, recently sitting at Longford, reduced their rents 52 per cent. in many places.

LIMERICK.—A step has been taken by a large number of Limerick newspapers, which must command the approbation of all right-minded people. The leading spirits met, and, after discussing with some members of religious orders the question of the sale of trashy English periodicals in the city, agreed to resolution expressing not to sell any of the objectionable publications in future.

It was a pleasing spectacle on St. Patrick's morning, to see the Catholic soldiers of the 1st Battalion Royal Munster Fusiliers, headed by Carr Bands—brass and reed—marching to many hundreds strong, and marched in most harmonious manner to the Cathedral, where they were joined by a year's rent, less 25 per cent., which Mr. Gray refused. They then lodged their rents with trustees. Seeing that the trustees could not be intimidated by taking legal proceedings against them, Mr Atwell dismissed Mr. Stanley from the office of agent, and appointed Captain Bailey Mr. Arthur, in the same, with instructions to at once open negotiations with a view to an arrangement, the result was that the tenants got an abatement of 20 per cent., and paid their rents. The rents were lodged with Mr. Atwell, the average 50 per cent.

WATERFORD.—On March 16th, a fire appeared with very serious consequences, broke out in the premises of the Great Southern and Central Ireland Railway Company at Newrath. The fire, which has by no means arisen accidentally, completely destroyed the engine shed, the fitting shop, and partially wrecked three or four locomotives.

WEXFORD.—Mr. W. S. Wall, Chairman of the Vice-Guardians, New Ross, having tendered his resignation to the Local Government Board, Mr. R. C. Agnew, Galway, has been appointed in his place.

WICKLOW.—On March 10th, a deputation of the parishioners of Arklow, comprising the Rev. Michael Kelly, C. C., of Hollywood, died on March 16th, at the Mall, Westport, in the 68th year of his age. In every walk of life, he lamented deceased was the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

ROSCOMMON.—The Rev. Michael Kelly, C. C., of Hollywood, died on March 16th, at the Mall, Westport, in the 68th year of his age. In every walk of life, he lamented deceased was the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

TYRONE.—The tenants on the Atwell estate went to the rent agent, Mr Stanley, on Saturday, at his office in Cookstown, in November last, and tendered a year's rent, less 25 per cent., which Mr. Stanley refused. They then lodged their rents with trustees. Seeing that the trustees could not be intimidated by taking legal proceedings against them, Mr Atwell dismissed Mr. Stanley from the office of agent, and appointed Captain Bailey Mr. Arthur, in the same, with instructions to at once open negotiations with a view to an arrangement, the result was that the tenants got an abatement of 20 per cent., and paid their rents. The rents were lodged with Mr. Atwell, the average 50 per cent.

WATERFORD.—On March 16th, a fire appeared with very serious consequences, broke out in the premises of the Great Southern and Central Ireland Railway Company at Newrath. The fire, which has by no means arisen accidentally, completely destroyed the engine shed, the fitting shop, and partially wrecked three or four locomotives.

WEXFORD.—Mr. W. S. Wall, Chairman of the Vice-Guardians, New Ross, having tendered his resignation to the Local Government Board, Mr. R. C. Agnew, Galway, has been appointed in his place.

WICKLOW.—On March 10th, a deputation of the parishioners of Arklow, comprising the Rev. Michael Kelly, C. C., of Hollywood, died on March 16th, at the Mall, Westport, in the 68th year of his age. In every walk of life, he lamented deceased was the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

ROSCOMMON.—The Rev. Michael Kelly, C. C., of Hollywood, died on March 16th, at the Mall, Westport, in the 68th year of his age. In every walk of life, he lamented deceased was the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

New Advertisements.

DYSPEPSIA.

The Symptoms: Loss of Appetite, Nausea, Distension of the Stomach Headache, Bad Breath, Dizziness, Loss of Spirits and general prostration. Dyspepsia is frequently attended with Constipation, but sometimes with Diarrhoea.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

NOW CURED:

LADIES Wishing a Handsome BONNET OR HAT, Cheap and Stylish, Call at 1017 Market St. Between 6th and Seventh Streets. MRS. J. FIRSCHENSON

G. TACCONI, Merchant Tailor, 403 KEARNY STREET Near Pine, San Francisco. Clerical Clothing a Specialty PRICES REASONABLE.

HATS! HATS! Spring Styles!

HATS	at	$10.00
HATS	at	8.00
HATS	at	7.00
HATS	at	6.00
HATS	at	5.00
HATS	at	4.50
HATS	at	4.00
HATS	at	3.50
HATS	at	3.00
HATS	at	2.50
HATS	at	2.00
HATS	at	1.50
HATS	at	1.00

510 Market St., Phelan Building.

J. C. MEUSSDORFFER & SONS.

CHURCH DECORATION.

Stained Glass Paper.

T. H. BRYANT 21 Fell Street, S. F.

W. DAVIS, Harness, Saddles, LEATHER, HORSE CLOTHING, AND SADDLERY HARDWARE. WHOLESALE. 410 Market St., bet Sansome & Battery SAN FRANCISCO.

DECKER BROS. MASON & HAMLIN PIERS & PONDS. FISCHER, HERR BROS. PIANOS SOLD FOR $10 INSTALLMENTS. KOHLER & CHASE, 137 Post street.

LONDON DIAMOND DIAMONDS

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 767.

MAIN & WINCHESTER 214, 216, 218, 220 Battery St. SAN FRANCISCO. DOUBLE AND SINGLE HARNESS Of Every Description. SADDLES, WHIPS, ROBES, And Riding and Stable Equipments Of Every Kind. Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

O'BANION & DAGENAIS, 712 and 714 Market Street, Now Have one of the most Complete Stocks of GENT'S AND BOYS CLOTHING, Furnishing Goods, Hats, Caps, Etc. IN SAN FRANCISCO. And are selling goods Lower than any other house on the Pacific Coast. We have also added MERCHANT TAILORING to our business and now have on hand THE BEST GOODS The Market affords in both Foreign and American Importation. All our goods are marked in plain figures and but one price asked.

WEST END STABLES. D'ARCY & NOLAN, Proprietors. 2414 California Street. bet. Fillmore & Steiner. First-Class Livery Stock, Hackney Horses & Saddle Horses Always on the Ride and ready at a moment's notice. PARTICULAR ATTENTION PAID TO BOARDING HORSES. Telephone No. 6164.

PRIVATE AND CLASS LESSONS, DAY AND EVENING, IN ELOCUTION, VOICE-BUILDING, SINGING, By R. ELLIOTT CLARKE, Author of "Clarke's Practical Elocution" "The Human Voice in Song" "The Speaking Voice" "The Cause and Treatment of Vocal Defects" Formerly Director de la Section Vocale, de l'Institut des Langues Etrangeres, Rue Trouchet, PARIS, FRANCE. Latest Washington, D. C. Instruction Rooms, 328 Kearny St., San Francisco. CIRCULARS FREE. Office Hours for Consultation—Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Only IN OAKLAND Tuesdays and Thursdays, 1218 San Pablo Ave.

G. L. HASKELL, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Harness, Saddles, Bridles, Whips, Spurs & Blankets. 539 Market st., opp. Lick House.

Established 1863 THOS. MEHERIN, Nurseryman and Seedsman, Depot and Index to all Kinds of Seeds, Fruit Trees and Plants. 510 BATTERY STREET, San Francisco.

Hole For Picnics!

We are now prepared to show the largest assortment of Picnic Hats suitable for Ladies and Children at the Lowest Prices.

Adlock

THE MAGEE RANGE.

Call and Examine our Stock before calling elsewhere. 748 MARKET ST. JAS. FORRESTER HAS OPENED A BULL'S HEAD Horse Market. Made in 120 Different Styles and Sizes. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL. TAYLOR GOODRICH, 15 New Montgomery St., Grand Hotel, S. F.

STEBBLE'S PREVENTIVE FOR SEASICKNESS. No More Seasickness.

KNABE PIANOFORTES. UNEQUALED IN Tone, Touch, Workmanship & Durability. WILLIAM KNABE & CO. Nos 204 and 206 East Baltimore street, Baltimore. 112 Fifth Avenue, New York. 817 Market st., San Francisco.

CILROY HOT SPRINGS. ROOP & TENNANT, Proprietors and Managers.

JULIUS H. MEDAU, 968 and 970 Folsom St., New Hat ..... San Francisco. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL LIQUOR DEALER. Established 1870. We are selling Cheap for Cash and cash only. The following low prices will receive you a call.

Table Wines	50c, 60c, 75c, and $1
Angelica Wines	$1, $1.25 and $1.50
Mount Tiburon Wine, 1879 Red	$1.50
Old Port or Sherry, $1, $1.25, $1.50 and $2
Cordials Whiskies—$2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4
Bourbon Whiskey, $2.50, $3.50 and $4
Rum, Brandy, Gin, etc., $2 per gal. and upwards

Orders Wines and Liquors at low cost value

SYLVESTER & SUBLETT, DENTISTS. Painless Extraction. With Vitalized Air. 48 SIXTH ST., COR. MISSION. Room 12, 13 and 14, S. F. Tel. No. 3.

HALL'S SARSAPARILLA Cures all Diseases originating from a disordered state of the BLOOD or LIVER. Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sore, Blotches, Pimples, Scrofula, Tumors, Salt Rheum and Mercurial Pains readily yield to its purifying properties. It leaves the Blood in a state the Liver and Kidneys healthy and the Complexion bright and clear. J. R. CATES & CO. Proprietors, 417 Sansome St. San Francisco.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST. IN SAN FRANCISCO. Life Scholarships $75 Send for Circular.

Market Report.

Monday Office. 536 Kearny St., Tuesday Evening, April 12, 1887.

Wheat—No. 1	$1 65@1 67½
Flour—Superfine	3 10@3 25
Extra	3 40@3 50
Family	3 75@4 00
Bakers'	3 00@3 25
Rye, per ctl.	1 00@1 10
Barley, feed	1 00@1 10
Barley, Brewing, wholesale	1 20@1 25
Ground Barley, sacks	27 00@29 00
Corn, whole	37 50@38 00
Corn, No. 1 feed	1 75@1 80
Oats, feed	1 40@1 50
Buckwheat	1 00@1 20
Potatoes—
Hens, P. lb. wholesale	6 00@7 50
Sweet Potatoes, per ctl.	1 50@2 00
Ducks, P. doz.	9 00@10 00
Geese, P. pair	1 50@2 00
Broilers, P. doz.	5 00@7 00
Eggs, P. doz.	1 25@1 50
Butter, California	18@25 00
Eggs
Cheese	16@18
Hides—
Butter	16@18
Hides, low	12@13
Tallow	1½@2
Cattle—
Wheat	11 00@11 50
Hides—
Butter, Southern Coast	11@12
Butter, Bulls	12@13
Butter, Cows	12@13
Mares—
Butter, wholesale	20@25
Butter, wholesale	20@25
Butter, wholesale	20@25

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)
FRIENDSHIP.

I.

In a corner of my garden,
Where an ash-tree's shade shows,
Was a pretty little flower,
Half dreaming, half decayed.

For the oval tree above it
Robbed it of the sun's warm ray's,
And it drooped, when it should flourish
Through the sunny days.

So I found it one bright morning
Almost withered, nearly dead;
From its cold retreat I took it,
To a sunnier, warmer bed.

And in time its petals brightened,
And its form grew wondrous fair,
While the odor from its bosom
Gave a fragrance to the air.

II.

There are hearts of wondrous beauty
On this sorrel, cruel earth,
But the chill of Sorrow's autumn
Kills that beauty in the birth.

For some souls are too happy o'er them,
And a'ershadows every bliss,
And they with beneath their sorrow,
And they die in bitterness.

Oh! if kindly hearts would seek them,
And remove them from their woes,
As I transport from a cold soil
Where the one of Friendship grows.

Ah! methinks those hearts would brighten,
And far truer to us prove,
Than our fickle friends of fortune,
Who move us waste our love.

C. ANTHONY DOYLE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)
MANY ARE STRANGERS YET.

In distant climes
Na rolos of Tiboo
Hath reached his darkened land;
Oh, Christ! Thou bend'st Thy wounded head;
Thou stretch'st Thy bleeding hand;
Thy pleying eyes will tears are wet,
But, oh, alas! so Thou, sweet Christ,
Many are strangers yet.

Mount Olivet rears no sacred height;
Gethsemane—an sacred path;
Thy steps, oh, Christ, are hidden and not,
The ages so solo hour.
The Sea of Galilee worshipped afar,
And, oh, Thy name so near;
Thou, sweet Christ (oh, hear repeat),
Art hoard not in their hear.
Thy promise from lips divine,
Thy mercyes always open yet,
Some Easter morn, dear Lord, for them
Thou will surely smile upon;
The light of Faith Thou hold'st forth
To all—Thy Will be done.
And words will flower, tears bedew,
Thou dashed hearts will hear once;
Thy eternal goodness, tis can ne'er set,
And Thou, oh, Christ, vouchsafe
Thy love on strangers yet.

TERESA.

Good Friday, 1887.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)
THE OTOAR.

Patter, patter, hoes the rain
On the humble cottage home,
On the lone and weary traveller,
On the high and lofty dome.

But within that modest dwelling
Are hearts that lofty simple
Where not sighs forever terror
Towards the tempest's blackest fury,
There a few Barnet horses.

And that weary footsore traveller,
Whose strength seems almost gone,
Has a heart as full of courage,
Thah Will stand the tempest long.

So no matter what the danger,
What the giant power of sin,
It's matter whether the storm without,
Keep a glowing fire within.

If we keep this inward consolence
From the Fathers Heavenly throne,
Will defy the worst temptations
That bestow the path of life.

It will keep a light, when darkness
Hovers o'er the lonlsome world,
It will furnish wholesome counsel,
When from life we're rudely hurled.

It will soothe by our bedside
When life's last lingering ray
Hovers o'er the room of sorrow,
Ere the spirit flies away.

Santa Rosa, Cal.

SANTA CLARA VALLEY.

Fairer than the storied Tempe
Watered by its murmuring rills,
Fairer far than sweet Avoca
Dwelling 'mid its verdant hills;
Fairer than the land of Ophir,
Whitened by Arabian hills.
Is our Santa Clara Valley,
Home of plenty and of rest,
Where the sunbeam ever lingers
Fondly lighting, fondly caressing
Fruitful fields and clustering vineyards,
Spread before the mustering eye.
Here, while beds of budding roses
Shed a fragrance on the breeze,
There the mellow peach and apple
Grace the stately grove of trees;
Here the grapes in many a cluster
Turn with rich and sparkling wine—
Which for sweetness, scorns the nectar
Of the famed Bacgus the vine.
There the golden harvests waiving
In the mighty mild and bland,
Tell of bounty lavished and plenty
Hidden in the mellow soil.
Happy valley, happy valley,
Were the cheerful lays of Mon,
Where each morn and purple even,
Speaks his charming sight and day,
Happy valley to which is given
Her local name where Delphiens rare
Is reflected in thy bosom,
The revered Imperial Clara.
Happy vale! where sacred footprints
Fly each hills and wooded road,
Still remind us of the glory
That accompanies this hallowed ground;
Where the saintly form blessed,
Where the saintly form blessed,
And included the Divine Infant
From its third for a season
Taught him principles of lowly
That surpassed the eagle his;
Taught him Godhood Majesty perfection
Love of God and fellow-man.
Once the honor and the glory
That surrounds this holy vale,
Let us guard as the noble hair locks,
Lest its sacred footprints
Let religion pale with silence,
Death despite of soldiers death,
That will make our vale the greatest,
Brightest, dearest spot on earth.

S. RICHARD HOGAN.

Santa Clara College.

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Bronchitis, and General Debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent cure. Dr. Wm. H. Ellis, Brentwood Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Consumption, Bronchitis and Wasting Diseases generally. It is very palatable."

Literary Miscellany.

The Brother's Sacrifice.

A Beautiful Catholic Story Written by James Guimartin.

"I cannot do it, Jos. My partner would not consent to it; so there is no use in talking further about it. Perhaps I would be happy to oblige you, but all I am worth is invested in the business."

"Look here, Bob, I'll make the note for twelve thousand. That is eight thousand for the use of four, for three months. Jager son will hardly refuse that."

"Oh, nonsense! I explained the young man addressed as Bob, flinging his half-consumed cigar into the cuspidor. "You are as green as a baby in business affairs. Don't you know that you have not a dollar to your name! A friend may take your notes to spare your feelings, but what can you expect of a man who has to make a living by loaning his money?"

"Why, there is my hotel on the Square."

"Mortgaged to the highest figure it will fetch!"

"Let us look at that! Your claims amount to only fourteen thousand, and it is assessed at twenty-seven thousand!

"Pshaw! It is useless to talk business with you. Just try to borrow one cent more upon that property and you will very soon find out its true value. Jackson is for foreclosing on your right away.

"Well, then! What about the lot beside the railroad?"

"Are you drunk or crazy? Do you forget that you had it to me at our little card party last week!

"What! Lost that to you?" exclaimed Joe, striking the desk beside him with his clenched hand. "I must have been both drunk and crazy then. Twelve thousand dollars gone on the turn of a card!

"Frightful, is it not? You would think differently though, if I had lost."

"Yes, that's so. But what shall I do? I cannot show up among the boys until I pay my note to Simmons. You are the last fellow I thought would go back on me, Bob."

"I suspect I am the last, Joe. If you can get Conant to sign, which I seriously doubt, why not try your brother for the other?"

"Barney is through with me. He is a good fellow, and he stood to me until he found that I go to Simmons' rooms. Then he knew that all I had been telling him about my losses on stocks were lies, and he washed his hands of me."

"What about the rich uncle out West?"

"Neither I nor Barney ever saw him. He left here as soon as it was settled that his sister and my father were to be married, saying that he would never speak with her again. He did not think father good enough for her, because he was known to gamble a little; but father, after his marriage, I am told, never raked another dollar in a wager or anything else."

"Well, sorry for you, old man. Now, having some business to attend to, I must wish you good morning."

With this, Mr. Robert Jennings, a shrewd young man of thirty, and junior partner of the firm of Jackson & Jennings, Private Bankers, turned to his desk and commenced to read his morning's mail; while his partner, Mr. Joseph Wantworth, a younger man, with a haggard countenance, bearing the unmistakable impress of dissipation, hurried distractedly from the private office of the firm.

It was probably a month after that Mr. Bernard Wentworth was busily superintending the shipment of some large orders South from his wholesale provision store, when he was called into the counting-room by one of his clerks to speak with a gentleman who had his counting-room."

The old gentleman smiled.

"I would like to speak with you in private," he said.

Bernard led him to his sanctum, which was partitioned off from the main office, and shut the door.

Here, the visitor slowly unstrapping his wallet, said

"I regret to say, Mr. Wentworth, that my errand is hardly one that will be pleasing to you. I have been a side of Mr. Aaron Edwards which I discovered some time since. It is for $6,000, and is two days overdue. Mr. Edwards cannot meet it, so I come to you as the endorser. I am in need of the money, and I would like to have it to-day, but certainly, not later than to-morrow."

Bernard had expected this claim to be made upon him since a few weeks before, when Mr. Edwards had written to his firm another State that he would, most probably, be unable to take up the note.

Edwards was the younger brother of Bernard's mother. He had been permanently injured in a railroad accident, and though once in affluent circumstances, was now poor, owing to having expended all his money in litigation for the purpose of obtaining damages from the railroad corporation. Six months back, he had assured Bernard, that his case would be brought to a successful issue if he had money enough to enable him to carry out the latest suggestion of his counsel, and begged him to endorse his note to Jackson & Jennings. Bernard, in all other respects a prudent business man, could not resist his uncle's appeal, and had cheerfully complied. By dilatory motions, the opposing counsel had been able to keep the case in suspense, until the six months for which the note had been drawn, had nearly elapsed. Then the matter was decided against Edwards, leaving him a legacy of dons all round.

"It is my debt," said Bernard, after examining the note, "and of course I'll pay it."

Whereupon he made out a check for the amount and gave it to the old gentleman.

"Perhaps, Mr. Edwards is a relation of yours?" said the writer inquiringly, as he carefully put the check in his wallet.

"Yes. He is my uncle," Bernard answered.

"An excellent man, but unfortunate, I hear. Has he not a wealthy brother somewhere?"

"I believe so."

"What! Don't you know?"

"I never saw him."

"Maybe, he is not as wealthy as they say."

"Perhaps so! I cannot tell."

"You don't seem to care much. As his nephew now, you ought to have some expectations, if he is the Croesus he is reported to be.

"I shall be always pleased to know that he is as successful as his desires to be, replied Bernard, coldly. "Now, sir, if there is no other business to transact, I shall have to leave you.

"A miserly, cranky, old curmudgeon, wrapped up in his whims and selfishness, I'll wager my life!"

"Pardon me, sir; but I—"

"He probably has earlier brutally, I understand, for marrying your father."

Bernard, flushing with anger, warmly exclaimed: "Look here, old gentleman, these subjects don't concern you."

"—Rifled her I ken," continued the visitor, apparently not hearing Bernard's protest, and wiping his face vigorously with his handkerchief. "—Vowed never to speak to her again, and left her to starve, or for not seeing and judging people as he did, the idiot. Would not be reconciled, though entreated by her repeatedly, for he prided himself upon his inflexibility, the ass. Was willing that she should pass to a precarious grave, because of her misplaced affection for a heartless scoundrel, unnamed a brother she had, the prodigal!"

The last sentence was uttered by the old gentleman in a key loud enough to be heard in the outer office.

Bernard was completely taken by surprise. Recovering himself, however, upon the instant, his first thought was to throw his visitor out of doors. A little reflection restrained him from doing thus, but, taking the old gentleman rather roughly by the arm, he said to him

"There being no other business to detain you, I will now wish you the door."

The words seem to wake up the old gentleman to a sense of his errand.

"See me to the door! he repeated. "Not just yet, young man. There is another affair which I am obliged to call your attention to."

"Well, sir, what is it? Please be brief," said Bernard, impatiently.

"You are doing a pretty prosperous business here, I mean so.

"Supposed I am, what of it?" asked Bernard, hotly.

"Oh! nothing," was the calm reply. "but I marvel how it can be done by a man who looks so much jager for his relatives."

This remark exasperated Bernard beyond control, and he hotly said, "Show me another domestic of the kind I've just had from you, and I'll pay you a thousand dollars!"

"I guess I can earn it," said the old gentleman, mildly—an expression of pity creeping into his eyes—and he once more reverted to his wallet.

"There! What do you think of this?"

Bernard unfolded it sullenly; but, finding that it was in the same by his brother Joseph, and that his own name appeared in the place of that of "William Conant," the name of a well-known merchant, his uncle had asked a jade how, his jaw dropped the pleasant curves of his opened countenance stiffened into hard lines, and he staggered back to his chair, clutching at for support.

The old gentleman watched him narrowly, but said nothing, while the expression of pity deepened on his eyes.

Bernard made a strong effort to conceal his feelings, and overthrighed aloud, though with evident excitement and clapped his visitor with undue familiarity upon the back by way of emphasizing his merriment.

"Right you are! old fellow," cried he. "You've earned the money and you'll get it. It is the funniest thing that has ever happened to me to forget that notice. And only think, it lasted a week since poor Joe wrote me that he could not meet it. I'll pay it, and the thousand dollars also—poor old, old man! Well, well, I had never thought it!"

He sat down to his desk and opened his check book, with a trembling hand. In order to take a pen with his other hand he had to lean over the desk, his elbow, where the old gentleman quickly took it again, and said, "Well, but, Mr. Wentworth, of course, you see that Mr. Conant is responsible for the amount in the first place."

"No, no! Never mind him. I'll take it up. There is your check

"Eight thousand dollars!" remarked the old gentleman, incurriously, on receiving it.

"Yes, sir, eight thousand! Shall I write for the note, and one thousand for your trouble?" Bernard replied playfully.

"No," answered the old gentleman, emphatically.

Bernard stared at him, terror-stricken for a moment; then, laughing lightly, said

"Well, then, call it ten thousand."

"Not enough, came back the answer, in hard, steely tones.

Bernard's laughter lapsed into a groan, and he bent sullenly forward over his desk, while his arms, with clenched hands, dropped rigidly upon it.

"Twenty thousand" said he, with clenched teeth, after a short manner, through pallid countenance.

"Take forty-five thousand,—all I am worth,—the store and its contents being included and give me the note."

"That will be sufficient, Mr. Wentworth. Give me your acceptance on demand, for that amount, upon the security of your store and its contents, and the note is yours"

Quicker than it takes to tell it, Bernard produced the necessary blanks. These he rapidly, and without a pause, filled out and gave to his visitor.

After reading and pronouncing them satisfactory, the old gentleman, smiling pleasantly upon Bernard, handed him Joseph's note.

It was soon ashes, Bernard holding it as it burned, between his fingers through sickened therefy, and it was scarcely cool enough to touch.

The old man looked on with tears in his eyes.

Bernard, without once glancing in his direction, put on his overcoat, took his hat, and was passing into the counting-room, when the young man, who had opened the door for the visitor, called him by calling, "Wait a minute, Bernard. May I asked you what you propose doing, under present circumstances?"

"Cash you see for yourself!" Bernard replied, bolting expressed in every word. "I propose leaving you to the undisturbed management of your blackleg."

"An Edwards to the more! my brave boy," said the old man coming close to Bernard and placing a hand affectionately upon each shoulder. "I am your uncle—your mother's brother who went West, and you—you are her only son. I see her in every line of your face, in the flash of your eye, in the generous assistance which you have given my unfortunate brother. My sister's soul it was, which animated you, when, to save your own feeds, or from the consequences of forgery—of forging your name as well as Conant—you departed with all you had to me. In a similar manner did she once preserve me from the consequences of an act of youthful folly. Blackmail! No, Bernard. The is your note to me. Now, Bernard."

The old gentleman set the note aflame with a match, and behold, after the example of Bernard, until it was completely burned.

"Come the way of Joseph's" continued he, striking his hands together to free them from the dust. "This store with its contents are so well managed, and its contents, are still young. Your unhappy brother, the wretched inheritor of your father's only weakness, is on the way to Australia to begin life anew, by my advice and assistance. I have been in the city watching both of you for the purpose of making myself known to either, my intention being to select one of you to take charge of my property and make him my heir, by way of atonement, for the slight reparation for my treatment to your mother. Your brother, I found on the downward road to destruction. You were prosperous and respected, but I wanted to test you last, perhaps, my design should injure rather than serve you. I have tested you—tested you to the last extremity, and find you worthier than the most exacting could expect. In the bulk my estate is probably valued for three millions dollars. You can come enter upon the charge of it without delay. I am an old man and need rest. Today I shall have my will drawn up, naming you as the heir of all I possess."

Bernard stood mute and motionless while these revelations were being made, giving no sign of reciprocating his uncle's affection for him. Apparently confounded by what he had heard, he made no reply to it, but walked slowly to his desk and sat down, and, leaning his elbows upon it, and placing his elbows upon it, and placing his elbows upon it, and placing

THE MONITOR.

TWENTIETH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

— As a sign of the sympathy manifested with the Home Rule aspirations of Ireland, by the laboring classes in all the larger towns of England, we are happy to chronicle the fact that at an election held in the Birmingham division, hitherto represented by John Bright, all the Gladstone candidates were elected by large majorities over their Tory and Unionist opponents.

— Every day furnishes fresh proofs of the truth of Gobbett's assertion in the "History of the Reformation," when he said: "A married priest and pauperism and pensioners, all cause upon England at one and the same time. . . . There would not, either, have been a college at Eton, Winchester, Oxford or Cambridge, if the bishops in those days had been married men."

— Rt. Rev. Bishop Maes will, this summer, take definite steps in the long contemplated project of erecting a new cathedral in Covington, Ky. A wealthy member of the congregation is ready to subscribe $20,000 towards the expense, one-fourth of the proposed cost. We heartily wish California had a few such gold-lined generous Catholics to assist in raising the grand edifice on Van Ness Avenue.

— Alluding to the lack of Catholic unity, Bishop Bagshawe said on a recent occasion: "It seems to me, that Catholic society is in an degree atomized and blighted, and the influence of Catholic principles upon politics reduced almost to nothing, because there is so little social and political union among Catholics. The sects and the secret societies invariably patronise and push forward their own compatriots; and poor Catholics, therefore, denied at times both by friend and adversary, have a hard lot to bear."

— Col. King Harmon, the Tory Under Secretary for Ireland, seems to be the most unpopular official in Great Britain. He is a renegade Home Ruler, a notorious rackrenter, without brains and devoid even of the moderate ability required to make a decent speech. The Tories hate him because he was once a Home Ruler, and the Nationalists hate him because he is a renegade.

— A priest in one of the Western States had occasion recently to announce the death and mortuary services in the church over the remains of one of the piggy-away members of his flock, so he made this keenly startling announcement: "On next Sunday the funeral of A. B. will be held in this church. I shall preach a funeral sermon on the occasion, and the man himself will be here—the first time in twenty years." What a lesson for those lax Catholics who find so many flippant excuses for not going to church when alive, but whose corpses are carried into the sanctuary of God as if in very mockery of the foolishness of their lives!

— Governor Bartlett made an excellent appointment last week when he nominated Dr. Charles A. Clinton as one of the Board of Health. This Board is a young man who has won his way to professional eminence and personal popularity by his skill, experience, success, and genial disposition, and his appointment will be a source of pleasure to every tax-payer who desires to see medical genius recognized. Dr. Clinton has already established for himself a national reputation for his success in the treatment of nervous diseases, and we are proud that such a skillful Irish-American physician has won such deserved honors at the hands of the Governor of California.

— If we can place any reliance upon a cablegram from Dublin, Parnell, Dillon, and a number of other prominent Irishmen are actively engaged in the work of promoting the organization of an Irish woollen manufacturing and exporting company, with capital of $500,000. It looks reasonable, however that such a movement would depend upon the result of Home Rule, as the present English tariff laws discriminate very unjustly against Irish manufactured goods. These laws were passed solely for the purpose of killing off Irish industry, and they have succeeded in completely destroying all industrial pursuits in Ireland except the manufacture of "patriots," of which, we are proud to say, Erin seems to have a monopoly.

— The most atrocious nature of the Tory coercion proposals has started England from end to end. They have been received by the English Liberal press with a storm of disapprobation, and it is expected that in many days are over, that the great body of Liberals throughout the country will make their voices heard in emphatic condemnation. The Pall Mall Gazette, in an outspoken article on the proposed abolition of whatever shreds of the constitution still obtains in Ireland, declares that "to subject a civilized country to such arbitrary interference with the most elementary liberties and rights of man is to justify insurrection," and that if "the Irish did not wish to revolt against such a system they would deserve the indelible contempt of the English people."

— A cablegram from Rome to a New York paper states that the Pope "has decided the question of the Knights of Labor in favor of their organization. The decision will stand so long as the present method is pursued in furthering their aims. The document of Cardinal Gibbons has been indorsed. The Pope further decides that in Canada, where a mandament had been issued against the Knights of Labor, members of the order will receive absolution on a promise of obedience to the future decisions of the Holy See. If the Knights identify themselves with the Therites now being denounced by certain agitators, the decision in their favor will be revoked."

— A cablegram from Queenstown states that the arrival there of emigrants from all sections of the south and west of Ireland, on their way to America, is simply enormous. The railways are running special trains to accommodate this class of travel. The number of emigrants on awaiting steamers is early three to their destination is already greater than can be accommodated in the houses and lodgings, and many are camping in the streets. Fifteen hundred embarked in one day. Three thousand more are expected to arrive shortly to take the steamers thrice. Thus Ireland is losing the best and sinew of the land by the baneful influence of bad English laws.

— The Dublin Nation voices the sentiments of every friend of Ireland all over the world when it alludes to the Tory Coercion Bill in these terms: "The Government have devised and brought forward their jubilee gift for Ireland. The fiftieth year of Queen Victoria's reign is to be signalized, if the Salisbury Ministry can achieve it, by the enactment of the most infamous Coercion Act that was ever proposed for Ireland. The country has now been made acquainted with the substance of the Government proposals, and it may be said at once that the hand of the ruffian is traceable in every line of Blackguard Balfour's bill. None of its provisions, Mr. Gladstone said, "made your blood run cold." This eighty-seventh Coercion Act is not put forward as a temporary expedient which is supposed to be called for by an exceptional state of affairs. It is contentiously announced that it embodies the law under which Ireland is to be ruled for ever."

— Pope Leo XIII has again proved his sympathy with Ireland's aspirations for freedom by appointing a pronounced Irish patriotic Prelate to a most important ecclesiastical position, his Holiness having confirmed the selection of the priests of Armagh for the Primacy of all Ireland. The Right Rev. Dr. Logue, Bishop of Raphoe, who was named Signaturus by an immense majority of votes, has been appointed Coadjutor to his Grace Dr. McEntigart. Dr. Logue's elevation will be welcomed by the Catholics of the whole world as well as of Armagh. His Grace was a distinguished student and professor of Paris and Maynooth. His abilities and attainments are of a high order, and his sympathies are known to be with his people in their struggles and aspirations. The appointment is a complete disproof of the fabrications of the "eminent English Catholics" who recently circulated the rumor that his Holiness Pope Leo was opposed to the attitude assumed by the body of the Irish episcopacy in political affairs lately.

A Bogus Parnell Letter.

The London Times, in its efforts to defeat Home Rule and to destroy the prestige of Parnell and the Irish Parliamentary party in the eyes of the English people, has resorted to the dodge of detraction in order to carry its point. The latest ruse is the publication of a forged letter purporting to emanate from Parnell, which he is made to justify the murder of one of the Phœnix Park victims, but the document bears plainly upon its face the features of its British paternity, and coming out at this crisis in the affairs of Ireland, it will be received with the derision it deserves.

Misrepresentation of the Church on the School Question.

The Knight of Ind sent which indulges in its customary spirit of religious disturbance against American Catholic citizens for keeping them of plotting against the Public School system of education with the view of destroying it. This charge is as false as it is fanatical. The Church has ever been the friend of Education, and her interest in the spiritual welfare of her Catholic children has been a prominent feature in her history. The opposition of the Church is not directed against the system or the subjects taught in Public Schools, but is aimed at the anti-Christian influence which arises from the banishment of Religion from the State schools.

This is a Christian country and the vast preponderance of children in it are born of Christian parents, hence the Church is the best friend of the State when she labors assiduously to preserve Christian truth and morality among the people by fostering them among the youth of the land.

The Church does not censure the State for not teaching religion in its schools, because she well understands that a system formation would not be in accord with the religious law of the land. Hence the Church—its law and for the welfare of the souls of her children and in order to make them good citizens—establishes schools of her own where the religious influence of God's truth will go hand in hand with those studies which are necessary for fighting successfully the battle of life.

When sectarians demonstrate their opposition to the Church in regard to her views on education, they are then engaged in the fatal work of digging their own graves. It is a foregone conclusion that children taught out of books in which the name and power and existence of Almighty God are not mentioned, will grow up in entire ignorance of the most elementary principles of Christianity. As will and grafting children to a sind and dumb asylum to learn to speak, as to send them to teachers who are ignorant, indifferent or unbelieving, to teach them Christian morality.

Bigoted prejudice is the "leaven" that prevents Presbyterians and other Protestants from seeing that subject in the true light. They imagine that the Public Schools will help to destroy "Popery," little dreaming that their own children have to drink from the same fountain the fatal draught of irreligious education. The Church, however, is constantly preparing for her children new Christian schools where they will not only receive the light of worldly knowledge, but they will also be regaled with the immortalizing religious influences of Christianity in its fullest sense. Some of the sects are taking example after the Church in this necessary enterprise, and others again are possessed with such a Presbyterian spirit of intolerance that they would rather see their children stripped of every atoms of knowledge concerning their God and Saviour, rather than follow in the footsteps of that Church which they hate with far more warmth than wisdom.

So far as the Catholic Church in America is concerned with the School question, the Freeman's Journal in Baltimore at the Third Plenary Council at the Gilman hotel, which had hitherto existed, when they addressed these memorials words to their flock all over the United States:

"Two objects therefore, dear brothers, we have in view, to multiply our schools and to perfect them. We must multiply them till every Catholic child in the land shall have within its reach the means of education. There is still much to be done yet in this matter. There are still thousands of Catholic children in the United States deprived of the benefit of a Catholic school. Pastors and parents should not rest till this defect be remedied. No parish is complete till it has schools adequate to the needs of its children, and the pastor and people of such a parish should feel that they have not accomplished their entire duty until the letter is complied."

Such is the simple solution which the Church has found for the problem of pagan-ising Public School education. The State cannot do it, and it would be a crime if it knowledge of God in the souls of such children as are sent under the influence of unchristian text books and unbelieving teachers. But no children of hers shall thus have Christianity washed out of them by the Lethean waters of secular education, and for this purpose it is that Catholic parochial schools are springing up all over the land, and the Church is gathering her children under her wings so as to save them from the hawks of heresy who hover above them in the ominous clouds of godless education.

— Too charge brought against the members of the Irish party in the House of Commons, and for flatly denying which Healy was expelled, has been successfully contradicted by no less a personage than Earl Spencer, who was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland under Gladstone's administration. A telegram of the 16th inst. says that in an interview with Charles Augustus Cowpbeare, Radical Member of Parliament for Cornwall, "Earl Spencer said he knew from experience as viceroy, and nobody could positively know better, that it was absolutely untrue that any members of the Irish Parliamentary party were murderers or accomplices of murderers, as has been charged by Major Saunderson in the House of Commons. This effectually squelches what dear Father Tom Burke—God rest his soul!—so aptly styled "another thumping Emphasis!"

— An exchange says that a new exemplification of the saying, "From the sublime to the ridiculous," has been contributed by the leather-headed Parson Newman, who in a letter to young men averred that the three names that would live in history were Plato, Shakspeare and—Beecher! We think however, it must have been Tallmage that made ass of this metaphor. Had Newman uttered such a sentiment it would be worthy of the asinine author: "The four great names that will live in history are Plato, Shakspeare, Stanford and Newman." There's nothing small about Uncle's political parson!

— An Irish paper makes a centre shot when it makes this comparison: "The Tories are trying to make Ireland happy and prosperous by coercion." They remind the photographer who polished a revolver at his sweetheart with the remark: "Now, then, my reputation is at stake. Assume the tender expression or I'll put an bullet into you."

A Methodist on a Miracle.

How Selah Brown of Santa Barbara sent to Brother Mortarty had sent a regular Methodistical communication concerning the miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius, which taken place several times during each year in the Cathedral at Naples.

Brother Brown says the Neapolitans the great compliment of calling them a very religious people who pay one sonnet and Cadmus sonnet to the blessed Virgin, and to state the proposition he gave the people of Naples which, he says, they turned down with a snort. Perhaps he outdoes his public trade against "Popery" among them, and when the Neapolitans saw the printed matter in their faith rust in their very teeth—they naturally gave vent to their anger by invoking maledictions upon the head of their Holy Father.

Speaking of the miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius, Brother Brown says the priests "pretend to have a little vial filled with the Saint's blood," and adds that its liquefaction "is, no doubt, a chemical 'miracle,' the liquefaction probably being caused by the heat of the hands held during the sacred vial, or its nearness to the burning candles around it."

In reply to these objections it is only necessary to state—as we have already done in those columns—that the miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius has stood the test of time too long to be charged a fraud by a fanatical Methodist preacher. In the first place the blood question is nearly sixteen hundred years old. Again, the miracle has been witnessed by hundreds of thousands of nine non-Catholic men from all parts of the world and yet not one of them has ever been able to throw any doubts upon the supernatural nature of the liquefaction. The Popes and preachers like Brother Brown have given adverse opinions concerning the miracle, but all of them together were not worth the paper they were written on, for the reason that such opinions were merely the result of prejudice and not based on any scientific principles whatever.

For the same reason is the opinion of Brother Brown not so valuable as a landlion, because he has no knowledge of the mass of evidence which has been published in support of the supernatural nature of this miracle, and the very moment he gives his own is not original. Brother Brown also tells us sanctum when he says that "if the blood in the vial does not boil, the saint hard name, and even take his image out of the church and give it a regular chastisement so no such thing ever happened in Naples, but the story will be believed all the same by all the Wesleyan old women who are ever ready to swallow all the lies which are uttered against Catholics or their creed.

How Women Suffrage Works.

The advocates of the right of women to rule have always strenuously argued that when the female portion of the republican population were permitted to take their place at the polls as voters, their presence would impart a refinement to the suffrage exists in Europe. We have read newspapers in that State given this account of the manner in which the females suffragists of Wyoming Territory voted:

Wonart, white and black, enlisment-ally stood in front of the precincts and fervently exhorted electors to vote the ticket that each one was champoning. The ladies were not only enthusiastic for their respective candidates, but they engaged in controversy with each other in the street. They went into hacks to bring their female friends to the voting places, placed tickets in the hands of their friends and actually had altercations, which, on other occasions, would, so far as effects were concerned, be regarded as disreputable; because it is supposed that the bad element of women, except on average fair polling and gentle sparring, knows no restraint when it once gets up and ordered them driven hither and thither to pick up all classes of women, irrespective of color or sexual standing, to cast their ballots for their particular candidates.

Whilst acknowledging the refining influence of woman, few people will be willing to admit that when women enter the political arena they do not lower the dignity of their sex or their standing in society. In politics is generally the roughest element of the male sex to be found, and the female in Kansas proves that in this respect sex makes but little difference.

The paper from which we quote also says that "some women served lunches in their saloons, by prearranged schemes, called set-tos, by prearranged schemes, called set-tos, but can never be accused of being, or of being called, a female saloon keeper." The gentlemen were harmed away in incurously upholstered vehicles to the place of the respective candidates, and the sight of the dawned Cents assured the Saints that they felt he a sun dying and regretted the attendance of a priest as soon as possible, and so his wish being gratified he succumbed to the good Father that he wished to be received into the Holy Catholic Church without delay. He was immediately prepared, and after being baptized, he received his last Holy Communion on the first Friday of the month, and a few hours later in breathed his last. The poor young man, thus tragically called from life in the very bloom of manhood, was a Protestant, but he was an Algerian clergyman, but that his mother was a pious convert to Catholicity, and that he had instructed in the Sisters of the Sacred Heart and another Catholic lady, Madame Pendar; to his wife-guard, which the assassins had singularly left with him, was a friend of the Sacred Heart, which he was for his mother's sake, and his signal appeal for a priest was made in order to execute a request he had made her to on the occasion a Catholic. Thus he died, wearing the medal of the Sacred Heart, received into the Church the first Friday of the month, the day devoted to the worship of the most adorable Heart, and fearing the signal ever desire of the power of prayer and of the wonderful chemistry of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus."

What a simple story, and yet what a profound impression it makes upon every man who heart into which has been infused a solitary spark of love for that Sacred Heart which has promised certain salvation to all who try to live good lives sanctified by God's grace.

The Country Coercion is Aimed At.

It is peculiarly interesting at this time to draw a contrast between the condition of Ireland and the treatment which the English Tory Government manifests in its efforts to pass the Eighty fifth Coercion Act in order to crush out of the people of Ireland their aspirations for Home Rule.

At the very time when the English enemies of Ireland were preparing a drastic measure of coercion, which, if passed, will be a blot on the statute book of the nineteenth century, the judges of the several Irish Circuits were complimenting the different Grand Juries upon the fact that grave infractions of the law were few and far between on the criminal docket of every county. These in the county Galway, Baron Deasse was pleased to say that the lessons of the cases to crime before the Grand Jury was the best illustration of the proverbial peace of the whole county.

In Kings county, Justice Lawson expressed his delight at the satisfactory state of peace which marked every county in the whole county, there being no cases of serious crime on the calendar.

In Leitrim Judge Murphy congratulated the Grand Jury on the fact that but four cases were to come before them, and most of these were of a capital nature.

At Longford, Chief Baron Pallas expressed the delight he felt in telling the Grand Jury that unless his mess offence were all that would appear on the docket.

In Louth, Justice Harrison opened and closed the Assizes with the trial of a single case of misdemeanor.

In Meath, Lord Justice Fitzgibbon congratulated the Grand Jury on the fact that there were no cases to come before them, and no other business than a formal one.

At Longford, Chief Baron Pallas expressed the delight he felt in telling the Grand Jury that unless his mess offence were all that would appear on the docket.

In Louth, Justice Harrison opened and closed the Assizes with the trial of a single case of misdemeanor.

In Meath, Lord Justice Fitzgibbon congratulated the Grand Jury on the fact that there were no cases to come before them, and no other business than a formal one.

The Vatican Exhibition.

The committee of the Vatican Exhibition for 1887 is have recently issued their prospectus, which is a very elaborate document. Offerings and worked of artists in the Vatican will be received up to the end of October, and should be addressed to Cardinal Rampolla at the Vatican. The exhibition will be held in the Court of the Vatican known as the Pigna, where was erected last year the commemorative hall for the Leo Jubilee. That monument consists of a fine column of Carrara marble with appropriate inscriptions and surmounted by a splendid statue in bronze of St. Peter. Prizes and presents for the exhibition are arriving from all parts of the world, and the Pope himself has given a very valuable chalice. Prince Doria comes a delicately and exquisitely carved ivory tablet, the work of a Sicilian artist, standing about three feet, and presented to the Pope by a Canadian missionary, who caused much excitement among the Italian Bishops, who all hastened to crown, by his peculiar dress and gait. Lastly, a handsomely ornamented clasp of the Holy Ladder, with appropriate devices, filigree work, has arrived from Genoa. The whole is enclosed in a beautiful Cabinet, and is one of the gifts up to the present offered for the Supreme Pontiff.

Sullivan on George.

Mr. Alexander Sullivan, in a speech in a large audience on Thursday, thus plays the Irish Land question:

I will tell Mr. George because it is just to a man with a family of his own state of the Irish tenant. I will tell Mr. George that if the landowners combination for the purpose of keeping up the rents of Ireland wages of 10 cents a day, and the Irish tenant, the Irish farmer, is to be driven to the workhouse, Mr. George, I will tell you what will happen. Why, all Ireland will be down upon him, and the money left with the Irish people will be taken from him. For the same reason that it would be one of the greatest calamities that could befall Ireland if the landlords actual the arrears owed by the tenants, Ireland would be ruined if the tenants were to make a combination against the landlords. The time of Catholic example is very potent in this country, an instance of which cannot be forgotten by the Catholic people in Ireland. A Kilcoursy Catholic lady who is a Protestant, but who never lives for the Blessed Virgin, told me recently that on last Good Friday the Catholic females employed in one of the local hospitals were so impressed by the solemn perfect silence from noon to 3 o'clock, i.e., the hour of our Lord's death agony. Several of the Protestant ladies, who had accompanied to their Catholic co-workers to this hospital, were so impressed by the solemn silence and the perfect order which we are accustomed to see in a country could be accomplished.

Yours sincerely,

A. M. S.

The Coercion Act.

Following are the provisions of the Coercion Act by which the Tories of England seek to suppress the right to trial by jury and other constitutional purposes from Ireland:

Magistrates may examine witnesses on oath, even in cases where no person is charged before them with the commission of the crime which is the subject of inquiry.

The jury system is abolished altogether in cases of conspiracy, and probably a liberal issue of warrants issued. In other cases, two stipendiary magistrates are to have summary jurisdiction, and may impose sentences not exceeding six months hard labor for any of the following offences: Unusual company, loitering, rioting, offences under the Whiteboy Acts, assaulting officers of the law, taking forcible possession of a house, or resisting a writ of ejectment.

In jury trials the venue may be changed on the certificate of the Attorney-General that a fair trial can not be had in some other place in Ireland. A prisoner, in such cases, has a right to appeal against any proposed change of venue.

In jury trials either the Attorney-General or the prisoner may demand a special jury.

If the jurors of number, attempt to market, aggravated crimes of violence, arson, or injury or firing on the darlings, the Attorney-General for England and Ireland may certify that a fair trial may be had in England, the State witnesses, witness and crying witness, his witnesses, solicitor and counsel.

Home commitments are only to apply to such parts of Ireland as may be proclaimed by the Lord Lieutenant.

If the Lord Lieutenant in Council will have power to declare at any distance of time that any district is in such a state of insubordination, or of interfering with the administration of the law, or of intimidating witnesses or jurors, or of intimidating or injuring the tenants, or of interfering with the collection of rents, or of combination, or of conspiracy, or of intimidating

Farm and Home.

How Food is Adulterated.

The chemists of the Department of Agriculture, under the direction of the Commissioner, have for a year or more been investigating the extent and manner of food adulteration practised. In this country, as compared by several branches of the work is in progress of preparation. Then portion relating to spices and condiments, prepared by Prof. Hubbard, is almost completed. Mr. Richard's investigations show that no other kinds of human food are adulterated to such an extent.

Of twenty samples of ground clove examined only two were pure. The others had suffered the extraction of their essential oils and had been polished by the addition of clove stems, allspice husks and other inferior kinds of serious kinds. Of eight samples of cayenne pepper only one was pure. Of ten samples of mustard none were pure unchanged mustard, though several had only suffered the loss of their fixed oil, the other contained adulterants of wheat flour, the spurious matter being in some cases two-thirds of the compound. This made it necessary to add tumeric and (harmless) to restore the mustard color. Ten samples of allspice were examined, eight of which were pure. Four samples of cassia were all pure. Of ten samples of ginger four were pure. Only one out of thirteen samples of black pepper was found to be what it purported to be. A specimen sent from Baltimore to a man who had an easy contract was almost entirely spurious. Cayenne pepper, black pepper, leaks and mustard balls were used to give flavor and pungency, while "body" was supplied by ground beans and rice, and color by charcoal. Two samples of mace out of five were pure, and of three samples of nutmeg examined all were pure.

Mr. Richardson's experience leads to the conclusion that the public has the power in its own hands to effect a reform in the matter of spice adulteration. The quality of the article is fixed by the retailer who names the price he is willing to pay. The grinder thereupon estimates the amount of the pure spice he can afford to put in, and fills out the order with refuse. Mr. Richardson incidentally mentions a New York spice grinder who within a short time worked off 5,000 pounds of cocoanut husks. The grocer's attitude which sells for less than the pure and unground, needs no law to prove its purchase. Usually when he demanded a pure article and called upon a first class grocer for it he got it. Considerable space is given in the report to the operation of laws at home and abroad relating to the adulteration of food, while the methods of detection, both popular and scientific, are treated exhaustively.

How to Visit the Sick.

1. Enter and leave the house and move about the room quietly.

2 Carry a cheerful face and speak cheerful words, but you need tell no lies to be cheerful.

3 If your friend is very sick do not fall into gay and carelessness talk in the attempt to cheer him.

4. Don't ask questions and thus oblige your friend to talk.

5. Talk about something outside, and not about the disease and circumstances of the patient.

6. Tell the news, but not the list of the sick and dying.

7. Never whisper in the sick room.

8 If possible, carry with you something to please the eye and to relieve the monotony of the sick room—a flower, a pleasant book, or even a religious picture, which you can leave for a few days.

9. If deserable, some little delicacy to tempt the appetite will be well bestowed; but it is the most unkind unkindness to accept the sick to eat too much of rich cakes, etc.

Perfume Making in California.

There is no reason why America, with its great variety of soil and climate, should not avail itself of the benefits of the perfume industry, especially in the Southern counties of California. And even in the North it could be prosecuted with great profit. Rose, violets, heliotrope, lilac of all kinds, mignonette, stock orange, honey lemon, verbena, lilies, bergamot, rosemary, and other plants used in perfume making would easily be grown. And the fields of white clover, the messes of wild spikeaine, the fragrant linden trees, the odorous arbutus blooms and water lilies, the spicy laurel, all of which grow wild, without the aid of human culture, need but gathering to be made a source of profit as well as beauty. The possibilities of flower culture in the South can hardly be overestimated. The most riotous imagination can scarcely picture the realities of the natural flower gardens of California, where plants grow to tall trees, adorned with their aromatic of beauty and fragrance. All the rare beauties of the floral kingdom, which in the North are brought into bloom by the most painstaking process in greenhouses and conservatories, not only throug the gardens in California, but run in wild luxuriance over uncultivated fields and hillsides. Florida, too, could be made a veritable Elysium of loveliness. Honey raising could also be associated with the flower industry, as the immense lower fields would be a paradise for bees, and so a double profit be derived with but little extra outlay of labor or expense.

The Value of a Helpmate.

When a man becomes a widower he soon learns what the financial worth of his wife was to him. When he is compelled to have his food cooked, the garments made, the washing and ironing done, he finds that about one-half of his income is required to meet the outgoes. Who saved this expense before? Let the cold fingers and the silent lips in the graveyard bear testimony. The family purse should be as accessible to a faithful wife as to the husband. What man would consent to become a partner in a company in which his brother partner should alone have control of the company's funds? There is no one thing more degrading and depressing to a hard working wife than to feel that she must beg like a tramp for every cent she spends beyond her food, which is truly belongs to her as though she earned it as a domestic or shopgirl.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it is now made easy to cure this curse of our country in one or two simple applications made by the patient at home. Send stamp for circular describing this new treatment to A. H. Lifter, Box, 505 West King street, Toronto, Canada. By special request Mr. Lifter, Sr., is starting at the Metropolitan Hotel (formerly Tremont) Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Sufferers should call on him for treatise or call and see him. Consultation free.

For Dirty Teeth Yours

"Brown's Bronchial Troches" have been used, with satisfying success, for the relief and cure of coughs, Hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Rev Hawet Maxwell Preacher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first except I think yet better of them since I began by thinking well of. I have also recorded them to friends, and they have invariably appreciated, I do not pay Your Troches are very good."

Family Fun.

A Reporter's Ruse.

Shrewdness, tact, intelligence and versatility are all valuable essentials to the mental make up of the successful reporter, but these are nothing if he is lacking in pure and undiluted gall. Perhaps that is has not the real journalistic instinct that is the secret of success. The heart of an editor beats high when he runs across a reporter whom gall is like that of the man mentioned in the following touching incident:

A funeral procession was winding its way slowly and sadly toward a distant cemetery when suddenly a man rushed forward from the sidewalk and motions the hearse to stop. Then he hastily whips out a note book, puts one foot on the hub of the hearse wheel, lays the book on his knee, and, pencil in hand, asks:

"Name of the corpse?"

"What!" says the astonished driver.

"Name of the corpse, please?"

"Why, Johnson, I believe; B. G. Johnson, but—"

"What did he die of?"

"Typhoid fever."

"Ah! Family?"

"Why, yes; but I—"

"How much family?"

"Four children and—but lookee here, you get out of the way for I—"

"I are widow?"

"Yes, but what you—"

"Funeral from house?"

"Yes, but, man alive, if you don't—"

"Men of property?"

"Some—now you—"

"Been sick long?"

"Three weeks—but I—here we go.

"Wait. What cemetery?"

"Riverside.

"Ah! Body in grave or vault?"

"Vault—but now you—"

"That's all. Thanks. Reporter for the Daily Gab, you know. Come along and get a copy of paper. Here's my card. To, ta."

Laughing at Ma.

Miss Birdie McGonagan is one of the belles of Austin. Her intellect, however, does not tower into the sublime heights reached by Susan B Anthony, but, re one the cold language of truthfulness, she is very much the same kind of young lady that Gen D. Smith is of young men. Not long since he proposed matrimony. He proposed in good faith, in a column, to preserve manner, upon which Miss Birdie inaugurated a giggle, said this was very most disgusted, and, arising from his knees, his anger found exit in words. "If I was med, too mad almost to speak. "Miss Hennipin," he finally ejaculated, "with no than no laughing matter. Why she did you see anything ridiculous about me?" "Why man! excuse me, Mr. Dr Smith—really you must, for I am not laughing at you; really, now, I am not; me's so funny, you know; really, she is just too funny for any use; yes, I was laughing at ma." "At you, sir!" "You see me told me only the morning, Birdie, you are so green that some darkey will take you yet," and here you come—" but he was gone. He was in the last tender. It was he who banged the door so violently. "I wonder," said the sadfully deserted Birdie, "I wonder now really, if he is offended at what ma said! But then, we always was so cowfully funny for any kind of one.

Education Not Appreciated.

"Why don't you send your children to school, Ike?" asked the Superintendent of of Public Instruction of an old colored man.

"Well, boss, I'se tried dat school business and it won't work.

"How's that?"

"Well, you see, my son's been studyin' rithmetic for some time, and t'other day he come home and he says to me, said t'other day Ikey, "I'se been learnin' rithmetic for some time, and t'other day Ikey, "I'se been learnin' rithmetic for some time, and t'other day I axed him what was the county seat of Africa, and he couldn't tell me. When a boy studies rithmetic free years and can't figger out such a simple question, I make dat it's time for him to quit. Now he's studyin' astronomy as a bit hard.

Go Her One Better.

First little cherub—"My aunt has got false hair."

Second little cherub—"So has mine."

"But mine has got false teeth."

"I don't care, my aunt has false teeth, too, and yesterday I heard Ma say that she had a fal-o tongue."

A Landlord Roasted.

"Have you children?" demanded a house-rent'r.

"Yes," replied the other, solemnly, "six all in the cemetery."

"Better than that here," said the landlord, emphatically, and proceeded to execute the desired lease. In due time the children returned from the cemetery, whether they had been sent to have a nice play, but it was too late to mend the contract.

The Sheriam Did It.

He was a very sleek stranger, and he addressed old Farmer Hungrain in a very sanctimonious manner.

"Yes, sir, I'm selling this patent right, but only to the very best of men, and I can let you have it on the very easiest of terms."

"What are they?"

"Why, all you have to do is to sign this paper, agreeing to pay six seventy five per cent of the profits received for the machines—you reserve the remainder as commission."

"D'you see that gate?" queried the farmer, pointing to his front yard gate.

"Oh, yes, sir!"

"Wal, I'm goin' in for the ola musk! but if you make that gate stove I pit back to the door, you'll be pretty well out of range.

He made it and had several seconds to spare.

Mrs. Gilligan's Chase.

A lady sat at her window high, while her lover sang below, and he shrilly screeched "O lady, fly!" he also laughed at his noisy woo. And he broke his lute in his passion wild, and howled to his mad despair, till he woke Mrs. Gilligan's infant child, and she chased him nearly a half a mile with the leg of an oaken chair.

A Queer Prescription.

There is an old story about a sea captain who had a medicine chest and a book of instructions. The bottles were all numbered, and the book gave no one—of certain symptoms, and then said No. 3 or No. 10, as the case might be. The captain had a patient whose symptoms required No. 9, and as No. 9 was all gone he mixed equal quantities of 2 and 7, and was very much surprised when the patient died.

A Tribute to American Genius wan the recent awards at Liverpool and Edinburgh of silver medals to Sunbury & Johnson, Philadelphia Chemists, and proprietors of Benson's Capcine Plasters. These plasters are endorsed by 1000 adjacent physicians as the only reliable external remedy for sciatica, rheumatism, pain, lumbago, weakness, and kindred complaints.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHILBLAINS Frost BITE and ACHES & all PAINS relieved at once by Perry Davis' PAIN KILLER also Coughs—Colds—Sore Throat—Diphtheria—Rheumatism, and Neuralgia. Always keep it in the house, ready for instant use—All Druggists Sell it.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS PER SAN ANTONIO & PESTH AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ONE OF 100.

These bonds are shown in a loan, the interest of which is paid out in premiums (one issue yearly). Every bond is entitled to

Three Drawings Annually,

Until such and every bond is redeemed with larger or smaller premium. Every loss after case one of the following premiums, as there are

NO BLANKS.

Premium		Florins.		Florins.
1	at	100,000	equals	100,000
1	at	50,000	"	50,000
1	at	20,000	"	20,000
1	at	10,000	"	10,000
1	at	5,000	"	5,000
1	at	2,000	"	2,000
1	at	1,000	"	1,000
1	at	500	"	500
1	at	200	"	200
1	at	100	"	100
1	at	50	"	50
Together 1,000 premiums, amounting to				1,000,000

Tickets are issued for the Drawings of the Imperial Austrian Government Lottery, which are strictly under Government supervision, and the drawings are made at the Government Office, and are conducted by Government Officials. Every ticket issued is a bona fide Government Bond, and entitles the holder to a prize in the Drawing, and at the end of the Lottery the Government pays back the full value of the Bond. Tickets are issued for the Drawings, and are delivered to purchasers immediately after the Drawing. Purchasers have the choice of Tickets, and can select any number they may fancy. Tickets are issued for any amount, from one to one hundred. Purchasers in ordering should state whether they wish to receive Tickets for the first or second Drawing. Orders should be addressed to the undersigned, and remittances may be made by Postal Money Orders, Bank Drafts, or Registered Letters. Prices of Tickets for the Drawings are as follows:

Whole Ticket	$10
Half Ticket	5
Quarter Ticket	2.50
Eighth Ticket	1.25

Every purchaser of a Ticket will receive an Official Government Lottery Bond, signed and sealed by the Austrian Government, which is the same as a

ANTI-COERCION AGITATION.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

the Catholic Church, and struggled to maintain the moral law, yet this league, so supported, was stigmatized as a conspiracy sustained by criminals and dynamiters. The bill itself was the grossest kind of an attempt at a violation of the moral law. The bill aimed to sweep away at one fell swoop all the cherished rights of the people. It was justified by nothing in the condition of Ireland. The begrudging practised by Irish people arose naturally from the irrepressible growth of Irish public opinion. The only way to do without it was to obtain laws governing the people of Ireland as majority with those people.

Sexton, continuing said that it was absurd to attempt to suppress a body so strong in the heart of the Irish and so powerfully supported in Ireland and America as the League, which, so far from being accessory to and the incitor of crime, labored to put it down. If the bill passed, it would hugely hasten the ruin of the Government. The day which saw the downfall of the Government would witness the cessation of coercion. [Cheers.]

GLADSTONE ON COERCION.

He Shows up the Tories Successfully.

Gladstone, upon rising was loudly cheered. He said that if the bill was passed the political subscriptions from America, which some of the speakers condemned, were likely to increase; not Irish subscriptions alone, but those humane contributions which were reflecting such splendid light upon American life and his supporters had been charged with inconsistency in proposing coercion at a former time and opposing it now. He might admit a feeling of shame over the failure of coercion, but he did not refuse the lessons of experience. [Hisses.] He believed, and so seemingly did the Conservatives of 1885, that though coercion in 1882 reduced the amount of crime, it made the Irish more determined than ever to continue. Finding no permanent result from that course, the Liberals looked to some other. The measure given at the last election was to govern Ireland without coercion. When the Lib erals passed the coercion bill they passed a remedial proposal in reality—not an impossible one. [Cheers.] He would withdraw that expression and say illusion. [Laughter.] That the Government intend to stand or fall by their relief bill! Before they went to a division he hoped and expected that they would give a clear, unmistakable, unequivocal answer to that question.

Gladstone complained that the Government had withheld from Parliament information regarding the state of crime in Ireland, of which there has been no sufficient increase to justify the bill. "The only increase was in menacing letters; were those outrages? [A voice, "Yes."] Then he had been the subject of hundreds of outrages [laughter], but they were always perpetrated by what was known as the loyal, law-abiding party of Ireland. [Parnellite cheers.] They proceeded from the most peaceable people in the kingdom, mostly at the time of the disembablishment of the Irish Church. [Laughter.]

Proceeding to deal with the bill, Gladstone said it was intended to suppress any combination to secure reduction of rents. He repelled and repudiated the allegation that it was a crime; but. It was not intended to suppress exactest crimes known to the law, but it was a bill that made things crimes that never were crimes. Conspiracy was already a punishable crime. Therefore the introduction of the conspiracy clause in the present bill might fairly be called nonsense. A tenant refusing to pay rent had the prospect held out to him of obtaining a reduction by bonneting the bankruptcy. In this same time he would get the benefit of six month's hard labor. [Laughter.] Was the bill aimed at the land leagues? [Parnellite cheers.]

The bopposition was done in England, said Gladstone, especially among the upper classes. It was done in sentiment, but in Ireland it was done from necessity. [Cheers.] The more bills of this kind passed, the more the House would strengthen Parnell's influence. He had no doubt the bill would lead to an increase in crime and secret societies. Legislation against the nation was vain and futile. Combinations in Ireland could not be suppressed. The question was, by whom were these combinations to be guided? He maintained by those responsible to Parliament, not by secret agents. The Government most unwillingly was going to encourage even extreme forms of violence. In his opinion the Government had the idea of dynamite and dagger locked with sentiment upon the proceedings of the present Government. [Cheers.] In his view the bill was a poison. He would not present it to the lips of Ireland. It must be presented by other hands, and it would be an honor and a source of happiness to him to think that he was permitted to have the smallest share in dashing it to the ground. Gladstone resumed his seat amid loud cheers.

AMERICAN SYMPATHY.

A Protest Against the Passage of the Irish Coercion Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A meeting was held here this evening in the Masonic Temple to give expression on the part of American residents and sojourners at the national capital to protest against the passage of the Coercion bill for Ireland, now pending in the British Parliament. The Chairman of the committee called the meeting to order at international Congressman Springer of Illinois to preside. After stating the purpose of the meeting Springer said: "The contest was going on in Ireland. Britain in reference to the government of Ireland was in many respects very similar to that which was carried on in the American colonies, and it would not be inappropriate for Ireland at this time to proclaim that immortal Declaration of Independence which 113 years ago was proclaimed in Philadelphia."

General Rosecrans Register of the Treasury, spoke briefly. Ex-Senator Van Wyck of Nebraska said that England had no more reason for her pretended right to oppress the American colonies than she has for oppressing Ireland. In our own soil claimed territory and planted her people and government upon it. Ireland had been taken by conquest and spoliation, for which the vanquisher of must and the just judgment of Heaven had been ten long delayed.

Congressman Crain of Texas read to the meeting resolutions prepared by the committee appointed for the purpose, the closing paragraph being as follows:

Resolved, That the enactment of such a diabolical law would not alone be an outrage on the Irish people but a crime against the spirit of liberty everywhere and that the framers and advocates of the Coercion bill should go down to posterity condemned by humanity and branded with infamy.

The resolutions were adopted with cheers and music. The announcement was made that they would be cabled to Gladstone and Parnell.

A large number of letters were read by the Secretary. John Sherman wrote: "Your kind letter of the 6th, inviting me to attend the proposed Kansas meeting at Masonic Temple, for the purpose of entering a protest against the passage of the Coercion bill now pending in the British Parliament, is received. I regret that I shall be unable to attend, while sincerely sympathizing in the object of meeting. I could not express my views on this important subject more accurately than I have done so in a recent letter, a copy of which I inclose." Letters were also received from Hoxie Cushing and "Sunset" Cox.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM.—On March 25th, Joseph Walker was sentenced to twenty years' penal servitude for the murder of Private Hughes, of the West Surrey Regiment, during the riots in Belfast last July. Walker was tried upon the capital charge, but the jury found a verdict of manslaughter. It will be remembered that Walker was put on trial at the Omagh Winter Assizes, before Judge Lawson, who repeated the evidence of wilful murder as direct and strong that he refused to accept the minor verdict of manslaughter. Walker's demeanor when the sentence was passed upon him afforded a pretty accurate indication of the sort of man he is. He excitedly shouted to the judge to "execute me at once," a demonstration in which the richly insolence of the brave asserted itself. The sentence has given much offence to the "loyal" inhabitants of that hotbed of "law and order" where Walker resided, the Shankhill road.

CARLOW.—A largely attended meeting of the inhabitants of Carlow and the surrounding districts was held on March 12th, in the Town Hall, Carlow, for the purpose of expressing indignation at the evictions which were being carried out on the Lone down estate, Queen's County. The Her. Edward Kavanagh presided. At a meeting held in Athy, a sum of £200 was subscribed towards the fund opened on behalf of the evicted tenantry.

CAVAN.—Edward McGauran, Esq., Clerk of the Crown and Peace for Cavan, died suddenly on March 23th. After the rising of the Quarter Sessions Court, the deceased gentleman, in company with Judge Curran, County Court Judge, went out for a walk, and was about a mile from the town he fell on the footpath. Help was procured and soon arrived, but, notwithstanding all that could be done, the deceased never rallied, and expired in about a quarter of an hour.

CORK.—Rev. P. J. Neil, C.C., Kinsale, has been presented with addresses by the female members of the Confraternity of the Holy Family, the parishioners and the Young Men's Society of Blackrock, where he was for several years a curate.

On Sunday, March 20th, a meeting of the Nationalists of Buttevant and Kilnapike presided over by Mr. H. Heffernan, was held for the purpose of forming a committee to organize a testimonial to Mr. John Cullinan, who is now in prison in Cork, in consequence of having been tried under the Coercion Act. A resolution was adopted, recognizing the services rendered by Mr. Cullinan on behalf of the people, and letters were read from the Mayor of Cork and others enclosing subscriptions. A committee was then formed, and fifty pounds subscribed on the spot.

The Lords of the Admiralty have issued printed notices to be posted at the Haulbowline Dockyard, Cork Harbor, that on or the 1st of June next, batches of men from 40 to 60 per month, will be discharged, until the number now employed (430) is reduced to 250; the greatest consternation consequently prevails among the families of the men.

On Sunday, March 20th, the three weeks Mission conducted simultaneously in all the churches of the city with unexampled success was brought to a close in Cork, and is described as the most singular and imposing demonstration witnessed in that Catholic community for many years. The Bishop (Right Rev. D. O Collagan) and his clergy have expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the zeal and devotedness exhibited by the people. The churches were crowded to excess at the vast congregations who crowded to them on the closing night, and that hundreds had to turn from the doors. An idea of the numbers that approached the altar may be had by the mention of the fact that over 15 priests were received the Holy Eucharist in the Cathedral during the three weeks, with one in the South Parish, and over 8,000 in St. Peter and Paul's. The number in the other churches were proportionately large. The Bishop administered Confirmation to over 300.

CLARE.—The court-house and market-house of Tulla are covered with civil bill ejectment processes in the number of about twenty, at the suit of Mr. R. R. Kane and Mr. Thomas M Molony, agents, of the Duke and Kilkenna tenants.

A contemplated erecting one hundred and fifty additional laborers' cottages in the Ennis Union.

DOWN.—On March 19th, as a farmer named David Arthurs, Carnamoy, near Ballymena, was driving home his home with a cart loaded with lime from Cushendall, the animal took frightened and bolted. Arthurs was thrown to the ground, the wheel of the cart passing over his body, and crushing him in a sickening manner. He was conveyed to his home, where he succumbed to his injuries in a short time. The deceased leaves a wife and family to mourn his untimely end.

DONEGAL.—Captain Hill has served over fifty ejectments for Quarter Sessions, commencing in Letterkenny, on April 9. Amongst those in the Rev. James McFadden, P. P., against whom there are three ejectments. The Rev. gentleman was served personally by the process server on his public street of Lifford, on the occasion of his attendance there in connection with the defence of his parishioner, Mr. Boyle. Twenty-eight ejectment decrees obtained by Capt. Hill at the January Sessions have not been yet executed, as that exercise on a very large scale may be expected to take place at a not very distant day.

DUBLIN.—On March 21st, a young man named Daniel Lance, a joiner, which engaged in some work at Guinness's Brewery, lost his footing and fell from a scaffold to the ground, a distance of eighty feet. He was taken up in an unconscious state and of course conveyed to the Steevens Hospital. He was dreadfully injured about the head, and his arm was fractured. It was found that the fall had brought on concussion of the brain, and the injured man remains in hospital in a very critical condition.

The death is announced of Sir William Grace, Bart., in his 76th year. He is succeeded in the title and estate by his brother, Percy Raymond Grace, B.L., of Derry Manckstown, county Dublin, who married, in 1874, Margaret, daughter of the late Valentine O'B. O'Connor, of Merrion square, and has issue, William Raymond, born in 1877.

On March 19th, there passed from this life to a better, the Rev. Mr. Doyle, a most amiable and distinguished student of the Urban College, Rome. He was to have been ordained for work in the Archdiocese of Dublin next Easter, but a few days before his death he was seized with inflammation of the lungs, through which he passed in his God, deeply regretted by his superiors and companions and by all who knew him in Rome.

GALWAY.—On March 23, a fire was discovered to have broken out in the premises of the old clog factory, Galway, lately used as a store-house for the jute and spinning company annexed at Earl's Island. There was an immense pile of bagging fabrics in store, and when the fire broke out it was a serious one. The losses were two story, and the flames lit up the whole town. An estimate of the loss cannot yet be accurately formed. It is understood the premises were insured.

KERRY.—An extensive scheme of English fish dealers have made arrangements with the commissioners of Fenit Pier to discharge their steamer (at present attending the fishing fleet off Limerick at Fenit and have the fish conveyed by rail to Tralee, where it will be manured for the Manchester and Liverpool markets. The contract was made by the secretary of the Tralee and Limerick Railway Company, and forwarded to the English market. The contractors are making the necessary arrangements to revive the fish, and the steamer may arrive at any time. This will lead to establish Fenit as the port for the extensive fishing district, stretching from the mouth of the Shannon to Valentia. The works at Fenit are progressing steadily towards completion, and in a few months from this time, Tralee will be able to boast of a harbor second only to Kingstown, in Ireland.

KILKENNY.—Mr. James Fleming has been reinstated in his holding, at Heathgort, from which he was evicted some months ago, by Captain Wheeler. He has arranged to purchase his farm under Lord Ashbourne's Act, whereby his instalments for the future will be £50 a year. Hitherto rent was £90 and his judicial rent £80.

A judicial rent fixed at Mr. Meehan, whose at Grosschill, was forced to death, on March 21st. It appears that her evidence got satisfied with parallel which against.

KILDARE.—Mr. Thomas Dowling died on March 19th, at his residence, Mayfield Cottage, Hampstead, from a severe attack of gout. Mr. Dowling was one of the chief promoters of the Kingstown and Knightsbridge Line, which has just obtained the sanction of both Houses of Parliament, and held the highest opinion of the advantages that line would confer on the South of Ireland, the expenses in the promotion of which he bore a large share, and just lived to see it put in a fair way of completion, for through him and his friends the present influential board of directors had been got together in London. Mr. Dowling was a Kildare man, and though living in London for the last 40 years, has been connected with a good many railway works in Ireland. He has contracts were in the county Cork, where he constructed the Bantry Extension and West Cork Lines. He was a liberal employer and a strong Liberal in politics, of a kindly, generous nature, and souated many a fellow-Irishman in London, where he was greatly respected, leaving held the office treasurer before last of Prime Warden of one of the City guilds.

LONGFORD.—On March 21st, a meeting of tenants on the estate of Mr. John Cullinan, who is now in prison in Cork, in consequence of having been tried under the Coercion Act. A resolution was adopted, recognizing the services rendered by Mr. Cullinan on behalf of the people, and letters were read from the Mayor of Cork and others enclosing subscriptions. A committee was then formed, and fifty pounds subscribed on the spot.

The Lords of the Admiralty have issued printed notices to be posted at the Haulbowline Dockyard, Cork Harbor, that on or the 1st of June next, batches of men from 40 to 60 per month, will be discharged, until the number now employed (430) is reduced to 250; the greatest consternation consequently prevails among the families of the men.

On Sunday, March 20th, the three weeks Mission conducted simultaneously in all the churches of the city with unexampled success was brought to a close in Cork, and is described as the most singular and imposing demonstration witnessed in that Catholic community for many years. The Bishop (Right Rev. D. O Collagan) and his clergy have expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the zeal and devotedness exhibited by the people. The churches were crowded to excess at the vast congregations who crowded to them on the closing night, that hundreds had to turn from the doors. An idea of the numbers that approached the altar may be had by the mention of the fact that over 15 priests received the Holy Eucharist in the Cathedral during the three weeks, with one in the South Parish, and over 8,000 in St. Peter and Paul's. The number in the other churches were proportionately large. The Bishop administered Confirmation to over 300.

CLARE.—The court-house and market-house of Tulla are covered with civil bill ejectment processes in the number of about twenty, at the suit of Mr. R. R. Kane and Mr. Thomas M Molony, agents, of the Duke and Kilkenna tenants.

A contemplated erecting one hundred and fifty additional laborers' cottages in the Ennis Union.

DOWN.—On March 19th, as a farmer named David Arthurs, Carnamoy, near Ballymena, was driving home his home with a cart loaded with lime from Cushendall, the animal took frightened and bolted. Arthurs was thrown to the ground, the wheel of the cart passing over his body, and crushing him in a sickening manner. He was conveyed to his home, where he succumbed to his injuries in a short time. The deceased leaves a wife and family to mourn his untimely end.

DONEGAL.—Captain Hill has served over fifty ejectments for Quarter Sessions, commencing in Letterkenny, on April 9. Amongst those in the Rev. James McFadden, P. P., against whom there are three ejectments. The Rev. gentleman was served personally by the process server on his public street of Lifford, on the occasion of his attendance there in connection with the defence of his parishioner, Mr. Boyle. Twenty-eight ejectment decrees obtained by Capt. Hill at the January Sessions have not been yet executed, as that exercise on a very large scale may be expected to take place at a not very distant day.

DUBLIN.—On March 21st, a young man named Daniel Lance, a joiner, which engaged in some work at Guinness's Brewery, lost his footing and fell from a scaffold to the ground, a distance of eighty feet. He was taken up in an unconscious state and of course conveyed to the Steevens Hospital. He was dreadfully injured about the head, and his arm was fractured. It was found that the fall had brought on concussion of the brain, and the injured man remains in hospital in a very critical condition.

The death is announced of Sir William Grace, Bart., in his 76th year. He is succeeded in the title and estate by his brother, Percy Raymond Grace, B.L., of Derry Manckstown, county Dublin, who married, in 1874, Margaret, daughter of the late Valentine O'B. O'Connor, of Merrion square, and has issue, William Raymond, born in 1877.

On March 19th, there passed from this life to a better, the Rev. Mr. Doyle, a most amiable and distinguished student of the Urban College, Rome. He was to have been ordained for work in the Archdiocese of Dublin next Easter, but a few days before his death he was seized with inflammation of the lungs, through which he passed in his God, deeply regretted by his superiors and companions and by all who knew him in Rome.

GALWAY.—On March 23, a fire was discovered to have broken out in the premises of the old clog factory, Galway, lately used as a store-house for the jute and spinning company annexed at Earl's Island.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

President, R. H. McDonald. Vice-President, R. H. McDonald, Jr. Cashier, S. G. Murphy.

Capital, $1,000,000. Oldest Established Bank on the Pacific Coast Surplus, $550,000.

BUYS AND SELLS BILLS OF Exchange ON UNITED STATES, ENGLAND, IRELAND, Scotland, and EUROPE. ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

ISSUES LETTERS OF CREDIT Available Throughout THE WORLD. Collections MADE PROMPTLY EVERYWHERE AT LOWEST RATES.

PACIFIC BANK, - Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, Cal.

GILROY HOT SPRINGS.

IN MEMORIAM.

EDWARD D. DALTON.

BALL'S BLACK DEPERLING CORSETS

W. DAVIS, Harness, Saddles, LEATHER, HORSE CLOTHING AND SADDLERY HARDWARE WHOLESALE 410 Market St., bet. Sansome & Battery SAN FRANCISCO

CHICAGO CORSET CO. 207 FRANKLIN STREET, CHICAGO. Sold by Retailers Everywhere.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL Commission Merchants N. E. CORNER FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS., SAN FRANCISCO

LONDON DIAMONDS (NET WEAR) LOOSE MOUNTED DIAMONDS

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 747.

KNABE PIANOFORTES. UNEQUALLED IN Tone, Touch, Workmanship & Durability. WILLIAM KNABE & CO. BALTIMORE, NEW YORK AND WASHINGTON.

LADIES Visiting & Business BONNET OR HAT, Cheap and Stylish. Call at 1017 Market St., Between Sixth and Seventh Streets. MRS. J. HARRINGTON REMOVAL NOTICE.

HAY'S GALLERY, PHOTOGRAPHER, 323 KEARNY STREET, San Francisco.

McCORMICK BROS. Book and Job Printers, In Consequence of the Great Increase in their Business HAVE REMOVED To Larger Premises, 410 SANSOME STREET, 410 (Near Commercial.) When they will run their presses By Steam and where they will be prepared with greater facilities than ever for doing all kinds of Book and Job Printing NEATLY, CHEAPLY AND QUICKLY. TRUMBULL & BEEBE Growers, Importers and Dealers in Seeds, Trees and Plants 419 & 421 Sansome Street, San Francisco.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL. THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS WORN ON THE BODY. Is warranted to hold the rupture, or we will refund the money. It is light, cleanly, and cannot get out of order. It is worn with ease by the weakest person, and is the only Truss that will not injure the wearer. It is the only Truss that will hold the rupture while bathing. It is the only Truss that will not become offensive to the wearer. It is the only Truss that will last a lifetime. It is the only Truss that will not rust. It is the only Truss that will not chafe or gall. It is the only Truss that will not stain linen. It is the only Truss that will not cost more than a good one. It is the only Truss that will not be sold for more than it is worth. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by agents. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by peddlers. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by swindlers. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by quacks. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who have no interest in your welfare. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for your money than your health. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for you. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for humanity. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their families. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their friends. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their neighbors. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their country. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their God. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their souls. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their souls. It is the only Truss that will not be sold by those who care more for themselves than for their souls

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

THE RIVER AND THE SERPENT.

"I have a poem with a moral deep,
As the fathoms of the sea, and sweet as
The overhanging Lists of Heaven, and Shall be published, perhaps, but not in any place
The Spectator but of long ago which Each Love
Its only counsel."

I.

'Twas a pleasant little river,
'Twas a sparkling little river,
And full merrily it trickled down a mossy mountain side;
And the Sun shone softly on it,
While his warm smiles danced upon it,
Through the long and lovely season of a dreamy June.

II.

'Twas a playful little urchin,
'Twas a smiling little urchin,
And it hovered round the river with a soothing, gentle cry,
As it whispered its affection
With a passionate inflection,
And the little stream believed it and consented with a sigh.

* * * * * * *

III.

'Tis a moaning little river,
'Tis a hopeless little river,
And it drags itself fail away down the mossy mountain side;
And its waters once so sparkling,
Now seem stained and foul and darkling,
As they labor thro' the bleakness of a shivering Winter tide.

IV.

'Tis a withered little river,
'Tis a choked little river,
And it shuns the bright, pure sunlight and, mournfully on doth glide;
Praying, hoping—but in vain—
For the coming once again
Of the sulphy that bewitched it in the golden Summertide!

C. ANTHONY DUFFY.

[FROM THE MONITOR.]

BRING BACK MY FLOWERS.

The Sun had just kissed the dewy tears
From the flowery petals fair,
And the fragrant blossoms raised their heads To breathe the balmy air.
Spring had heralded in her train
Our bright and lovely May,
Nature donned her gala robes,
Her homage sweet to pay.

A maiden stood upon the bank
Of a mossy-bordered stream,
Her cheek was flushed with the morning air,
And her eyes with joy did beam;
She held to her bosom a garland frail
Of roses and jessamine,
The dulcesa heatherbrow twined its stem
With the lily and sweet woodbine.

Above the cerulean arch spread out,
Unmarred by a fleecy cloud,
The bluish mass seen in the listening wood,
Their anthems clear and loud;
And the maiden's bosom was as calm
As the placid stream at her feet,
And her robes rose up in a happy swell
Of song that was pure and sweet.

Then she glanced at the flowers that lay on her arm,
In a peaceful and trusting rest,
And she thought how bright they would look bedewed about
On the mountain's silver crest.

That subject was soon changed, still,

Oh! yes; it was right to use her flowers,
Her rich, new lay with the title,
And the sweet lyre hung in exalting glee
And hop, y childish frolic;
They seemed the jewels fitfully set
In a silver's transparent hue,
And in admiration the maiden paused,
The remembrance fade to true.

But, alas, for the dreams, ye, pouting brows
That crowed the current bower,
And wafted the flowers adown the stream
From the reach of the maid on the shore;
Tossed hither and thither on ripples so bright,
Her enchanted eye had not seen
That a steady hand was bearing away
Her fragile and flowery dream.

A shadow passed o'er the tranquil bow
As she realized the loss
Of her garland, culled from our Lady's shrine;
And she cried—but all too late—
"O, cruel stream, keep not my flowers,
But bear them again to my side;
I only lent them to you in play—
Bring back my flowers," she cried.

But the streamlet rippled a merry laugh
As it carried her treasure away,
And the breeze issued in the tree-top lyres,
A low little mocking lay;
And the maiden stood on the shore and wept,
And called to the stream in vain,
To restore her the flowers she prized so much,
But they never came back again.

Ah! silly maid, why did you not keep
Your offering fair and sweet—
Instead of coming it into the stream,
To place at our Lady's feet;
But are we not often more foolish, when
We throw virtue's blossoms away,
For the trivial pleasure a moment affords,
Our treasures are gone for ever!

The flowers garnered through years of toil,
In suffering, pain and strife,
In a thoughtless moment are cast to the breeze
For the fleeting allurements of life;
But, ah, we will never know our loss
Till we stand on Eternity's shore,
And weep in vain—for the stream of Time
Will bring back our flowers no more!

ANNA WEEKS.

[FROM THE MONITOR.]

A HYMN TO THE QUEEN OF MAY

Had I the mind of the poet blest,
And the voice of St. Dunstan's lyre,
I would not write—I would not stay,
Lay my heart and my soul desires!
My human pen's can frame the word,
No material do can chime in lay
Worthy of thee—forever crowned—
Our Lady and loving Queen of May.

The breath is in the rocky cell;
The virgin from her bower retired,
The warblers in her grove resort
Ay, thousands in the sunny forest,
The proud and rich, the wise and great,
Where'er our Pontiff holds his way,
To thee their hearts are strung, alone,
O, let's and loving Queen of May.

Within the winding casement,
When kneeling with a Christian wife,
What so long was heard 'mish pagan Rome,
Be poor, or pleasing in God's sight!
Your song rolls down St. Peter's shine!
What music does the spot, day!
What song can vie dear Jesus' smiles?
Thy hymn, O loving Queen of May.

Let maidens bring their wreaths of snow,
Let youth's hearts sing some of thee,
Let all life's cot'ages to thee go
And lend their hearts when beats their bosom
But, like St. John, (it let me live,
Thee as my Mother and my stay,
And grant, O grant, I'll one above,
My love, my loving Queen of May.

Rev. W. P. TRAY.

Literary Miscellany.

After Twenty Years.

A Beautiful Catholic Story Written for the Monitor by A. P. Narsen.

"Oh! if I could but see my poor, old mother and little Alice, I would die content! But I am not a crybby of it, for I must have broken their hearts by my reckless cruelty, and the scorn with which I treated their fervent pleas. But God heals the penitent sinner, and the Son shone softly on it, While his warm smiles danced upon it, Through the long and lovely season of a dreamy June.

II.

'Twas a playful little urchin,
'Twas a smiling little urchin,
And it hovered round the river with a soothing, gentle cry,
As it whispered its affection
With a passionate inflection,
And the little stream believed it and consented with a sigh.

* * * * * * *

III.

'Tis a moaning little river,
'Tis a hopeless little river,
And it drags itself fail away down the mossy mountain side;
And its waters once so sparkling,
Now seem stained and foul and darkling,
As they labor thro' the bleakness of a shivering Winterside.

IV.

'Tis a withered little river,
'Tis a choked little river,
And it shuns the bright, pure sunlight and, mournfully on doth glide;
Praying, hoping—but in vain—
For the coming once again
Of the sulphy that bewitched it in the golden Summertide!

C. ANTHONY DUFFY.

[FROM THE MONITOR.]

BRING BACK MY FLOWERS.

The Sun had just kissed the dewy tears
From the flowery petals fair,
And the fragrant blossoms raised their heads To breathe the balmy air.
Spring had heralded in her train
Our bright and lovely May,
Nature donned her gala robes,
Her homage sweet to pay.

A maiden stood upon the bank
Of a mossy-bordered stream,
Her cheek was flushed with the morning air,
And her eyes with joy did beam;
She held to her bosom a garland frail
Of roses and jessamine,
The dulcesa heatherbrow twined its stem
With the lily and sweet woodbine.

Above the cerulean arch spread out,
Unmarred by a fleecy cloud,
The bluish mass seen in the listening wood,
Their anthems clear and loud;
And the maiden's bosom was as calm
As the placid stream at her feet,
And her robes rose up in a happy swell
Of song that was pure and sweet.

Then she glanced at the flowers that lay on her arm,
In a peaceful and trusting rest,
And she thought how bright they would look bedewed about
On the mountain's silver crest.

That subject was soon changed, still,

Oh! yes; it was right to use her flowers,
Her rich, new lay with the title,
And the sweet lyre hung in exalting glee
And hop, y childish frolic;
They seemed the jewels fitfully set
In a silver's transparent hue,
And in admiration the maiden paused,
The remembrance fade to true.

But, alas, for the dreams, ye, pouting brows
That crowed the current bower,
And wafted the flowers adown the stream
From the reach of the maid on the shore;
Tossed hither and thither on ripples so bright,
Her enchanted eye had not seen
That a steady hand was bearing away
Her fragile and flowery dream.

A shadow passed o'er the tranquil bow
As she realized the loss
Of her garland, culled from our Lady's shrine;
And she cried—but all too late—
"O, cruel stream, keep not my flowers,
But bear them again to my side;
I only lent them to you in play—
Bring back my flowers," she cried.

But the streamlet rippled a merry laugh
As it carried her treasure away,
And the breeze issued in the tree-top lyres,
A low little mocking lay;
And the maiden stood on the shore and wept,
And called to the stream in vain,
To restore her the flowers she prized so much,
But they never came back again.

Ah! silly maid, why did you not keep
Your offering fair and sweet—
Instead of coming it into the stream,
To place at our Lady's feet;
But are we not often more foolish, when
We throw virtue's blossoms away,
For the trivial pleasure a moment affords,
Our treasures are gone for ever!

The flowers garnered through years of toil,
In suffering, pain and strife,
In a thoughtless moment are cast to the breeze
For the fleeting allurements of life;
But, ah, we will never know our loss
Till we stand on Eternity's shore,
And weep in vain—for the stream of Time
Will bring back our flowers no more!

ANNA WEEKS.

[FROM THE MONITOR.]

A HYMN TO THE QUEEN OF MAY

Had I the mind of the poet blest,
And the voice of St. Dunstan's lyre,
I would not write—I would not stay,
Lay my heart and my soul desires!
My human pen's can frame the word,
No material do can chime in lay
Worthy of thee—forever crowned—
Our Lady and loving Queen of May.

The breath is in the rocky cell;
The virgin from her bower retired,
The warblers in her grove resort
Ay, thousands in the sunny forest,
The proud and rich, the wise and great,
Where'er our Pontiff holds his way,
To thee their hearts are strung, alone,
O, let's and loving Queen of May.

Within the winding casement,
When kneeling with a Christian wife,
What so long was heard 'mish pagan Rome,
Be poor, or pleasing in God's sight!
Your song rolls down St. Peter's shine!
What music does the spot, day!
What song can vie dear Jesus' smiles?
Thy hymn, O loving Queen of May.

Let maidens bring their wreaths of snow,
Let youth's hearts sing some of thee,
Let all life's cot'ages to thee go
And lend their hearts when beats their bosom
But, like St. John, (it let me live,
Thee as my Mother and my stay,
And grant, O grant, I'll one above,
My love, my loving Queen of May.

Rev. W. P. TRAY.

Indian Statistics.

From statistics recently published from Right Rev. Bishop Marty, Vicar Apostolic of Idaho, concerning the Indians of the Pacific West, their conversions and distribution in this and other States and Territories we learn that there are in California, 11,000; Oregon, 4,000; Washington Territory, 10,000; Vancouver Island, 7,000; Alaska, 50,000; Nevada, 7,000; Montana, 16,000; Idaho, 14,000; Dakota, 3,000; Northern Minnesota, 6,000; Wisconsin and Michigan, 14,000; Nebraska and Wyoming, 5,000; Arizona, 14,000; New Mexico, 20,000; Mississippi, 3,000; total, 184,000.

A specially warm, affectionate and soul disease Marvelous Discovery, Ask Druggists, 25 Wells St., N. Y.

THE VOICE OF MARY.

Its Power and Advantages.

The Church attributes a peculiar power of intercession to the Blessed Virgin, and calls upon her to be our advocate with God, and to invoke her intercession three times a day by the ringing of the Angelus, also consecrates the month of May to her honor, and celebrates her feast every month. But this was not enough for the piety of her children. All united with the love of Mary wished to pay her homage in a way more suitable. A holy proud filled them, however, at such an time, to make a Month's observance, at such an the year to take up the devotion and sending the earnest of the angels. Thus, and days ago, the month of May, dedicated to Mary, has been a month of delight, but should choose what is best and most pleasant, thus adding the most beautiful month of the year has been selected, which by the consecration of nature and the appreciable variety of flowers throughout the earth is centered, seems to invite the soul to receive the Virgin herself with most beautiful acts of virtue, in choice of flowers, as it were a crown for the Queen of the universe.

This virtue is—to such a practice remains unknown, all researches can lead only to uncertainty, tiel, doubtless, wished to preserve the beauty of the Lily of the Valley, the promise of such rewarding as intimately more precious could for him, and for her. But he blessed his work. He developed seed and gave stalks the most populous minds with sacrificial, and crippel them to be recognized as the Lady of God therein. A holy proud show, and the Lily of the Valley so justly revered by all children of Mary, thus yielding this month—as—"Month of that touching story of the prophet Elias who after flying from Jezebel, fatigue, in the cities on the summit of Carmel and implores God to remove his life. Lo! an angel appears in a cloud, and bids the aged prophet arise and eat, for the journey is too long for him. Elias arose and ate, and was strengthened by the food, and walked forty days and forty nights, even to Horeb, the mount of God. Thus, the month of Mary, according to the custom of the early ages, is a time of fasting. And those who pray and meditate on the virtues of the Virgin Mary, and offer up the fruits of the earth, and adorned her altars with the Mai-pole, followed by their children, who carried the Mai-pole, and the meeting, then other groups were formed and was begun.

At the end of my journey was N., the home of the Blessed Virgin. "Again, this day of my manhood the old painters of Italy had taught me their conceptions of the beauty that is more than mortal; but those images, all seemed shadowy now, and faded before me as dimly, the one exemplified the other, that they left me not one sweet idea, on which I could look, and look again and say, "Mary, see! Yet they left me more than an ideal—they left me Mary, when I am sent to have thy—a faint apprehension of beauty not conceived with the old masters, they touched me—for give, proud Maria d'Angelo!—they touched me with a faint, but indelible transcending mental chain.

I came to Nazareth, and was led from the convent to the sanctuary. Long falling will sometimes heat my brain, and draw me away from the world—will distract my judgment, confuse my notions of right and wrong, and weaken my power of choosing the right. I had fasted, perhaps, too long, for I was fatigued with the zeal of an insane devotion to the Blessed Virgin, and the Holy Queen of Christendom. But I knew the feeblenessof this gentle malady and knew how easily my wakeful reason, if ever so slightly provoked, would yield one back to it; for there is but one chilling breath of the outer world, and all the loving pity could cower and fly before the sound of my own bitter laugh. And so, I knew I tred tenderly; not looking to the right nor to the left, but bending my eyes to the ground.

The Morning Friar served me well—he had me down quietly, and all lion alertly to the Virgin's home. The mystic air was so burnt with the consuming flame of the sacred Mother, and so filled with incense, that my chest laboured strongly and heated with intense pain. There, with beating heart, the Virgin knelt, and, listening, I strived to grasp and hold on with rivetted eyes some of the fanned Madonnas, but of all the heavenly faces imagined by men, there was none that could abide with me in this very sanctuary. Impatient of vacancy, I grew really entranged in Nature, and if by some awful spell—some prize rite I could—do I not enter religion, that lists me fear that I could be prone, and yet not cease from being? Religion and gracious canon commanded me that I fall down entirely and kiss the rock that Blessed Mary pressed. With a half consciousness—with the semblance of a thrilling hope that I was plunging deep, deep into my last knowledge of some holy mystery—of some new, rapturous and daring sin, I knelt and bowed down my head and kissed the smooth rock with my lips. One moment—one moment—my heart, or some old pagan chords within me, woke up, and fervently bounded—my bosom was filled, and living as though I touched her warm robe—the moment—one more, and the Queen of her half left me. I rose from my knees. I felt my hopelessly sick. The more would reappeared. My good old monk was there, looking kind, with fatherly patience as he guided me from the church, and talked of the velocity and the coming repast, I listened to his words with some attention and pleasure.

* * *

Indian Statistics.

From statistics recently published from Right Rev. Bishop Marty, Vicar Apostolic of Idaho, concerning the Indians of the Pacific West, their conversions and distribution in this and other States and Territories we learn that there are in California, 11,000; Oregon, 4,000; Washington Territory, 10,000; Vancouver Island, 7,000; Alaska, 50,000; Nevada, 7,000; Montana, 16,000; Idaho, 14,000; Dakota, 3,000; Northern Minnesota, 6,000; Wisconsin and Michigan, 14,000; Nebraska and Wyoming, 5,000; Arizona, 14,000; New Mexico, 20,000; Mississippi, 3,000; total, 184,000.

A specially warm, affectionate and soul disease Marvelous Discovery, Ask Druggists, 25 Wells St., N. Y.

OUR MOTHER'S HOME.

The Sanctuary of the Blessed Virgin in the Hills of Galilee.

In his beautiful work entitled "Eothen," Mr. Kinglake thus speaks of the Blessed Virgin's home in Galilee, in his chapter entitled "The Sanctuary."

I crossed the plains of Esdraelon and entered upon the hills of beautiful Galilee. It was at sunset that my path fought me through round into the gorge of a little valley, and close upon a grey nant of dwelling, I found myself hapily perched in the lap of the mountain. There was only one alamed, and I was alone with the light of the sun, who had set for a long freedom, a lamp upon the to the holy Shrineel, and the rest of my journey, for the sun, gilttering summit was the land of a Minaret, and the rest of the sacred village that had yielded itself to my wonder under the shades of evening was the Nazareth.

Within the precincts of the Latin convent there stands the great Catholic Church which enclosses the sanctuary the dwelling of the Blessed Virgin. This is a gentle if absent place, and living as though I touched her warm robe—the moment—one more, and the Queen of her half left me. I rose from my knees. I felt my hopelessly sick. The more would reappeared. My good old monk was there, looking kind, with fatherly patience as he guided me from the church, and talked of the velocity and the coming repast. I listened to his words with some attention and pleasure.

* * *

Indian Statistics.

From statistics recently published from Right Rev. Bishop Marty, Vicar Apostolic of Idaho, concerning the Indians of the Pacific West, their conversions and distribution in this and other States and Territories we learn that there are in California, 11,000; Oregon, 4,000; Washington Territory, 10,000; Vancouver Island, 7,000; Alaska, 50,000; Nevada, 7,000; Montana, 16,000; Idaho, 14,000; Dakota, 3,000; Northern Minnesota, 6,000; Wisconsin and Michigan, 14,000; Nebraska and Wyoming, 5,000; Arizona, 14,000; New Mexico, 20,000; Mississippi, 3,000; total, 184,000.

A specially warm, affectionate and soul disease Marvelous Discovery, Ask Druggists, 25 Wells St., N. Y.

WHY HE CARRIED A POTATO.

THE BROKER ALWAYS KEPT ONE IN HIS POCKET.

He Did Not Carry It For Luck But to Keep Rheumatism at Bay. Tri-Pod Paints Gives Him Immunity. Read Together Proves Him to Be Truly A Wonderful Discovery.

New York World, March 6, 1887.

Editor Monitor:

Dear Sir—Some years ago I, the proprietor of the Tri-Pod Paint Co., was in the habit of carrying a potato in my pocket. I was a victim of rheumatism, and was advised by my physician to carry a potato in my pocket to keep the rheumatism away. I tried it, and it really brought the standards of Mary to full perfection for fort, for small implements of rheumatism, and the potato was in perfectly good condition, and I was cured in fact, and carried it for a long time, and finally lost it. Since then I have had no rheumatism, and I attribute the cure to the potato. Yours truly,

Tri-Pod Paint Co.

There is no State in the Union where people can live better or cheaper than in

OUR OWN CALIFORNIA

"HORN OF PLENTY"

So far as Edible and Fruits are concerned.

THE SECRET

Of living cheaply and well may be discovered by all Morrison readers. If they will purchase their household supplies from

FAMILY GROCERIES

From the well-known firm of

SBARBORO & CO.,

At their Old established place of Business,

531 Washington St.,

The Old House Still Stands

Where for more than a quarter of a Century—Tens of Thousands of Smiling, Pinched and

ECONOMICAL HOUSEKEEPERS

HAVE SAVED

Hundreds of Dollars Yearly

BY JUST KNOWING

Where to Buy their Groceries.

THE SECRET

BY WHICH

SBARBORO & CO.,

Can sell Groceries Any Cheaper than other Leading Grocers in Show-Stick Business Competition.

1 We buy all our goods for Cash.
2 We buy in large quantity at Bed-Rock Raise.
3 We sell to Cash Customers only.
4 We have no Bad Debts on our Books.
5 We buy cheap and can sell cheap.
6 Having no Bad Debts we require less profit.
7 We have fewer goods than our competitors.
8 Our customers get the benefit of our cash purchases.

Remember therefore that if you want

The Best Groceries

AT THE CHEAPEST PRICES

The proper place to purchase them is at

SBARBORO & CO.'S,

531 WASHINGTON STREET

[Between Montgomery and Sansome.]

READ THESE PRICES

And Call and Examine

OUR GOODS.

SUGARS.

Greatly Reduced.

15 pounds Dried Apples,	$1
18 pounds Tapioca,	$1
18 pounds Sago,	$1
20 pounds Codfish,	$1
16 pounds Prunes,	$1
10 pounds Dried Peas,	$1
Star Ground Coffee,	20c. per lb
Fine Tea, (No Humbug)	50c per lb
Fine Jar Tea,	50c per lb
Family Mixed Tea,	25c per lb
5-gallon can Banner Coal Oil,	$1.00
10 pounds P White Beans,	$1
Golden Syrup, 5 gall. kegs,	$1.75
20 pounds Canary Seed,	$1
Flour from Old Wheat at Great Reduction.

And all other Goods Equal ly Cheap.

WINES AND LIQUORS.

Claret, Bakersfield, 7 gallon
Claret, Fine, 7 gallon	$1 50
Sherry, Old, 7 gallon	$7 50
Port, Old, 7 gallon	$7 50
Old Tom Bourbon, 7 gallon	$6 00
Gold Dust Bourbon, 7 gallon	$6 00
Green Binnie, 7 gallon	$6 00
Green Hills, 7 gallon	$6 00
Sweet Wine, 7 gallon	$4 00

All orders promptly and carefully filled and delivered to any part of city, Oakland or Alameda free of charge.

Country orders solicited and made a specialty and shipped free of charge.

Country Produce Exchanged!

SEND FOR OUR PRICE LIST

SBARBORO & CO.

R. SBARBORO, Manager.

There is no finer or more delicious beverage than Cocoa. Unless it be Cocoa mixed with Boiling Water or Milk. Cocoa is a food, and a most nourishing food. Cocoa is easily digested, and is the most economical food. Cocoa is sold by Grocers everywhere. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Chocolate. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Shells. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Dutched Cocoa. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Nibs. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Butter. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Paste. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Essence. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Tablets. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Powder. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Mixture. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Sticks. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Cake. Cocoa is not to be confounded with Cocoa Lozenges

THE MONITOR.

PARISH ORGAN OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Saturday next will be the thirty-first anniversary of the death of Right Rev. Francis Garcia Diego y Moreno, D. D., First Bishop of this Archdiocese. We ask the pious prayers of our readers for the repose of this Apostolic Prelate's soul.

—The Catholics of Philadelphia have contributed $1,500,000 for charitable purposes during the episcopate of the Most Rev. P. J. Ryan. An example worthy of emulation by the faithful children of the Church in other sees.

—Pref Hyacinthe is reported seriously ill. May God grant him the grace of a conversion and a dissolution of the connubial partnership of Legaux, Merriman & Co., before the diabolical octopuses disperse to that land where the Halifax church courts for nothing.

—It is stated that one of the first steps which the Home Government intends to take after the coercion measure becomes law is the suppression of United Ireland and The Freeman's Journal. In view of such a calamity, therefore, it has been determined to place Michael Davitt at the head of a new National organ to be published in Dublin, to take the place of any present organ that may be suppressed.

—Christian education seems to be "booming" all over the land. A Catholic school building will be erected by the people of St. Benedict's (Colman) congregation at Terre Haute, Ind. The work will begin at once. The cost will be about $24,000. Mr. H. Hulman, the generous Catholic school-mentor the splendid hospital to the Sisters of St. Francis, handed the subscription list with $4,000; so far $12,000 has been subscribed.

—A cablegram announces for the fifth time—Semper idem—that the Vatican is renewing its efforts to induce Dr. McGlynn to go to Rome. Rome commands and Catholics obey. The See of Peter never belittles its authoritative attitude by repeated efforts to induce people to obey its commands. Rome can be Rome without Dr McGlynn; but Dr. McGlynn cannot be Rome's priest unless he obeys Rome.

—One of the best signs of the times is the change of sentiment among the people of England regarding Ireland's right to Home Rule, is found in the fact that no less than 3,200 non-Conformist English preachers have signed a protest against the Tory Coercion Bill which is now the talk of the world. The only ministers in England who favor Coercion are the Church of England hirelings, and they hate Gladstone because he disestablished King Henry the Eighth's Church in Ireland.

—At Cincinnati, on the 14th ult, Judge Shrader rendered a decision which is of interest to every holder of a lot in a cemetery. The trustees of an old cemetery in [illegible] "Court House" issued an order of sale on the ground that lots in a cemetery cannot be held in fee simple, but are bought from the trustees, to be surrendered when the building is to be torn down.

—The Brief of the Holy Father to Bishop Ireland on the Total Abstinence question, which we publish this week, will be the means of injecting fresh courage into the hearts of all who have a love for the holy cause of Temperance. It should also serve to impart a new impetus to the movement on the part of the Rev. Clergy, who are counselled by the Vicar of Christ to drive the plague of intemperance from the fold of Christ by assiduous preaching and exhortation, and to shine before all as models of abstinence, that so many calamities which flow from the treatises to the Church and State may, by their strenuous endeavors, be averted."

—Pref Hyacinthe is reported seriously ill. May God grant him the grace of a conversion and a dissolution of the connubial partnership of Legaux, Merriman & Co., before the diabolical octopuses disperse to that land where the Halifax church courts for nothing.

—It is stated that one of the first steps which the Home Government intends to take after the coercion measure becomes law is the suppression of United Ireland and The Freeman's Journal. In view of such a calamity, therefore, it has been determined to place Michael Davitt at the head of a new National organ to be published in Dublin, to take the place of any present organ that may be suppressed.

The Month of Our Heavenly Mother.

Family Devotions to the Mother of God during the month of May are now generally practiced, hence with this issue of the Monitor we present every subscriber with a copy of prayers which can be recited regularly every evening, both by families and individuals, with great spiritual profit to all concerned.

Catholics are assured—on the evidence of the great St. Bernard—that no one whoever implored a spiritual favor from the Blessed Virgin, or who had recourse to her powerful protection, were ever forsaken by the Mother of Pity. With what confidence, therefore, may not Catholics ask the Mother of an All-Merciful Redeemer for the graces, virtues and favors which are so needfully, beautifully and yet linearly set forth in the short prayers for every day in the week which follow in this issue of the Monitor.

Pref Hyacinthe is reported seriously ill. May God grant him the grace of a conversion and a dissolution of the connubial partnership of Legaux, Merriman & Co., before the diabolical octopuses disperse to that land where the Halifax church courts for nothing.

A Magnificent Marriage.

One of those high-handed outrages which peopled Ireland clothed with half an hundred seditious crimes, occurred last week in Vancouver, Washington Territory. As our readers already know, litigation has been going on for over a quarter of a century between the Catholic Church and the United States relative to the land occupied by the Barracks. In 1845 the Missions of St. James which covers the military reservation and a portion of the footsteps of Vancouver and the military authorities repudiated the claim of the Church.

In opposition was recently carried out by Rev. Father Jecker, the military authorities, in order to prevent them from removing fences erected by the Catholic authorities, and thus to defeat the United States representatives from trespassing in private property.

Injunction was refused, and Fortnight the military authorities notified Bishop Junger that the building which has been standing on the contested property for many years and occupied as a Catholic school under the designation of Holy Angels College, should be demolished. The message being delivered coolly to Bishop Junger while he was convalescing in the street with a crowd of bystanders. The messenger deputied to deliver the message evidently thought he was of importance, hence he delivered it in an offensive and insolent manner. It being impossible to remove the extensive College building, even to make preparations for doing so in the short time designated by the engineers—immediately, Bishop Junger assisted further developments. Nothing had to wait, as the following morning Lieutenant Yeaman and a guard of United States soldiers appeared in front of the College building and ordered Father Brouillet, the principal in charge, to vacate the premises within ten minutes. Of course the soldiers of the United States army promptly over the rights of the people, and Father Brouillet, his staff of teachers and all his pupils, were compelled to flee before the bayonets of the United States army.

Thus has been perpetrated a high-handed outrage which calls for the condemnation of every citizen in America. There is no law by which the civil authority can be usurped by the military. The matter in dispute was still in the civil courts, and any process on the part of either party should have been placed in the hands of civil officers. Instead of this action, ignoring the power of the civil courts, the military authorities at Vancouver Barracks have taken the law into their own hands, they have sent the parties with an insulting message to Catholic Bishop who is the legal representative of the Church which has claimed and occupied the land in dispute continuously for missionary purposes for nearly fifty years, the military authorities not then by any representative of the territory of Oregon.

The claim made by the Catholic Church to the land in question is based upon the solid foundation of original and continuous legal occupation, and the protestants of late subsequently passed giving sections of lands to some natives who taught the Indians of the Northwest. The Catholic missionaries have taught the Indians of the Northwest. The Catholic missionaries have taught the Indians of the land, their possessions, their occupation and their rights to the land, and have taught the Indians to plant and cultivate

Farm and Home.

For Dyspeptics.

Rise betimes and have a bracing cold bath, with a few handfuls of sea salt, and eat some fruit before breakfast, notably prunes, oranges, grapes, or stewed apples. Avoid tea and coffee and tiger cigarettes. Take no kind of stimulant on an empty stomach. Avoid fret and care and overexcitement during the day. Bi-termine—if you can—that nothing shall annoy or irritate you. Take exercise—you must, even though at great expense and inconvenience. Cycling in moderation, and without "sporting" of rushing up hills, is the best and most delightful of exercises, but beware of cutting cold; always change a damp sodden garment immediately on coming home, and previously to re-dressing it will be found most refreshing to rub the body with a cold wet sponge, then to dry with a rough towel. Never eat when fatigued. Dine early, live plainly, take nothing that is in the least likely to disagree with you. Take a last good walk about an hour before retiring for the night. Look upon exercise in any shape as poison. And now a word or two about the bedroom itself. The room should be large, most cleanly and free from dust, with a proper system of ventilation by door and window. The temperature should be equable all through the night and through the year as possible—from 50 to 60 degrees according to age; the old and very young requiring more warmth then the young and middle-aged.

How Eye Diseases are Spread.

To mention a few of the modes of contagion, I have to speak in the first place, especially of that abominable institution known as the roller-towel, which has been used so much in asylums where forty, fifty, or more children use the same towel, whether they have granular lids or not. True, in a great many of these cases the existence of granular lids was not known; but even when the existence of the disease was evident, the ignorance or carelessness of the persons in charge has allowed transmission by means of towels to be one of the most frequent sources of contagion. As a carrier of the contagion, the house fly plays an important role, especially in case of young children who are not able to protect themselves against the visits of this little animal. Attracted by the sweetish odor of the discharge, it will settle upon the eyes of children affected with the disease, especially infants, and carry the contagion to its claws to the other eye or the eye of sleeping infants.

To Clean Paint.

Two tablespoonfuls of turpentine, one pint of skimmed milk, two quarts of hot water, and enough soap to make a weak lather. Wash the paint with this, and it will not only remove all spots, &c., but give it a nice polish. Another way—With warm water, a little soda, and very fine pumice stone, rub the paint all over, using a flannel. Rinse the soap off well and wipe dry. Rub up and down when cleaning paint, not crosswise or round and round.

Sheep on Poor Farms.

Is it from the benefit to the farm that one of the profits on sheep is derived. Many farmers do not take this into account, yet it is one of the most important items in sheep raising. In this connection the Nebraska Farmer says:

"If you have field which is poorer than the new virgin soil of your farm, make it a pasture for a few of sheep. If it be tolerably fertile, or by a movable fence so as to confine the sheep somewhat and pasture the field in sections. The improvement will be so marked that you will never forget the value of this experiment. If you have no sheep, this experiment is worth the purchase of a small flock, and the sheep will be no loss to you afterward."

We do not believe in keeping sheep on the poorest part of the farm, as that is where the sheep raisers have for centuries made their grand mistake, but the solution is given in the above, by constructing the movable fence, and pastoring the sheep in sections. Such a method is the only true one, and will always give a large profit.

How to Drink Water.

The leading medical journal of France has published a pamphlet protesting against the extravagant use of artificial mineral water, which, it sets forth, do the double damage of chilling the stomach, thus laying the foundation for gastric catarrh, while the limestones held in deposit in the aerated waters finds its way to the kidneys, and eventually produces Bright's disease. The pamphlet also protests against impure water as a provocative of catarrh in the stomach. It further says: "Water should be drunk cool, but not iced, with the juice of a quarter or half a lemon in it. Mineral waters should also be drunk with a dash of lemon. Water should always be swallowed slowly. It is not the stomach which is dry, but the mouth and throat. If you toss off a drink of water you throw it into your stomach without doing the former any good, while you injure the latter by loading it with what it does not require. Drink slowly, and keep the water in your mouth for a moment when you begin.

DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY,
(The Only Reliable Blood Purifier.)
A SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM,
Scrofula, Salt Rheum,
Neuralgia, Ring Worm
And all other Skin and Blood Diseases.
IT REGULATES THE
LIVER AND KIDNEYS.
Purges the System of all Poisonous Matter and Restores a Healthy Condition.
☞ Ask your Druggist for DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY and take no other. Price $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. Manufactured by the
PARDEE MEDICINE CO.,
Rochester, N. Y.
DO NOT POISON YOUR SYSTEM
with medicines you know nothing about. Nearly every so-called remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia now offered to the public contains powerful and poisonous medicines that injure the stomach and leave the patient worse off than before.
Do not use them, but take "the old reliable" one that has stood the test for twenty-five years. One that is free from anything injurious to the system, composed wholly of roots and herbs, the medical properties of which are particularly adapted to blood diseases.
Dr Pardee's Remedy is safe and effective. Can be used by both old and young with beneficial results. Five hundred dollars will be paid for any case where the use of Dr Pardee's Remedy has in any way injured the patient.
PARDEE MEDICINE CO

Family Fun.

The Guileless Young Man.

On the boat coming down from the Flats the other evening was a young man and a black bass. He was such a guileless young man that several parties thought to pay him and his catch. The fish was hanging to a peg, and with it a pair of small trousers which enabled a fisherman to weigh his catch without unlacing they don't go over twenty pounds.

"Catch it all alone?"

No reply.

"Were you much over three days about it? I quoted the third, and we went on for ten minutes, while the fisherman had nothing to say, but looked pleased."

"That bass will weigh six of half a pound."

"I doubt it," replied another.

"Why, fisherman what are the figures?"

"Two pounds," was the solemn answer. The man pulled a $10 bill from his vest, and laid it on his knees and said

"If he don't the money is yours. Pal up."

After some hesitation a stake purse of $10 was raised, the fish brought to the scale, and he showed an ounce over. The crowd kicked on the scales, and the fish was weighed in the steamer's pantry. The fisherman had gone, but he was weighed again when the boat landed, and the money had to be passed over.

"How did you do it?" asked a policeman when the crowd had dispersed.

"Simply poured seventeen ounces of bird shot down his throat," was the reply, and he let the fish's head drop and the shot pattered out on the wharf like a young hail storm.

Got There all the Same.

The following marriage ceremony, uniting an estimable colored couple, was performed by "Rev. Berry Bee, Hobinson, of the Baptiss Church, enlisted." After securing the usual promises from the "young couples what had arisen up before him on that day, a-wahsin to be united in the holy ordeny of wedlick," the Rev. Berry, with glasses across his nose, head thrown majestically back and a little twisting, an old ragged Testament held aloft, young couples who are not able to protect themselves against the vices of this little animal. Attracted by the sweetish odor of the discharge, it will settle upon the eyes of children affected with the disease, especially infants, and carry the contagion to its claws to the other eye or the eye of sleeping infants

To Clean Paint.

Two tablespoonfuls of turpentine, one pint of skimmed milk, two quarts of hot water, and enough soap to make a weak lather. Wash the paint with this, and it will not only remove all spots, &c., but give it a nice polish. Another way—With warm water, a little soda, and very fine pumice stone, rub the paint all over, using a flannel. Rinse the soap off well and wipe dry. Rub up and down when cleaning paint, not crosswise or round and round.

Sheep on Poor Farms.

Is it from the benefit to the farm that one of the profits on sheep is derived. Many farmers do not take this into account, yet it is one of the most important items in sheep raising. In this connection the Nebraska Farmer says:

"If you have field which is poorer than the new virgin soil of your farm, make it a pasture for a few of sheep. If it be tolerably fertile, or by a movable fence so as to confine the sheep somewhat and pasture the field in sections. The improvement will be so marked that you will never forget the value of this experiment. If you have no sheep, this experiment is worth the purchase of a small flock, and the sheep will be no loss to you afterward."

We do not believe in keeping sheep on the poorest part of the farm, as that is where the sheep raisers have for centuries made their grand mistake, but the solution is given in the above, by constructing the movable fence, and pastoring the sheep in sections. Such a method is the only true one, and will always give a large profit.

How to Drink Water.

The leading medical journal of France has published a pamphlet protesting against the extravagant use of artificial mineral water, which, it sets forth, do the double damage of chilling the stomach, thus laying the foundation for gastric catarrh, while the limestones held in deposit in the aerated waters finds its way to the kidneys, and eventually produces Bright's disease. The pamphlet also protests against impure water as a provocative of catarrh in the stomach. It further says: "Water should be drunk cool, but not iced, with the juice of a quarter or half a lemon in it. Mineral waters should also be drunk with a dash of lemon. Water should always be swallowed slowly. It is not the stomach which is dry, but the mouth and throat. If you toss off a drink of water you throw it into your stomach without doing the former any good, while you injure the latter by loading it with what it does not require. Drink slowly, and keep the water in your mouth for a moment when you begin.

DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY,
(The Only Reliable Blood Purifier.)
A SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM,
Scrofula, Salt Rheum,
Neuralgia, Ring Worm
And all other Skin and Blood Diseases.
IT REGULATES THE
LIVER AND KIDNEYS.
Purges the System of all Poisonous Matter and Restores a Healthy Condition.
☞ Ask your Druggist for DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY and take no other. Price $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5. Manufactured by the
PARDEE MEDICINE CO.,
Rochester, N. Y.
DO NOT POISON YOUR SYSTEM
with medicines you know nothing about. Nearly every so-called remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia now offered to the public contains powerful and poisonous medicines that injure the stomach and leave the patient worse off than before.
Do not use them, but take "the old reliable" one that has stood the test for twenty-five years. One that is free from anything injurious to the system, composed wholly of roots and herbs, the medical properties of which are particularly adapted to blood diseases.
Dr Pardee's Remedy is safe and effective. Can be used by both old and young with beneficial results. Five hundred dollars will be paid for any case where the use of Dr Pardee's Remedy has in any way injured the patient.
PARDEE MEDICINE CO

MISCELLANEOUS.

To a small cupful of MOLASSES or strained HONEY add 2 teaspoonfuls of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER and take after 1/4 teaspoonful of the mixture & you WILL CURE your COUGH or COLD. Pain Killer also cures Sore Throat and Diphtheria.
WITH
FIVE DOLLARS
YOU CAN ENCLOSE A $10,000
IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN
GOVERNMENT BOND.
(BRITISH CONSOLS.)
These bonds are chosen in a class, the interest of which is paid out in premiums (twice issue yearly). Every bond is entitled to
Three Drawings Annually,
and each and every bond is endowed with a large or middle premium. Every time next time you get a drawing another premium is due.
NO BLANKS.

Premiums.	Forins.	Florins.
1	150,000	150,000
1	50,000	50,000
1	20,000	20,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
1	1,000	1,000
100	500	50,000
1,000	100	100,000
Together	2,100 premiums, amounting to	1,500,000

Florins The premium-money taken out in the
FIRST OF JUNE,
and every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THE 1st OF JUNE, UNTIL 4 P. M., is entitled to the premium that may be then issued, and to the following one.
Out of twelve orders sent in SEPTEMBER LAST, eleven will receive one of those bonds as an early drawing. Similar payments monthly issued thereafter.
For orders, circulars, or any other information, address
INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,
100 Nassau St., cor. Ann St., New York City.
ESTABLISHED IN 1870.
☞ The above Government Bonds are not to be confounded with any Lottery whatsoever so lately declared by the Court of Appeals, and we are positive will not be held to exist in the United States.
☞ We do nothing please state that you saw this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

DOZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.
A Preparation of the purest and most healthful ingredients that may be used with the utmost freedom. It imparts a delicate, natural, and lasting beauty to the complexion, and is invisible when properly applied. For sale by all druggists throughout the United States and Canada.

A Proclamation!
Dr. C. Gray Leslie, Patison, Ariz., says: "A year ago I had bilious fever, Tutt's Pills were recommended to me, and I believe that I owed them my life. Never did medicine have a happier effect. After a year, cured a master of a century. I prescribe them to-day."
ANTI-BILIOUS
medicine now used. I always prescribe them."
Tutt's Pills
Cure All Bilious Diseases.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL
Commission Merchants
N. E. CORNER
FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS.,
SAN FRANCISCO
Wool Sage, Tallow, Shoats, Hides and all articles received in Wool Growers kept on hand and supplied to Customers at the Very Lowest Rates. Cash Advanced on Consignments of Wool, Hides, Tallow, etc., at Low Rates of Interest without separate insurance.
Post Office Address, San Francisco P. O. Box 2081.

WARD & CO.'S
Male and Female
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.
608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.
Telephone No. 717.
ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST CLASS HOTEL Waiters, Waitresses, Chambermaids, and Hotel Employes in general. Also Cooks, Laundresses, Nurses, Seamstresses, Housekeepers, Boys and Girls to learn trades, Ranch Men, Farmers, Farm Laborers, Single Men, Gardeners, Grooms, Coachmen, and Hotel Employes in general. Also Ladies' Nurses, Governesses, Housekeepers, Servants, Dressmakers, Milliners, Ranch Cooks, Laundresses, Seamstresses, Housework Girls, Nurse Girls, Waitresses, Chambermaids, Servants, Cooks

ABOUT MIXED MARRIAGES.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

of the same school. Their acquaintance made there warm friends and their friendship developed into mutual affection. The result was they married.

He was prodigal and an indifferent with regard to religion, or, at least, had no distinct positive convictions. When he married by a Catholic priest he made the usual promises respecting his allowing his wife to freely practice her religion, and permitting the children, if they should have any, to be brought up in the Catholic faith. Doubtless, at the time he made those promises, he honestly intended to keep them.

He took his wife to his father's house. His father was a Protestant of Protestants; he was fully impressed with the idea that one religion was as good as another, excepting the Catholic religion, and he disliked that both on account of traditionary prejudices against it and because he regarded it as superstitious and intolerant. The husband's mother was a devout and Catholic, but from regard for her son she did not persecute his wife or treat her unkindly.

FOR A WHILE THE YOUNG WIFE attended to her religious duties; her husband never accompanied her to church. He occasionally went to a Protestant church on Sundays, but most frequently went nowhere. In due time a child was born. After some delay it was taken to a Catholic church, and baptized by a Catholic clergyman. Then for some time the wife was in poor health. No priest was sent for or asked to visit her. When her health was restored she occasionally went to Church. But her attendance became less and less frequent, until now she never attends Catholic worship, and sometimes accompanies her husband to a Protestant church.

What will become of her? An apostate from the Catholic religion? Faithless to the obligations she took upon herself at the baptism of her child? And what will become of her husband? Regardless of the solemn vows and promises he made when he was married? And what hope is there for that child? Brought up by a father who has induced his wife to become an apostate and by a mother who has knowingly and wilfully transgressed under her eyes well-known religious duties and obligations.

THE SEWING EXAMPLE

is that of an ex-Governess of one of our trans-Mississippi States. In this case the unhappy parties have separated and carried their differences into the civil courts. The husband is a non-Catholic, the wife is a Catholic.

He says he divorces on the ground that his wife rendered his life intolerable by her constant reproaches and abuse of him because he would not consent to join the Church; that he made no objections to his children being brought up as Catholics, but that she alienated the affections of the children from him and taught them to despise him and treat him contemptuously, and finally that she deserted him, taking the children with her.

She says for alimony, alleging that her husband abused her and the children on account of their adherence to the Catholic religion, and refused to permit her or them to continue under his roof unless they abandoned their religion.

These two instances of mixed marriages carry with them their own comments, and each teaches a significant lesson.

We do not mean to say that all mixed marriages are fruitful, and by parallel the same consequences. But we do mean that in nineteen instances out of twenty there are elements of inevitable bitterness in the step which the two partners thus unequally yoked together must drink.

Sometimes, very often, the misery comes to them in this world, and it is life-long. And this misery is not, on earth, sweetened as seldom be visited, except at the cost of the Catholic partner to the marriage and the sacrificing of the practice of the Catholic religion and making apostates of his or her eternal interests.

EXCEPTIONAL INSTANCES OF MIXED MARRIAGES.

We have now stated some of the usual consequences of mixed marriages. But there is another fact connected with the subject which seems to give it a different aspect. It is that in some instances the Catholic husband or wife succeeds, instrumentally, in converting his or her non-Catholic spouse. This is exceptionally true in some instances. But these instances are as few as the number of four-leaved clovers in the grass plot.

And where, happily, such an instance does occur, how often is it not after years of weary waiting and painful concern and anxiety on the part of the Catholic? And during this period how probably several of the children, following the example of their non-Catholic father or mother, have perhaps become Protestants or indifferentists.

Moreover, even where the non-Catholic parties does eventually receive the grace of conversion and the children have been brought up in the Catholic faith, they are more likely to marry outside of the Church than are the children whose parents both of whom have always been Catholics.

IN THE ONE CASE THE CHILDREN'S REL IGION

are all Catholics. In the other case the relatives on the father's or mother's side are non-Catholics. With these non-Catholic relatives these children are naturally brought into intimate relations. They visit them, associate with them, go into company with them, and are naturally more or less influenced by them. They form numerous Protestant acquaintances and friendships, and out of these friendships with Protestants mixed marriages constantly arise. If their parents object and try to restrain their children they are met with the reply: "Why are you so a mixed marriage? Why, then, may not I?"

What we have been saying is not a mere matter of theory, nor an argument based upon what may naturally be expected. It is a statement of facts that are constantly recurring. Every Catholic clergyman will testify to the truth of what we have said from numerous instances that he is personally acquainted with. And every observing Catholic layman can mention many such instances within the range of his own personal knowledge.

Where a Catholic marries a non-Catholic and even if the non-Catholic becomes a Catholic, there is a strong probability that some of the children, even though brought up in the Faith, will marry non-Catholics. Thus the evil is perpetuated and multiplied, so that often all the descendants in the second or third generation are non-Catholics.

How can it be earnest, devout Catholic young man or woman entering into marriage contemplate such a prospect in the future, and not shrink back from a mixed marriage? How can he or she with a clear conscience enter on such a marriage?—Philadelphia Catholic Standard.

V. M. I. Entertainment at Stockton.

We learn from our Stockton correspondent that a very enjoyable entertainment was given by Father Hall, Stockton, on the 29th inst., by the young Men's Institute of that city. The programme opened:—Opening remarks by Prof. Best, J. T. Mulcahy; recitation, J. Barrett; Brown, and Jeff M. Dolan; recitation, J. Barrett; song, Joseph Ryan; recitation, Master Seaver; duet, Mrs. Ed. Outlaw and Miss Maude Joyce; violin solo with piano accompaniment, Urach and Miss A. Grant, accompanist, F. Pengley; recitation, R. Covert; song, H. Hoffman; song, Richard Dorgan; duet, Mrs. Ed. Outlaw, A very large audience was present and appeared to delight in every word spoken. The Stockton Institute numbers now nearly 100 members and is exceedingly flourishing.

—The Catholic institutions acted solely upon the advice of a large majority, a resolution proposed by Mr. Mowat, demanding Dominion aid towards a heavy expenditure.

La Grande Chartreuse.

A FAMOUS MONASTERY GRAPHICALLY DESCRIBED.

LABORS OF THE MONKS IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

Stupendous Work of the Sons of St. Bruno.

A non Catholic tourist who recently visited the world-renowned "La Grande Chartreuse" in the Department of Isere, France, gives the following graphic description of the wonderful lives of the Carthusian monks founded by St. Bruno:

To the lover of the great monuments of the past, to those in search of religious emotions or majestic scenery, "La Grande Chartreuse" is of unrivalled interest as the object of a vast. This celebrated monastery which was called into being by the religious feeling of the Middle Ages was founded by St. Bruno, a native of Cologne, where, even in our own day, the spirit of Catholicism retains much vigor, as evinced by the magnificent of the celebrated cathedral of that city.

Those who have had the good fortune to visit, even during the summer, La Grande Chartreuse, may, by an effort of the imagination, realize in some degree what must have been the wild sycamnes of the spot eight centuries ago. We must bear in mind that the original establishment founded by St. Bruno did not occupy exactly the same spot as the present monastery. It was built on a still more elevated site, but located in an almost inaccessible gorge, facing the actual convent. The present chapel of St. Bruno, standing upon the rock, surrounded by pine trees, and buried in the snow for many months of the year, marks the original site of the convent as founded by the holy monks.

THE MATERIALS THAT WERE FIRST EMPLOYED

having been of wood, the history of the monastery is closely linked with the history of the many fires from which it suffered, and, in fact, it was almost utterly destroyed by eight conflagrations, in 1676, did Grignan, the celebrated author of the Order, remove the convent to the foot of the mountain of the Grand Nom, where it now stands. Some of the more ancient portions of the first convent were preserved in the second, and they still show many vestiges now remaining of that distant past. Those old parts are found in the clock tower and the refectory, which date from the Fourteenth Century, the church, the Fifteenth Century, and especially the magnificent cloister, portions of which belong to the Thirteenth Century. It is in the cloister that we can fully realize the mysterious life, of which the Grande Chartreuse is one of the last lingering examples. It is about 220 yards in length and 24 wide, covered within its first arches by a vaulted roof, upon which open its 130 cells and richly moulded arcades. As the observer leaves the natural inclination of the ground which slopes very steeply, the back part is higher than the front part, so that the first arches appear to have effects of light and shade that are very striking. The external walls which are over three feet thick, protect the cloister from the terrible cold of winter, for the cloister is at an altitude of 3,200 feet, and as a gorge with a northeast exposure.

ALL THE CELLS OPEN UPON THE CLOISTER, and are numbered on the wall, on which is always inscribed some pious sentiment or text. The occupant, in a little wicket through which the provisions are passed, has a clock. Each cell is really a small separate house, consisting of a bedroom, a study, lighted with a stove, and another containing a table, a pallet and the wooden stools which are the sole cell covers. A garret and workroom, with a little garden if it, complete the cell of a Chartreuse monk. In this workroom and garden he passes the greater part of which is required of him, for in conformity with the ancient regulations of the Order of St. Benedict, of which the Chartreuse is a branch, mental and physical exercise must be united in the prepaytory.

The Chartreuse monks have retained the austerities preached by St. Bruno. In this strange in our day and contrasts singularly with our refined ideas of comfort, the fifteenth century it was simply the ordinary dress of the peasantry in most of the cold countries of Europe—in Germany, Poland and England. Bruno adopted it from humility, and it has been retained from a spirit of unchanging conservatism which is the very life of the Roman Catholic Church. It is composed entirely of white wool, and consists of a waistcoat reaching the shirt, a tunic with large sleeves, drawn in at the waist by a belt, a rosette or scapulary with a hood, woollen stockings, and shoes. The three-cornered hat and black caps are worn only when travelling, for use of linen is forbidden, and this need not surprise us if we reflect that linen things began to be used as a luxury only in the Fourteenth century.

THE DAILY LIFE OF THE CHARTREUSE MONASTERY

is divided between prayers in common and private meditation. Without going into the numerous pious exercises that are performed during the day, the monk rise at a quarter to twelve every night, whatever the weather may be, and remains in prayer in the church, or in their cells, until 3 in the morning. Visitors to the Chartreuse may watch this nocturnal exercise from a gallery, and it is not the least curious and interesting of the strange sights to be seen in the cloister, or the moonlight, these gliding white phantoms, so silent in the grave, and so listen to their funeral pomp.

It is a mistake to suppose that the Trappist Order is more austere than the Chartreuse. Though both are compelled to submit to the rigorous rule of almost perpetual silence, the Trappists have at least the advantage of living in common, of sleep and eat together. Except on very rare occasions, the Chartreuse monk eat alone and remains by himself the whole day—when not at religious services allowed in thought of death, which is the ordinary subject of his meditation. It is only recently to visit successively the Trappist Monastery of Augueboile, in the department of the Drome, and the Chartreuse Convent, to judge of the difference in the severity of their regime and mode of life.

THE CHARTREUSE ORDER COMPRISES

19 different convents in Europe, of which four are in France (two for women), six Italy, and 1 in Switzerland. The Grande Chartreuse is the capital of this monastic world, and called the Mother of all the Orders, it is there that the General of the Order resides. He is elected by all the Fathers, and governs with the assistance of the Chapter of Fathers. It is in consequence of this authority that the Chartreuse, which alone of all religious orders has its seat in France, enjoys immunity from the application of the Ferrier law. Father Le Vachet, of Johns Ferry's law, expelling from French territory ecclesiastics who are governed by foreigners.

It has been justly established that the Church of Rome is famous for discovering the best remedies, and for its entire absence of unfavorable bitterness in the ties which the two partners thus unequally yoked together must drink.

Sometimes, very often, the misery comes to them in this world, and it is life-long. And this misery is not, on earth, sweetened as seldom be visited, except at the cost of the Catholic partner to the marriage and the sacrificing of the practice of the Catholic religion and making apostates of his or her eternal interests.

EXCEPTIONAL INSTANCES OF MIXED MARRIAGES.

We have now stated some of the usual consequences of mixed marriages. But there is another fact connected with the subject which seems to give it a different aspect. It is that in some instances the Catholic husband or wife succeeds, instrumentally, in converting his or her non-Catholic spouse. This is exceptionally true in some instances. But these instances are as few as the number of four-leaved clovers in the grass plot.

And where, happily, such an instance does occur, how often is it not after years of weary waiting and painful concern and anxiety on the part of the Catholic? And during this period how probably several of the children, following the example of their non-Catholic father or mother, have perhaps become Protestants or indifferentists.

Moreover, even where the non-Catholic parties does eventually receive the grace of conversion and the children have been brought up in the Catholic faith, they are more likely to marry outside of the Church than are the children whose parents both of whom have always been Catholics.

IN THE ONE CASE THE CHILDREN'S RELIGION

are all Catholics. In the other case the relatives on the father's or mother's side are non-Catholics. With these non-Catholic relatives these children are naturally brought into intimate relations. They visit them, associate with them, go into company with them, and are naturally more or less influenced by them. They form numerous Protestant acquaintances and friendships, and out of these friendships with Protestants mixed marriages constantly arise. If their parents object and try to restrain their children they are met with the reply: "Why are you so a mixed marriage? Why, then, may not I?"

What we have been saying is not a mere matter of theory, nor an argument based upon what may naturally be expected. It is a statement of facts that are constantly recurring. Every Catholic clergyman will testify to the truth of what we have said from numerous instances that he is personally acquainted with. And every observing Catholic layman can mention many such instances within the range of his own personal knowledge.

Where a Catholic marries a non-Catholic and even if the non-Catholic becomes a Catholic, there is a strong probability that some of the children, even though brought up in the Faith, will marry non-Catholics. Thus the evil is perpetuated and multiplied, so that often all the descendants in the second or third generation are non-Catholics.

How can it be earnest, devout Catholic young man or woman entering into marriage contemplate such a prospect in the future, and not shrink back from a mixed marriage? How can he or she with a clear conscience enter on such a marriage?—Philadelphia Catholic Standard.

V. M. I. Entertainment at Stockton.

We learn from our Stockton correspondent that a very enjoyable entertainment was given by Father Hall, Stockton, on the 29th inst., by the young Men's Institute of that city. The programme opened:—Opening remarks by Prof. Best, J. T. Mulcahy; recitation, J. Barrett; Brown, and Jeff M. Dolan; recitation, J. Barrett; song, Joseph Ryan; recitation, Master Seaver; duet, Mrs. Ed. Outlaw and Miss Maude Joyce; violin solo with piano accompaniment, Urach and Miss A. Grant, accompanist, F. Pengley; recitation, R. Covert; song, H. Hoffman; song, Richard Dorgan; duet, Mrs. Ed. Outlaw. A very large audience was present and appeared to delight in every word spoken. The Stockton Institute numbers now nearly 100 members and is exceedingly flourishing.

—The Catholic institutions acted solely upon the advice of a large majority, a resolution proposed by Mr. Mowat, demanding Dominion aid towards a heavy expenditure.

THE WEEK'S NEWS FROM IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM—Michael Davitt arrived in Belfast on March 28, by the purpose of fulfilling an engagement to lecture under the auspices of the National League. The subject of Mr. Davitt's lecture was the work of an Irish Parliament. A number of belfast of the Belfast Branch of the National League marched in a body to the lecture room, with the intention of presenting Mrs. Davitt with an address and a gold bound ledger. Owing to a boycotting attack Mrs. Davitt was unable to accompany her distinguished husband. Mr. Davitt, in the course of the lecture, alluding to the arrests of Father Keller and Father Ryan, expressed what he had told a Scotch audience recently, "that he would be delighted to have an imprisoned priest sayed up every morning in the Freeman's Journal for breakfast; that he would like to see the Tory Government chuck thunder after thunder, and would not regret if a hundred Protestant clergymen were sent to jail for the mission of Kilmanaban, because the Government would thereby be committing political suicide."

CLARE—The leagues of Clare have unanimously endorsed a local paper devoted to the Nationalist cause, called The Independent.

The Kilmacshane Branch of the National League, on March 20, Rev. H. Scanlon P. P., in the chair, and denounced the cruelty and brutal conduct of the Tory Government, in arresting Father Keller and Father Ryan, and imprisoning them, thereby trying to coerce him to give evidence against his people.

CORK—On March 29, the funeral of Mr. D. O'Connor took place at Blackrock. Mr. O'Connor was formerly a teacher of dancing in Cockpoint, with a fine classical and mathematical attainments, and during his early life educated many of the prominent citizens. Mr. O'Connor died at the residence of his son, Dr. O'Connor, on March 27, and was buried in St Joseph's Cemetery. Father Irving followed by a large concourse of friends. Dan of Mr. O'Connor was a member of the Vincentian Order, and two of his daughters are nuns.

Mr. Charles Curtin died on March 27, in Kanturk. Mr. Curtin was a Kanturk man, and was for years connected with the staff of the Cork Examiner and subsequently with the Freeman's Journal. During a short stay in America he was engaged on the staff of the New York Herald. He was at one time being followed for

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

A LOVER'S FORGET.

The mariner upon the sea,
To the wild ocean's merry call,
In off a windward from his sleep
To hear the storm-winds frenzied blast;
Yet one bright beacon lights his way,
For where, up in the Heavens far,
The blessed, saving Polar star
Unfurls fair to adorn it then.

I know of one, who on Life's sea
Is victim of wild distress;
And wakens off in her sleep
With nought to cheer her to bless;
Ah, me! that one loved beacon bright
Could be hid amid the tempestuous rage,
That there, forever, be night-shut,
And bank in light and happiness.

C. ANTHONY DUTIL.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

WHICH WAS THE FAIREST?

BY L. L. S.

On a verdant bank one evening,
As the sun sank south the west,
We painted a living picture,
More lovely than Art could be.

With the evening's pearly dew,
By a lake of dreamy sweetness,
Sat three friends, warm and true;
Maidens, they were most charming,
Maidens, as they were all bright
As ever were seen 'neath Heaven,
But differing as day and night.

One was like starry midnight,
With eyes of heal or gray;
Skin like the Orient beauts of,
Which she unlocks the gates of day.
One was a dark and sweet lassie,
With clustered ringlets bright,
And a look in her brown eyes, whisking
As rays of the moon's silver light;
But the third, the youngest and weakest
Like Raphael, St. Agnes would make,
Had hair that rivalled golden,
And eyes like the crystal lake.

So they sat and talked there, merry,
Of this one and that one, too,
And they planned half sly in the mirror
Made by the water blue;
And they spoke of and pacts many,
Till Margaret with raven hair
Said to her comrades laughing
"Of all, my hand is most fair,
For see," and she dipped it gaily
Into the dancing stream,
"Isn't not more white and shapely
Than any hand you've seen?"

But Dora—her own pretty fingers
Had ripe dyed with berries red,
With look that was almost queenly,
Raised her graceful hand and said:
"Nay, mine is the fairest, dear ones,
For look at my finger tips,
They are small, slight, and shapely,
And red as your coral lips."

And now, while they planned at Vere,
Awaking her turn to tell,
The charms of the dainty fingers,
They each hand and left as well.

An old woman, bent and ragged,
Passed by at the time the brook,
And paused to gaze on the picture
With tender, admiring look;
A beggar she was, made older
By wear of blood years and food,
An awful image of hunger
She looked, as mute she stood.
And the maidens turned and saw her;

But Vera raised her eyes kindly,
And softly and sweetly said:
"I've only this quarter for you,
But take it and buy some bread."
The poor woman took the silver,
And blessed Vera's hand as she said:
"This is fairer than Grecian marble,
And sweeter than berries red.
For beauty is not in the figure,
Nor in the hand, eye or face,
But 'tis precious gem of virtue
That makes up a woman's grace."

ZARE.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

A WREATH OF UNFADING FLOWERS.

The rosy May has come with all her sweetness,
With all her wealth of perfumed blossoms fair;
She comes to deck the dowry out of sorrow,
And whispering from a brighter land to cheer.

The swaying trees keep time with nature's song,
Who warble forth their hymns of holy praise;
Wafts wandering breezes bear away the sweet—
And o'er it all the sun beams down his rays.

This month of all the twelve—the fairest, holiest,
Devoted to Heaven's Blessed Queen,
When maidens with her chaplets hasten fair flowers,
And bright as Summer harvest's golden sheaves.

In every clime where Faith's bright lamp is burning,
Sweet Mary's shrines will be adorned with flowers,
Oh! let them come with prayers and gardens,
And learn this potent lesson on the way:
The flowers of perfume which they press this morn,
To morrow will be withered by decay.

Oh! let us crown our Queen with wreathes of Virtue,
All culled from out the garden of the soul;
Bright wreaths whose fresh'ning fragrance shall yet linger,
When the Present toward the shadowy Past shall roll.

Our Queen will prize, indeed, a gift so holy,
And her blessings will to us be freely given;
Till we pass from Earth, and earn this priceless boonty—
A wreath of immortality in Heaven.

A CHILD OF MARY.

Oakland, May 1st, 1857.

"HAIL, FULL OF GRACE!"

"Hail, full of grace!" Twas thus the angel spoke
When from high Heaven he came to thee to bring Tidings of the mandate of his King.
Then who so far kept sacred his soul's defiling robe,
Who so chaste, so pure, so free from sin's foul blots,
Thou fair, thou spotless queen of sinless souls fled,
Thine all the children of the earth could be
Oh! by thy sexless, all pure, thy sacred virtue,
Win us the strength that fainting hope sometimes
Turn upon us those many beaming eyes;
Hark to our prayers, and plead for us one more,
That when this dreary pilgrimage is ended
We may salute thee, Mother, in the skies!

MARCELLA A. FITZGERALD.

Literary Miscellany.

"To Let—Inquire Within."

Or How the Warriment of Mons-Letting was Satisfactorily Concluded.

There is nothing so uncomfortable as an equal, in fact, black letters, sound upon a page exclamation point, to the attention of all house-hunting sufferers.

"This house to let, and no mistake about it, either," mused Mr. Briggs, shutting his cane of cold coffee, and looking distastefully at one boiled egg that lay before him. "The fact is, I'm sick of keeping house; could always one—tates always be—carpets always scarring in their places—grover's bill enough to make a man's hair stand on end, and housekeepers always arriking for higher wages! I won't stand it any longer—I'll be boiled alive if I do."

As Mr. Nahum Briggs was a fat, fussy man, with starvy eyes and a "test enemble" not unlike a comfortably sized lobster, the "boiling" part of the business was not at all inappropriate. And if to carry out the simile, he turned a lively conflict at the door slowly swing open, and his housekeeper shake an indignant fist in the direction of Mr. Darley, but Mr. Briggs was obliged to break the hateful spell, and stood boldly to his guns.

"Mr. Briggs," began the lady solemnly, "can I have my wages?"

"Well, ma-am," and the old bachelor, "I never heard that anything was among with your wages."

"It is possible that you have posted a bill on the front of this house without consulting me?"

"Quite so, ma-am," responded Nahum. "And you intend—"

"To give up my—to close my establishment—to break up house-keeping, ma-am," said Nahum. "That's exactly my intention."

"Very well, sir, said Mrs. Darley, grimly, "if you will settle the trifling expense of my salary between us, I will take my departure."

"What, now?" ejaculated Mr. Briggs somewhat taken by surprise.

"Immediately, responded the lady, frigidly.

"And who's to keep house for me until the first of June? And who is to give the premises to all inquirers? demanded Nahum, a little apprehensively.

"That's your own business, sir," said Mrs. Darley. "I, for one, can not consent to remain in a house where I have been so unkindly reflected from the confidence of its owner."

"Just so, ma-am, exactly, counting out several bank notes. "There's your money, and you will oblige me by clearing out as quick as you can, ma-am."

Mrs. Darley withdrew, and Nahum was left to his own meditations.

Singularly to relate, they took the shape of a species of war-dance, executed in the middle of the floor, to the musical snapping of fingers.

"Have I been? three chers and a tiger at the end of em," chuckled our hero. "If ever there was a miserable slave, I've been one to that hatchet-faced woman, and now I'm free! Who would have supposed—

He stopped abruptly—there was a ring at the door bell.

"And nobody to answer it," mused Mr. Briggs, a little depressed from his high spirits. "Well, I'll go myself.

A spectacled old lady stood on the door-step, in a shabby bombazine and turn that looked as if they might have grown on the back of some dispirited cat.

"This are house to let?

"Water pipes in order? cellar dry? paint new? furnace work good? and would I chandelier up with the honest neighs-bread good? Methodist church anywhere near? any objections to children? ventilators in the roof? cheery closets off the dining room?"

"Ma-am, interrupted poor Nahum, lardy stunned by the torrent of questions.

"Servants are so stupid," sighed the old lady. "Can I see your master?

"I am my own master, ma-am, said Mr. Briggs, irritably.

"Oh—I thought you was the porter, said the old lady scornfully.

"What's the rent?

"Twelve hundred dollars a year.

"Twelve hundred fiddlesticks! shrieked the old lady, holding up both her hands.

"Who on earth do you think I am going to pay twelve hundred dollars a year for such old, tumbled-down rat-hole as this? Why, you must be crazy! Say nine hundred dollars and I'll look at the rooms.

"I won't say nothing of the sort, said Nahum, turning red and feeling apoplectic.

"If you don't like the rent of my house, ma-am, you're not obliged to pay it, and I'm not obliged to rent it, ma-am.

So saying, Nahum Briggs closed the door in the face of the old lady with the mangy furs, who immediately commenced rapping on the panels with her umbrella handle, calling out abusive messages through the key hole.

Scarcely had the old lady got safely round the corner and Mr. Briggs recovered his ruffled facties, when there came another sharp, intimmidation to the bell wires—a laughed young lady, this time, with a stiff looking gentleman who appeared engaged in holding on to his mustache. With this couple Mr. Nahum trusted to the very top of the house and down again.

"Adolphus, my dear, said the lady "Well, my dear."

"Don't you think these ceilings are very low?

"Well, I don't know."

"And then the back yard is so very small."

"Well, I really don't know."

"And the dining room is so monotonous."

"Well—my soul I don't know."

"And I am really afraid there are chorus roaches in the bed-rooms."

"Really, ma-am, said Nahum, bristling up, "is there any other fault to find? Because, if there isn't, there's the front door open, and I really don't think its too narrow for you to walk out of."

"Adolphus, my dear," said the lady, "we won't remain any longer in the society of this extremely abrupt person."

"No, my dear.

And Adolphus and his wife departed.

Well, quoth Mr. Briggs to himself, "I wonder if people leave their manners at home when they go house-hunting. Oh—I would commend to take the rent out in board——

"Ah ah—you keeps a boarding house?" We exactly a boarding house, my family consists of seventeen select friends, five servants and six children.

"Seventeen, plus five, plus six, plus one twenty-nine, purely harmonily calculated Nahum "I really think, ma-am, I could consent to let the house to you.

And the lady flounced out in a rage.

Two young friends and a spinster aunt followed, and after a lengthy inspection of the premises, came to a stake round in the spinster aunt.

"I like the house very much, said the spinster aunt, "and with a few alterations I will engage it for my brother's family.

Very good, ma-am, said Nahum, rubbing his hands and seeming greatly tickmatin in his trials. "Name one—

"The lots front, front and be gilded, and I should like the house-wa papered in velvet and gold, and re-painted, and the partition between the parlors taken down and replaced by an arch, and an extension built on the back of the house, and a bay window thrown out of the parlor, and a new style of range in the kitchen, and a dumb waiter put in, and new house-hinderlocks, and an iron furnace in the cellar, and—

"Hold on ma-am—just hold on one moment, said Nahum, quickly gasping for breath. "Wouldn't you like the old house carried away and a new one put in its place? I think it would be rather less trouble than to make the trifling alterations you suggest

"Sir" said the spinster, fiercely.

"I don't think we can agree, ma-am.

"Very well—very well—some, gritts."

With prim dignity the lady marshaled her three chaperones, muttering something about "the extortionate ideas of landlords nowadays."

While Nahum, wildly ramping his room with hair with both hands, soliloquized

"Well, if I do had been alive, and had a wife, I wonder what sort of a time she would have had with Mr. Darley, sir. There goes that overlandy bell again. I'll bad it out by the roots if this thing goes on much longer. I'll run down the bell and put the place up at once.

Another lady, but quite different from the other, a sober, little, cat-like lady, with a bonnet that dropped like a lily of the valley, and a dress of green silk that had been mended and darned until turned and retrimmed, rang the door bell. Nahum Briggs—poor old bachelor, though he was, could see his very dimpled in it was

Yet she was pretty, with big blue eyes and shining brown hair, and cheeks tinged with a dainty blushing color, where the velvety roses of youth had once bloomed in vivid profusion. And the golden-haired little lassie who clung to her—ah, were as like her as ever. Nahum felt as if the trifling expense of a dollar bouquet

Nahum Briggs stood looking at her there conscious to him the aunshing days of his youth—a child of blooming cheeks, grown in the June light, like waves of blood, and a blue-eyed girl leaning over the fence with her bright hair bare's with sun set gold, and he knew he was standing face to face with Barbara Wyke, the girl he had quarreled with, years and years ago, and who had grown and kept him an old bachelor all his life.

"This house is to let I believe! she said, quietly, with a little quiver in her mouth.

"I believe it is, Barbara Wyke.

She looked up, starting with a flush of recognition.

"Nahum Briggs

And Barbara turned very pale, and began to cry, with the little golden-haired girls clinging to her skirts, and wailing, "Mamma, mamma, what's the matter mamma?

"Nothing, now, said Barbara, rewhisking blushing away the tears. "If you please, Mr. Briggs, I will look at the house. My widow's, and very poor, and—and I am thinking of keeping a boarding house to earn my daily bread. I hope the rent is not very high?

"We'll talk about the rent afterwards, said Nahum, fiercely scalloping down a big lump in his throat that threatened to choke him "Come here little girls and kiss me. I used to know your mamma when she wasn't much larger than you are.

Barbara, with her blue eyes still drooping, yielded to the request, and the children stood in the elder lady's lap, unmistakably delighted on the change told.

"I think the house is beautiful," said meek Barbara.

"Will you rent it to me, Barbara Nahum

"Well, yes, said Nahum, thoughtfully, "I'll let you have my house if you want it, Barbara.

"Will the privilege of keeping a few boarders

"No, ma-am"

Barbara stopped and looked wistfully at him.

"But I don't think you understand! a very good bed, Mr. Briggs

"Yes I do.

"And that I cannot afford to take the house without the privilege of boarders.

"I tell you that, Barbara," said Mr. Briggs, dictatorially, "I'll give you privilege of keeping just one boarder, and him you've got to keep all your life—long, if you come to take him.

"I don't think I quite understand you, Mr. Briggs, said Barbara, but she blushed very strongly, and we are rather inclined to think that she told a naughty little fib. "What do you say to me for a boarder Barbara? said the old bachelor, taking her little widow's hands in his.

"Barbara, we were young fools once, but that is reason we should be old fools now. I like you well as I ever did, and I'll do my best to be a good husband to you, and a good father to your little girls, if you'll be my wife.

Barbara blushed again and hesitated, but Nahum was not to be eluded thus.

"What I take down the "To Let, Barbara?

"Yes, she murmured, almost under her breath.

So Nahum went deliberately out and coolly tore down the bill, to the great astonishment and disappointment of a party of jubilant house-hunters who were just mounting the steps.

"And what shall we be married, Barbara? he next demanded.

"In the summer, perhaps, said Barbara, slyly.

"To-morrow," said Nahum, decisively "to-morrow it was.

"Upon my word, Barbara," said Nahum, on the first day of June, as he watched his wife's blossoming face behind the coffee-urn, "you don't think how much fuller it is with you for a house-keeper than that Mrs. Darley.

Barbara only laughed and said "he was a good old simpleton.

So the probabilities are that neither Mr Nahum Briggs nor his brown alone house will be in the market again as "To Let. Inquire Within.

Mastering the Masons.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 26. A new obstacle by which to reach the lodge room on the third floor is being erected in Masonic Hall, on Fifth avenue. The Catholic diocese of Pittsburg, singular as it may seem, owns stock in this building and the ground on which it is located. Three years ago, during the life of Bishop Domenec, a well known and wealthy member of the Masonic fraternity died in the Catholic faith, and bequeathed his valuable property and the stock he held in the Masonic property to the diocese. In several conversations, the other stock holders in the Fifth avenue property were desirous of selling the property, but the Bishop, at the time, not being satisfied with the price offered, would not consent to the sale.

How to Gain Flesh and Strength.

Day after each meal Scott's Emulsion. It is as palatable as milk and nearly digested. Delicate people improve rapidly with its use. For Consumption, Throat Affections and Bronchitis it is unequalled. Dr Thos. Price Ala., says: "I used Scott's Emulsion on a child right months old he gained four pounds in a month."

MARY, OUR MOTHER.

The Ideal Woman. The Model for all Women throughout the World.

At the St Patrick's Day dinner in St. Louis, the last toast of the night was responded to by Judge John H. Finney, who drew with marked delicacy to his theme. The toast was, "Woman—the Adam woman made Christian but to us she remains Para due regained "Maiden, when such a soul as this is born,

The Christ-like mantle wraps the world in scorn.

JUDGE FINNEY'S SPEECH

When the great eyes of Greece and Rome rested their blinded and fixed to the enchanted world, they proudly quitted the swelling lines with a passionate intention to the totem. Lord, Mr President and brother knights of St. Patrick, have a far nobler subject assigned to us, to-night, than the recounting of the brutal conflicts around the walls of Troy or the useless wanderings of Ulysses chief. Therefore have I, in this Christian age, passed by "the timeful time" and applied, rather, to the noble chosen of angels, as alone able to imparts us with fitting words for this occasion.

CHARACTER OF HEATHENISM—WITH ITS GODDESS.

While winning for their manifestations, however, it might not be amiss for us to stop for a moment, and, in passing, to have a glance occupied by those old temples and Roman Pantheons, which stand even to their loss as and that—that whether in the Senate, the battle-field, or in the sacred precincts of their homes, they had to pay an idea that was so like that was wise, that was chaste, that was exquisite, that was a great moral creative extension in the person of a woman. Through those pale, sculptured corridors and aged along the corridors and through the halls of the Olympian haunts, were the mere impers nations of the passions of man, and the personifications of virtue. While Mars is a god of war, Venus is the goddess and god of dissolution. If Apollo were the god of poetry, Minerva was the goddess of "dialectics" and "machinery" in the country, and Mercury the god of commerce and trade. For each of those deities presided over the department of human affairs. Up the other land, the human soul was cursed with the fruits of the earth, and the dreamy of the Dodo Dacca had not had such a goddess, low the sweet Sisters of Charity and the talking virgins of our world would have mounted her altars, and where, let me ask you, would the Knights of Columbus be paying devotion as usual the very shrines of the Knights of Pythias? Jupiter Tonans himself, even under his Greek name, was, as the record goes, an unstable and unmanageable old fellow, though immense genius and consequent rascalities were somewhat palliated, if not entirely redeemed by the fact that he was the father of the peerless Apollo, the Hercules, Venus, Mars and beauty and supreme directress of the human heart. To the author of all time also was indeed a fourth spouse, a fiery little woman, who, if we may be allowed to use the convenient parlance of all this nineteenth century, "had a temper to give."

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE IN ANCIENT HISTORY

But, leaving the mountains, the influence of woman has been even more pronounced in man. Who, before the Christ, ever had a high ideal of woman? Who ever had high thoughts and they proved the exception? Who ever had a high ideal of woman? Who ever had the birth-throes of regeneration. The very name of the Virgin Mary, the mother of both the Lord and the Word. It was the daughter of Joachim and Anna, the daughter of Joachim and Anna, the daughter of Israel, the daughter of Jesse, the daughter of David, and with a fire of purity burned in her breast, and with a fire of purity burned in her breast, and with a fire of purity burned in her breast

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—In the occasion of his Sacerdotal Jubilee the Holy Father will receive a jewelled tiara from the Emperor of Germany.

—The National church of St. Patrick's in Rome is to be dedicated on the 22nd of August. Orbi Sallustiani and where now recently stood the Villa Ludovisi.

—On the occasion of the Easter solemnities the Pope distributed 1,210,000 in the parishes of Rome, and 160 beds and bedding to as many indigent families.

—During the past week 2,618 emigrants left Queenstown for America. The total for the month of April is 11,804 against 6,540 for April of last year.

—A church is about to be built in Rome to commemorate the centenary of St. Louis Gonzaga, and as great is made to all the youth of the Catholic world in and of its canonization.

—Bishop d'Herbomez, O. M. I., from British Columbia, accompanied by Rev. Father McGuckin, O. M. I., is at present in Rome, having passed through London on the 19th ult., on their way to attend the General Chapter of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate.

—A dispatch to the daily press states that Beecher had serious intentions of dying a Catholic, but the dispatch adds that "rumor originated in the fertile brain of some New York poseur, who, as the idea of Beecher ever occupying a pulpit in the Catholic Church is unworthy of any serious consideration at the hand of Catholics.

—A subjectage, from Rome says that Bishop Keane of Richmond has received the Pope's Brief approving the plan which defines the scope of the proposed American Catholic University. Very few alterations were made in the plan drawn up by the American Bishops, and the measure as a whole is thoroughly embraced in the Brief. The choice of a site is left to the Bishops, and Bishop Keane is appointed as Rector.

—Every reader of the Monitor will derive much useful information as well as acquire a great deal of satisfaction at possessing the true faith, by giving a close and careful perusal to the beautiful sermon preached by Very Rev. Joseph Sasia, S. J., at the corner-stone laying on Sunday last. Non-Catholics also can profit by reading the sterling argument which the eloquent divine used in defence of Catholic doctrine.

—The Northwestern Chronicle says that a member of the Richmond, Va., city council recently introduced a proposed ordinance before that body which proposes to license not those who sell liquor but those who drink it. This is claimed by some of the papers to be a novel idea. It may be Kate Mann, made a similar proposition to license drinkers in the Minnesota legislature, three or four years ago.

—The celebrated Franciscan preacher, Padre Agostino, has addressed immense crowds in the vast Cathedral of Florence. In his first sermon he said to the people that no rhetoric or eloquence should be expected from him; only the Gospel addressed to their minds and hearts. The subject of his sermon was of the highest importance, "How grave and better a thing it is for society, for the family, and for individuals to have separated from the truth, which is Jesus Christ." It is reported that about 12,000 persons assembled within the walls of Santa Maria del Fiore of Florence to hear this great preacher.

—A good Catholic named Denis H. Tully—God rest his soul!—died recently in Boston and left nearly thousand dollars in charity! $10,000 goes to Boston College, $10,000 to reduce the debt on St. Mary's Church; $10,000 for the care of homeless Catholic children; $10,000 to the Little Sisters of the Poor; $10,000 to the St. Vincent de Paul Society for the poor of Boston; and $10,000 to minor Catholic charities. Would that we could chronicle such an event in California! Yet, with all the boasted wealth among Catholics on this coast, it is only very rarely that any of them act upon Cardinal Manning's advice when he tells rich Catholics to "remember God in their wills."

—The Propriedor of Archdiocese Walsh to the London Tablet's continued misrepresentation of the Irish Bishops, priests and people, which we print this week, is calculated to accomplish a great deal of good in removing the scales of ignorance from the eyes of those English Catholics who have been misled by the malignant course of the Tablet towards its Irish co-religionists. It is also very gratifying to know that in their present political battle for Home Rule, the Irish people have the full and unstinted sympathy of Pope Leo XIII., and that where welfare is to him a subject of the utmost solicitude. It is last matter to the people of a country so eminently Catholic should in their temporal as well as in their spiritual affairs prove so deep an interest to the Holy Father, and that their evidence to win legislative independence should command his entire sympathy and concurrence. It is, at the same time, easy to understand that a journal serving such a party as the Tablet serves would not be too particular to give a straight answer in the formidable indictment brought against it by Archbishop Walsh. It has adopted a line of reply that can not be regarded as any answer at all to the strong charges of misrepresentation and premeditated malice which Archbishop Walsh brought against the bigoted course of a paper which is far more English than Catholic, and far more Tory than truthful.

The Old and the New St. Mary's.

It was a holy inspiration which prompted his Grace Archbishop Riordan to select the opening day of the month dedicated to the Blessed Virgin as the occasion for laying the corner stone of the new St. Mary's Cathedral. Thirty-four years ago, on the 29th of the same sweet month of May, his Grace Archbishop Alemany, O. P., had dedicated the ground whereon stands the pro Cathedral of this Archdiocese for $1,000. At that period of San Francisco history there was but three other Catholic churches, where there are now twenty-three, almost around in the neighborhood. Through the munificence of the generous people of the metropolis of the Pacific Coast. Those three churches comprised the old adobe church of Mission Dolores, the remains of which still stand on Eighteenth street, and which was then attended only by the Spanish residents in the immediate vicinity, for persons from the city proper, ever venturing out so far across the intervening sand hills in order to attend religious services. St. Patrick's, a small wooden church located at the foot of a sand hill on the line of the present Market street where the Palace Hotel at present stands—gathered its congregation from the region of sand hills known as "Happy Valley," which represented that section of the city from Fourth street to the Mission. The third church was the Franciscan Church, located on Valley street, was the cosmopolitan church of the city away back in the "fifties," sermons being preached at the seven o'clock Mass on Sundays for the Spanish people, and at other masses for the French and English speaking Catholics.

When the ground for the old St. Mary's Cathedral was purchased, the work of digging out the foundation and building the basement walls was pushed forward at that rapidity which marked the progress of all enterprises in this city at that period. The corner-stone was laid on Sunday, May 17th, 1853, by Right Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., then Bishop of Monterey, assisted by Very Rev. John Francis Lhabura, V. G.; Rev. Eugene O'Connell, Superior of the St. Thomas Seminary, afterwards first Bishop of Grass Valley, now Titular Bishop of Zopalon; Rev. Hugh P. Gallagher, (then Pastor of St. Mary's), Rev. Anthony Jonene, Missionary of the College of San Fernando, and Rev. Flavian Fontaine, Pastor of the Mission of San Francisco. The students from St. Thomas' Seminary at the Mission Dolores also assisted at the Pontifical Mass, among whom was Rev. John Cassidy, at present attached to St. Paul's Church. A sermon replete with religious reminiscences of "Yerba Buena" was delivered by Rev. Hugh Gallagher, and a discourse in Spanish was given by Father Lhabura. Shortly after the corner-stone laying, a Ladies Fair was held for the benefit of the Church, which netted the sum of $6,096.87. Up to April 1st, 1864, the sum of $22,147.35 had been varously collected for the building fund, and a large force of workmen and artisans were kept constantly at work at wages ranging from $10 to $16 a day.

During the year 1853 4 the main portion of the church was built, and at eight o'clock on the evening of the vigil of Christmas Day, 1854, the carpenter work was sufficiently advanced to justify the celebration of Midnight Mass on that holy season of the year. It was to secure good positions for seeing and hearing religious services which a large majority of the attendants had been at pains to secure before. The girders of the ceiling were not completed and the floor joists of the galleries were in the same condition, but with that happy go-lucky disposition so peculiar to the miners of California, a large number of the gold-seeking Argonauts climbed up the sides of the building and seated themselves on the girders of the ceiling and the joists of the galleries, their rough and rubber boots dangling down over the heads of the congregation on the main floor where some unpainted pews and rough benches had been improvised for the accommodation of those who did not care to roost like crows in the upper portion of the unfinished building.

On that memorable Christmas eve of 1854 the dedicatory Mass was celebrated by Archbishop Alemany, O. P., assisted by Vicar General Lhabura, Revs. Carroll and Casen, Deacon and Subdeacon; Rev. J. F. Harrington, Master of Ceremonies. The sermon to the cosmopolitan congregation assembled on that occasion was preached by Very Rev. Hugh P. Gallagher. The orchestra for the festival which was comprised of brass and stringed instruments, was placed in the gospel side of the main altar, the other—under the leadership of the well known George Loder—rendering Haydn's Third Mass.

It was nearly two o'clock Christmas morning before the services were concluded, and it took nearly another hour before the last of the miners had descended from his high perch and commenced his homeward march through the sand dunes that then environed the city south of California street.

In 1855 the work of completing the old Cathedral was continued and had so far progressed in 1856 that the basement could be used as a school room, library and children's chapel, for which it was afterwards used for many years. On June 24th, 1859, the clipper ship Flying Mist arrived in this port, a portion of her cargo being 57 cases of stained glass, the most beautiful ever seen after the Cathedral whereon so many "classic chiaroscuro" both the living and the dead, have been fitly provided celebrated by both priests and Bishops, many of whom have since passed the Church Triumphant. The beautiful white marble altar was the work of one of the most celebrated sculptors of the Royal Academy of Turin, and cost nearly $4,000.

In 1866 Archbishop Alemany, O. P., organized a Church Building Association, and from the report of a select committee appointed to ascertain the financial transactions connected with the building of the old Cathedral from May 29th, 1853, to December 1st, 1869, we learn that the receipts during that interval were $127,456.29, whilst the expenditures were $174,762.14, leaving a debt on the Cathedral at that date of $47,303.85. In April, 1866, another meeting was convened for the purpose of paying off the debt of the Archdiocesan and the efforts then and since made have materially reduced it.

When old St. Mary's was built it was not expected that the city would spread with such rapidity or westerly much beyond its limits. Then North Beach and its vicinity was the garden of the city devoted to residences. Stockton street was the popular promenade, whilst Dupont street and adjoining streets were the Montmartre of the metropolis of the Pacific Coast. Those three churches comprised the old adobe church of Mission Dolores, the remains of which still stand on Eighteenth street, and which was then attended only by the Spanish residents in the immediate vicinity, for persons from the city proper ever venturing out so far across the intervening sand hills in order to attend religious services. St. Patrick's—a small wooden church located at the foot of a sand hill on the line of the present Market street where the Palace Hotel at present stands—gathered its congregation from the region of sand hills known as "Happy Valley," which represented that section of the city from Fourth street to the Mission. The third church was the Franciscan Church, located on Valley street, was the cosmopolitan church of the city away back in the "fifties," sermons being preached at the seven o'clock Mass on Sundays for the Spanish people, and at other masses for the French and English speaking Catholics.

When the ground for the old St. Mary's Cathedral was purchased, the work of digging out the foundation and building the basement walls was pushed forward at that rapidity which marked the progress of all enterprises in this city at that period. The corner-stone was laid on Sunday, May 17th, 1853, by Right Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., then Bishop of Monterey, assisted by Very Rev. John Francis Lhabura, V. G.; Rev. Eugene O'Connell, Superior of the St. Thomas Seminary, afterwards first Bishop of Grass Valley, now Titular Bishop of Zopalon; Rev. Hugh P. Gallagher, (then Pastor of St. Mary's), Rev. Anthony Jonene, Missionary of the College of San Fernando, and Rev. Flavian Fontaine, Pastor of the Mission of San Francisco. The students from St. Thomas' Seminary at the Mission Dolores also assisted at the Pontifical Mass, among whom was Rev. John Cassidy, at present attached to St. Paul's Church. A sermon replete with religious reminiscences of "Yerba Buena" was delivered by Rev. Hugh Gallagher, and a discourse in Spanish was given by Father Lhabura. Shortly after the corner-stone laying, a Ladies Fair was held for the benefit of the Church, which netted the sum of $6,096.87. Up to April 1st, 1864, the sum of $22,147.35 had been varously collected for the building fund, and a large force of workmen and artisans were kept constantly at work at wages ranging from $10 to $16 a day.

During the year 1853 4 the main portion of the church was built, and at eight o'clock on the evening of the vigil of Christmas Day, 1854, the carpenter-work was sufficiently advanced to justify the celebration of Midnight Mass on that holy season of the year. It was to secure good positions for seeing and hearing religious services which a large majority of the attendants had been at pains to secure before. The girders of the ceiling were not completed and the floor joists of the galleries were in the same condition, but with that happy go-lucky disposition so peculiar to the miners of California, a large number of the gold-seeking Argonauts climbed up the sides of the building and seated themselves on the girders of the ceiling and the joists of the galleries, their rough and rubber boots dangling down over the heads of the congregation on the main floor where some unpainted pews and rough benches had been improvised for the accommodation of those who did not care to roost like crows in the upper portion of the unfinished building.

On that memorable Christmas eve of 1854 the dedicatory Mass was celebrated by Archbishop Alemany, O. P., assisted by Vicar General Lhabura, Revs. Carroll and Casen, Deacon and Subdeacon; Rev. J. F. Harrington, Master of Ceremonies. The sermon to the cosmopolitan congregation assembled on that occasion was preached by Very Rev. Hugh P. Gallagher. The orchestra for the festival which was comprised of brass and stringed instruments, was placed in the gospel side of the main altar, the other—under the leadership of the well known George Loder—rendering Haydn's Third Mass.

It was nearly two o'clock Christmas morning before the services were concluded, and it took nearly another hour before the last of the miners had descended from his high perch and commenced his homeward march through the sand dunes that then environed the city south of California street.

In 1855 the work of completing the old Cathedral was continued and had so far progressed in 1856 that the basement could be used as a school room, library and children's chapel, for which it was afterwards used for many years. On June 24th, 1859, the clipper ship Flying Mist arrived in this port, a portion of her cargo being 57 cases of stained glass, the most beautiful ever seen after the Cathedral whereon so many "classic chiaroscuro" both the living and the dead, have been fitly provided celebrated by both priests and Bishops, many of whom have since passed the Church Triumphant. The beautiful white marble altar was the work of one of the most celebrated sculptors of the Royal Academy of Turin, and cost nearly $4,000.

In 1866 Archbishop Alemany, O. P., organized a Church Building Association, and from the report of a select committee appointed to ascertain the financial transactions connected with the building of the old Cathedral from May 29th, 1853, to December 1st, 1869, we learn that the receipts during that interval were $127,456.29, whilst the expenditures were $174,762.14, leaving a debt on the Cathedral at that date of $47,303.85. In April, 1866, another meeting was convened for the purpose of

The Outrage at Vancouver, W. T.

I.

Through the kindness of a friend I received at Vancouver, Washington Territory, we have been put in possession of a sensational paper published in the English language, prepared by the military authorities of that place upon Bishop Junger, by which the property of the Catholic Village, and existing the occasion.

In addition to the facts recorded in the Monitor last week, it appears that not only was the Holy Angels College closed by forcibly by the authorities, but the contents of the school, consisting of about 300 pupils, were ejected, and the building was made the scene of a grand ball, given by the officers of the garrison, and many a story (alone from the mouths of the young immigrant girl landed have plodded up the steep, sand hill before Oakland street was graded, in order to lay their joys and their sorrows, their trials and their infirmities at the feet of that Catholic Vicar which has been the comfort of the distressed and the consolation of the afflicted, during the past thirty four years.

What cherished reminiscences clung around the old Cathedral! The help of its shrine many thousands of infants and adults have been born again of water and the Holy Ghost! The place where other thousands were made good and perfect Christians through the Sacrament of Confirmation. The holy spot where many thousands received for the first time the Body and Blood, Four Lord! The same sacred shrine where two hearts bound by Our Faith were made one flesh in the Sacrament of Matrimony. The Ark of the Covenant where sinners sought and found consolation through Penitence, Contrition and the Holy Eucharist! The chosen scene where so many priests have made their vows and celebrated for the first time the sacrifice of the Mass. The Altar from place where rested the remains of thousands of the faithful departed, while the Dies Irae and Requiem Mass, and the last Requiem over them are they were consigned to Calvary to rest in peace.

Only the generation coming before, the old Cathedral, two, most pious and "But though people perish and new Cathedrals supplant the old, the Church of God remains immutable and indestructible." In the new Cathedral the same Mass, Pontifex that was heard on the vigil of Christmas, 1854, in the old Cathedral will be certainly only heard in the new Cathedral by sinner stone yet unborn! The same Mass, the same sacrifice, the same ceremonies. And thus from generation to generation the glory of God resounds in this Church, proclaiming over time unaffected by death's destroying scythe, unscrupulated by the material decay of mortal mansions, or stately Cathedral the spiritual progress of God's ever-marching Faith will continue onward march until the sunset of the world's last day when the Church Militant shall be come the Church Triumphant, and God's faithful children be welcomed into an eter nity of heavenly glory.

Dasit's Retraction.

When Michael Davitt delivered his last speech in New York, in which he made a violent personal attack upon Cardinal Manning, the eminent Prelate's equipoise antagonism to Irish Home Rule, Monitor and the Irish agitator made a point of the following dispatch:

"New York, May 3.—Rev. Father Sasia, of Joseph Grace, priest of Santa Marie Ingrassia, Rome, arrived here yesterday. Speaking to a reporter of the Michael Davitt demonstration, Father Sasia said: 'Cardinal Manning's speech, which shows was a strong appeal to the Irish people, and in the end it Irish people, liberty, are actually and unconditionally, and Ireland, in the Irish National Leagues, the priest's opposition to Home Rule, and the Pope's Cardinal Manning. I saw him before my departure for America, and he gave me a letter of apology to Cardinal Simeoni. This is a copy of the letter in which he explains matters to my first letters in the United States. Cardinal Simeoni read it and was so pleased with it, and he sent it to the Pope, who read it and was so pleased with it, and he sent it to Cardinal Jacobini, who read it and was so pleased with it, and he sent it to Cardinal Rampolla, who read it and was so pleased with it, and he sent it to Cardinal Simeoni, who

Farm and Home.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

Valuable Hints that May Be Away With Medicine Bills

For billiousness, the editor of the Hygienic Medical and Surgical Journal considers a plain diet of bread, milk, oatmeal, vegetables and fruit, with lean meat or fresh fish, is best. Exercise in the open air helps. The vitals of an acetic attack will be relieved by, 1, abstinence; 2, porridge and milk, 3, meat, a little meat and fish are type fruit, then coming to solid food gradually.

Hot lemonade, taken just before retiring, is a well known remedy for a cold in its first stages. Everybody is not familiar, however, with the famous cure for an acute attack of hoarseness. For this purpose first roast a lemon in the fire, turning it now and then that all sides may be equally cooked. It should not crack or burst, but be soft all through. While she lemon is still very hot, cut a piece from the top, fill with as much sugar as it will hold and eat on going to bed.

A wrust on the diet of centenarians holds that the rules of life laid down by Cornaro are probably perfect, and he intimates that, in his opinion, 12 ounces of solid food and 16 ounces of liquid appear to be the maximum requirements of age. The solids ought, he thinks, to be made up of vegetable and solid food chiefly fish, and tender animals, such as chickens. He drinks fruit and fish, and says also that salt and sugar should only be used sparingly. He also deprecates the too copious use of milk, as well as of drugs, and, after adding that industry of some kind should be practised, he gravely points out the valuable medicinal properties of short wine.

People have very generally learned the lesson that natural sleep is the best medicine of all. A scientific writer now adds attention to the power as a preventive of disease. He remarks, as an instance, that sleep taken at the right moment, will prevent an attack of nervous headache. If the subjects of such headaches will watch for coming, they will find that it begins with a weariness or heaviness. This is the time the sleep of an hour, or even two, at nature guides, will effectually prevent the headache. If not taken just then it will be too late. After the attack is fairly under way, it may be impossible to get to sleep till far into the night.

Dr. Dullmann, of Germany, lectured recently on the dangers of living in new houses. According to him, the close fitting of new doors, window sashes and floors prevents the entrance of fresh air from the outside, while the moisture in the pores of new plastering obstructs the transpiration of air through them. For these reasons, together with the consumption of oxygen and formation of carbonic acid in inhabited rooms he recommends that no dwelling be occupied till the walls are thoroughly dried, which may take a year or two. To hasten the process he advises burning charcoal in the rooms. The surprisingly dry wood, which has drawn the hydrate of lime in the plastering to carbonate, and sets free the water of hydration which fills the pores of the plastering, until all of it evaporates. Of her exhibition, however, rate the danger of a new house less high than does Dr. Dullmann, provided efficient ventilation is supplied.

The Body and Its Health.

A WORD ABOUT DISINFECTANTS. — A number of disinfectants for household use are generally classed together as about equally good. But as each has a more or less specific action, it may be expected to serve some particular purpose with best effect. Following are the common disinfectants [illegible] Chlorine, or chlorine gas, is produced, and whitewash with lime.

Chloride of lime, by prices of chlorine, to absorb putrid effluvia and to stop putrefaction. Sulphate of iron (copperas), one pound dissolved in one quart of water. Poured down waste pipes this will destroy the foulest smells. A quantity in an open pan will purify the air in rooms.

SEVERE HEADACHE FROM WEAKNESS.—1. Be regular in your habits.

2. If possible, go to bed at the same hour every night.

3. Rise in the morning soon after you are awake.

4. A sponge bath of cold or tepid water should be followed by friction with towel or hand.

5. Eat plain food.

6. Begin your morning meal with fruit.

7. Don't go to work immediately after eating.

8. Be moderate in the use of liquids at all seasons.

9. It is safer to filter and boil drinking water.

10. Exercise in the open air whenever the weather permits.

11. In malarious districts do your walking in the middle of the day.

12. Keep the feet comfortable and well protected.

13. Wear woolen clothing the year round.

14. See that your sleeping rooms and living rooms are well ventilated, and that sewer gas does not enter them.

15. Brush your teeth at least twice a day, night and morning.

16. Don't worry. It interferes with the healthful action of the stomach.

17. You must have interesting occupation in vigorous old age. Continue to keep the brain active. If-et means rust.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism and Catarrh.

Baldwinsville, N. Y.

Pardee Medicine Co.

GENTLEMEN—About one year ago I chilled my blood and was under the Doctor's care for about six months when I had a counsel of eight physicians and was given up to die. Soon after, a lady friend came to see me and told me about your great Remedy. She said she had been cured by it after having the rheumatism seven years, and that her rheumatism was first brought on by a cold. At this time I was suffering severe pain all through my body and near my heart. The doctors called it only "Brown blood." Through the persuasion of my friend I procured a bottle. I found some relief, seeing that I procured more and was entirely cured by its use; and what was my surprise and pleasure at finding that I was not only cured of my rheumatism, but the catarrh, which had been troubling me for years, and had become very offensive, had entirely left me.

Wishing you remedy every success, and thanking you very much for my double cure, I remain,

Truly yours,
MRS. LUCY BRONSON.

Rochester, N. Y.

GENTS—I was confined to my bed with inflammatory Rheumatism for over a week; was very badly afflicted; suffering from severe pains in my chest, it was going to my heart. On Thursday the 15th I commenced using Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy at 8 o'clock, P. M., and on Saturday the 17th, was able to walk all over the house, and have since continued to improve, and take pleasure in recommending it to all who are afflicted with the terrible disease.

REW. R. WILKINS,
No. 5 East Maple Street.

Ask your druggist for Dr. Pardee's Remedy and take no other. Price $1 per bottle, six bottles, $5.

Pardee Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Family Fun.

Mr. Bowser and the Mired Girl.

When we began housekeeping and got our first bread girl, Mr. Bowser called me into the library, shut the door, and slipped his voice down to the confidential pitch and said

"Mrs. Bowser, let's start out right. Let's control the feelings of that poor girl in the kitchen."

"Certainly."

"She's just as good as we are, and we must put on any airs over her. She shall sit at the table with us, and I'll be too any time from her work you might teach her how to sing and play the piano."

"I can't quite agree with you, Mr. Bowser."

"Uh, you can! Woman's mortal enemy is woman. Well, I'm going out to have a little talk with Erica and tell her what I'm willing to do."

I listened at the kitchen door. Mr. Bowser is no man to beat about the bush. He went right at the business in hand by saying

"Erica, nobility does not consist in riches."

She did away from him toward the sink.

"You are not to blame for being in your present position. How would you like to take singing lessons?"

She looked at him with an open mouth.

"And learn to play the piano?"

She opened her mouth still wider.

"Or, perhaps, learn how to sketch and paint?"

She seized a pan of water in the sink and whirled on him with

"You infernal cross-eyed idl reprobate to talk to an innocent girl in that fashion! Get out of my kitchen or I'll down you in a minute!"

When we sat down to supper I wondered why Eliza hadn't put on a plate for herself, and I asked Mr. Bowser when I should begin her piano lessons.

"Mrs. Bowser, have you lost the little sense you possessed two or three months ago? he hotly exclaimed

A Wrecked Life.

Omaha Widow—I should greatly like to meet your wife, Mr. Halfwest.

Mr. D.-Sent.—I have no wife.

"I can sympathize with you. You too, have lost—"

"I never was married."

"Oh! You are engaged, though, I presume, and—"

"I have never been engaged, madam—"

"Ah! I begin to understand. Some sad romance of the past has left its mark upon your heart—"

"No, ma. I have never been in love. I would not tie myself to a woman if she were sent down from heaven to me."

"Mercy! A woman hater! What could have perverted your nature! What has happ and to—"

"I am a dry goods clerk."

A Slight Impediment.

She had gone up to visit a lady friend, with whom her acquaintance was slight, and she wanted to let her know somehow that is usually considered among ladies rather important.

"Then know that I am engaged to be married."

"Indeed! He a nice fellow, of course—

"Yes, charming; delightful gentleman.

"And when is the ceremony to take place?

"Well, I don't quite know—

"There needn't be any delay short such a thing as that. He's wealthy, is he?

"Yes, has very well off. But you see I wish, there's a slight incumbrance

"A slight incumbrance?

"I mean—well—he's not divorced yet."

Miss C——was born only two years earlier than her brother Tom. When Tom was ten years old she plotted because she was twelve, when Tom was known to be fourteen she confessed to be sixteen, and when Tom proudly boasted of eighteen she timidly acknowledged herself past nineteen when Tom came home from college with a moustache and a pipe, and had a party in honor of his twenty-first birthday, she said to her friends: "What a boyish fellow he is. Who would think he was only a year younger than I?" When Tom declared he was twenty-five and old enough to get married, she said to a gentleman friend: "Do you know, I feel savagely jealous to think of Tom getting married. But then I suppose twins are always more attached to each other than other brothers and sisters. And two years later at Tom's wedding she said with pitiful tirade to the wedding guests: "Dear old Tom, to see him married to night and think how when he was only five years old! they brought him to me, his sister. I wonder if he thinks of it to-night!"

How Widows do not Woo.

Omaha Girl: "Engaged to Mr. De Lowe! Dear me! How do you widows manage to step in among us young girls and carry off our nicest beaux?"

Young Widow. "Well, in the first place I'm really like a man, we don't act as if we hated the very sight of him.

"You don't?

"No, and if he forgets himself and happens to touch our hands, we don't jump as if he were a reptile have Remarkable Feet.

"Now, you say, Mr. Kolly, that you stood outside, and, looking over the fence, saw the detective here strike Mr. Smith!

"Yes, sah.

"How tall are you, Kolby!

"Heut fee foot six, sah.

"Then tell me, if you please, how you could stand and look over a nine-foot fence?"

"I stood on my my tiptoes, sah."

Poor Fellow.

"Come in, my poor man," said a benevolent lady to a ragged tramp, "and I will get you a nothing to eat."

"Thanky, mum; don't care if I do."

"I suppose," continued the lady, setting a square meal before him, "your life has been full of trials!"

"Yes, mum; and the worst of it was, I allus got convicted."

—"There is now, and has been for three years, an inmate of St Peters Hospital, Albany, N. Y., in the Rev Wm Tillman, who for twenty eight years was pastor of a church in West Troy. Having deafness in its very rare—saved some money during this long sickness, the Rev Mr Tillman, recently that he could not better dispose of this sum, and sent drafts for $50,000 to St. Joseph's Foreign Missionary Society, Mill Hill, England.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, and May Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are the result of what they are, viz. the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it is now made easy to cure this curse of our country in one or two simple applications made by the patient at home. Send stamp for pamphlet describing this new treatment to A. H. Dixon & Son, 337 West 42nd Street, New York. By special permission Mr. Dixon, by, is stayed at the Metropole House during the month of May. Market st. San Francisco, for a short time. Patients above should send for his treatise or call and see him. Consultation free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

You don't wait till Burglars come before buying a revolver—Then don't Wait till Sickness comes before buying a bottle of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER you may need it in the night for Diphtheria-Cold-Tooth-ache—Neuralgia or ACCIDENTS. Buy a bottle NOW. All Druggists sell it.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS YOU CAN BUY ONE A BOND OF THE IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT BOND. DATE OF 1881

These bonds are shares in a loan, the interest of which is paid out in premiums every three years. Every bond is entitled to

Three Drawings Annually.

Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Your bond may win the first one of the following premiums, or three or

NO BLANKS.

Premiums	Florins	Florins
1	100,000	100,000
1	50,000	50,000
1	20,000	20,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
1	2,000	2,000
1	1,000	1,000
1	500	500

Together 7,000 premiums amounting to Florins Florins. The next redemption takes place on the following premium, or three or

FIRST OF JUNE,

And every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE JUNE 1st of EVERY UNTIL FEB. 1st, is entitled to the above premium that may be twelve months on that date.

One of these orders was in EUROPEAN LOTTERIES, in exactly 33 all orders, has all those bonds for the next drawing. Orders payable in monthly instalments.

For more information or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 100 Fulton St. cor. B'way, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1874.

☞ The above Government Bonds are not to be confounded with Lottery Bonds.

☞ We also offer Government Bonds for sale on the terms of the United States.

☞ Our Circular Letter explains that you may thus THE EXACT PROFITS.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER. Approved by Physicians, Druggists and Professional Beauties as the most delicate and perfect Complexion Powder. Ask your druggist for it. J. P. POZZONI, St. Louis, Mo.

Advice to the Aged. Age brings infirmities, such as sluggish bowels, weak kidneys and bladder and torpid liver. Tutt's Pills have a specific effect on these organs, stimulating the bowels, giving natural elasticity without straining or griping, and IMPARTING VIGOR to the kidneys, bladder and liver. They are adapted to old or young. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL Commission Merchants N. E. CORNER FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS., SAN FRANCISCO

Wool Sacks, Twines, Stamps, Tops and all articles required by Wool Growers kept on hand and supplied to Customers at the Very Lowest Rates. Cash Advanced on Consignments of Wool, Hides, Skins, etc. Low Rates of Interest on promissory notes made.

Post Office Address San Francisco P. O. Box 2221.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 717.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Help, Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Sawyers, Hands, Gardeners, Fishermen, and Married Couples for private families and ranches. Also, great variety of Mechanics, Laborers, and Boys for various trades. Satisfactory reasons for sudden or LOW wages.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD. Time Schedule (Pacific Standard Time) Taking Effect Sunday, April 10, 1887. Leave Tiburon for San Francisco: 8:00 a.m., 9:45 a.m., 1:45 p.m., 4:15 p.m. Leave San Francisco for Tiburon: 9:45 a.m., 12:15 p.m., 3:15 p.m., 4:45 p.m. Stages connect at Tiburon with trains of this road for Sausalito, Point Reyes, Cazadero, etc. Fare to Tiburon: Ferry, 10c; Round Trip, 20c. Stages extra. Tickets sold and baggage checked through to points beyond. Ferry foot of Market st. (Slip 9). Tiburon Ferry Pier, foot of Main st. (Narrow Gauge Depot). H. D. MAYNARD, Superintendent. T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt. 1 Market st., San Francisco, Cal.

JOS. PESCIA, Physician and Surgeon RESIDENCE, 1036 Taylor Street. OFFICE, 511 Washington Street. Office Hours—8 to 9 a. m., 1 to 3 and 7 to 8 p. m.

A. R. HAZARD, Photographs and Tintypes, 997 Market Street, Near Sixth Street, SAN FRANCISCO. Instantaneous Photographs. TIN TYPES. Delivered in 15 Minutes. Cabinet Pictures at the Lowest Prices. ☞ GIVE US A CALL. ☜

CUTLERY! IF YOU WANT to get your Razors, Scissors, and Carving Knives GROUND AND PUT IN FIRST-CLASS ORDER, GO TO M. J. HAYES, Cutler, 1436 Market St., bet. Eighth & Ninth. ☞ Factory of my cutlery goods made to order and repaired. A select stock of fine Cutlery on hand.

D. MENCARINI, 911 Mission St, San Francisco, Cal. Manufacturer and Importer of RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC. Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc. THE ONLY PORTRAIT COLLECTION IN THE PACIFIC COAST. ☞ Catalogue sent free on application.

JAS. FORRESTER HAS OPENED A BULL'S HEAD Horse Market On the same principle as conducted in New York. Fine accommodation; well lighted and airy; 60 feet to stage; stalls capacity for 100 head of horses; 40 feet wide; with plenty of water and good attendants. This BULL'S HEAD market is opened for the accommodation of the public, and for the sale of good, sound, gentle, and well broken horses, and for the sale of such stock on good accommodations. Will at all times be found a good assortment of horses for sale. Prices ranging to suit a class of customers. Persons wishing to sell a stale of a horse can do so by leaving the same with the undersigned. Stable on the premises, Entrance, 606 Valencia Street and 376 Fifteenth and Valencia Streets.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO., IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF PAINTS, OILS and GLASS 112 and 114 California St., SAN FRANCISCO.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS Artificial Flowers, Bouquets, PLANTS AND ORNAMENTS, FOR CHURCH ALTARS. In the Latest Imperial Designs. A. GOEBKING, 913 Mission Street, opposite Jones Mod.

B. BRADLEY, Painting, Whitening, AND PAPER HANGING, 923 Mission Street, 923 Telephone No. 3064.

A. F. KNORP, MAIN STREET MILL, 130 135 MAIN ST., Bet. Mission and Howard Sts. Near Fremont. Planing, Sawing, Turning, Shaping. Wood Carving, Moulding, Door, Sash, Door and Window Frames, etc. Stairs, Railings, Balusters, Newels, Mantels, Office Fixtures, Church Furniture, Scroll Sawing, Fancy Woods, Square and Octagon Turning a specialty.

THE DR. ZELLE Turkish, Electric, Russian, Steam BATHS. 520 to 526 Pacific Street bet. Montgomery and Kearny.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

BEST PIANOS. $500 Pianos from $50 upwards. New Pianos as low as $150. Antiseil Famous Pianos unsurpassed Highest award over 500 makers. All Pianos sold by us guaranteed for 7 years. Pianos for rent a million dollars. CALL ON T. M. Antiseil Piano Co. 7th and Market Sts., O. P. Hall.

KNABE PIANOS Unqualified and Emphatically the Best Piano in the World. A. L. BANCROFT & CO., 116 Post st., S. F. Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

ESTEY PIANOS. Superior in Tone and Finish. UNEXCELLED IN DURABILITY. BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, Agents. Warerooms, 20, O'Farrell Street, San Francisco.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, WOODLAND, — CAL. THE ACADEMY REPEATEDLY OPENED UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF THE ARCHBISHOP, and the Clergy of the Diocese of St. Mary's, Notre Dame, Benicia, is beautifully situated in the healthy and pleasant town of Woodland, surrounded by large and well cultivated farms, with every improvement and convenience. Its Course of Instruction is the most comprehensive, its discipline the most agreeable, its care and comfort of the pupils A complete Philosophical Apparatus, Cabinet of Natural History, and Library, furnished with every convenience for study. Pupils may be received at any period of the year. TERMS: Per quarter, payable in advance: Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Music, Bed and Bedding, $75.00. Washing, Mending, Bed and Bedding, $25.00. Painting in Water Colors and Oil, $10.00. Drawing, $10.00. Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting in Oil, per month, $1.00. Use of Piano, per month, $1.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 25 cts. Washing, per month, $1.00. Entrance Fee, $10. No deduction for absence, except in cases of sickness. Pupils are required to bring with them complete Bed and Table linen, and toilet articles marked distinctly. No pupil will be received for less than one quarter. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Academy of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, Woodland, Yolo Co., Cal.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA. This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1862 was invested with the privileges of a University. It now possesses large buildings, with extensive shady playgrounds, well-watered gardens, swimming pond, etc. It possesses a new and elegant Philosophical Apparatus, and a Cabinet of Mineralogy and Natural History, the latter containing specimens from all the principal localities of the mineral kingdom. It has a Museum of Natural Curiosities, Surveying, Civil Engineering, and Architecture classes, etc. For the latter a new building fitted for the purpose has been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired. Diplomas are given in the Departments of Commercial course. TERMS: (Payable semi-annually in advance.) Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once, $15.00. Tuition in English, Latin, Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Bathe, etc., per session, $100. Bed and Bedding, per session, $10. For further particulars apply to the President, REV. R. L. KENNA, S. J. President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA. THIS INSTITUTION, OFFERING PE-CULIAR advantages for a thorough and refined education, was established in 1851, and has been continuously by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the Trustees authorized the conferring of honors to confer all the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions. It occupies large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, numbers every thing to make science familiar and attractive. The course of instruction is the same as that of the Departments. Every facility will be afforded to students who desire to pursue a course of Ecclesiastical study. Terms (payable one-half in advance): Board and Tuition in English, Latin, French, Music, Use of Bed and Bedding, Washing, Mending, Stationery, Doctor's Fees, Use of Library, Use of Philosophical Apparatus, Use of Musical Instrument, per annum, $250. Extra charge for Drawing and Painting. Bed and Bedding, per session, $10. Use of Piano, per session, $20. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS: Per quarter, payable in advance. Entrance Fee, Ten Dollars, to be paid upon Board, Tuition, Washing and Mending, $62.50. Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting in Water Colors, per quarter, $15.00. Use of Piano, per quarter, $5.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per quarter, $5.00. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS IN ADMISSION: Board and Tuition in English, Latin, and French, per month, $20.00. Washing and Mending, per month, $2.00. Bed and Bedding, per month, $1.00. Use of Piano, per month, $1.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 25 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, College of Notre Dame, San Jose, Cal.

ST. CERTRUDE'S ACADEMY, PETALUMA, SONOMA CO., CAL. THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, has been established in a healthy and pleasant locality, in the commodious, well-ventilated building, and well furnished with all the requisites for a thorough education. The Course of Instruction is that followed in the Academies of the Sisters of Mercy. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS: Per Session, Payable in Advance. Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Music, Use of Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending, Stationery, Doctor's Fees, Use of Library, Use of Philosophical Apparatus, per annum, $250. Extra charge for Drawing and Painting in Oil, per session, $20. Use of Piano, per session, $20. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS IN ADMISSION: Board and Tuition in English, Latin, and French, per month, $20.00. Washing and Mending, per month, $2.00. Bed and Bedding, per month, $1.00. Use of Piano, per month, $1.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 25 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Academy of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, Petaluma, Sonoma Co., Cal.

Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, SAN LUIS OBISPO, — CALIFORNIA. BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS. Situated in the Centre of the Best Portion of the Pacific Coast. TERMS: Per Session of Five Months. BOARD AND TUITION, $150. BED AND BEDDING, $10. WASHING AND MENDING, $15. MUSIC AND USE OF PIANO, $10. DRAWING AND PAINTING, $10. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Convent of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, San Luis Obispo, Cal.

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA. CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of the Holy Names. THIS INSTITUTION, IS PLEASANTLY SITUATED IN the City of Oakland, and is now in a flourishing condition. Its Course of Instruction is that followed in the Academies of the Sisters of the Holy Names throughout the United States. TERMS: Per Session of Five Months. Board and Tuition in English, French, Drawing, Painting, Vocal Music, Use of Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending, Use of Piano, Stationery, Doctor's Fees, Use of Library, Use of Philosophical Apparatus, Use of Musical Instrument, per annum, $250. Extra charge for Drawing and Painting in Oil, per session, $20. Use of Piano, per session, $20. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Convent of the Sacred Heart, Oakland, Cal.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY, Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco. CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF ST. DOMINIC. THIS ACADEMY, TEMPORARILY SITUATED IN the City, is now in a flourishing condition. Its Course of Instruction is that followed in the Academies of the Sisters of the Order throughout the United States. TERMS: (Payable, invariably in advance.) Board, Tuition, Medical Attendance, Bed and Bedding, Washing, Use of Musical Instrument, per annum, $150.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 50 cts. Washing, per dozen, 50 cts. Extra Charges for Music and Drawing. DRS. JEFFELLIN, Presidents.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME 19 SAN FRANCISCO. FOR YOUNG LADIES. MONTEREY AVE. CORNER OF NOTRE DAME. THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1868, chartered in 1875 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and in 1887 made a College Eligible Honors, is situated on Presidio Heights, overlooking the City and Bay. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education. TERMS: Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, per annum, $250. Use of Piano, per annum, $20. Drawing, per annum, $20. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 50 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, College of Notre Dame, San Francisco, Cal.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. Conducted by the Brothers of the Christian Schools. Offers Every Facility for Acquiring a Thorough Knowledge, Whether Classical, Scientific, or Commercial. THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSical course receive the degree of A. B.; Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts. The Commercial course has been established for the benefit of those who wish to qualify themselves for the duties of business life. TERMS: (Payable quarterly in advance.) Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending, Use of Library, Use of Philosophical Apparatus, Use of Musical Instrument, per annum, $250. Extra Charge for Drawing and Painting in Oil, per session, $20. Use of Piano, per session, $20. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Saint Mary's College, San Francisco, Cal.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, A Select Boarding School. Conducted by the Brothers of Christian Schools. Pleasantly situated in the Suburbs of Oakland, Alameda County, California. TERMS: Board and Tuition, per month, $20.00. Washing and Mending, per month, $2.00. Bed and Bedding, per month, $1.00. Use of Piano, per month, $1.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 25 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, St. Joseph's Academy, Oakland, Alameda Co., Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

Academy of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, SAN LEANDRO, — CALIFORNIA. THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED IN THE SPIRIT of Mary, is highly interpolated and improved in every Academy. Pupils are received at any period of the year. TERMS: (Payable invariably in advance.) Board and Tuition, per quarter, $62.50. Washing and Mending, per dozen, $12. Bed and Bedding, per quarter, $5.00. Use of Piano, per quarter, $5.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per quarter, 25 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Academy of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, San Leandro, Cal.

URSULINE ACADEMY, FOR YOUNG LADIES, SANTA ROSA, — SONOMA CO., CAL. For Particulars Address the Superiors of the Ursulines, Santa Rosa.

Seventh Annual Session Begins August 1st. Academy of Our Lady of Angels, SANTA CLARA, — CALIFORNIA. THIS INSTITUTION, CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of Notre Dame, affords all requisite facilities for a thorough and refined education, a moral and intellectual development, the training necessary for a refined and cultivated society. The Academy, in the influence and spirit, is one of the Institutions of the Mother House, and is under the direct and immediate supervision of the Superior. The Course of Instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education. TERMS: Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, per annum, $250. Use of Piano, per annum, $20. Drawing, per annum, $20. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 50 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, Academy of Our Lady of Angels, Santa Clara, Cal.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY, Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies, SACRAMENTO, — CALIFORNIA. Conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. TERMS: (Payable invariably in advance.) Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Music, Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, $20.00. Washing and Mending, per month, $2.00. Bed and Bedding, per month, $1.00. Use of Piano, per month, $1.00. Use of Bed and Bedding, per month, 25 cts. Washing, per dozen, $12. Entrance Fee, $10. Ten dollars for the use of Bed and Bedding, to be returned if not injured. Pupils who do not return after the vacation will be charged for the entire term. Drawing, Painting, Music, and Fancy Work, are the only extras. No deduction made for temporary absence. Pupils will be received at any time during the year. For further particulars address THE LADY SUPERIOR, St. Joseph's Academy, Sacramento, Cal.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY, BENICIA, — SOLANO, CAL. Conducted by the Sisters of Benicia. Address all Communications to SISTER SUPERIOR.

JOB PRINTING. Any of the Best Clergy, Principals of school Society Schools or Business man who desire work may be by having their Job Printing executed at the Lowest Rates, at the Steam Job Printing Office of Wm. McCormick Bros., 510 Sansome street, the most probable place in the city to patronize. ☞ Call and get estimates and be convinced.

HALL'S SAFE AND LOCK COMPANY. ESTABLISHED 1859. Hall's Patent & Fire Burglar Proof Safes. 511 and 513 California Street. Safes made for church and other uses. Second hand safes always on hand for sale cheap.

BOOKS BOUGHT AND SOLD, BY A. BOSTWICK 1206 Montgomery street.

☞ Short, original contributions of merit will be accepted for the Young Folks.

The prizes for solution of conundrums should accompany their solutions.

Conundrums should be written on one side of a sheet only, with pen and ink, and in a legible manner.

A Brave Girl.

Three were brave girls among the early French colonists of Canada. One day, while [illegible] a lad of the village, named assailing savages in living Eglentine's house. The story is told as follows: Eglentine was busy at her household duties of Northern, a settlement twenty miles below Montreal, seam in the fields at work. There were but two soldiers within the fort. The commander and his wife were absent. Its daughter Madeleine, a girl of fourteen, stood on the landing with a hired man, when she heard firing.

"Hon, mademoiselle, run!" cried the man. "Here comes the Indians!"

"Looking round, the girl saw the Indians near at hand. She ran for the fort, and the Indians, seeing that they could not catch her, fired at her. Their bullets whistled round her, and made the time seem very long, as she afterwards said.

"As soon as she neared the fort, she cried out, 'To arms! to arms!' hoping that she would get assistance. But the men were all frightened that they had hidden in the block house.

"When Madeleine reached the gate of the fort, she found the women there crying for their husbands, who were in the fields and had fled to the fort. Madeleine encouraged them to, and shut the gate. She continually went to an embrasure in the fort, and found that some of the palisades were fallen down, and that the Indians through which the enemy would easily enter.

"She got what help she could and set them to work to repair the palisades, and passed to the block house, where she found the brave garrison. Her words brought them to a corner, and the other with a lighted match in his hand.

"What are you going to do with that match? asked Madeleine.

"I light the powder, and blow us all up, answered the soldier.

"You are a miserable coward and the girl.

"Coward! if the place is lost, my wife and children are in the hands of the Indians, and I shall be tortured to death! Let us go! I tell you, I shall be tortured to death!

"Madeleine was placed her brothers and the soldiers at the palisades, and they fired at the Indians lurking and dodging behind the trees, and drove them back. How large the garrison was and therefore how small it was, she knew, and numbers of these fell before the well directed aim of the soldiers.

"The girl commander succeeded, after a while, in stopping the scattering of the women and children, and in the following day that the enemy should retreate no sign of fear or weakness. Her plan was to make them to see that every defender was double and brave, and that the fort was so fortified in no time to fear, and that the enemy might easily intelligence of the situation and being thus duped.

"Thus the fight went on, day after day, and night after night, the brave girl keeping up her vigilance, and encouraging all that it was a fortnight's site before she was relieved.

"For a whole week Madeleine held the fort, with the help of the soldiers and the strong watcher, which prevented the Indians from approaching the palisades or fences. At the end of that time reinforcements came down the river and raised the siege.

The Child and the Drunkard.

The late John B. Gough, in one of his powerful addresses, tells the following most touching story. "I once was playing with a beautiful child in the city of Norwich, Conn. I was carrying the child in my arms, and I had the strange notion of swinging the child out over the deep, dark, rushing river. I was carrying it out to do so, when, all at once, I think he forgot me. Bring your gun! said he him, Harry, will you drop down with me to the side of the green bank? 'Oh, yes, was his answer. We went together, and I saw a most lovely place. Lovely, I mean, for a drunkard's place. The bright green sward, the sunbeams that danced and chased and illumined on day upon his pensive, grave face, the pine overhead, and the rock, the pencaled lips and pained sorry countenance, the very seems to the lady's heart more than he, for they were following the purpose of their being. As I looked upon the poor drunken wretch, and then upon that child, with his bright hair his beautiful blue eyes, his rosy cheeks, his innocent smile, his perfect picture of life, pe

The Martyrs of Uganda

DYING FOR THE FAITH IN AFRICA.

GRAND DEATHS FOR GOD'S GLORY.

"The Blood of the Martyrs is the Seed of the Church."

It is the glory of the Catholic Church that at every period of her history members of her children have been found ready to give up their lives in defence of her holy doctrine. And, as no age is without its list of martyrs, so it may with equal truth be said that every portion of the world has at one time or other contributed its contingent to the great white robed army of sufferers for the name of Christ. It is not so long since the sufferings endured by the newly converted Christians in several parts of the Chinese Empire proved that among the followers of Christ in the far East there has existed in modern times heroism as noble and fidelity as strong as that which animated the early Christians themselves, and the same is attested by the history of the Church in Japan whose martyrs have of recent years been placed upon our altars by the Holy See. A similar declaration of ecclesiastical authority has still more recently conferred upon many who had down their lives for their faith in England during the sixteenth century, and hardly has this decree been issued when the news reaches us of fresh sufferings in the same cause endured by the followers of the same holy religion in another quarter of the globe and among a people to whom the truths of Christianity have only recently been made known. It is in the heart of Equatorial Africa that these latest witnesses to the faith of Christ have laid down their lives, and the history of the sufferings of these neophytes, despite the fact that they belong to a race which it is the fashion for men brought up in civilization to despise and despite the fact that barbarism and ignorance have all lately prevailed among them, is as bright with instances of heroism and self-sacrifice as that of many another portion of the globe where religion and civilization have long been known and flourished.

THE CROWN OF BEATITUDE

THE HISTORY OF THESE LATEST MARTYRDOMS,

though as yet necessarily incomplete and wanting in details, is nevertheless already sufficiently well known to excite the deepest interest in all who read it, as briefly, yet most pathetically, told in the few letters and despatches which have arrived from the Nyanza Vicariate, one of the four which belong to the immense African mission directed from Tunis by his Eminence Cardinal Lavigerie. The first intimation that a serious outbreak of persecution had occurred was received at Paris from Tunis in the early part of the month of January. It briefly stated that a hundred Christian negroes had just been put to death for their faith by the young king Mwanga the son of the late king Mtesa. Further details were promised, and those have since arrived in two letters from Equatorial Africa, one of which is addressed to his superior in France by Père Lourdel a missionary who has labored unfatigably in those regions for the last ten years, and the other is an official account received by the Propaganda from Mgr Livinhac, the Vicar Apostolic of Nyanza.

IN THE FORMER OF THESE LETTERS which is dated Rubaga, the 25th of June 1886, Père Lourdel gives a brief account of the commencement of the persecution

SEVEN YEARS AGO, says the missionary, "in the king himself in the act of explaining the catechism to one of his young companions." Mtesa who had long been accustomed to entertain a hatred of Christianity as subversive of the old superstitions of the country, went for its Minister and gave orders for an immediate massacre of the Christians. The doors of the palace were at once made fast and on the following day the whole body of pages and other court officials was assembled to the presence of the king. "Let all," said he, "who believe in the religion of the white men, stand apart by themselves." The order was at once obeyed, and a chief named Lenago with a number of his companions separated themselves from the others. They were at once seized and bound, and a few day afterwards most of them were either of Mamungongo near the shores of the Victoria Nyanza, or else cut to pieces, having been first compelled to endure horrible torture. In another part of his letter the same writer describes the sufferings and martyrdom of the other members of the newly gathered Christian flock. They are hunted, he says, like wild beasts and are at a loss where to hide themselves from the fury of the king. At midnight they secretly gather round the missionaries, who up to the date given in the letter had not been deprived of their liberty, for the sake of receiving the sacraments and performing their other religious duties. But fears were entertained that ere long a general slaughter would take place and that the missionaries, who, besides the bishop, are three in number, would with all the surviving Christians be made prisoners and afterwards massacred.

SLAIN OR SENT ON THE MORTAL JOURNEY

IN HIS LETTER TO THE PROPAGANDA

dated July 31st 1886, Bishop Livinhac expresses his belief that more than a hundred neophytes have been martyred, and adds that the sufferings they endured were of the most terrible character. But their courage never failed, and so little did they seem affected by their tortures that the pagans present, as often happened during the persecutions of the early Christians, were firmly convinced that the courage they displayed was due to the influence of some magical charm which conferred upon the possessor immunity from pain as well as contempt of death. In these letters it is likewise stated that every effort is being made to collect all the facts connected with the martyrdoms, of which authentic account will shortly appear, the sole cause of which was hatred of the Christian faith which it is the object of king Mwanga to root out and utterly destroy. In considering the possibility of his doing so the Bishop remarks that, humanly speaking, there appears no hope of saving the mission from destruction, but he places his trust in God and hopes that the blood of martyrs shed in Africa, as elsewhere, one day prove to have been the seed of the Church, and in the same time thanks God for having chosen the members of his flock to be the first witnesses to the truth of the Catholic faith among the negro races of Africa. Such is the brief account hitherto received of the latest victory won by confessors of the faith over the terrors of paganism, and no Catholic who reads it can do otherwise than pray with the Bishop in the hope that it may be followed by further triumphs of religion in the heart of the Dark Continent.

Vine-Dressers Notice.

Regarding the New Vineyard Quina on New York, as exchange says: Those who are intimately acquainted with Mendocino Quina speak of him in the highest terms of praise and regard, and bear testimony to his industrious and satisfactory labors in the duties of his sacred calling. Probably no priest in the United States was better known or more widely esteemed, and his absence will be attended by a decide d feeling of regret from all parts of the country. The confidential advice and counsel of this prelate, is so mostly associated with them and most impliedly trusted in every important work of that archdiocese.

— Read the card of Pringle Bros., of 1109 Market street, in this issue, and when you need any boots and shoes do not forget to call upon them.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

FROM

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

CLARE—Some evictions took place on April 7th, on the property of the Hollies, whose most zealous, county Clare Leagues men, one of the persons evicted, is a young man from Cork, a nephew of Dillon, it is said to have footed some time ago.

YORK—On April 2, at Mallow, a man named J. Walsh, while at early Mass swoon-ed to fall from his seat in the chapel. Those people who happened to be near to him in the seat, under the impression that the man had only got a weakness, helped him out into the chapel yard, where he expired immediately. The deceased was a stranger in the town, and was employed by the Great South ern and Western Railway Company.

At a meeting of the Chapter of the Diocese of Cloyne, the Most Rev. Dr. McCarthy presiding, the Rev. Daniel Keller was unanimously raised to the dignity of Canon—not only for his personal worth but as a protest against the action of the Government for having suspended him to the indignity of imprisonment. Father Keller, P. P., and Father Mat Ryan, C. C., were visited on April last, at Kilmainham, by the Lord Mayor, M. P., Mr Stead, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and the Rev J. J. Ryan, the College, Thurles Rev John Wood, C. P., Upper Church, Tipperary, and the Rev. J O Riordan also called.

The recent disclosures of the details of attempt made by Emergency men at Inch, near Killeagh, in manslaughter on cottage, will be brought before Parliament immediately. The Emergency men, who had been drinking heavily at Killeagh at the time, fired several shots on their way home and next day reported to the police that they had been attacked. Each, however, gave different stories which showed that the whole affair was a concoction

DUBLIN.—Michael Davitt says The Freeman's Dublin, for reasons best known to the authors of the paragraphs recently published in the London Standard, is convinced that I am about to start a daily morning paper. If I had any such intention I would probably not select the journal referred to as the medium for communicating it to the public. As a large number of friends have addressed inquiries to me regarding the "sell" rumor, permit me to say that there is no truth whatever in it.

On Sunday, April 3, about 2,000 people, with bands, assembled outside Kilmainham Jail, and serenaded the priests confined within.

The Government have abandoned their prosecutions against Messrs John Dillon, M. P., William O'Brien, Dand Sheehy, M. P., William Redmond, M. P., and D. Crilly, M. P.

FERMANAGH—At Bisbee, county Fermanagh, a meeting of splendid proportions was held Sunday, April 3th, for the purpose of giving aid and encouragement to the ministry of Mr. Lowtrance, of Sligo, who is seeking for a reduction of rent. Mr. Lowtrage has given an earnest of his sincerity on the subject by the eviction of nine of their body. The Rev. Father Cullen, who was in the chair, devoted some of his speech to the evils of Irish land grabbing and the virtues of forcotting and combination as weapons for fighting unjust landlords.

GALWAY—No clue has as yet been discovered which would lead to the detection of the murderers of the young man named Dawson, whose body has been found in the lake at Renmore, in the county Galway, near the borders of Clare. A statement which may upon the courage and self-sacrifice he exhibited

MAYO—The announcement of the death of Miss Roche, eldest Bantadine sister to Dr. Roche, Bishop of Elphin, and to Rev. Jerome Dutch, in our issue will be sure to be heard with deep regret. She died on April 5th, in the 50th year of her age.

Excursions took place on Lord Sligo's estate on the eighteen-hundred Landlords, on April 2d. The beasts on view were brought from two to three miles each, and offered no resistance whatever. Some of the people, it was thought, dressed and armed as peasants, but the faces of some of them could hardly be traced to the peasantry and attitude present. The evictions and the immense of them held long, the spiritedness of their houses, and the pitiable helplessness of the extremely old and very young, make the punishment of the evicted of the unemployed, people, more nearly imagined than described. Pride led by a force of fifteen men, Mr J. Jo Rogers, attended at Foxmore, near Lanesboro, in the 1st, and carried out two evictions, in each of which the houses were emptied.

On April 5th, at Kilkelly, an old man named Patrick Kelly was found dead on his bed. He lived alone for some years past, and was a very steady, inoffensive man

QUEEN'S COUNTY—Information is wanted of James Burke, who when last heard from was in Barker Hill, Mount county, Indiana, by his brother, Lawrence Burke, R. I. P., Ferill, Ballybrophy, Queen's Rev John Wood, C. P.

ROSCOMMON—At a meeting of the tenantry of the O Conor estate held on April 1, the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, that we return our best thanks to Joseph Scollard, Nicholas Roderick O'Conor, Esq., of Hendermott, Baltimore, for his action in reducing the rent of 28 per cent, and we are also grateful to his agent, Col. J. W. Lewis, for his humanity, Hillsmeter, for his tenancy towards us

SLIGO—In Tubbercurry, the admirable organization and management of the Nationalists have succeed in so sapping the last shred of Landlord influence once in the town. The election of chairman and committee, which some years ago ruled the roost in this Union as they now do in Dublin, were subjected to a by-election, leaving nothing to the National elected Guardians the duty of electing the following gentlemen, who had been previously selected by ballot, to the respective chairs—Mr. John Gillespie, chairman; Mr. John O'Hoed, vice-chairman, and Mr. John Gormain, deputy vice-chairman.

The following clerical changes have been made in the diocese of Killala—Rev J Conway, from Burke, to the P P Aldergoole, Rev J. Kelly, from Mogeesagh, to be Adm. Ballina, Rev T. McDonnell, from Ballycastle, to be P P, Morgeesagh, Rev J. Fox, from Doonan, to be P P, Kilcommon, Erris, Rev P. P. Boland, from Easkey to Ballina, Rev T. J. Dolphin from Inishcrone to Easky, Rev J Colleran from Binghamstown to Inishcrone, Rev J Hoban, Binghamstown, Rev Michael Gallagher to be Dean.

The death rate in Sligo for the week ending April 2d, was the lowest in Ireland, being at the rate of 14 per 1000 inhabitants. The lowest death rate in Ireland for the same week was 17 in Belfast.

TIPPERARY—We regret to have to announce the early and unexpected decease of the late Rev Jas Dunlop, P. P., of Ballycastle, Newtownland, which took place on the 20th of March, at Ballycastle, in the vicinity of the scene of a scene cold, cough in the discharge of his pastoral duties. The deceased was born in the 5th year of his age and the 7th of his ordination. He was a man of

---

THE PACIFIC BANK.

President, R. H. McDonald. Vice-President, R. H. McDonald, Jr. Cashier, S. G. Murphy.

Capital, $1,000,000. Oldest Established Bank on the Pacific Coast Surplus, $550,000.

BUYS AND SELLS BILLS OF Exchange ON UNITED STATES, ENGLAND, IRELAND, Scotland, and EUROPE. ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

ISSUES LETTERS OF CREDIT Available Throughout THE WORLD. Collections MADE PROMPTLY EVERYWHERE AT LOWEST RATES.

PACIFIC BANK. Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, Cal.

Market Report.

MONTHLY TERMS.

S.W. Kearny St., Tuesday Evening, May 3, 1887

WHEAT No. 1	$1.72½@1.75
Flour, Superfine	3.25@3.50
Extra	3.75
Family	4.00
Barley, feed	1.15@1.17½
Brewing	1.20@1.25
Brewing Barley Fine	1.30
Middlings	26.00@27.00
Oats No 1 feed	1.42½@1.45
Hay	13.00@17.00
Buckwheat	1.30@1.35
Potatoes
Burbank, or wholesale	50@60
Turkey, P lb wholesale	20@22
Geese, P pair	1.00
Ducks, P pair	4.00@5.00
Young chickens	4.00@5.00
Old hens	5.00@6.00
Eggs	12@13
Butter
Fresh, P lb	35@40
Pickled	20@22
Cheese
California	10@11
Eastern	12@13
Honey
Wheat	14@15
Barley	14@15
Oats	14@15
Hay	14@15
Potatoes	14@15
Onions	14@15
Beans, white	1.90@1.90
Tallow, P lb	3@3½
Turnips, P 100	75@50
Beets, P 100	75@50
Potatoes, California	1.50@1.75
Onions	1.75@2.00
Green Peppers	5@6
Garlic	6@7
Garlic, P lb	10.00@12.00
Apples	1@3
Cabbage
Cabbage, P lb	2@3
Cauliflower, P doz	75@1.00
Celery, P doz	25@30
Beets, P sack	1.00
Carrots, P sack	1.00
Turnips, P sack	1.00
Parsnips, P sack	1.00
Beans, Lima, P lb	5@6
Beans, Bayo, P lb	3½@4
Beans, Pinto, P lb	2½@3
Beans, Small White, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Pea, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Red, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Red Kidney, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Green, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Wax, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Lima, P lb	5@6
Beans, Bayo, P lb	3½@4
Beans, Pinto, P lb	2½@3
Beans, Small White, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Pea, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Red, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Red Kidney, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Green, P lb	3@3½
Beans, Wax, P lb	3@3½
Peas, Green, P lb	3@3½
Peas, Split, P lb	3@3½
Peas, Black-eye, P lb	3@3½
Peas, Red

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE BETTER PART.

The day was in his wandering clothes still fanned,
The low—hour of its infancy—delay
Upon the dew-rim. And the sun new risen,
In soft caress his beams poured warmer all
The birds, sweet harbingers of morn, just waked
To mind upon the air their matins sweet;
When, from a low brown house, a woman stept
Forth in the dewy air. Tall, young and fair,
With eyes now dark, now blue, as passing thought
Its image mirrored there. The soft brown curls
Clustered a bower on which the light of a head
Seemed to have set His chrism; and now on
And on it rested the, and bearing proud, above
The sacred Sign. Light trembling o'er the sward
Was not more a word; they—who where blessed
Seemed if ending on this quiet cottage door
Now thro' the darkness shade where vale lost
Now through the sunshine bright, wending its way.
Its ripples touched with light by every ray.

Now stept she on the stones, grown smooth from tiny
Or which, in childhood's bright unclouded morn,
The stream she daily crossed is going to school.
A tho'l of this—music of her, had her brow
But now serene as yonder smiling moon,
Clouds are in thought. How oft in those dead days
Her well loved sister here had walked with her
And told her of the saints—"Oh go to sleep,
And I in turmoil still am left behind."
The thought, and then—"Ah, dear Lord, me forgive
The passing thought, I'll like regret it sound!
Thy holy will, see mine, be done," she said,
And low in reverence deep she bowed her head.

On through the vale she walked; now here, now
there,
Pausing, the beauty of the spot to note,
Perhaps her heart to him that had wrought
all.
A lowwall ran thro' her childhood's haunts,
Eve leaving than forevermore. What hour
Is some time that hath rest in weak, strong cords
That bound it to some loved and cherished friend,
Or spot endeared by long lapsed time thoughts.
The sun was fresh, another's life to share
Unto another, heart and hand to give
Life and death! Pity thou sweet of that one now
That needs the warm blood nourishing thro' her veins
And yet grow has that smile her mouth to
Some fortunate into the of Heaven is given
In the possession of a strong—strong—
Whose duty is the light of her bright eyes.
Her smile is her smile her smile her smile!

Not so; she goth forth from this, her home,
Unto a Bridegroom—true; but not of earth.
Not so; she goth forth from this home
Which had her to be having, I mean the vows
In Poverty to dwell—as gentle to hold,
Save just to see for present need, and those
As much her sister's and the poor's as her;
In Chastity to dwell; to Him alone,
Whose Virgin Mother is her Mother, too,
Her heart to open. To His service, and Heart, mind and body, kept as sanctum p.t.
In which His Heart may rest. And last of all,
Obedience yield implicitly to all.

Ere was her lonely first dream, Elizabeth—
"Th God in commendation given"—one day
Her sister, long since gone to dwell with God,
Had told her was the meaning of her name.
And then in musing, to the child, she thought
Her mother's words were nearly wings that touched
Her soul, and s'ir it had a virgin vail.
But claim yours long claimed in the world
A father—aged and a son with ev'ryes dazzy,
Stark which fell nearly a man with loss of Faith
And loving trust in God, had failed to live,
Had aged, wife and children for a time
Had claimed her care; and sister, to, who had,
Let conscious loving mound have ever was lost;
For souls she labored, mindful what they cost.

Some years passed thus. At times her heart would faint,
And then, in fear and trembling, how she prayed
That God would send His own sweet peace again!
* * * * * * *
One day a call came to her—one bright day
When Autumn made all the woods to smile
In gorgeous dazzling tints; ere yet the storms
Of Winter had the forest's mantle torn—
A message came to her that made her heart
Bound still; the loving friend that she to her
Was dying, and wished to see her once more.

Literary Miscellany.

The Workhouse Children.

A True Tale by Lady Herbert of Lea.

It was a cold, drizzling, wretched evening in November. People hurried along the slippery, muddy streets of London, intent on their work or business, and only anxious to get home out of the wet.

But there was a whose step was even quicker than the rest, though his grave countenance and downcast eyes showed that he was the bearer of something that kept him recollected and his hurry. We will follow him past the busy shops, through a narrow passage, till he comes at a house in a wretched court, of which the entrance was hall obscured with rags and bones. He does not speak, but hurries up the dirty, broken staircase, and some of the lodgers in the same house follow him and struck and silent too, till he reach a one particular door. It is opened by a crying boy of ten or twelve years old, who instantly knocks, while his sister, a little older than himself, lights a candle, and together with their visitor approach a bed in the corner of the miserable room, on which lying, a woman, still young but in the last stage of decay. Her pale, wan features light up with joy as she sees her Lord approaching; and for a short time tonight is heard but the voice of the priest, who is come to soothe that dying bed, and give the one great strength for the last dread journey.

A quarter of an hour passed, the service was over, and in a faint and feeble voice the dying mother spoke: "Father, I could go in peace, gladly, too, but for one thing. What is to become of my poor children? They are all go to the workhouse—I know enough to think that Ah children should be sent to one place, but it isn't likely I know what I mean! If they go they will lose their faith. It's no use telling me the contrary, you know the law is on our side, and the law says that children are to be brought up in the religion of their parents. But the guardians don't care about the law, they'll force them to be Protestants, as they did Mary Green's children last year. And where I ask you, are the poor children to be cried so? and said they lost him if he made the attempt to see or said his own prayers. O Father, would that I had learned them with their poor father! I would rather see them die this minute than become Protestants!"

"And does not our Lord know this, and will he not provide, O you of little faith?" replied the kind, old priest, gently taking her hand. "Do not fear, my child, we will ask other friends. And the newspapers have taken up the matter, and some of the guardians dare not keep the children as they used to do. Only commend them to Her care Who never yet forsook the widow and fatherless."

I would be beaten to death sooner than give up my children," said the dying woman, clasped the boy, who had been eagerly hanging on his mother's words. The little girl was silent; but she drew nearer to her mother and imprinted on her forehead one kiss which full many a man with less of Faith and loving trust in God, had failed to live, Well, my child, I will commend you to Mary—Had claimed her care; and sister, to, who had, let conscious loving mound have ever was lost; For souls she labored, mindful what they cost.

"Mary, dear Mary, I am dying fast by her protector's hand, was found alone with her dead friend in the mourner's room.

"Poor little many Catholic children in the house!" was the first question asked by the lady.

"There were a great many, ma'am," replied Mary, "but now they daren't even to speak to me, for the guardians have put extra work on them if she finds out that they ever what she calls 'prayed,' and half the time they don't get their dinner or supper, as they've just started and beaten for being Papistesses.

"And my poor little confessor here has lost all that he had the lady, smoothing the hair of the child's forehead, and looking at him kindly.

"I tried to think of Jesus, and how he loved poor and those for us, as poor as they used to tell us, and the child sorely, "and then it didn't seem so hard. And I prayed to Jesus and Jesus lady every day to give me strength to meet it, and I tell you, ma'am, the aunt Arthur was from this terrible place.

A messenger here interrupted the conversation by announcing the lady to inquiries below the door.

"Courage and hope on," whispered she, as she left the girl to weep the sentence.

"We have considered the case you have brought before us, madam, and we have sent gravely," and though you must allow me to say there is no legal right in the matter of removing the children to the Protestant schools, which is left to the discretion of the guardians, we have resolved, if circumstances, it will be well to grant your request. You are perfectly at liberty to remove the children when you please, and have instructions to the effect of those prepared for the purpose."

Hardly, we fear, a cold, and, under some takes, it is a true one. If it should meet you—I only one due to take up the cause of those who have no friends, and to second the measures which are being set on foot to delay these little ones from the cruel persecution they are now undergoing for their faith, or from the still more cruel one of being cast out and robbed if altogether, and forcibly brought up in error, my object will be attained.

THE HOLY FACE.

Extension of the Devotion From the Church of Santa Tutto.

During the past ten years 30,000 copies of the Voce Ellipsis have been distributed from the church of the Holy Face in Tours to various points over the civilized globe, and have been sung consecrated in cathedrals, chapels and private dwellings.

In the vicinity of Tours there are present every month 1,000 Communions, 40 tentmen, and about 300 thanksgivings for answered prayers. Letters come from all from every direction, some simply, others in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic, Chinese, Sanscrit, Hindoo, Tartar, Syriac and Armenian to the Holy Face, which is kept in the sanctuary. Some go to testify to their faith and adoration, others to thank for favors received. Priests and bishops feel honored to bring offerings of the Holy Face of Tours. Pictures are presented to the Holy Face for the success of a mission, the healing of the sick, success in business, and for other temporal and spiritual favors, but especially in reparation there offered to the Divine Face, for the Face of His Divine Son, for the Temples made the sins of desecration of Sunday, of schools without Christian education, and of the Sacrilegious.

The devotion of the Holy Face is spread over all the countries of Europe, particularly France, England, Italy, Spain, Ireland, Russia, Poland and Holland, and in Asia, Asia, the United States and the English Indies, and in Africa, nearly all the churches and many private dwellings are copies of the Voce Ellipsis, which are surrounded with a wreath of flowers, and are venerated with all the Christian devotion. It would be impossible to quote the numerous cures and favors which are blessed with the possession of a copy of the Holy Face.

The attention of the Archi-Confraternity of the Holy Face of Tours, which has 7 million 102 special confraternities.

Not only are many of the clergy and laity all over the civilized globe adopting the motto of the Holy Face, but it is of the highest importance, is the fact that the popes are taking an active interest in the extension of the devotion. We will quote the words of Pius IX. that 48 bishops of Europe and America signed the petition to the Holy See for the erection of the Archi-Confraternity of the Holy Face, and the witnesses and judges of congregations.

In this country, Archbishop Gross of Oregon City, Archbishop Purcell of New York, together with Bishop Kenrick, of Richmond, and Bishop Lynch, of Charleston, are especially devoted and zealous towards the cause of the Holy Face. In the closing years, and when their Footsteps were in the Holy Face, and the Holy Face in the first American Cardinal, and the late archbishop Purcell of New Orleans, both found ineffable consolation and comfort in the devotion to the Sacred Face of the Saviour.

To the Clonghaneely Exiles.

CLONGHANEELY, April 2nd, 1867.

Dear Friends—Do you not well know Clonghaneely has ever been in the past the unhappy living grave of Tyrell Landlords? They have tried to chase the people from their lands by all kinds of persecution and oppression. The cruelest of all was the attempt to make them Protestant, viz. the attempt to deprive the poor tenants of the Sacrament of Communion, where they grew their sheep and, and without which they could have little holdings would be worthless. It is an old saying the history repeats itself, and we see the attempt to make us Protestants, and to make us, some thirty years ago, renewed today. Arthur has taken up the Wyndham Gilbert, against John M'Cafferty, of Lynn Aughris, who has trespassed his sheep on the grazing to which he has a right, and which he has enjoyed for a long time. This is referred to be not a true one, as Gilbert and Wyndham would not let his will follow up his success by taking proceedings against all the other tenants. It is most important therefore, that the people should be prepared for any process, should be employed in fighting his battle. It is not in the view we have now started a fund called the "Clonghaneely Tenants Defence Fund." The time, however, being very bad at home, we cannot hope to make the Fund a success without external aid. Many cases in the meantime, therefore, to appeal to our friends abroad to help us in the fight. Accordingly at the last meeting of the Clonghaneely Tenants Defence Fund Leagues, the following resolution, proposed by Mr. Neal Doughlin, and seconded by Mr John M'Hinley, Kreldrum, was carried unanimously—"That we appeal to our friends abroad to help us in the present struggle against landlord tyranny, contributing part of the sums of war to Wm. Gilbert.

Signed on behalf of the N. L. Committee—Daniel Stephens, Cor. Treasurer; John Doughlan, Vice-President, James M'Donlan, Sec., Treasurer John M'Hugh, Jun., Secretary.

P.S.—It is intended that the Fund will be a permanent one, so that whatever struggle may arise, we may be fighting for the mountains, will be kept for the protection of weak tenants in all cases of litigation so the part of oppressed landlords in Ireland.

Subscriptions may be sent to Jas Hagerty, 52 Howard St., San Francisco, Cal.

A Singular Death.

Thomas Mandey, better known as "Blind Tom," a negro musician, died in this city, on last week which notified that his pension of $24 per month had been increased to one $6,000 back pension. He at once fell in a fit and died soon after. Deceased was fifty-five years of age, a native of Ireland and fought in the Crimean war in the English Army. Shortly after the Civil War, he came to this country, enlisted in the army, and lost his eyesight through the accidental explosion of a shell while fighting Indians under General Terry. He was then orderly sergeant. His legal heirs are entitled to this money.

BISHOP FHERBOMEZ

His Thirty-Seven Years Missionary Work.

Bishop Fherbomez is one of the most learned, and especially in Oriental Literature, which, though of the Oriental People, the most famous superior for it was to be the Bishop of the Diocese, is in coming to Lyons on a certain high occasion, being a linguist in public opinion, and "the blessed Bishop" as Protestants used to call it is becoming less and less so, and Mass, and the Mass, and the legend. Even the grave and stand of Protestant Anglicanism, speaking sometime ago of the sermon by which the legate from Rome between England and Ireland was so well received, and delivered into this letter, but the remarks of the writer on the disunion of the West Indies.

That "the Gallic kills all Europeans and natives almost annually, as I admit, strictly true, as I would also be true if said of the greater portion of the United States where both natives and Europeans are frequently killed by domestic influence. The attentions wouldn't we had in Chicago for the past few months, on one day in which the lies had a deadly effect upon some of our residents, but that will not prevent the enterprising newspapers from purchasing the fact that Chicago is the abbatoir of the earth's world. The Protestant, however, sought to be compared to the Gallic Island of the West Indies is of a deadly nature that nothing can prevent, and the Catholics cannot be indulgences. That Father Gallic has long there for "nearly a third of a century, disposes of it in one sentence, "I am of my own knowledge that in Martinique, the West Indies, the Gallic Island, I have been, across of "foreigners who have taken a fancy to the Island" and "a few of the island to a green old age." A few of the island's inhabitants, and a few of the island, are very unhealthy at certain seasons of the year, but Martinique is the prevailing disease among the Europeans, and the Gallic Island is not the place to go to.

Yet, Gallic Island is well known as a salubrious climate. In some, "the islands" are the Gallic Island, and "the negroes, who constitute the laboring population, are generally healthy, and attained ripe, but they are in more land than the island of Jamaica. As to yellow fever, the mortality is not so great as in other islands, who are exposed to the direct rays of the sun, and who are not known to be very careful. Their habitation are not well ventilated. Their food is not so with others alcohol is very, very more abundant than in other islands, and in Jamaica. In fact the island of Martinique is the island of Jamaica, and the island of Jamaica is the island of Martinique. Yet, Gallic Island

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE ARCHDIOCESE.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Bishop Maes proposes to build a cathedral. One wealthy citizen of Covington has offered $100,000.

—In Berlin, Prussia, looking at the religious of those to whom divorces were granted for a certain period, 2,592 were Protestants, 26 Jews, and only 14 Catholics—a sign that they are hard to obtain divorces.

—One arm of the Baptist Alliance met in Oakland last week and solemnly resolved that there is no such thing as probation after death. With all such people—when death comes—it will be a case of "out of the frying pan into the fire."

—The Moniteur de Rome, referring to the Papal Bread to Bishop Ireland, in favor of total abstinence, says that it will give to this work of zeal, charity and social wisdom, an increase of authority and influence not only in America but wherever the sad plague of intemperance prevails.

—The Berlin papers recently published a letter from the Holy Father to the Bishop of Cologne, in which his Holiness recommended the Government Bill to the Catholic of Prussia. The Bill is called by the Norddeutsche "a bayonne for bringing about the peace, which bayonne wounds may be taken as secured." [illegible]

—There has been introduced into the Illinois Legislature a bill to limit the inheritance possible to any one person. As introduced it places the amount at $50,000 in money or 1,000 acres in land. Thus a sufficient number of heirs to take the whole estate in such limits, the remainder is escheat to the State.

—The Cleveland Catholic Universe states an important fact when it says that all the work of an editor is not visible on the surface, that is, cannot be gathered simply from what appears in the columns of his paper. There is so much wisdom and newspaper tact in what is left out of a newspaper as in what goes in.

—A very interesting ceremony took place last month at the Church of the Enfants Passionists, Avenue Hoche, Paris. His Grace Archbishop Richard administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to between fifty and sixty English and American converts who have recently been received into the Church by the Rev. Fathers.

—Trinity Sunday, which falls on June 5th next, will be the occasion of the Silver Jubilee of Very Rev. Joachim Adam, Vicar General of the Diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles. Father Adam is still known all over this coast, and all who know him will join the Monitor in wishing him the happiness of 25 years more in his sacred ministry.

—Concerning land for Catholic colonies, can obtain the information they desire by addressing Messrs. E. F. Bass, Anderson, Shasta county; N. R. Spoot, Orland, Colusa county; William Parker, Vacaville, Solano county; or Rev. Anthony Ubach, San Diego. There is plenty of idle land in other counties, and we will publish the names of parties having them in charge if some subscribers therein will send them in.

—In order to hasten the progress of the Crimes bill it is stated that the British Government intends to apply the closure rule in the House of Commons after a brief discussion on each amendment, except in the case of important amendments, of which—we are unusually happy to say—there are at present more than a hundred attached to the Bill, with at least as many more in reserve, so as to stay the progress of the latest legislative lash for poor, persecuted Ireland.

—That was a very high compliment which the Anarchist Herr Most paid to Catholics the other day when he said: "You can't make good Socialists or Anarchists out of Catholics, for they reverence and obey their priests, and their priests are invariably on the side of law." This is a golden truth and we hope it may never be tarnished by the Catholics in America. The Catholic Church is the friend of law and order, hence she is the deadly foe of anarchy.

—These warning words which we cull from one of the works written by Cardinal Manning, should sink deep into the souls of many Catholic parents in California. "Suffer no children of yours to go to any school whatsoever where they will be exposed to the smallest danger of losing their faith. Their faith is more vital than life itself. If you voluntarily expose them to the danger of losing it, you will be guilty of mortal sin. The consequences of such an act are awful."

—During the past week the attention of the members of the British Parliament has been mainly directed to wrangling over the numerous amendments to the Coercion Act, the Closure, the Times' forgery of the Parnell letter and the Dillon accusation, so that nothing has transpired of interest to our readers. It seems to be the idea of separate friends of Ireland that the Coercion Bill will pass towards the end of June, but that its duration will be short and bloody, ending with the downfall of the Tory ministry and the triumph of Hadleyism and the Irish Home Rule Party.

—At an additional proof of the truth of the oft-repeated saying of the Holy Father, that not the Church, but her enemies, have reasons to fear the revelations resulting from historic research, we learn from Berne that at the last meeting of the Historical Society of that place Professor Zwerkleder announced that the Government had decided to suspend, at the close of the year, the publication of the Fontes rerum Bernensium, which step, writes the Courrier de Geneve, is easily explained. The Government has been led to make this decision by the discovery after relative to the Protestant Reformation in Switzerland made by the Historical Society, which discovers are humiliating to that religious belief, which for over three centuries has thus falsified history.

—The absolutely question of the day in Italy is the proposed establishment of a satisfactory modus vivendi between the Papacy and the Italian Government by giving the Hope sufficient territory to secure his practical independence and freedom of action—in other words a partial restoration of the temporal power.

—A surprising blot of the development of the Catholic Church in America is given by the list of all the Catholic newspapers appearing in that country, which shows that those organs number no less than 181, being published in 144 different towns, some in very small places indeed. The success of the Church in its struggle against Hannah & Co., has been very materially advanced by the strong opinions formulated by this large number of Catholic papers.

—The Pall Mall Gazette says Mr. John Sweetman sends to us with reference to our query: "Does the Pope approve of Home Rule?" the following anecdote which he thinks may be of interest just now: A month ago, when in Rome, an American Bishop told me the following story: An Irish lady asked Cardinal Howard (the Englishman) whether it would be better for her to tell the Pope at the audience she was to have that she was an Irishwoman. "Oh, yes" said Cardinal Howard, "and if you only say you are a Home Ruler, you will be all the better received."

—One result of the resumption of cordial relations between the Holy See and Germany will apparently be the admission of Catholic missioners into the German Colonies, which up to now is forbidden. It is added that Rome that Dr. Karl Peters, Baron Grancenrieth, and Father an Rhein, from Reichenbach near Eichbaum, are staying in the Eternal City, engaged in negotiations concerning the German Catholic mission in East Africa. It is added that an agreement has already been come to between the Missionary College of Reichenbach and Dr. Peters.

—In response to information desired by a subscriber, we give the following statistics. The ten largest cities in the world, according to the latest estimates, are London, which, with its suburbs, has a population of 4,315,325; Paris, 2,269,023; Canton (China) 1,500,000; New York, 1,449,000; Aitchi (Japan), 987,887; Philadelphia, 875,000; Calcutta, 766,326, and Vienna, 726,105. There are several cities in China which claim a population of 10,000,000, but as the claim is not based on any systematic enumeration they are not included in the list.

—The German Catholics have resolved to erect a noble monument in commemoration of the seventy-fifth birthday of their great leader, Dr. Windthorst. As he shapes lately declined to receive any personal gift, it has been decided that the memento shall take the form of a church, to be built in Hanover, under the invocation of the Blessed Virgin. The cost is that Dr. Windthorst, as a second Catholic Church erected in Hanover, where it is sorely needed.

—The Catholics of Quebec desire to erect a fac-simile in cast-iron of the cross placed by Jacques Cartier, on May 3rd, 1536, on the banks of the St. Charles River, with the inscription, "Franciscus primus Dei gratia Francorum rex regnat", and also to build a second in memory of the first Jesuit missionaries of Canada. They claim that the work is neither Canadian, nor French, nor English but Catholic; its object being to honor the man who first opened out a new world to European enterprise—Jacques Cartier—and the brave Jesuit missionaries, Fathers de Brebeuf, Masse and Lallemand, who planted the standard of Christ on those distant shores.

—No movement has yet been made in this country relative to the Pope's Jubilee. From an English paper we learn that the English Prelates had a meeting recently and determined to issue a joint Pastoral on the Jubilee, to be followed by public addresses. An address to the Holy Father will be signed as widely as possible by all the clergy and faithful in England and Wales, and this address with its signatures will be bound in volumes. Every encouragement and facility will be given for making offerings of works of art, and specimens of the industries of the country. Finally, a deputation of Bishops, clergy, and laity, will proceed to Rome next December to present the address and offerings on the occasion of the Holy Father's Jubilee Mass.

—Cardinal Gibbons left Rome for London last week, bearing with him the decision of the Holy See on the question of the American Association of the Knights of Labor. "Nil innovetur"—the words in which the decree is couched—signifies that on the basis of the memorial presented by Cardinal Gibbons there is no occasion to intervene. Provided that the Knights persist in obey the future decisions of the Vatican, his Holiness has authorized Cardinal Taschereau to absolve them from the penalties which they have incurred.

—Atheism and anarchism are making such rapid headway in France that a number of French philosophers have founded a "League against Atheism." One of the leaders of the movement is M. French, who has lately delivered a remarkable address on the subject in the Salle des Capucines, in Paris. After tracing the history of Atheism from the earliest times—even those of the Old Testament—he pointed out that whilst the Atheism of the ancient world was merely speculative, modern Atheism had become practical and aggressive. "I do not know whether all Atheists are anarchists, but I am confidently assert that all anarchists are Atheists." The best League against atheism and its twin ally of rebellion against God—anarchism—is the Catholic Church, without whose labors and divine influence the whole world would be at the mercy of unbelievers and the worst elements in the dangerous classes.

THE MONITOR.

A Grand Project for Catholic Francisco.

San Francisco is—in all intents and purposes—a Catholic city. The religious principles that prevail throughout the majority of the Christian element of the population is Catholic. The Church possessed the city and conservated it in the active work of God almost a century before the feet of Protestant preachers pressed the sandy shore of the Pacific. The progress of Catholicity in this metropolis has well kept pace with San Francisco's progressity; it has grown with its growth, until it now has given to the use of God's worship and institutions of charity and education more property than all the various non-Catholic denominations combined.

In a recent issue of the San Francisco Real Estate Circular issued by Thomas Magee, we find a detailed statement of the value of all Church property in the city, wherein it is stated that the grand total of assessment of all the property owned by the Catholic Church in San Francisco is $697,645, upon which is annually paid taxes amounting to $14,102.30. The Hebrews and the different Protestant sects have property assessed at $884,250, upon which they pay a tax of $14,041.92.

From these figures it will be seen that the Catholic Church pays more than half the whole amount of revenue derived by the City of San Francisco from all the Church property therein. In nearly all portions of the city, Catholic churches or institutions of charity or for educational purposes, have been erected or are at present under construction. Yet there is one institution which is sadly needed, and which should have been erected long years ago by the Catholics of San Francisco, and that is a Catholic Institute.

The presence of so many brave, bright, manly and intelligent Catholic young men with the consciousness of the laying of the consecrated of the sacred Mass (Mass Catholics) on Sunday week, naturally caused the reflection of regret that these Catholic young men have no place where they could call their own. All of them are paying rent for their halls, and this sum in the aggregate amounts to a great deal of money every month. Why not, therefore, build—in a central place—a Catholic Institute where all Catholic societies can meet? How can this be accomplished? The answer is plain—by Catholic unity. Let the members of the Young Men's Catholic Mutual Aid Association and the members of the Young Men's Institute link their fortunes for the good of their Faith—and the work will be accomplished.

The Young Men's Catholic Mutual Aid Association, we understand, are about to extend themselves into a State organization, and if this design is carried out we will have—in every town and city in California—two Catholic organizations of young men, one paying rent to the Masons, Odd Fellows, or some other secret society, and the other paying rent to the Good Templars or the Rangers—for the use of their halls to hold meetings in.

Before such a sad calamity overtakes these Catholic organizations, let our Catholic young men reflect that as the Church is one so should they be one. They are the leading Catholic Young Men's Society of the State, and unanimity of purpose and action would enable them to place in their own hall and contribute the rental received therefrom towards increasing the facilities for health, amusement or mental improvement which the gymnasium, the billiard hall or the library of the Catholic Institute would afford to all its members.

We feel that we voice the sentiments of the vast majority of Catholics in this city in thus portraying the benefits and blessings which will be derived for long years to come from a solid union of our Catholic young men. Such unions exist in the Eastern States and have been productive of a vast amount of both spiritual and temporal good to the members of the Catholic Institute associations are calculated to give men that Christian courage which leads them to love, honor and obey the Church in times of peace, and to present a solid phalanx of her defenders in times that try man's souls.

How different would be the condition of the Catholic countries of Europe today if large Catholic organizations of young men had existed therein twenty or thirty years ago. Ourselves, in such an event, would not have supplanted Catholic courage, nor would a small minority of the enemies of the Church have been able to persecute to the death the large majority of citizens of Catholic countries who never have had recourse to that aggregation of individuals which ennobleth the respect of friend and foe alike, and before which fanaticism falters and the evil spirit of bigotry is broken down.

At a recent meeting of Congregational preachers in Oregon, the members thereof had the audacity to style Almighty God the "Great Head of the Congregational church." This is blowing sand into the eyes of sectarians with a vengeance! Why, it is well known to all intelligent people that the Deity has long ago been changed to Judgment, and then again to Congregationalism, and for their head a sect-maker named Brown, and that the Lord did not leave religion making as the legitimate occupation of the Browns, Jonesses, or Robinsons of the eighteenth century. Almighty Hot is the Great Head of the Catholic Church—the only Church He instituted, and the Congregationalists came into existence about eighteen hundred years too late to claim that Almighty God recognizes its relationship claim to His headship of any such heresy.

Another Tribute to the Sisters of Charity.

On the first pages of the present issue we print an article which shows, in a brief manner, the heroism, self-sacrifice, and the devotedness of the Sisters of Charity during the Civil War. Since that article was in type, the Los Angeles Herald has come to hand containing the public vote of thanks, tendered by the Board of Health of that city, to those ministering angels of mercy—the Sisters of Charity—for the fearless courage, enduring fidelity, and self-denial which the Daughters of St. Vincent de Paul voluntarily manifested well and nearly unintimidated during the recent epidemic of the small pox in Los Angeles.

"When the small pox first made its appearance in this city, says the Herald, "three Sisters of Charity offered to go to the hospital and nurse the afflicted. The offer was accepted and during the whole of the so called epidemic the Sisters have stood at their post, and doubtless many of the patients owe their restoration to health to the careful nursing of those sweet faced, low voiced angels of mercy.

"Now that the danger has passed and the Sisters removed their sorded avocations, the Board of Health has performed a graceful act by passing the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Board of Health desires to express its high appreciation of the services of the Sisters of Charity for their successful management of the smallpox hospital, and the secret sovereign of the disease in our city. They withstand their arrival at a time when the disease threatened to become more epidemic, they entered their hospital into a comfortable home, and their kind intelligent treatment of the sick removed the third objection that prevailed to entering the hospital. It is due to it it easy to confine the disease to four cots, instead of exhausting the sick and filling the graveyard with the dead.

"Thus it transpires that in every age and in every clime wherever Christ's holy Sisters are over ready to minister to the sick and poor in order to stand as guardian angels between God Omnipotent and His unfortunate creatures, the Sisters of Charity and Sisters of Charity and Sisters of Charity and

Farm and Home.

English and American Goods.

A New York banker lately gone abroad has just returned from Great Britain says: "The extra tariff on American goods will be broken than it is at present. The linen trade of the North of Ireland is also improving. This is not due to exportations to the United States, but to increased home and Indian consumption. The Manchester manufacturers have backed up their armor to fight the domestic manufacturers of the United States. They can import cotton from the Southern States, land it at Liverpool make it into handkerchiefs in Lancashire, export it to New York, and after paying the 40 per cent ad valorem duty, underbid the domestic manufactures. The most dangerous competitor against the home producers is a handkerchief made to sell in New York at 38 cents a dozen. The article is said to beat domestic goods in quality, finish, color, style and printing. Its superiority must be due to the skillfulness of the labor, since the price of labor is very little cheaper, and Lancashire uses the same cotton and the same machines as are in use here."

Twelve Rules for the Care of the Ear.

1—Never put anything into the ear for the relief of toothache.

2—Never be careless in the ears if they are discharging pus.

3—Never attempt to apply a poultice to the inside of the canal of the ear.

4—Never drop anything into the ear unless it has been previously warmed.

5—Never use anything but a syringe and warm water for cleaning the ears from pus.

6—Never strike or box a child's ear; this has been known to rupture the drum head, and cause incurable deafness.

7—Never cut the hair if you have any tendency to deafness; wear an oiled-silked cap when bathing and refrain from diving.

8—Never scratch the ears with anything but the tip of the finger, and do not use the head of a pin, hair pins, pencil tips, or anything of that nature.

9—Never let the hair become oily and damp, or sit with the back toward the window, as these things lead to agravate any existing hardness of hearing.

10—Never put milk, fat or any oily substance into the ear for the relief of pain, for they soon become rancid and tend to incite inflamation. Simple warm water will answer the purpose better than anything else.

11—Never be alarmed if a living insect enters the ear. Footing warm water into the canal will drown it, when it will generally come to the surface, and can be easily removed by the fingers. A few puff of tobacco smoke blown into the ear will stupefy the insect.

12—Never meddle with the ear if a foreign body, such as a bead, bu ton or seed enters it; leave it absolutely alone, but have a physician attend to it. More damage has been done by injudicious attempts at the extraction of a foreign body than could ever come from its presence in the ear.

Don't Grumble.

Don's be a grumbler. Some people contrive to get hold of the prickly side of everything, to turn against all the sharp corners and disagreeable things. Half the strength spent in growling would often set things right. You might as well make up your mind to begin with, that no one ever found the world quite as he would like it but you are to take your part of the trouble and bear it bravely. You will be sure to have burdens laid upon you that belong to other people, unless you are a shirk yourself; but don't grumble. If the work needs doing, and you are able to it, never mind about that other who ought to have done it and didn't. Those workers who fill up the gaps and smooth away the rough spots, and finish up the jobs that others leave undone—they are the true peacemakers, and worth a whole regiment of growlers.

Graces of Old Age.

A face which has for years been under the ennobling and shaping influences of good feeling and noble thoughts has obtained thereby a beauty of the finest kind. Oliver Goldsmith's most have thought something of this sort when he pithily wrote, in his Vicar of Wakefield, that "handsome is that handsome does." So it comes about that the human countenance is a magician's glass, in which is seen the very image of the actions emanating from the volitions of the mind and heart. It is, indeed, as Spenser appropriately put the thought in his "Hymne in Honour of Beauty," where he says:

For of the soule the body form doth take:
For soul is forme, and doth the body make.

And it is, indeed, as the Poet Young declared:

The body charms, because the soul is seen.

Consequently beauty is not confined to youthfulness; neither it is the exclusive monopoly of those who are upon the higher side of the middle age. There is a slow, but sturdy growing beauty which can only come to maturity in old age.

—The children of the blackest Africans are born whitish. In a month they become pale yellow, in a year brown, at first dirty black, and at six or seven ebony black.

A LETTER

From the Mother of Miss Jennie Benedictus.

Rochester, N. Y., April 22, 1886.

GENTLEMEN—It is with pleasure I add my testimonial to the many well known cures which your most excellent remedy has effected. For more than two years I was a great sufferer with rheumatism, being scarcely free from pain during the time. I found no relief until I procured Dr. Pardee's remedy, and it cured me completely. It is now two years since I discontinued its use and I have had no symptoms of the disease since. I know from my own and from the experience of many others also, that it will cure any case of rheumatism or neuralgia.

I am, very truly yours,
MRS. H. S. BONESTEELE.

Syracuse, N. Y.

GENTS—I have been troubled with Rheumatism for three years, at times very badly afflicted; was in that condition about two weeks ago, when I got a bottle of Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy, and in three days time was greatly relieved, and have not been troubled with it since I finished the bottle. I feel like recommending it in the highest terms, as I believe it will do all that is claimed for it.

Yours truly,
JOHN BLODGETT,
62 Madison St.

Lockport, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN—I think the medicine prepared by the Pardee Medicine Company is in fact the best rheumatic medicine now on the market; its equal is not known. My boy only six years old was confined to his bed with rheumatism; I got a bottle of this medicine and in a few days he was out of bed and playing around the house. I can cheerfully recommend this medicine to all rheumatic sufferers.

J. K. PERRY, Shoe Dealer.

Ask your druggist for Dr Pardee's Remedy and take no other. Price $1 per bottle; six bottles, $5.

Pardee Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Family Fun.

He Was Suspicious.

There is a livery stable keeper in Houston, Texas, who is very careful to have no loss from thieves.

Last Sunday afternoon a young married man called at the livery stable and wanted a horse and buggy.

"Who is going along with you?" asked the livery stable man.

"I am going to take my wife's mother out for her health, and you can put a hatchet and spade in the bottom of the buggy, as I wanted to bring in some young cedar trees to plant out in the yard."

"My buggies are all engaged, and those were just you would have to pay $200 buggies for one afternoon."

"Why, how's that?"

"Because I don't want to be hauled up as a witness every time the moon moons."

"Witness! About what?"

"And then you will be taxing a chance of venue because public sentiment is down on you here, and I don't want to be attached by the sheriff as a witness, corral forty miles and be fined $40, and be blackguarded by three or four lawyers."

"Why, what are you talking about?"

"That's all right. I don't my pay ain't justified, but I win't no fool. When a man wants to take his mother-in-law in the country for her health, with a hatchet and a spade and talks about planting things in the cemetery, I know all I want to. My buggies are hire's a year in advance. Just take your custom to some rival house. When I hire a buggy I hire a buggy; and when I hire a hatchet, it is a hatchet, I don't want to do any business what's not legitimate."

Something Brand New.

Yon other morning, says a San Francisco paper, as the departing Honolulu steamer was casting off its lines and swinging out into the stream, an elderly looking gentleman hastily embraced a lady who was one of the passengers and rushed down the gang plank to the wharf.

Going hurriedly up to the melancholy loafer who was watching the busy crowd, the gentleman drew him behind a pile of freight and said:

"Want to earn a dollar?"

"You bet."

"You see that lady in black in the stern there?"

"Cert."

"Well, that's my wife—going travelling for her health. Of course she expects me to stand here for the next twenty minutes while the steamer is backing and filling around so as to wave my handkerchief and wash her out of sight—see?"

"I batch on."

"Well, I'm too busy to monkey around here. Friends to ship—big as you see. She's a little near sighted, so I'd hire you to wave this handkerchief instead. It's a big one with a red border, and as long as she sees it she'll think it's me. Come up to No 1 Front street when they're well off and I'll pay you."

"Spoon she lo-ks through a telescope or sothin?"

"Is that case you will have to bury your face in the handkerchief and do the great weep act."

"Cast it be a half a doller extra."

"All right. Time is money and cash sharp now. You can time your hard a few times at—say ten cents a time, and snapping his watch the over-burdened business man rushed off.

We print this affecting little incident to call attention to the fact that the man thus employed has since gone into the business regularly. He is now a professional farewaller, and business men are willing to save valuable time and give their relatives an enthusiastic send off by applying to the above specialist any steamer day. Go early and avoid the rush.

A Good Guesser.

Magistrate—Have you ever been arrested before, Hatsun?

Hatsun—Yes'un yo' honah.

Magistrate—How many times?

Hatsun—I don't exactly dare remember, yo' honah.

Magistrate—Once?

Hatsun—Yes'un, I'se ben 'rested mo'n wunce.

Magistrate—Five hundred times!

Hatsun (indignantly)—Nu, suh!

Magistrate—A hundred times?

Hatsun—Er—yuse gittin' hot, Judge, yuse gettin' hot.

Wasn't Her Spread.

He stood on the possible steps with an open letter in his hand. He began at the mouth, and slowly turned pale, until the rims of his nose lost color, and during this process he was tearing the letter into fine bits.

"Hello, Charlie!" called an acquaintance who came up, "what's new?"

"Nothing."

"How does married life hold out?"

"Humph!"

"Say, old boy, let me congratulate you on having such a mother in law. We were talking about it in the office yesterday. That spread she got up on the occasion never cost less than $175."

"It cost $200—an even $200," said Charlie.

"Did she give you the figures in occasnose?"

"No, but the caterer just sent me the bill."

She Would Risk It.

"I came down here to go out on the Lansing train," she said to Officer Button at the Third street depot yesterday morning, as she held a satchel in one hand and an umbrella in the other.

"You—train gone in thirteen minutes."

"How are the stoves in the cars?"

"Perfectly safe, ma'am. All the cars on that road can roll over twice and not take fire."

"Bridges all safe?"

"Entirely so. The bridge inspector has just dunked his trip."

"Don't the rails ever spread on that road?"

"Never."

"How is it about collisions?"

"They don't have any."

"Any chance for some other train to run into the rear end of ours?"

"Not a bit."

"Well, I don't know but I'll take the risks and go, but I want you to understand that if anything does happen to me I have an killed off my old man won't take a cent less than $2,000, and maybe he'll want the burial expenser to boot."

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever. A New Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, as they are due to the presence of living parasites in the membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research has proved this fact, and it now made easy to cure this curse of all ever by one or two simple applications made by the patient at home. Send stamp for pamphlet describing this new treatment to A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 West King street, Toronto, Canada. Ref special request Mr. Dixon, Sr., is staying at the Sherlock House (formerly Truesdell) 115 Market st., San Francisco, for a short time. Sufferers should send for his treatise or call and see the Consultation free.

DOZZONI'S COMPLEXION POWDER.

Imparts a brilliant transparency to the skin. Removes Tan, Sunburn, Freckles, Pimples, and Roughness. Ladies who have used other powders will find this a more delightful article. It stands to no other in purity and delicacy. Sold by all druggists. Ask for DOZZONI'S. Sold by druggists generally. Ask your druggist for it, or send 50 cents in stamps to Dr. C. H. Berry & Co., Proprietors, St. Louis, Mo.

Tutt's Pills.

After eating, persons of a bilious habit will derive great benefit by taking one of these pills. If you have been

DRINKING TOO MUCH,

they will promptly relieve the nausea.

SICK HEADACHE

and nervousness which follows, resulting from intemperance, will find relief. Elegantly sugar coated.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

CHRISTY & WISE WOOL

Commission Merchants

N. E. CORNER FIFTH AND TOWNSEND STS.,

SAN FRANCISCO

Wool Bags, Twines, Shears, Dips and all articles required by Wool Growers kept on hand and supplied to Customers at the Very Lowest Rates. Cash Advanced on Consignments of Wool, Hides, Pelts, etc., at Low Rates of Interest not prompt return sale.

Post Office Address, San Francisco P. O. Box 2081.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE, 606 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 797.

I WANT TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Help, Farm Laborers, Teamsters, Farm Hands, Gardeners, Coachmen and Grooms, Boys for private families and ranches. Also, good reliable male Help of all kinds. Also, Female Help—Ladies' Nurses, Seamstresses, Housework Girls, Waitresses, Chambermaids, Dining Room Girls, Laundresses, Cooks, Ranch Cooks, Vineyard Cooks, Boarding House Cooks, Restaurant Cooks, Pastry Cooks, Ranch Women, Dairy Women, Nurse Girls, Children to Board with Parents, Ladies' Companions, Housekeepers, Cooks for Hotels in Country Towns, Chambermaids, Waitresses, Dining Room Girls, Laundresses

OUR CATHOLIC SOCIETIES.

Brief Mention of Past and Coming Events.

—Y. M. I. No. 4 will hold its picnic to-morrow (Thursday), at Belmont.

—Y. M. I. No. 21, of St. Patrick's parish, had a picnic at Belmont last Thursday.

—Y. M. I. No. 8, of West Oakland, picnicked last Thursday, at Shell Mound Park, and a very pleasant time was had by all that attended.

—Y. M. I. No. 2, gave an enjoyable open meeting on the 29th ult., at which an excellent literary and musical programme was rendered.

—The Y. M. C. M. A. will hold its annual election of officers on Wednesday evening the 18th inst., and a full attendance of the members is urgently requested.

—The St. Patrick's Mutual Alliance Association held its 12th annual reunion last Wednesday at Stehr's Park, Petaluma, and a large crowd of merry pleasure was present.

—The officers of the St. Francis de Sales Mutual Society, Oakland, are, president, Mrs J. M. Delanoy; vice-president, Mrs. M. smith; treasurer, Mrs. Thos. McGlenney; secretary, Miss Tyrell.

—The officers of the St. Francis de Sales Beneficiary Society, Oakland, are president, E. Hart; vice-president, T. Tamonal; treasurer, F. Durer; treasurer, John Prewer; spiritual director, Rev Thos. McGlenney.

—Steps have been taken by the young men of Sacred Heart Parish, Tamonal, to organize a branch of the Y. M. I. A preliminary meeting was recently held, and some twenty-young men signed a petition to the State Council for a charter.

—The officers of the Children of Mary Society of St. Mary's church, Oakland, are president, Miss Maude Turnbull; vice-president, Miss Clarion Merritt; secretary, Miss Josephine Woodward; treasurer, Miss Kate Barry; consultor, Miss Lillie Touchard and Annie Downey.

—The officers of the Ladies Altar Society of St. Mary's church, Oakland, are president, Miss Maude Turnbull; vice-president, Mrs. J. S Dwan; secretary, Miss Lilia Touchard; treasurer, Mrs. E. Kier The society is in a flourishing condition and has over 200 active members.

—Y. M. I. No. 3, held an open meeting on the 21 inst., and the following talented gentlemen contributed to a most acceptable programme. Messrs. A. A. Oliver, J. T. Green, F. Murnaky, F. E. Kane, R. C. Gibbons, A. J. Barrett, F. F. Burns, O. W. Patterson, W. J. Creighton, E. F. Sullivan, M. J. Brady, and J. E. Murphy

—A branch of the Catholic Knights of Ohio, has recently been formed in San Luis Obispo. Without doubt other branches of this excellent National Catholic Society will be formed in Southern California; and that the spiritual graces and splendid material benefits of this order will be thoroughly disseminated throughout the whole State.

—The following officers have been recently elected by St. Francis de Sales (Oakland) Branch of the C. B. of I.: president, D. Crowley; vice-president, Frank Arm-strong; corresponding secretary, W. Sullivan; financial secretary, D. Sullivan; sergeant-at-arms, John Dwyer; spiritual director, Rev. P. Scott; treasurer, John Dwyer. This branch organized some two or three months ago, is in a most prosperous condition, and has over 60 members.

—Y. M. I. No. 89, was organized on the 25th ult, at Shell Harbor, and the following officers were elected and installed: President, John J. Spelbrink; vice-president, Augustus H. Dee, and F. Wickenden; financial secretary, Louis F Kalfish; recording secretary, N. C. Dwyer; corresponding secretary, F. K. Uvella; treasurer, A. Gleason; examining physicians, Drs. A. C. Williams and K. F. Wiechmann; marshal, F. Moyer; sentries (outside), A. C. Greenwell, Frank Sieber, J. C. Hope, A. Dee, and L. Rein.

OUR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

Roll of Honor for the Month of April.

ST. JOSEPH'S PARACHIAL SCHOOL. FOURTH STREET.

Senior Classes.—Nellie Fenton 97, Lizzie Pike 96, Mary Dutton 93, Christina O'Neil 93, Katie Lynch 93, Annie Ahern 93, Honora Fitzgerald 92, Nellie McKaye 91.

Junior Classes—Margaret Kitcles 95, Mary Byrne 92, Margaret McDevitt 92, Virginia Dwyer 92, Annie Lynch 92, Lizzie Ryan 92, Annie Fitzgerald 91, Annie Ryan 91, Annie Byrne 91, Mabel Tuohy 87, Mary McCormick 87, Mary Hilliard 86, Annie Dwyer 86, Annie Ryan 81, Mary Collins 81.

Fourth Class—Katie McMahon 97, Annie Dwyer 96, Mary Dwyer 96, Annie McNeas 92 Maude Keith 92, Mary McCullagh 92, Nellie O'Brien 92, Ella Sulger 89, Mary Fitzgerald 86 Annie Ryan 86, Lillie Keenan 86, Maude Dunnigan 86, Julia Walsh 83, Annie Dwyer 82, Hattie Downey 82, Fannie Dunne 80, Maggie Ryan 80.

Fifth Class.—Katie Cunningham 98, Annie Cooper 98, Kate Collins 97, Katie Dwyer 96, Mary Cole 96, Nellie Fenton 91, Laura Ryan 89, Mary McMahon 89, Bridie Keogh 89, Bertie Tully 87, Rosie Gallagher 87, Lottie Feeney 86, Minnie Sullivan 86, May Mead 85, Maggie Mitchell, Annie Lazarous and Maude Taylor each 84, Annie Ryan 81.

Fifth Class, B.—Maude Cole 99, Maude Brown 97, Lizzie Ryan 95, Maggie Barry 94, Annie Lynch 91 Annie Taunton 90, Maggie Taylor 89, Maggie O'Leary 89, Nellie O'Brien 88, Mary Reilly 83, May Gallagher 83, Maggie Morrow 82, Jane McBride 82, Maggie Bentley, Annie Kane, Annie Lynch each 81, Maggie Mahoney, Kate Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Dolan 80.

Sixth Class.—Maggie Gallagher, Rosie Cooney, Mary Dougherty each 99, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 97, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

Seventh Class—Thomas Mitchell each 99, Mary Dougherty each 98, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 95, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

Eighth Class.—Maggie Gallagher, Rosie Cooney, Mary Dougherty each 99, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 97, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

The officers of the Ladies Altar Society of St. Mary's church, Oakland, are president, Miss Maude Turnbull; vice-president, Miss Clarion Merritt; secretary, Miss Josephine Woodward; treasurer, Miss Kate Barry; consultor, Miss Lilia Touchard and Annie Downey.

The officers of the Ladies Altar Society of St. Mary's church, Oakland, are president, Miss Maude Turnbull; vice-president, Mrs. J. S Dwan; secretary, Miss Lilia Touchard; treasurer, Mrs. E. Kier The society is in a flourishing condition and has over 200 active members.

—Y. M. I. No. 3, held an open meeting on the 21 inst., and the following talented gentlemen contributed to a most acceptable programme. Messrs. A. A. Oliver, J. T. Green, F. Murnaky, F. E. Kane, R. C. Gibbons, A. J. Barrett, F. F. Burns, O. W. Patterson, W. J. Creighton, E. F. Sullivan, M. J. Brady, and J. E. Murphy

—A branch of the Catholic Knights of Ohio, has recently been formed in San Luis Obispo. Without doubt other branches of this excellent National Catholic Society will be formed in Southern California; and that the spiritual graces and splendid material benefits of this order will be thoroughly disseminated throughout the whole State.

—The following officers have been recently elected by St. Francis de Sales (Oakland) Branch of the C. B. of I.: president, D. Crowley; vice-president, Frank Arm-strong; corresponding secretary, W. Sullivan; financial secretary, D. Sullivan; sergeant-at-arms, John Dwyer; spiritual director, Rev. P. Scott; treasurer, John Dwyer. This branch organized some two or three months ago, is in a most prosperous condition, and has over 60 members.

—Y. M. I. No. 89, was organized on the 25th ult, at Shell Harbor, and the following officers were elected and installed: President, John J. Spelbrink; vice-president, Augustus H. Dee, and F. Wickenden; financial secretary, Louis F Kalfish; recording secretary, N. C. Dwyer; corresponding secretary, F. K. Uvella; treasurer, A. Gleason; examining physicians, Drs. A. C. Williams and K. F. Wiechmann; marshal, F. Moyer; sentries (outside), A. C. Greenwell, Frank Sieber, J. C. Hope, A. Dee, and L. Rein.

OUR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

Roll of Honor for the Month of April.

ST. JOSEPH'S PARACHIAL SCHOOL. FOURTH STREET.

Senior Classes.—Nellie Fenton 97, Lizzie Pike 96, Mary Dutton 93, Christina O'Neil 93, Katie Lynch 93, Annie Ahern 93, Honora Fitzgerald 92, Nellie McKaye 91.

Junior Classes—Margaret Kitcles 95, Mary Byrne 92, Margaret McDevitt 92, Virginia Dwyer 92, Annie Lynch 92, Lizzie Ryan 92, Annie Fitzgerald 91, Annie Ryan 91, Annie Byrne 91, Mabel Tuohy 87, Mary McCormick 87, Mary Hilliard 86, Annie Dwyer 86, Annie Ryan 81, Mary Collins 81.

Fourth Class—Katie McMahon 97, Annie Dwyer 96, Mary Dwyer 96, Annie McNeas 92 Maude Keith 92, Mary McCullagh 92, Nellie O'Brien 92, Ella Sulger 89, Mary Fitzgerald 86 Annie Ryan 86, Lillie Keenan 86, Maude Dunnigan 86, Julia Walsh 83, Annie Dwyer 82, Hattie Downey 82, Fannie Dunne 80, Maggie Ryan 80.

Fifth Class, A.—Katie Cunningham 98, Annie Cooper 98, Kate Collins 97, Katie Dwyer 96, Mary Cole 96, Nellie Fenton 91, Laura Ryan 89, Mary McMahon 89, Bridie Keogh 89, Bertie Tully 87, Rosie Gallagher 87, Lottie Feeney 86, Minnie Sullivan 86, May Mead 85, Maggie Mitchell, Annie Lazarous and Maude Taylor each 84, Annie Ryan 81.

Fifth Class, B.—Maude Cole 99, Maude Brown 97, Lizzie Ryan 95, Maggie Barry 94, Annie Lynch 91 Annie Taunton 90, Maggie Taylor 89, Maggie O'Leary 89, Nellie O'Brien 88, Mary Reilly 83, May Gallagher 83, Maggie Morrow 82, Jane McBride 82, Maggie Bentley, Annie Kane, Annie Lynch each 81, Maggie Mahoney, Kate Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Dolan 80.

Sixth Class.—Maggie Gallagher, Rosie Cooney, Mary Dougherty each 99, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 97, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

Seventh Class—Thomas Mitchell each 99, Mary Dougherty each 98, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 95, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

Eighth Class.—Maggie Gallagher, Rosie Cooney, Mary Dougherty each 99, Mary Hoch 98, Ada Mooney 97, Nellie Cunningham 94, Mary Finnegan, Della Mitchell, Katie Shine, Mary Ryan, Hannah Mahony each 91, Mollie Keenan 87, Maggie McAvoy 81, Mary Tate 80, Esther McGroy 80, Mary Hughes, Katie Walsh each 79, Katie Finn 78, Bridget Dolan, Della Mooney, Katie Green each 98, Annie Lofts 95, Kitty Sullivan, Johanna Hoch each 93, Ella Dwyer 92, Olive Hahn, Annie O'Mara each 91, Katie Ryan 90, Annie Ryan, Mary McGovern, Mary Flynn, Annie Downey, Mary Mitchell each 89.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM—There was further rioting in Belfast on Sunday, April 24th, the police being attacked while bringing a prisoner from Agnes street to Shankill-road Station. Our men was shot with a revolver, but not fatally, and a policeman was knocked unconscious with a stone.

Mr. John Dillon spoke home truths to the men at North Antrim when he addressed them at Ballycastle, on April 12. The meeting was composed of Unity farmers of all denominations—Catholics, Presbyterians and Episcopalians, Nationalists and Orangemen. His difference were such in agreement upon the two great questions of the hour. All are united in opposition to Coercion, and in dissatisfaction with the Government Land Bill.

CORK.—The Bishop of Cork conferred the Sacrament of Holy Orders on Mr Keane, on April 10th, in the Cathedral. The Rev Mr. Keane was a teacher in St. Finn Barr's Seminary.

The Rath Inst, Mgr. Sheehan, P. P. V. G., St. Patrick's Cork, is suffering from a severe and prolonged illness.

Very Rev. William Canon O'Brien, P P., died on April 15th, at his residence, Clonyn The respected clergyman had reached the age of 71 years.

During the last thirty years, the Cork Mercy Hospital, established by the late Venerable Archdeacon Murphy, has admitted 12, 926 patients to its wards, 150 000 persons having been treated outside. The annual meeting of the friends and subscribers was held on Sunday, April 10th, the Most Rev. Dr O'Callaghan, Bishop of Cork, presiding. Addresses were delivered by the Mayor, Mr Maurice Healy, M. P., Right Rev Mgr Newville, and the Bishop.

Canon Keller, writing to a clerical friend in Cork, says:—"I am deeply grateful for many thoughtfulness. In God's own time we shall meet again, where and when He pleases. Let not my friends be troubled for me. I have tried that Highest and Independent Any of the priesthood should not suffer at your hands. The penalty I pay is small. All goes well with me here. The Resurrect on day shall find me captive, but that is little. The walls and corridors are held well by the memory of great freshness. It is time the priests should take their part."

CLARE.—On April 13th, the recommendation of a Professional Reception, took place at the Convent of Mercy, Wakefield, to young lady who was professed being Miss C Ffrench, daughter of Mr. M. O'Brien, Limbaunrina, and whose nunnery religious is Sister Mary Celestine. The young lady who was professed is Miss O Carroll, daughter of Mrs O Carroll, Tullaghnoe. She has taken the name in religion of Sister Mary Stanislaus.

The monolith of limestone intended for the tower to be erected at the new Cathedral in Limerick, in memory of the Manchester Martyrs, is now ready for the sculptor. It is 30 feet in weights about six tons. It is at present rough in shape, and the work of carving, according to the design of the artist will be immediately begun, and is to be finished in about a number unit, when it will be moved with the utmost facility.

DUBLIN — The Royal Commission on Irish Public Works has now practically completed its report. It is understood that the report had until it has been submitted to her Majesty, which will be done as soon as possible.

his Albert Edith, is an amendment to the Irish Land Bill, proposes that sanitary and other family charges on land should be allowed in proportion to the rent payable in arrears by the Land Commission.

Sir Thomas Esmonde, whose illness has caused some anxiety to his friends, has been successfully operated upon for Mr. G. Fitzgerald, F. R. C. S., and Mr. J. K. O'Neill, B. L. S. Sir Thomas is now progressing satisfactorily.

DERRY.—On April 11, a splendid torchlight demonstration, in connection with the land question and in support of the National Leagues, took place in Derry. The demonstration was held in Drapstown, and the enthusiasm characterized the proceedings. It was unanimous that an active campaign against the tenants on the Skinnon estate would be commenced that day, but owing to misunderstanding between the agent of the and the tenants, the evictions have been postponed.

GALWAY.—At Clifden Petty Sessions, on April 13th, Cornelius King, Nationalist candidate for the office of Poorkeeper, was fined £5 for eating a voting paper.

KILKENNY.—Mr. Martin Hackett, died on April 14th, in his residence, Walkin street, Kilkenny. Deceased had been only ailing for two days, and died at the age of 84 years.

The impressive ceremony of profession took place at the Presentation Convent, Kilkenny, on April 13th, when Miss Phelan, Cannon, Queen's County (in religion Sister Mary Ignatius), and Miss Ryan, Ballycurrane, Kos Louis, Eden Noonan, Maggie McCarthy, Jeffrey in attendance. Sister Frances Mary Byron, Annie Sullivan, Mary Bowe, Maggie Gallagher, Vinie Farrell.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL, VIRGINIA CITY, NEV.

Section Intermediate—Jane Tracey, Katie Nolan, Katie Quinn, Clotilda Pagnol, Ellen Lynch, Annie Dwyer, Lena Malone, Jennie Mincock and Thomas Nason.

Elementary—Mary Norton, Lillie Ryan, Mary Considine, Mary Blake, Maude McDermott, Maude McLoughlin, Mary Michelin, Annie Malloy, Annie McGlynn, Katie Diggins and Willie Sullivan.

Section Elementary—Berta Gay, Maggie Hennessy, Kathleen Webber, Eva Rodgers, Maggie Considine, Louise Doran, Julia Shannahan, Mary Wilson, Kate Lawrence, Nellie Hennessy, Mary Wilson, Mary Mooney, Julia Downey, Polly Corbett, Mattie Shannahan, Mary Ryan, Mary O'Donnell, Annie Dwyer, Mary Finnegan, Maggie Mackie, Frank Downey, John Sullivan, William Malloy, Manuel Sullivan, Edward Nevin, and Tiddy Noonan.

Second Division—Annie Mooney, Mary Lynch, Martha Sullivan, Kate Shanky, Maggie Riley, Annie Kennedy, Maggie Higgins, Katie Mc Donald, Julia Lorley, Annie Sullivan, Kate Mooney, Kate Thompson, Katie Mooney, Katie Carroll, Mary R. Shanky, Mary Martin, Annie Mooney, Annie Lynch, Mary Murray, Kate Sullivan and Mary Delaney.

Third Division—Maggie Mincock, Rosalie O'Leary and Charles Sullivan.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY, RENO, NEV.

Senior Class.—Annie Jones, Estella Nash, Pauline Wise, Kate Bowen.

Junior Class—Mary Ryan, Lizzie Ryan, Belle O'Leary, Dolores Bowling, Mary Gibson, Clara Lynch, Mary Kemp, May Lierer, Katie Combs, Nettie Ladd.

Intermediate—First Division, Mary Dougherty, Lena Bean, Louisa Evans, Minnie Smith, Jane Bennett, Clara Mary, Second division—Ellen Wilson, Ida Dolan, Mary Brackin, Alice Moody, Nettie Reilly.

Boys Intermediate—Harry Thrall.

Primary—Nora Cash, Matilda O'Brien, Boys Primary—Charles Thrall, Edward O'Brien, Willie Crane.

OUR LADY OF MERCY'S SCHOOL, S. F.

Senior Department.—Maggie Baile, Annie McGrath, Kittie Fitzsimon, Mary McCarthy, Mary O'Donnell.

Preparatory Department.—Katie Shine, Annie Mooney, Jane Crowley, Maggie Thompson, Elizabeth Grimble, Sadie Hicks, Annie Sullivan, Nellie Blanchfield, Mary Willey, Mary Regan.

Intermediate Department—Annie Ryan, Mary Casey, Mary McFeely, Maude McFeely, Edith Spencer, Mary Hood.

Primary Department—Annie Madden, Hattie Shaw, Annie Casey, Mary Tillmann, Ada Madden.

Local little girls in Kindergarten class—Monie Tuohy, Alice Kenny, Bridget Casey, Annie Kane, Annie Kane, Mary Tillmann, Annie McKinny.

The Sisters of Honor of St. Rose's Schools, city, omitted for want of room.

DYSPEPSIA.

The Symptoms: Loss of Appetite, Nausea, Dizziness at the Stomach Headache, Sour Mouth, Constipation, Low Spirits and general prostration. Dyspepsia is frequently attended with Constipation, but sometimes with Diarrhœa.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

NOW CURED!

"I suffered intensely from Pain in my stomach, Headache, &c. A neighbor who had taken Simmons Liver Regulator, recommended it to me. I tried it, and it gave me immediate relief. I now take it regularly, and it keeps me in good health. I cheerfully recommend it to all who have long suffered as I have."—H. C. CORRIGAN, Pulaski, Va.

Market Report.

MONTHLY TRADE REPORT.

836 Kearny St., Tuesday Evening, May 10, 1887.

Wheat—No. 1	$1 75@$1 77½
Flour—Superfine	2 30@2 60
Cornmeal	22½@25
Oats	1 10@1 20
Barley, feed	1 00@1 05
Bran, ₹ ton, wholesale	21 50@22 00
Middlings, ₹ ton	25 50@26 50
Mixed Feed, ₹ ton	23 50@25 50
Oats Net, feed	1 35@1 50
Corn	1 35@1 50
Buckwheat	1 30@1 35
Hay
Hens, ₹ lbs, wholesale	5 50@7 00
Turkeys, ₹ lb wholesale	20@22
Ducks, ₹ doz	5 50@6 50
Geese, ₹ pair	1 00@1 50
Young Geese	8 00@11 00
Old Roosters	5 00@6 00
Eggs
Butter, ₹ doz	17@19
Cheese
Chicken fresh roll	18@19½
Lard	12@12½
Pickles	15@17
Onions
Domestic	90@1 10
Bermuda	1 50@1 75
Potatoes
Sweet	1 00@1 50
Wheat	11 00@15 00
Wood
Cord, Southern Coast	14@15
Sawed	16@18
Cord, Oak	14@15
Meats—
Beef, wholesale	6@9
Mutton, wholesale	7@8
Veal, wholesale	7@8
Pork, wholesale dressed	7½@8
Eastern Sugar-cured Hams	14@15½
California Hams	10@12½
Bacon, breakfast	12½@13
Lard, ₹ lb wholesale in bk.	8@8½
Vegetables—
Tomatoes, wholesale	1 50@1 80
Cabbage, ₹ 100 lbs	75@1 00
Garlic, ₹ lb	5@6
Onions, California	1 50@2 00
Potatoes	1 25@1 50
Turnips, ₹ box	75@1 00
Carrots, ₹ box	75@1 00
Beans—
Bayo, ₹ lb	3@3½
Small White	3@3½
Pinks	3@3½
Lima	5@6
Green, ₹ lb	5@6
Fruits—
Apples, ₹ box	75@1 50
Apples, ₹ box	1 00@1 50
Oranges, Mexican, ₹ box	3 00@3 50
Oranges, Navel, ₹ box	3 50@4 50
Lemons, ₹ box	3 50@4 50
Bananas, ₹ bunch	1 50@3 00
Pineapples, ₹ doz	1 00@1 50
Cocoanuts, ₹ doz	1 00@1 50
Walnuts, ₹ lb	8@10
Almonds, ₹ lb	12@15
Raisins, ₹ box	1 00@2 25

NOTICE TO CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

The heads of all the Catholic schools and colleges throughout the State are respectfully requested to send us the names of all pupils who have left school during the month of April, and who have received honorable mention in the various departments of study. Also, the names of those who have received premiums, prizes, diplomas, medals, or any other mark of honor or distinction. Also, the names of those

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

MOTHER'S DEATH.

One more spirit free from sorrow,
One more heart has ceased to beat:
To the land that knows no morrow,
Mother's gone, her place is vacant.

Nevermore her lingering footstepe,
Here shall tread this troubled sphere,
But with wings of golden plumage,
She shall find what's wanting here.

Hosannas and anthems—Hallelujahs—
Shall her heart with ecstacies fill,
But with arms outstretched and loving,
Angels shall my mother greet.

For every pang that wrung her lonelinge,
For every pain that rent her breast,
Jesus shall replace them,
Love eternal, peace and rest.

When her steps shall near the portals
Of that home beyond the skies,
Let her ears drink in the chorus,
Let its splendor meet her eyes.

Let the angels sing those anthems
That doth fill the heavenly dome,
When a lost and weary traveller,
Seeks the bright, eternal home.

Let the candles show the glory
Which awaits the weary soul,
When from life's long, toilsome journey,
It reaches near the final goal.

For a blind and loving mother
Thus has been passed life's journey
In awaiting at the doorstep
Of the sacred throne of God.

. . . .

AT OUR MOTHER'S SHRINE.

Another May time cometh, sweet Mother, and I see,
While out late Cathedral walls, a fairer shrine for thee;
A shrine in whose fair precincts hath each gifts as each can give;
A shrine where lights in prayer will learn into thy face to live.

And once again, sweet Mother, thy praise I hain would sing—
And once again, into thy lost my lowly offering bring;
I've made for thee a garland—ah, me!—I know not why—
Behold! the flowers are fading, ere in my hands they die!

Th morning yet, my Mother—see, still the East is red!
And nearly gathered were the flowers, and now, alas, they're dead!
And thy image hide above me, and the image of thy Child
Look on me as in chiding, tender and grave and mild.

I have no voice to praise thee, I have no heart to pray,
Scatter the garland scattered that I were lot thee to-day;
Yet take thy blighted blossoms—smile on them, I implore,
And they will live, and bloom again, yes, sweeter than before!

Strength will return unto my heart, and song
And lists to the light of joy that suffused
And now, s'en though I cannot pay—nor sing in praise to thee,
Thy love in my heart will stay, till then remember me.

KATHERINE E. CONWAY.

THREE STOOD, BY THE CROSS OF JESUS, HIS MOTHER.

With a weight of grief o'erladen,
Weary, help-less, and forlorn,
Stood a sweet and stalwart maiden,
Close beside the tree of scorn.

Ay, while He, our God, our Brother,
With His life redeemed our loss,
Gazed, and with all the tenderness
By His blood-empurpled cross.

Silent, meek, and unconpaining,
By that cross whereon He hung,
Fair of sweet grief refreshing,
Lo, O Mother, stood thy Son!
Yet, O Mother, stood thy Son!
Fairest from that miserable soldiers,
From the Mother of your God!

HARRIET M. SAUNDERS (Marie-Louise).

LIFT UP YOUR HEART, MOTHER IRELAND.

Lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set,
There's one great generous land in the world
That now deemed you yet,
Though the loom-is-bearing, rush-coating landlord
Hides every or your dainty dill,
There's a pow'r in this land of Columbia
To war and to conquer his will.

So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set,
For the big-hearted land of Columbia
Has never deserted you yet.

When the tyrant with truncheon malice
Was driving your sons from your breast,
What was it but bullfine a rampart
For you to take land of the West?
And 'tis built of true hearts that were never
Found wanting when right was assailed;
To round your Liberty's basis,
And to fear to this staff hop is called!

So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland, etc.

When the fever and famine were smiting
Your sons in thousands of their sons,
They asked bread from the people which gr and
Gave stones.

But the answer vouchsafed was scorn
Two thou the proud world of Columbia
Have a shake to her liberty cap,
And long'ning the cheat-wreath of Ceres
Are laid in right late your lea.

Then lift up your heart, Mother Ireland, etc.

"Ye die or no blindly with tyrants
Who'er or whatever may lead,
In Columbia's broad and free country
There is room for all of the live!
Thus hath said the Ever-Lord to all the heavens
Ring this to their hearts right and day,
That the crest of the mighty republic
Has come into the world to stay
So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set;
There's one great generous land in the world,
That never deserted you yet.

WILLIAM GROOMBAY.

"COME BACK, DEAR DAYS."

Come back, dear days, from out the Past:
" " " I see your gentle cheeks adorn,
You look at me with mournful eyes,
And then the night grows vague and vast.
You have gone back to Paradise.

Why did you flutter, dear days?
Why did you come, only to vanish?
The morning stars were all silver,
The birds sang sweetly in your place,
All else of life you put to shame.

Did I not honor you aright
Who left Hell to see you alive,
Who left your very pale divine,
Thanker I did and warmed me in your light,
Or quelled your tears as they were wine?

What stood you to these strange chimes—
What love were lost, what dream were fair,
What gems whispered to the air?
What soft delight of smiles and sighs
Enchanted you from elsewhere?

You left no pledges when you went;
The years since then are black and cold—
The beautiful days that I adored,
While you were here my all I sold,
Now I am poor, and sad, and old.

LOUISE CHESLER MONTROSE.

Responses Promptly Returned.

"The following letter to the proprietors of "Brown's Bronchial Troches" explains itself.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 12, 1884.

"Gentlemen—The writer, who is a lower singer, desires to state that he was a bearer on a recent occasion, when his services were necessary to a church choir, that he was approached by a lady who complained to desist from singing, lest by taking cold in consequence, she should lose her place as leading soprano of your church. The writer was called in fully participate in the services. Would you send him a dozen boxes of your preparation.

"Brown's Bronchial Troches" are used only in boxes, with the fac-simile of the proprietors on the wrapper. Price 25 cents.

Literary Miscellany.

Charley Montague's Story.

"There is nothing in the papers and no body in the streets, said Charley Montague, as with a disconsolate air he flung down the Times and turned away from the window. "I may as well write to Audley Place and say that they must all throw your parents for this year, I can't leave town."

Charles went towards the table, but he had no only mind powers of letting my answer to nothing and his letter was soon sealed. Again he was thrown on his resources, which have always appeared to me like very worse things on which an unfortunate individual can be thrown in the way of amusement. The fact was, that though of course, it is the most enviable position in the world, that of having nothing to do, yet one requires to be used to it. Now Charley had been used to the very reverse. Left an orphan to the care of three uncles, the first intended him for a clergyman, and so took care of his Latin and Greek, and fully impressed on his nephew's mind the paramount importance of university honors. However, he died and the second uncle insisted on the student taking a place in his counting house. A will of his own on a pentilous youth is a superfluity, and Charley took his place on a high stool at a high desk. Just then the third uncle died. During his life he had troubled himself very little about "the only hope of the family;" but, after all, the last resolutions are death-bed ones, and he bequeathed his nephew to same purpose. Thus Charley was left with but a fine fortune, for the elder Mr. Montague died just as he had realized the sum on which he considered he could enjoy himself. To the best of our belief, he had seen the pleasure, for the enjoyment of spending money is nothing to that of making it. Charley gave up his bridge, as he had given up Euclid, took chambers in a fashionable part of London, devoted his mornings to the club instead of to the counting house, and intended to be the happiest of men in the full indulgence of the date of a where lights in prayer will learn into thy face to live.

And once again, sweet Mother, thy praise I hain would sing—
And once again, into thy lost my lowly offering bring;
I've made for thee a garland—ah, me!—I know not why—
Behold! the flowers are fading, ere in my hands they die!

Th morning yet, my Mother—see, still the East is red!
And nearly gathered were the flowers, and now, alas, they're dead!
And thy image hide above me, and the image of thy Child
Look on me as in chiding, tender and grave and mild.

I have no voice to praise thee, I have no heart to pray,
Scatter the garland scattered that I were lot thee to-day;
Yet take thy blighted blossoms—smile on them, I implore,
And they will live, and bloom again, yes, sweeter than before!

Strength will return unto my heart, and song
And lists to the light of joy that suffused
And now, s'en though I cannot pay—nor sing in praise to thee,
Thy love in my heart will stay, till then remember me.

KATHERINE E. CONWAY.

"THREE STOOD, BY THE CROSS OF JESUS, HIS MOTHER.

With a weight of grief o'erladen,
Weary, help-less, and forlorn,
Stood a sweet and stalwart maiden,
Close beside the tree of scorn.

Ay, while He, our God, our Brother,
With His life redeemed our loss,
Gazed, and with all the tenderness of
By His blood-empurpled cross.

Silent, meek, and unconpaining,
By that cross whereon He hung,
Fair of sweet grief refreshing,
Lo, O Mother, stood thy Son!
Yet, O Mother, stood thy Son!
Fairest from that miserable soldiers,
From the Mother of your God!

HARRIET M. SAUNDERS (Marie-Louise).

LIFT UP YOUR HEART, MOTHER IRELAND.

Lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set,
There's one great generous land in the world
That now deemed you yet,
Though the loom-is-bearing, rush-coating landlord
Hides every or your dainty dill,
There's a pow'r in this land of Columbia
To war and to conquer his will.

So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set,
For the big-hearted land of Columbia
Has never deserted you yet.

When the tyrant with truncheon malice
Was driving your sons from your breast,
What was it but bullfine a rampart
For you to take land of the West?
And 'tis built of true hearts that were never
Found wanting when right was assailed;
To round your Liberty's basis,
And to fear to this staff hop is called!

So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland, etc.

When the fever and famine were smiting
Your sons in thousands of their sons,
They asked bread from the people which gr and
Gave stones.

But the answer vouchsafed was scorn
Two thou the proud world of Columbia
Have a shake to her liberty cap,
And long'ning the cheat-wreath of Ceres
Are laid in right late your lea.

Then lift up your heart, Mother Ireland, etc.

"Ye die or no blindly with tyrants
Who'er or whatever may lead,
In Columbia's broad and free country
There is room for all of the live!
Thus hath said the Ever-Lord to all the heavens
Ring this to their hearts right and day,
That the crest of the mighty republic
Has come into the world to stay
So lift up your heart, Mother Ireland,
The star of your hope has not set;
There's one great generous land in the world,
That never deserted you yet.

WILLIAM GROOMBAY.

"COME BACK, DEAR DAYS."

Come back, dear days, from out the Past:
" " " I see your gentle cheeks adorn,
You look at me with mournful eyes,
And then the night grows vague and vast.
You have gone back to Paradise.

Why did you flutter, dear days?
Why did you come, only to vanish?
The morning stars were all silver,
The birds sang sweetly in your place,
All else of life you put to shame.

Did I not honor you aright
Who left Hell to see you alive,
Who left your very pale divine,
Thanker I did and warmed me in your light,
Or quelled your tears as they were wine?

What stood you to these strange chimes—
What love were lost, what dream were fair,
What gems whispered to the air?
What soft delight of smiles and sighs
Enchanted you from elsewhere?

You left no pledges when you went;
The years since then are black and cold—
The beautiful days that I adored,
While you were here my all I sold,
Now I am poor, and sad, and old.

LOUISE CHESLER MONTROSE.

Responses Promptly Returned.

"The following letter to the proprietors of "Brown's Bronchial Troches" explains itself.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, April 12, 1884.

"Gentlemen—The writer, who is a lower singer, desires to state that he was a bearer on a recent occasion, when his services were necessary to a church choir, that he was approached by a lady who complained to desist from singing, lest by taking cold in consequence, she should lose her place as leading soprano of your church. The writer was called in fully participate in the services. Would you send him a dozen boxes of your preparation.

"Brown's Bronchial Troches" are used only in boxes, with the fac-simile of the proprietors on the wrapper. Price 25 cents.

Literary Miscellany.

Charley Montague's Story.

"There is nothing in the papers and no body in the streets, said Charley Montague, as with a disconsolate air he flung down the Times and turned away from the window. "I may as well write to Audley Place and say that they must all throw your parents for this year, I can't leave town."

Charles went towards the table, but he had no only mind powers of letting my answer to nothing and his letter was soon sealed. Again he was thrown on his resources, which have always appeared to me like very worse things on which an unfortunate individual can be thrown in the way of amusement. The fact was, that though of course, it is the most enviable position in the world, that of having nothing to do, yet one requires to be used to it. Now Charley had been used to the very reverse. Left an orphan to the care of three uncles, the first intended him for a clergyman, and so took care of his Latin and Greek, and fully impressed on his nephew's mind the paramount importance of university honors. However, he died and the second uncle insisted on the student taking a place in his counting house. A will of his own on a pentilous youth is a superfluity, and Charley took his place on a high stool at a high desk. Just then the third uncle died. During his life he had troubled himself very little about "the only hope of the family;" but, after all, the last resolutions are death-bed ones, and he bequeathed his nephew to same purpose. Thus Charley was left with but a fine fortune, for the elder Mr. Montague died just as he had realized the sum on which he considered he could enjoy himself. To the best of our belief, he had seen the pleasure, for the enjoyment of spending money is nothing to that of making it. Charley gave up his bridge, as he had given up Euclid, took chambers in a fashionable part of London, devoted his mornings to the club instead of to the counting house, and intended to be the happiest of men in the full indulgence of the date of his sixteenth. Unfortunately, the art of doing nothing requires some learning; and Charley, though he would not have owned the truth on any account, was the least big scholar in the district in the distance struck at.

"It is of no use now," exclaimed the impatient driver, slackening his speed. "We are too late for dinner, the washing of all others, that puts my aunt out. I must lay the blame upon you, she can't say anything to you as a stranger. We must go on."

Charley approached the window. "Just the measure of the destitute. There was nothing to be seen, except three or four whatnot cals, and two or three women in flung-looking shawls and bonnets; also a shovelled-look man with a dripping umbrella, which he held under over a brown paper parcel that his own space body; at last a bright spot appeared, the rain seem to melt into luminous streaks in the sky, and the rain drops began to gather into two or three large drops, and to descend slowly on the surface of the pieces of glass. The pavement began to dry, and Charley decided on a walk. He sought his club, and stood there for five minutes delightfully undecided as to whether he should turn to the left. Before he had done standing a shower came up rapidly and pelted upon the spot where he stood.

"My dear fellow," said its occupant, "I am in search of you. I want you to go down with me to my aunt's and stay there till Wednesday. Her house is within three miles of Croydon, so you could be back at an hour's notice. Let me take you to your hotel, and thence I shall get you to drive me down in your dog cart."

Charley accepted the offer with the gratitude of a desperate man; it was just what suited him, and he sprang into the cab in the great sprite. Horace Langham, who thus had delivered him from the dreary room, had long been the object of his especial envy. He was a good-looking young man, well-dressed, and with all the externals of a gentleman. The few needful preparations were soon made, and as they settled themselves in the dog-cart, Langham said: "I have made you drive down, for my horse has been overworked lately. My aunt unluckily has a great prejudice against driving servants; but there is a nice country inn close by, so your Thomas will do very well."

The conversation for a time grew very alternated, for Horace knew something about everyone who was anybody; and was very well inclined to tell all he knew. Anecdotes, though, like other treasures, must come to an end; and Charley took advantage of a pause to ask if Mrs. Langham had any family.

"Only a niece," was the reply.

"Is she pretty? asked his companion.

"Not if you put it to my conscience, said the other; "but she is likely to be rich, will that do as well?"

Charles colored, from "a complication of disorders." First he was quite shy enough to be annoyed at its being supposed that he cared whether there was any young fairies in the world or not; and, secondly, he was quite romantic enough to be shocked at the idea of money supplying the want of a pretty face.

He was relieved by Langham exclaiming "Montague, we must go back to town immediately. I have forgotten my aunt's address! Oh, she will never forgive me! Old ladies are so cursed unreasonable. Why did she plague me about her horrid silly. How ever, if we make haste, we shall get to the time for dinner. I wonder why old women are left in the world?"

Without waiting for Charley's reply he put the horse in as nearest speed and drove furiously back to town. The drive was now anything but agreeable, a heavy mist rose rain beat directly in their faces, and Horace's conversation was confined to maledictions on all elderly ladies, and lamentations on his own ill luck in having anything to do with them. The particular shop was reached, the silk, to match pattern procured, and again our young men were on their way to Croydon. The rain continued, and Langham's spirits seemed to have fallen like the barometer. In sullen silence he continued to drive as a fortress rate, till Montague's sympathies were aroused on behalf of his hosts; he was just about to "blast a fault and heaven's pardon," when the clock of a church in the distance struck six.

"It is of no use now," exclaimed the impatient driver, slackening his speed. "We are too late for dinner, the washing of all others, that puts my aunt out. I must lay the blame upon you, she can't say anything to you as a stranger. We must go on."

Charley approached the window. "Just the measure of the destitute. There was nothing to be seen, except three or four whatnot cals, and two or three women in flung-looking shawls and bonnets; also a shovelled-look man with a dripping umbrella, which he held under over a brown paper parcel that his own space body; at last a bright spot appeared, the rain seem to melt into luminous streaks in the sky, and the rain drops began to gather into two or three large drops, and to descend slowly on the surface of the pieces of glass. The pavement began to dry, and Charley decided on a walk. He sought his club, and stood there for five minutes delightfully undecided as to whether he should turn to the left. Before he had done standing a shower came up rapidly and pelted upon the spot where he stood.

"My dear fellow," said its occupant, "I am in search of you. I want you to go down with me to my aunt's and stay there till Wednesday. Her house is within three miles of Croydon, so you could be back at an hour's notice. Let me take you to your hotel, and thence I shall get you to drive me down in your dog cart.

Charley accepted the offer with the gratitude of a desperate man; it was just what suited him, and he sprang into the cab in the great sprite. Horace Langham, who thus had delivered him from the dreary room, had long been the object of his especial envy. He was a good-looking young man, well-dressed, and with all the externals of a gentleman. The few needful preparations were soon made, and as they settled themselves in the dog-cart, Langham said: "I have made you drive down, for my horse has been overworked lately. My aunt unluckily has a great prejudice against driving servants; but there is a nice country inn close by, so your Thomas will do very well."

The conversation for a time grew very alternated, for Horace knew something about everyone who was anybody; and was very well inclined to tell all he knew. Anecdotes, though, like other treasures, must come to an end; and Charley took advantage of a pause to ask if Mrs. Langham had any family.

"Only a niece," was the reply.

"Is she pretty? asked his companion.

"Not if you put it to my conscience, said the other; "but she is likely to be rich, will that do as well?"

Charles colored, from "a complication of disorders." First he was quite shy enough to be annoyed at its being supposed that he cared whether there was any young fairies in the world or not; and, secondly, he was quite romantic enough to be shocked at the idea of money supplying the want of a pretty face.

He was relieved by Langham exclaiming "Montague, we must go back to town immediately. I have forgotten my aunt's address! Oh, she will never forgive me! Old ladies are so cursed unreasonable. Why did she plague me about her horrid silly. However

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper Published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—We have to defer until next week a very interesting account of the Holy House at Loreto.

—Governor Hill of New York has signed the bill making Saturday a half-holiday throughout the State. It goes into effect on the 21st inst.

—A telegram from Rome announces that the Holy Father has created five new Bishoprics and three new Vicariates-Apostolic in Australasia. His Holiness has further created Ecclesiastical Provinces for Brisbane, Adelaide, and New Zealand, with an Archiepiscopal See at Wellington.

—His Holiness Leo XIII., is about to send a gold medal and a letter of thanks to Miss Mary Caldwell, who has contributed three hundred thousand dollars towards the founding of the new American Catholic University.

—Rev. Edward A. Higgins, S. J., President of St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati, has just issued his "Fallacies of Henry George Exposed and Refuted," in pamphlet form for 10 cents. Persons who wish to procure copies should address St. Xavier's Conference, Box 107, Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Immigrants at the rate of over 2,000 a day have landed at Castle Garden during the past month. Should this continue during the next six months it will greatly exceed the number (390,918) that arrived last year. So far Ireland has furnished only a small per cent., Germany and Italy furnishing the majority with England, Russia and Spain sending a liberal number.

—The large colony of Irish residents in Paris propose to have a "black flag" banquet on the 24th inst., the day upon which Queen Victoria's jubilee will be celebrated by the English royalists. The black flags will be typical of the famines that scourged Ireland during the Queen's reign, and of the martyrs who have died on the scaffold for the national cause.

—Sister Mariana Flynn has been appointed Superiress of St. Mary's College, Kansas City, and Mother Superior of the Sisters of Charity of the United States, in place of the late Mother Euphemia. Sister Flynn's place as treasurer of the Order has been filled by the appointment of Sister Angeline Davis. The new Mother Superior is a native of St. Louis.

—Speaking at a monster meeting of workingmen recently in England, the Marquis of Ripon characterized the Land Bill as a measure to promote the non-payment of rent in Ireland, and for turning tenants into bankrupts as soon as possible; and the Coercion Bill as a measure of the wildest scope, professing to deal with crime, but striking really at opinion.

—King Leopold of Belgium has presented the Pope with two magnificent historical portraits on the occasion of his Holiness' Sacerdotal Jubilee. The portraits are those of Leopold I. and Queen Louise-Marie; and they were selected because it was remembered that the present Pontiff expressed his admiration of them when he was Nuncio at Brussels.

—They have some Catholics with gilt-edged generosity in Cincinnati! Among them is Mr. Joseph and Mrs. Agnes Kleine, who presented an altar worth $16,000 to the Church of St. Francis of Sales, Walnut Hill, in that city. In point of art it far exceeds the altar of the great Cathedral in New York. The altar was consecrated on the same day in presence of thousands of thankful worshipers.

—The nineteenth "American Newspaper Directory," published by George P. Rowell & Co., has been printed. It shows that there are 14,716 newspapers printed in the United States, an increase of 546 over last year. There are 95 more daily publications than in the preceding year, 100 more weeklies, and 52 more monthlies. Pennsylvania shows the greatest increase in dailies, and Kansas leads the growth in weeklies. New York stands first as to the monthlies.

—If we are to believe the daily press dispatches, it must keep the Pope and all the Roman Prelates in almost perpetual motion manufacturing cablegrams in order to coax Dr. McGlynn out of his contumacy. The latest "bull" (of the daily press) states that Dr. McGlynn has been "excused" that if he does not reach Rome inside of forty days he will be formally excommunicated! The daily press is a great institution, but it is not always safe to rely on its Catholic intelligence.

—Readers of the MONITOR will learn with unusual delight that there are no less than 20 amendments to the Coercion Bill. Of these 8 stand in the name of Parnellites, 60 of Gladstonian Liberals, 36 of Conservatives, and 8 of Liberal Unionists. No member of the Irish Cabinet has yet put down an amendment, nor has notice been given by responsible leaders, and it is estimated that in the course of the next fortnight at least two hundred additional amendments will have been offered.

—Timothy D. Sullivan, Lord Mayor of Dublin, has written to the London Times in behalf of the Nation and Weekly News in reply to the correspondent who accused the Irish Nationalist papers of refusing to insert the government advertisement offering a reward for evidence that would lead to the arrest of the Phœnix Park murderers. Mr. Sullivan says that though the papers declined to take Castle money, they announced the reward in their news columns in leaded type and charged nothing for it.

—Nearly 10,000 hail already been collected under Archbishop Elder's plan to buy the claims of Archbishop Purcell's creditors at twenty-five cents on the dollar. If the Supreme Court decides that the church property must be sold for the debt, this money will be used instead of buying the churches. The creditors will then get their money from the Sheriff's sale.

—Captain John Grant, a native of Pennsylvania, died in New Orleans recently, aged ninety-two years. He was a railroad contractor, and built the Pontchartrain Railroad, the first built in the United States, and ran the first locomotive ever it. He also dredged out Grant's Pass, making an inside route for the mail boats plying between New Orleans and Mobile thirty years ago.

—During his recent visit to Erin, Bishop Ireland preached a number of temperance sermons which were listened to by tens of thousands of Catholics, and the Irish papers state that never since Father Mathew's time have such a mass of pledges been signed anywhere. His reception has been enthusiastic, and the papers uniformly couple his name alone, in point of both spirit and results, with that of the great temperance evangelist.

—There is a celebrated institution in Europe into which no female is allowed to enter without first gaining the permission of the Pope. The institution in question is the celebrated Grand Chartreuse Monastery—a description of which appeared in the MONITOR a few weeks ago. Thus far only two females have ever gained admission—Empress Eugenie and Queen Victoria, on her recent European tour. But a special dispensation had to be procured from the Pope before either of these females could enter the Eviless sanctuary.

—On April 19th, a concerto for the selection of a Professor for the vacant chair of English Literature was held in Maynooth College in presence of the Professors and students of the institution. A large number of the Irish Bishops were present. The competitors for the vacant Professorship were—The Rev. John J. Cluney, Sligo College; Rev. James Devine, Derry; and Rev. Denis O'Connor, of Kerry. The programme included, besides a general knowledge course, English Literature, including History and Philology. Father Cluney was easily first.

—The people of London are whirled from one part of the British metropolis to another by underground railway, the train, on which the fare varies from two to four cents. The greater proportion of tickets are sold for two cents. The trains run at intervals of from a minute to a minute and a half. Nobody has ever been killed on this underground road, although more than 50,000,000 passengers are carried over it in a year. This is rapid transit worth talking about and enjoying.

—Church-building seems to be "booming" in Bishop Gilmour's Diocese, we learn that Rt. Rev. Bishop Gilmour dedicated St. Anthony's (Italian) Church on the 8th inst. On last Sunday he had the cornerstone of St. Stanislaus (Polish) Church, and St. Mary's (Bohemian) Church on the 15th inst. Bishop Gilmour officiated at all these ceremonies. Rev. Father Dunne, pastor of St. Stanislaus (Polish) Church, and Rev. Father Kelly, pastor of St. Mary's (Bohemian) Church, also officiated at the ceremonies.

Pagan Customs at Catholic Funerals.

His Grace Archbishop Lynch of Toronto, has addressed the following pastoral letter to the heathenish display of unseemly pomp, extravagance and sinful waste which prevails almost every portion of this continent in connection with Catholic funerals:

He also enlightens his flock relative to the pagan customs which crept in the days of faith when all the world was Catholic and among those he enumerates the pagan practices which followed death.

In England when Christianity was in its vigor, albeit the Kingdom itself was still a part of the Catholic Church of Christendom, the friends of the dead gave out doles to the poor on the day of the death or of the burial, or on the third, seventh or thirtieth, for the reason that the poor might plead before God for the deceased. They founded monasteries and colleges with the provision that a certain number of Masses should pray year by year for the soul of their dead. Such acts of charity and piety were the flowers of Christianity in England through about the commencement of those trusts to the personal advantage of kings and courtiers. The unjust retainers of these stolen properties will one day have to answer before God for their injustice.

The Pagan idea of reverence to the body only is again cropping up and influencing the customs of the present day. The charitable works of former times are giving way to grand display, to funerals, magnificent coffins and heaps of flowers sometimes stamped with the Pagan and unseemly designs. All this, apart from the Pagan humanity worship it implies, is useless expense. It brings scarcely, not to the soul departed, but to the pride of the living friends. None but Christians seem only would think of imitating such examples. Flowers fade, but the alms of charity live forever in the treasury of Heaven.

If the dead could speak they would say, "All this display is of no use to me. If the money you thus squander in honoring my dead body were given in the incense of the poor or in sacrifices for my soul, then would it avail me. Alas! I am joyless. Not the odor of your Pagan honors oppresses me, but rather the cry of 'The weight of the magnificent monument (perhaps not paid for) crushes me.'"

Rome Grace is particularly severe upon the profusion of flowers which are often arranged in designs that are diametrically opposed to the doctrine of Christianity. "The Church," says Archbishop Lynch, "permits a crown of flowers as a sign of heavenly joy upon the heads only of children who have died before they attained the age of reason. But "a simple pall is all she allows on the coffin at the funeral of those who have reached the age of reason." He then enjoins upon the clergy of his diocese to see that these rules of the Church are, in future, strictly observed at the Gospel.

Commenting upon this extravagant craze which seems to afflict Catholics at a time when decent economy is far more desirable and edifying, the Catholic Standard of Philadelphia truly says that the amount of money thus wasted in useless display and sinful foolishness is simply enormous. "It is spent," says our esteemed contemporary, "in a manner which is not Christian, nor is it, and really leaths ish custom, or for the gratification of a weak and silly vanity. It is a fashion which we should think would be in any way the surviving relatives and friends. On the contrary, as regards the family of the deceased it very often expines them to the censure of the thoughtful part of the community who know their circumstances well enough to be convinced that the expense incurred is beyond their ability to pay.

We have known personally of several instances and have been credibly informed of many others, in which the floral decorations, the costly monument of carriages and other extravagances attending the funeral of a deceased husband and father have entirely cut away the little insurance he had laid up, and left the widowed mother in debt. We have heard of other such instances, which unanimously after such an extravagant funeral a collection had to be immediately made by the friends and acquaintances of the widow and fatherless children of the deceased, to provide them with food.

Were a truth part or even a twentieth part of the cost of such vain and useless display expended in having Masses said for the soul of the deceased, it would immensely relieve and benefit him in Purgatory, if he died in communion with the Church, and would be in accordance with Catholic teaching, and with what ought to be the custom of Catholics everywhere.

Grievous Ireland.

We have already given in these columns the evidence of many of the Irish Judges relative to the atrocious state of several of the counties of Ireland, and now we have the gratification of stating that at the opening of the Waterford City Quarter Sessions on April 20th, Judge Waters, County Court Judge, after stating that there was only one case of a criminal nature to go before the Grand Jury, one of assault arising out of drunkenness such as might be expected in a city like that, said he was sure they would be glad to know that in the great and populous county of Cavan, where he presided at the recent Quarter Sessions, there was not one criminal case to be tried, and that for the larceny of a couple of yards of flannel. In the large adjoining county of Leitrim, where he also presided, there were but two criminal cases, one of which arose out of a family dispute. That was the entire criminal calendar that he had to deal with in three large counties.

Such sterling facts challenge the world to produce a record for peace and social security equal to Ireland. Yet, if we are to believe Kenn's speeches in England and Ireland, Ireland is the wickedest country in the world. Such is the power of prejudice and falsehood combined.

—No doubt many readers of the MONITOR were amused when reading in the daily press that no less a personage than "a noble Lord" intended "to be acting as the missing link" which was to unite the Greek and Latin churches at the dual suggestion of the Pope and the Czar! Notwithstanding the grave announcement, we are of opinion that the Catholic Church will read a Requiem over the noble Lordship's corpse ere he brings about such a union. The truth is, "the noble Lombard Monk" is a myth which was manufactured at Roman news in London has dressed up to give a realistic appearance to a romance in one chapter.

Value of Catholic Societies.

Bishop Cleary, of Kingston, Ontario, Canada, recently addressed a body of Catholic young men upon the valuable assistance which well-organized Catholic societies can give to the pastors of the Church by keeping the members in a loud of unity where Faith is concerned, and good works are diversified. Such organizations help to guard Catholic young men against the vicious influences of temptations and dangerous associations, and the evil effects of bad reading, bad company, bad places of resort, against bad thoughts, in which are the beginnings of bad desire and all bad conduct.

"The soul, remarked his Lordship, "within the man." The incomparable gift of our mental faculties has been granted to each one. It was given to be properly used through laborious study and judicious direction, which was properly called education. This training could be perfected in the society by good reading, friendly over-hearing of thoughts, and discussion on popular subjects, and various other methods and objects associations of young men. "Thus, he said, "you may contribute one another and after pleasure to friends who come to witness your literary exercises. Music and song combined with recreation and debate constitute a sufficiently full programme of an evening amusement. I should like to see these societies frequently requested, and your means of pleasurable enjoyment multiplied. Believe me, the youth who finds delight in reading dance, music, the study of poetry, history, biography, poetry, popular science, or whatever other such useful and entertaining branches of knowledge it may be to select fitly to turn aside from the ways of vice to seek indulgence in gross and criminal pleasures."

Catholics at Protestant Services.

A correspondent asks "Why may not salaried Catholic vocalists sing in Protestant churches? The answer in this case, as in all other cases where the law of the Church rests the right solely, and Catholic individuals are not the enemy side of the question, is very plain. Catholics must take part in the Catholic religious services of any kind or in any participating manner because it is strictly forbidden by the Church. It is a well and widely known doctrine of the faith that Christ established only one true Church. It follows from that all other organizations of a religious character, whether Methodists, Mahometans or Mormons, are merely man-made sects of Christian Worshippers, with almost as much and a second for Catholics to participate when they are going through their mummery of divine worship.

The Catholic who participates in Protestant religious services, whether at a Methodist camp-meeting, or even a Baptist sprinkling, thereby virtually denies Christ before men and is guilty of mortal apostacy. Man can serve but one master. Catholic Truth and Protestant Error, we no man can have two religions. Error and Truth are equally pure reasons, the Church forbids her children from participating in any way in Protestant services, and has to bring sound quietly in a pew, much less when they are up in the Protestant organ loft rolling off Protestant hymns, or assisting the choir of the "Sweet Bye and Bye" every "Sabbath" for a salary. The best use Catholics can make of their musical talents is to put them back to the God who lent them to their possessors—and He will see that they are nothing the poorer thereby.

A Jubilee of Injustice.

One of the reasons which impel the people of Ireland to take no part in promoting the second Jubilee of the British Empire may be found in the fact that more evictions took place in this the Jubilee year of Ireland than in any period since the year of rope-tragedy commenced. Even a return recently laid before the House of Commons we copy these shocking instances of inhumanity

During the three months in Ireland 7,294 persons were thrown out upon the roadside in Ireland, being the largest number for any similar period for some years. Kerry appeared to be a county where crime flourishes, but in Kerry alone 1,776 persons were evicted between the 1st of January and 1,776 persons, that is a third of the total for the remaining 31 counties of Ireland. These figures tell their own tale. Taken by provinces the total for Ireland is divided as follows: Munster, 5,062 persons; Ulster, 519; Leinster, 590; Connaught, 953. Next to Kerry, Cork comes highest in the list, contributing 413 persons; Mayo had 409; Limerick, 194; Galway, 173; Tipperary, 193; Leitrim, 185; Monaghan, 151; Roscommon, 109; Longford, 194; Queens County, 109.

Comment is entirely unnecessary, as the figures presented tell their own tale of British injustice in Ireland.

—There are some Catholic parents who never ponder on the duty they owe to their children in planting the seed of true faith in their souls. Such careless parents seem to forget that they are in duty bound to see that their offspring must be surrounded with the atmosphere in which Faith blooms. Their eyes must rest on the Infant Jesus in the arms of His Blessed Mother. They must be taught as soon as their lips can form words that they are children of the Queen of Heaven, and that this Infant Jesus is their Model for life and death. Let them see in "no time" for this at home. If as a contemporary well remarks—there is a Crucifix, or a statue of the Blessed Virgin in the house, it may be put away into some remote corner, and is as little noticed as the big show bible on the parlor table. Where, then, can they learn the sweet lesson of their loss gift which makes them the equal of kings, and higher than the angels. Nowhere, except in parochial schools. Nowhere except in schools where Catholic doctrine and practice, Catholic truth and tradition are part of the daily routine—the oxygen of the daily atmosphere. There is no escaping this. Who can look forward to a happy death over the chance of dying in death by the neglect of the souls of his children! There are only two ways open: to save the children through Catholic schools, or to let them fall into darkness and outright with out Catholic schools.

The Puritan Sunday Condemned

Archbishop O'Brien of Halifax, N. S. makes a timely and sensible protest against the passage of a Sunday law. He says of this measure, which has one strong fend, and imagines that a poor mortal should spend the whole Sunday in prayer or in some pious exercise. After the dedication of Sunday the day are over we have a part left for our bodily goods. That part may be profitably spent in any decorous exercise or amusement, or healthful going abroad. Surely every reasonable man will say that it is far better, "within the man," that the Sunday and all should enjoy tried sleight-o-hand and parlor, riding or boating, or running, or ball playing, than to lounge round street corners, or consequently, idly gossiping, or sitting at full ease and indifferent of the fumes of the father's last night's pipe, or the wife's scolding chat. If, as we are bound to believe, that promotion of morality is the object of the authors of the bill, or Gods name let them look at facts as we see them every and as we might wish them to be, at the house of thousands, and let them seek rather to drive men, by reasonable means, into the light of heaven and the pure air of our parks and gardens. By all means strive to make our Sundays frequently respected, and let leave them the God given liberty of rational recreation. Regarding the running of street cars, he says:

"If I may pun my reverend friends, I would say that the Sunday car is the sunday, surely the labourer may pay, his fare cents to the company for the same purpose. Let those who cannot afford it walk, and carry an ego-ism the very legitimate pleasure of riding, by having liberty to the street car. Let those who can afford it pay, to carry them cheaply on Sundays.

The Abbe Louis Mommer, writing from Nazareth to the editor of the La Croix, gives an account of an interesting discovery that has lately been made at Nazareth of what is supposed, with good reason, to be the site of the house where the Holy Family lived after their return from Egypt to Jerusalem and other early Christian events mention too obscure as existing in those times at Nazareth, one on the site of the Annunciation, and another half-way on the road to the house where our Lord was brought up and subject to Joseph and Mary. The discovery was made in 1876, after a minute account of this latter church. He says it was built between two small chambers in the form of the Latin cross, and that it rested on two tombs that were separated by arcades, and that between the tombs a clear stream flowed from a rock the people used to draw water through a well in the church above. The Barnes de Nazareth, in building their convent, have had lately to remove a considerable quantity of the rubbish lying in which their presence and lend the ancient church, which is now in ruins, enlighten and encourage us with souls. Let us, then, be thankful for the discovery, therefore, promises to reach the great end of such excess of barren attention.

An Important Union.

We are indebted to Rev. Joseph H. Mechan, President of the Catholic Young Men's National Union, for a copy of his address to all the societies of Catholic young men throughout the United States, and delegates of the Baltimore Annual Convention, which will be held in New York on the 25th and 26th of the present month.

Father Mechan then points out the benefits to be derived by a Catholic Union organization as the one ever which he proposes.

I need not point out here the advantages and benefits that result from such a Catholic Union. For it is evident that such a union of all the Catholic societies of the young men of this country means strength, power and energy; and unfortunately too placed and scattered without a general union of our Catholic young men of that strength and power, ruled by one guiding hand and directed to the same aim and purpose. It means a band of men, of union, of fraternal charity among all the Catholic young men of America, so that if any of them should by the pressure of circumstance be obliged to leave the place of residence to seek for another clime, he may find in the strange place friends and brothers, and some home as if at home, and to tender him advice and encouragement in his new circumstances. I hope, therefore, that this organization will not be laid aside by non-usage or inaction, but that it will, with one accord, send for aid of admission to the National Secretary, and be more numerous than ever. I hope it will be an honor to themselves and the Church to belong to the Catholic Union.

I am happy to state also that accounts have reached here from all parts highly pleasing as to the good feeling, good will and prosperity of the different Societies in the Union. The Catholic Young Men's Institute of Boston, which is a model society, and a model institute, and which has been the parent of the Union. Amongst the numerous societies of the Union, the young men of Notre Dame College, Mission Dolores, and the Young Men's Institute, are conducted in a manner worthy of the Catholic name. Rev. Father Hamilton, of the Church of the Holy Cross, Boston, is President of the Union. Rev. Father Vincent Gleary of the Diocese of Kansas.

BOOKS FOR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

Besides the introductory series of readers, I have already mentioned in the list of Text Books to be used in Catholic schools the following, which, as the publishers will subsequently inform you, are furnished to the Schools at the following rates:

Young Catholic Readers. Primer, 20c; First, 25c; Second, 40c; Third, 60c; Fourth, 75c; Fifth, $1.00; Sixth, $1.50; Young Ladies' Pet, Discount 33 per cent.

Young Catholic Speaker. 25c; Grammar School, 25c; Discount 33 per cent.

Young Catholic Speller. Primer, 20c; Intermediate, 25c; Discount 33 per cent.

Catechism of Perseverance. Cloth, Discount 33 per cent.

Catechism (small Baltimore, for Catechists, Large) Dr Hedin's 40c; Kenrick of Religion, Cloth, $1.20. Discount, 33 per cent.

Geography, Sadlier's Edition, (Introduction) 20c; No. 2, 40c; No. 3, 60c; 3b.

L. Kohler, Barclay street, New York. Wm. Wood & Co., New York. W. H. Sadlier, 12 Barclay street, New York. Benziger Bros., Barclay street, New York. Hardy, Buffalo. —Wholesale Publishers.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

FARMERS OF BOURGEROIS: Lux, (Simple) with reference to the Syllabus, the "Cloud, Sky" Pontiff of Pope Pius IX., the Council of the Vatican, and the latest decisions of Roman Congregation. Adapted especially to the discipline of the Church in the United States. Rev. J. B. Smith, D. D., formerly Professor of Canon Law in Mount St. Mary's Seminary. With the Imprimatur of Rt. Rev. Archbishop of New York. Vol. 1. Established in Church and Rome. Approved by the Pontiff and Archbishop of the Roman Consistory, and Vatican. Pp. 1,000, 8vo, 30 engravings. Benziger Bros. Publishers, New York, Cincinnati and St. Louis. 1887

Intended to point out how the advantages and benefits that result from such a Catholic Union, for it is evident that such a union of all the societies of Catholic young men of this country means strength, power and energy; not unfortunately too placed and scattered without a general union of our Catholic young men of that strength and power, ruled by one guiding hand and directed to the same aim and purpose. It means a band of men, of union, of fraternal charity among all the Catholic young men of America, so that if any of them should by the pressure of circumstance be obliged to leave the place of residence to seek for another clime, he may find in the strange place friends and brothers, and some home as if at home, and to tender him advice and encouragement in his new circumstances. I hope, therefore, that this organization will not be laid aside by non-usage or inaction, but that it will, with one accord, send for aid of admission to the National Secretary, and be more numerous than ever. I hope it will be an honor to themselves and the Church to belong to the Catholic Union.

I am happy to state also that accounts have reached here from all parts highly pleasing as to the good feeling, good will and prosperity of the different Societies in the Union. The Catholic Young Men's Institute of Boston, which is a model society, and a model institute, and which has been the parent of the Union. Amongst the numerous societies of the Union, the young men of Notre Dame College, Mission Dolores, and the Young Men's Institute, are conducted in a manner worthy of the Catholic name. Rev. Father Hamilton, of the Church of the Holy Cross, Boston, is President of the Union. Rev. Father Vincent Gleary of the Diocese of Kansas.

BOOKS FOR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

Besides the introductory series of readers, I have already mentioned in the list of Text Books to be used in Catholic schools the following, which, as the publishers will subsequently inform you, are furnished to the Schools at the following rates

Young Catholic Readers. Primer, 20c; First, 25c; Second, 40c; Third, 60c; Fourth, 75c; Fifth, $1.00; Sixth, $1.50; Young Ladies' Pet, Discount 33 per cent.

Young Catholic Speaker. 25c; Grammar School, 25c; Discount 33 per cent.

Young Catholic Speller. Primer, 20c; Intermediate, 25c; Discount 33 per cent.

Catechism of Perseverance. Cloth, Discount 33 per cent.

Catechism (small Baltimore, for Catechists, Large) Dr Hedin's 40c; Kenrick of Religion, Cloth, $1.20. Discount, 33 per cent.

Geography, Sadlier's Edition, (Introduction) 20c; No. 2, 40c; No. 3, 60c; 3b.

L. Kohler, Barclay street, New York. Wm. Wood & Co., New York. W. H. Sadlier, 12 Barclay street, New York. Benziger Bros., Barclay street, New York. Hardy, Buffalo. —Wholesale Publishers.

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18 1887.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

May 22 Sunday—Sunday in the Octave of the Ascension St John Nepomucen, Martyr Ferial Holy Ghost Office Office of the Ascension, Sunday in Ferial Holy Ghost Office

" 23—Monday—St. Desiderius, Bishop

" 24—Tuesday—Our Lady Help of Christians

" 25—Wednesday—St. Gregory VII., Pope and Conf. St Urban, Pope and Martyr

" 26—Thursday—St. Philip Neri, Conf. St. Eleutherius, Pope and Martyr

" 27—Friday—St. Mary Magdalen de Pazzi Virgin. St Julia, Pope and Martyr

" 28—Saturday—Vigil of Pentecost. Feria

THE ARCHBISHOP AT MERCED.

His Grace the Archbishop accompanied by Rev. W. B. O'Connor, rector of Dunsmuir, made a visit to St. Patrick's Church, Merced, on Sunday last. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. The Archbishop was assisted by Rev. Father Kelly, of Stockton, who delivered a most eloquent and powerful sermon, afterwards administering Confirmation to some 31 children and adults. In the evening his Grace gave an interesting discourse on "The Great Necessity of Christian Education for the Young."

NEW CATHEDRAL AT SACRAMENTO.

Work upon the new Cathedral at Sacramento has progressed sufficiently for the laying of the foundation for the corner stone on Sunday, June 12th, at 4 P. M., with the usual impressive ceremonies.

THE LEAGUE OF THE CROSS.

A new branch of the League of the Cross was organized last Sunday evening at St. Joseph's church, Oakland, when Father Wolfrum delivered an impressive and fervent address on the advantages of temperance, and the prospects of the new organization to contribute to the amelioration of the condition of the poor. Over 300 persons joined the new branch, which will be known as St. Joseph's Branch, League of the Cross. Among the renewed clergy who were present were Fathers Wolfrum, Prendergast, Shinnick, Gallagher, Scott, Kelly, Ward, Ryan, Sullivan, Shea, Ward, Ryan, Joseph Cathedral, Sullivan, Shea, Ward, Ryan, Joseph Cathedral, Sullivan, Shea, Ward, Ryan, Joseph Cathedral

Farm and Home, Family Fun.

Reliable Recipes.

A GOOD PUDDING.—Two eggs and their weight in butter, sugar and flour. Have the butter soft and mix it with the sugar. Beat the whites and yolks of the eggs separately, and mix the butter and sugar; add the grated peel of half a lemon, and then stir in the sifted flour. Pour into a buttered pan, filling it a little more than half full, and bake in a moderate oven.

FRENCH MEAT.—Clean the fish; then take a bunch of herbs and chop them fine, and put them with one ounce of butter, three tablespoonfuls of soup stock, into a saucepan. Lay in the mackerel and simmer gently for ten minutes. Lift them out upon a hot dish; dredge a little flour and add salt, capsicum, a little lemon juice, and finally two tablespoonfuls of cream, let these just boil, and pour over the fish.

PLAIN CAKE.—Beat six eggs very thoroughly, the yolks to a cream and the whites to a stiff froth; add to this one tablespoonful of flour or corn starch mixed smooth in one cup of sweet milk, salt and pepper and a piece of butter as large as an English walnut; now pour this on to the white fresh and without stirring it at all pour the whole into a hot buttered omelet pan or ordinary deep frying pan. Cook on top of stove over a brisk fire for about five minutes and it will "rise" beautifully; gently remove it to the hot oven and let it brown, and serve hot. This is always perfect, if the cook can refrain from her desire to "stir" everything.

OCCULENT PUDDING.—One pint of milk, one grated cocoanut, four well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter melted and sugar to taste. Bake a light brown.

RICE PUDDING.—A heaapful of cold boiled rice, one heaped tablespoonful of corn starch, one egg and one quart of sweet milk, one half teaspoful of sugar and the juice of one lemon. Salt a trifle. The corn starch must be mixed thoroughly in cold milk and stirred into the hot milk evenly before adding rice or eggs.

LEMON PUDDING.—Bake three jelly cake tins full of sponge cake. Cut them in halves for convenience in serving. Make a custard to put between each layer thus: One pint of milk, three eggs, a half a tablespoonful of corn starch, the juice and rinds of two lemons, sweeten to taste. Use butter and half a cup of sugar. Serve cold.

CORN BEARING CORN AND.—Six tablespoonfuls of corn meal boiled in 1 quart of milk, sugar to taste, peel of two lemons grated and the juice of one. When thoroughly cooled add the yolks of three eggs and pour over the corn meal, set in the oven until slightly brown. Serve hot or cold with a custard made of the yolks of the eggs.

SAUCE FOR BOILED FISH.—Make ready while the fish is cooking a tablespoonful of butter beaten to a cream, with a tablespoonful browned flour, a pinch of salt and pepper; add the strained juice of one lemon and a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce or of any good vinegar from the pickle jar. Add a dash of red pepper, if you use the last. More delicate is the fine red fish sauce. A tablespoonful of either is beaten into two ounces of butter, two saltspoonfuls of salt and one of powdered mace are added; a cup of water and a cup of cream, all made hot in a saucepan.

Be Careful with Matches.

A peculiar fire-insurance case in a suburb of Boston lately, and but for its timely discovery and extinguishment would have been added to the list of fires from "incendiarism." "Defective flue," "tests," or any of the causes attributed where nothing is known of the cause. The lady of the house was going out to call, but heard a noise in the upper part of the house just as she was about to shut the outside door behind her. After some hesitation she re-entered the house, went up stairs, and found the chamber carpet burning quite briskly. Upon its extinguishment it appeared that the brass from an open window had blown the matchbox from the bureau to the floor, broken it, and lighted the matches. We have heard of one similar case. It is the old moral: "Be careful with matches."

A Paper Chimney.

A large factory of Breslau, Germany, required a chimney 54 feet in height. Instead of constructing the chimney with bricks, as usual, a large number of solid blocks of paper firmly compressed were made use of. These blocks were placed carefully one on the top of the other and joined together with a special cement. The chimney is non-inflammable, is very elastic, and is by the nature of the material quite secure from lightning, which often plays havoc with the more ordinary sort of factory chimney.

A Japanese Bed.

A bed in Nikko, Japan, is eight or so thick silk wadded comforters piled upon the floor; upon this a very ample wadded coat is placed. You slip into the great coat, put your arms into the long sleeves, fold it over you, and sleep. The pillow is a block of wood placed under the neck; but it looks too hard, and I carry a rubber pillow to take its place. A paper lantern is lighted all night, for the people, I am told, are much afraid of the dark.

DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY,
(The Only Reliable Blood Purifier.)
A SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM,
Scrofula, Salt Rheum,
Neuralgia, Ring Worm
And all other Skin and Blood Diseases.
AND
LIVER AND KIDNEYS.
Cures Indigestion and all diseases arising from an unhealthy condition of the system.
☞ Get your Druggist to procure PARDEE'S REMEDY and take no other. Price $1 per bottle or six bottles for $5, delivered to any address.
PARDEE MEDICINE CO.,
Rochester, N. Y.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
GERTS—For the past winter I have been very badly afflicted with rheumatism. About six weeks ago was confined to my bed, and whenever I was able to get around was obliged to use crutches. All the time I had the best medical attendance.
After one week's use of Dr. Pardee's Remedy, I was able to walk with a cane. I continued its use and can now move around without assistance of any kind, and am better in health than I have been for years. It has effected a permanent cure and I take pleasure in recommending it.
C. R. FINNEGAN,
Supt. Fire Alarm Telegraph, City Building, Front Street.
Send for pamphlet to Pardee Medicine Co.

Family Fun.

Mr. Howser's Mistake.

I suppose Mr. Howser is like the majority of men in putting his best side of life before the public. The other morning when he left the house he knew the baby was sick, and that I had a headache and that the cook was doubled by cutting her hand on a piece of glass. I had told him that we ended up of butter and eggs and potatoes, and he said he would order them. These on the car he forgot all about it, and at 11:30, meeting an old schoolmate, he invited

"Now you come right up to dinner with me. I want you to see my house and my family and have a little talk."

"But your wife won't be expecting company."

"Oh, you come right along. My wife and my house are always ready for any visitors I may bring home, and your presence will cause us no lots of embarrassment."

At 11 o'clock I told Jane to pick up any sort of a dinner for Mr. Howser, and at 12 Mr. Howser and his friend entered the house. Leaving him in the parlor, Mr. Howser rushed in on me with: "Get into your Sunday clothes as soon as possible—dress the baby—tell cook to have three different kinds of meat—send for a nigger to wait on the table, and run through the rooms and pick up things."

"Mr. Howser, have you been idiot enough to bring some one home to dinner!"

"Of course I have. What in there wrong about that I'd like to know!"

"Well, where are the groceries you were to order?"

"Groceries! I—I forgot."

"Jane can't use hot cake and, while I should faint away if I tried to dress. You'll have to take him to a hotel."

"Never! Wasn't I twice a man to partake of my hospitality? I'll meet a walk like off to a hotel! It is a pretty state of affairs that my house is all upset in this manner at this time! Mrs. Howser you and I must have a reckoning! I'll be hanged if I put up with such conduct as this!"

And then he returned to the parlor and I heard him say:

"Will, old fellow, I find a note from my Birdie (that's me), stating that she has taken the little angel (that's our wal sped baby) over to her sister's for the day, and our idea of a cook dish's expect me home and has no dinner ready. Well have to go down to the restaurant."

"That's all right. You've got a beautiful home here."

"And the nicest wife, and the prettiest baby in all the world," exclaimed Mr. Howser, as he slapped his leg.

The Knew a Magnet.

Some years ago a Miss H—— was teaching school in Dixon, Ill. One day in the noon recess she thy exam scram this word "magnet." The teacher asked how many in the class knew what a magnet was, and requested those who know to hold up their right hands.

All the class was motionless for a moment, and then one little girl rose and put up her hand.

"Well, my dear," said the teacher, "what is a magnet?"

"I don't know," said the little girl, "as I know what it is, but I have seen an a home in mother's cheese."

A Stranger in a Strange Land.

"Ah!" said the stranger, "this is a strange country. There are all sorts of people here, and it shows how well we marked are the eccentricities of fake."

"Yes," said the Californian, "we have and fall here. I know an English baron who drove to town in a hack. He don't tell me!" "Yes, and I know a German who keeps a beer-hack stand." "It's incredible! Hot lock up there. The Chinaman is the most curious thing I ever saw." "Yes, and I know a Germ. Yes, I know a Germ. Yes, I know a Germ." "Why, I know a Germ." "Yes, I know a Germ." "Why, I know a Germ." "Yes, I know a Germ." "Why, I know a Germ." "

WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

(CONCLUDING FROM FIRST PAGE.)

dral! You can save the country of Lagenians and you alone can save them from the fate that overtook, perhaps, the latter if many a man listening to me long ago in the great rising when landlords fled in their own way to Ireland. If we come to Canada to ask you to befriend us and to save our people, it is because this is not the first time Canada has stood between the Irish people and their oppressors.

"Our great leader, Parnell, has said he once again will take the sword for the Irish landholders. We are now begging, not for alms, but to enable us to support that whole system of Irish landlordism. We do not come to ask for £50,000 for charity any more, but to ask you to consider what our Lord Lansdowne is making of the making of the £20,000 a year which you give, or which you enable him to get, and if that be just to bad and inhuman use. We ask you to convey your censure on Lansdowne, as you have perfect right to do as the free citizens of a self-governing nation. The day you send Lord Lansdowne home with the stamp of Canadian disaffection on his brow you will enable us to laugh at coercion and strengthen the arms of Gladstone to put an end to coercion for all time."

Mr. O'Brien then quoted from lengthy reports in the Dublin Freeman's Journal of evictions on Lord Lansdowne's estates. He then described the incidents attending some of the evictions, in which the aged and infirm were thrown out of their cabins, helpless, in the snow and rain. He proceeded:

"The Loggarnvar lunatic was honest, peaceful and inoffensive so far as crime is concerned. The locality is simply stainless. During those barbarous evictions not a blow was struck, not a stone was flung, and what have those people ever done that they should deserve to be robbed of home and land? They have simply sought an abatement in their rents. Abatements less than Earl Cowper's Royal Commission, a landlord commission appointed by a Tory Government, had declared to be equitable; less than the land commission courts are granting on the neighboring estates, and finally, reductions to which Lord Lansdowne's own arbitrator, Mr. Dunning, gave his assent and approval in black and white.

The next news we get from Ottawa was that Lord Lansdowne threatened us with a hot, if not bloody, reception, if we ventured to Canada to proclaim the wrongs of Irish tenantry. I appeal to the people of Canada against Lansdowne's savage sentence against the whole peaceable population. Substantially the Canadian flag floated overthe existing army and it was Canadian money that hired the 'emergency men,' to do their dreadful work. I call upon you to free the Canadian name from this taint to let Lord Lansdowne and the world know that when Canada stretches out an arm to Ireland it was not to wound or subjugate her, but to save her."

O'Brien closed with a glowing picture of Ireland's gratitude to Canada when Home Rule should be achieved, and he was cheered again and again. Before leaving the hotel for the meeting O'Brien sent the following telegram to Mayor Howland of Toronto:

"I perceive you have convened a meeting of citizens of Toronto to demand an official prohibition of my meeting. If you will, in the play, process me in a hearing, I shall attem it a privilege to attend your meeting to explain the motives and object of my visit."

Meeting opened at 8 o'clock and passed the following resolution, which, after he had concluded his address, was passed amid an outburst of cheering:

Resolved—That this meeting of citizens of Montreal is of the opinion that Lord Lansdowne's contemptuous disregard of the Imperiaal issues is just, cruel and impressive, and deserves the condemnation of the Canadian people.

At the conclusion of the meeting, O'Brien, responding to a vote of thanks, said: "We were threatened if we dared to come here that a mob was forming for no long age in Dorne mont now believe to the contrary, and if he does not, I can only pity him, for he has neither eyes nor ears. The resolution condemnatory of Lansdowne was called to the Lieutgovernor immediately, after which the entire audience stood up and joined in singing "God Save Ireland," with hissing and groans for Lansdowne.

OUR CATHOLIC SOCIETIES.

Past and Coming Events.—Society Elections.—Notes.

—T. M. I., No. 4, holds an enjoyable picnic last Thursday at Belmont.

—The T. M. C. M. A. holds its fourth annual picnic at Belmont Park, Thursday, the 26th inst.

—T. M. I., No. 3, gave a successful picnic at Belmont, last Wednesday.

—The Tyre Club picnics at Belmont on the 30th inst.

—No. 1, Y. M. I., picnics at Shell Mound Park on the 30th inst.

—The Young Men's Catholic Mutual Aid Association holds its annual election of officers this (Wednesday) evening.

—The Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Peter's Parish, will have a reception of new members in the church on the 29th inst.

—Y. M. I. No. 4, will hold its next open meeting at Irving Hall, Tyler Ist, and a pleasant evening is promised.

—Y. M. Institute No. 1 and 14 of Los Angeles are preparing for an entertainment in aid of the Building Fund.

—No. 5, Y. M. I., of Stockton, gave a fine literary and musical entertainment on last Washington's birthday.

—New Institutes of the Y. M. I. will shortly be organized at Livermore, Gilroy, Hollister, Salinas and Watsonville.

—The Y. M. I. Branch, lately organized at Virginia City, Nev., claims the honor of being the first Institute formed out of the State.

—Next Sunday the Sodality of the Children of Mary, Sitkum Fort, will have a reception of new members in the chapel of St. Mary's Hospital.

—St. Dominic's Benevolent Society will give a picnic on the 30th inst., at Shell Mound Park. Valuable prizes for various games will be distributed.

—The Young Men's Institute No. 31, of East Oakland, have lately built a commodious meeting hall, surmounted by an imposing flag staff. The branch is in a flourishing condition.

—The Young Men's Institute of South San Francisco gave a very enjoyable social on the evening of the 7th inst. which was largely attended by the numerous friends and members of the branch.

—St. Anthony's Sanitary Society, of East Oakland, was organized May 8, with a membership of 15. The officers are President, Dank Corkery; Treasurer, James Slattery; Secretary, Louis Dolan.

—The Board of Directors of this city have levied an assessment of 50 cents for May, which makes only four since the adoption of the $500 assessment by the Grand Council held in June, 1886.

—Shannon & Co., undertakers, tell all their acquaintances in the Sodality of Mary, Holy Family Institute, a story of mishaps in decline of their shop. Last Sunday night, the undertaking store of this firm located at 521 Washington street, is constantly threatened with customers who approached their establishment early in money gulped," when surprised in the commercial parlor of grounds, just as well as in all other avenues for financial prosperity.

CONSUMPTION.—The new treatment of consumption and asthma (the product of medical research) is proving by Surgeon of Lyons, France, and Hotel de Dieu Paris, $10 by prize. Dr. F. Wolfram, 28 Montgomery St., San Francisco.

—The young widows of P. Revel, who died in Sacramento, left a will which was read the night, and not signed there, as reported. Business was resumed next morning, and Revel stands ready to receive his old friends and customers.

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ANTRIM—The employes of the various Belfast shipbuilding establishments gave notice on April 14th, to the managers to the effect that unless a satisfactory arrangement is arrived at with respect to the demands to have the wages paid weekly instead of fortnightly, a general strike would take place on the 29th. Should the demands not be conceded, and the employes carry out their threat, six thousand men will be thrown out of employment. It is expected the employers will yield.

ARMAGH—Mr. Richard Wilson Guinness, County Court Judge of Armagh and Louth, dropped dead on April 19th, while addressing the Synod of the Church of Ireland.

Nothing could be more emphatic, than the terms in which his grace the Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland, and heartily express their unalloyed confidence in the Irish leader and the Parliamentary Party. The declaration from the Northern province, is as vigorous in denunciation of the wretched policy of the Government, as any that have emanated from the conferences elsewhere.

CARLOW. John Kelly, who lives near Rathoe, county Carlow, is under police protection. Two poor laborers were ejected lately because a cottage was sought for them on his master's land, under the Labourers Act, and one of them a weak old man, died shortly after being thrown out of his home. Kelly's act has earned for him utter detestation in the district. His former friends join him with averted looks; every other class has sent him to equal horror, and all manifestations of scorn in the neighborhood, assembled on April 10, to express their opinions of him in his own townland.

In the Cemetery attached to St. Leo's Convent of Mercy, Carlow, the grave closed over all that was mortal of Sister Mary Stanislaus on April 20th.

CLARE.—On April 19th, at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, Joseph Corcoran Smith, Esq., third son of the late S. Corcoran Smith, of Dublin, was united in marriage with Miss Laura Genevieve Cragen, eldest daughter of Thomas McMahon Cragen, Esq., J. P., Ardcorgan, county Clare, and St George street, Limerick.

Posters have been extensively posted throughout West Clare, bearing an appeal from the National League and the Central Trades Association of Kilkenny, addressed to the men and women of Ireland against the buying of English manufactured goods. The manifesto points out that Nationalist shopkeepers who are importing such goods should discontinue to do so.

CORK.—At a meeting of the Bishops and priests of the diocese of Cloyne, on April 14, a series of resolutions was passed, expressing sympathy with Cannon Arthur, P. P., and Her Father Ryan, C. C., who have been suspended; also protesting against the Coercion Act.

On April 16, a fire was discovered in the premises of Mr. John Fitzgerald, coach builder, Copley street, Cork. Eight horses were burned to death and a large quantity of valuable property destroyed. The premises were only partially insured.

The floor mills of Messrs Forbing and Sons, Fermoy, were burned down on April 22d, and all the valuable machinery and stock were destroyed. The fire originated in the screen-room, where the machinery for few years ago fitted up with modern machinery at a cost of £7000, and the entire damage is estimated at nearly £5,000, which is covered by insurance. A large number of men will be thrown out of employment.

DOWN.—At an eviction at Mayo Bridge county Down, the bailiffs, on attempting to break open the door of the house of a tenant named Connolly, were compelled to retreat by a hailstorm of stones upon them, accompanying their fusses and their bands. Several other attempts to force an entrance were repulsed, and eventually the bailiffs and parter retired without effecting the eviction.

DUBLIN.—The welcome factory, opened a few months ago at Ringsbridge by Sir Edward Guinness, is about to close. The factory, stated to give employment to the families of the men engaged at the brewery, has not been paid, but it is generally feared, that it will be opened under new management.

FERMANAGH—On April 19th, a large and enthusiastic meeting, attended by some thousands of people, among them being a great many Protestants, took place at Lisnaskea, held at Crudon, near Ennniskillen. The object of the meeting was to protest against the passing of a Coercion Bill for Ireland.

GALWAY—On April 19th, the ceremony of the reception of two young ladies into the order of the Convent of Mercy, Ballinasloe. The young ladies received were—Miss Rose O'Donoghue in religious Sister Vincent, daughter of Mrs. O'Donoghue, the Holes Crag, and Miss Kate Regan (in religion Sister Columba), daughter of W. Regan, Esq., Ballinasloe. The Very Rev. Canon Rogers, P. P., V. F., assisted by the Rev. James Stephens, C. C., officiated in the ceremony.

The ceremony of religious profession and reception took place in the Convent of Mercy, Clifden, on April 20th. The young ladies professed were Miss Mary Joyce (in religion Sister M. de Sales), daughter of M. Joyce Cullaran, Headford, county Galway, and sister of the Rev. M. Colleran, C. C., Clifden. The young lady received to the veil was Miss Maggie Meagher (in religion Sister M. Gabriel), daughter of Mr. Thomas Meagher, Creaghna, Tuam county, Tipperary.

Most Rev. Dr. McCormack, Bishop of Galway, has appointed Archdeacon Fahey, Rector of Galway, vacant by the translation of the Most Rev. Dr. Carr to the Archbishopric of Melbourne. Dr. McCormack was elected by the votes of the great majority of the priests to succeed Dr. Carr, and the fact of his being so shows how universally popular he is. See over which this learned Bishop is now placed.

KERRY.—On April 21st, a large number of tenants on the property of Lord Kenmare, near Milltown, county Kerry, were evicted for non-payment of rent. Some were accompanied as caravaders.

A great anti-coercion meeting was held on April 17th, at Tralee, and a notable feature in connection with the demonstration was the presence on the platform of several priests who have been prevented for some time past by their Bishop from attending political gatherings.

Mrs. Carlos, the widow of the Kerry farmer who was murdered by moonlighters, has received a sum of £200 from the Royal Bounty Fund.

KILKENNY—The Bishop and priests of the Diocese of Ossory, when protesting against coercion, were bound to take notice of the slanderous accusation directed against the people of Kilkenny by Mr. Balfour, one of the Chief Secretary's anecdotes—stupid concoctions that they were—left Englishmen to understand that Kilkenny was in now need of coercion, and that the Bishop was in danger to be disgustly repudiated by the Most Rev Dr. Healy, and his clergy as a libel upon a peaceful and law-abiding people, whose character is attested by the declarations made by the judges during the last three years. The resolutions adopted at the Dunleary Conference, besides protesting against the Coercion Bill, condemn the Lord Bill as a scheme to increase the power of the landlords, and convey to Mr Gladstone and the other Liberal members, the thanks of the signatories for the assistance which they have given to the Irish people. They furthermore give proof that the attacks made upon Mr Parnell by his accusers in Parliament were but to attract the public attention to which he is held by the Irish people.

LEITRIM—On April 19th, a man called Francis, a bailiff, residing at Drumkeen, was fired at by his uncle, Robert Clarke. He died next day. The wife of the murderer, on being arrested, committed suicide at Carrigallen Police Barracks, it is believed by poison.

LIMERICK—The death is announced of Mr James F Mortagh, formerly of Bedford-row, county Limerick. He was an active member of the National cause and since the 20th, Should the demands not be conceded, and the employes carry out their threat, six thousand men will be thrown out of employment. It is expected the employers will yield.

ARMAGH—Mr. Richard Wilson Guinness, County Court Judge of Armagh and Louth, dropped dead on April 19th, while addressing the Synod of the Church of Ireland.

Nothing could be more emphatic, than the terms in which his grace the Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland, and heartily express their unalloyed confidence in the Irish leader and the Parliamentary Party. The declaration from the Northern province, is as vigorous in denunciation of the wretched policy of the Government, as any that have emanated from the conferences elsewhere.

CARLOW. John Kelly, who lives near Rathoe, county Carlow, is under police protection. Two poor laborers were evicted lately because a cottage was sought for them on his master's land, under the Labourers Act, and one of them a weak old man, died shortly after being thrown out of his home. Kelly's act has earned for him utter detestation in the district. His former friends join him with averted looks; every other class has sent him to equal horror, and all manifestations of scorn in the neighborhood, assembled on April 10, to express their opinions of him in his own townland.

In the Cemetery attached to St. Leo's Convent of Mercy, Carlow, the grave closed over all that was mortal of Sister Mary Stanislaus on April 20th.

CLARE.—On April 19th, at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, Joseph Corcoran Smith, Esq., third son of the late S. Corcoran Smith, of Dublin, was united in marriage with Miss Laura Genevieve Cragen, eldest daughter of Thomas McMahon Cragen, Esq., J. P., Ardcorgan, county Clare, and St George street, Limerick.

Posters have been extensively posted throughout West Clare, bearing an appeal from the National League and the Central Trades Association of Kilkenny, addressed to the men and women of Ireland against the buying of English manufactured goods. The manifesto points out that Nationalist shopkeepers who are importing such goods should discontinue to do so.

CORK.—At a meeting of the Bishops and priests of the diocese of Cloyne, on April 14, a series of resolutions was passed, expressing sympathy with Cannon Arthur, P. P., and Her Father Ryan, C. C., who have been suspended; also protesting against the Coercion Act.

On April 16, a fire was discovered in the premises of Mr. John Fitzgerald, coach builder, Copley street, Cork. Eight horses were burned to death and a large quantity of valuable property destroyed. The premises were only partially insured.

The floor mills of Messrs Forbing and Sons, Fermoy, were burned down on April 22d, and all the valuable machinery and stock were destroyed. The fire originated in the screen-room, where the machinery for few years ago fitted up with modern machinery, at a cost of £7000, and the entire damage is estimated at nearly £5,000, which is covered by insurance. A large number of men will be thrown out of employment.

"Villiers is one city troubled with defective sight, counsel!! Mailer the expert optician, 136 Montgomery, near Bush.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

President, R. H. McDonald. Vice-President, R. H. McDonald, Jr. Cashier, S. G. Murphy.

Capital, $1,000,000. Oldest Established Bank on the Pacific Coast Surplus, $550,000.

BUYS and SELLS BILLS of Exchange ON UNITED STATES, ENGLAND, IRELAND, Scotland, and EUROPE. ACCOUNTS SOLICITED.

ISSUES LETTERS of CREDIT Available Throughout THE WORLD. Collections MADE PROMPTLY EVERYWHERE at LOWEST RATES.

PACIFIC BANK, - Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts., San Francisco, Cal.

OUR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

Rolls of Honor for the Month of April.

AT ROSE'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Boys' Department. Third Class.—Matthew West 92, Fourth Class.—John Lang 90, Frank Regan 75, Edward Fitzgerald 72, Philip Fallon 65, Fifth Class.—Jas. Hickson, Benjamin Mickson 96, William Mooney 94, John Hartley 93, William Gallagher 89, John Hines 81 William Ryan 78, William Langlois 77, John Doyle 76, Thomas O'Connor, John Ahern, each 75, Fifth Class.—Jos. Dwyer, Cornelius McCarthy 95, Michael O'Connor 87, Francis Dunphy 86, Michael Mooney, Richard Mooney, Richard Mooney, each 72, Francis McKenna, John Mooney, Michael Mooney, each 71, Sixth Class.—Jas. Mooney 98, Michael Fahey, Max Dodd, James Barry, each 75, Sixth Class.—Joseph Cusack 98, Joseph Dwyer 95, Thomas Hickey, William Langlois, Thomas Hickey, William Lang, each 75, George McKenna, John Sullivan, Jas. Mooney, Thomas Ahern each 70, James Barry, Walter Ryan, Richard Fleming, John Lynch, Francis McKenna, Anglesey Gallagher, Edward Hickey, Edward Fallon, Michael Fallon, Joseph Cusack, Joseph Mooney, Joseph Mooney, each 65.

Girls' Department. Third Class.—Rose Mooney 98, Fourth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Jas. Mooney, Annie Duffy 95, Mary Dunphy 92, Fifth Class.—Annie Ryan 98, Annie Mooney 95, Annie Ryan, Annie Duffy, Kate Kennedy, Mary Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Ryan, Annie McKenna, Annie Fallon, Annie Mooney, each 92, Sixth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Ryan, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92, Seventh Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92, Eighth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92.

Boys' Department. First Class.—Rose Mooney, Edward Fitzgerald, Philip Fallon, Fifth Class.—Jas. Hickson, Benjamin Mickson, William Mooney, John Hartley, Sixth Class.—Joseph Cusack, Jas. Mooney, Michael Fahey, Max Dodd, James Barry, each 75, Sixth Class.—Joseph Cusack 98, Joseph Dwyer 95, Thomas Hickey, William Langlois, Thomas Hickey, William Lang, each 75, George McKenna, John Sullivan, Jas. Mooney, Thomas Ahern each 70, James Barry, Walter Ryan, Richard Fleming, John Lynch, Francis McKenna, Anglesey Gallagher, Edward Hickey, Edward Fallon, Michael Fallon, Joseph Cusack, Joseph Mooney, Joseph Mooney, each 65.

Girls' Department. Third Class.—Rose Mooney 98, Fourth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Jas. Mooney, Annie Duffy 95, Mary Dunphy 92, Fifth Class.—Annie Ryan 98, Annie Mooney 95, Annie Ryan, Annie Duffy, Kate Kennedy, Mary Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Ryan, Annie McKenna, Annie Fallon, Annie Mooney, each 92, Sixth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Ryan, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92, Seventh Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92, Eighth Class.—Annie Mooney 98, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, Annie Mooney, each 92.

Market Report

MONTHLY REPORT.

336 Kearny St., Tuesday Evening, May 17, 1887.

[illegible]

Pictorial Lives of the Saints. 30th Thousand. Reduced from $3.50 to $2.00

KABO PAT. OCT. 1882. U.S.D.C. TRADE MARK. CORSET SOMETHING NEW. Warranted to neither break down nor roll up in wear. Less Corsets at least fifty dollars in bulk of fund. CHICAGO CORSET CO. CHICAGO. NEWYORK.

KNABE PIANOFORTES. NEW YORK WAREROOMS, 112 FIFTH AVENUE. Tone, Touch, Workmanship & Durability unsurpassed. WILLIAM KNABE & CO.

BENZIGER BROS. Publishers to the Holy Apostolic See. MANUFACTURERS AND IMPORTERS OF Vestments and Church Ornaments, New York, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

FIRST ANNUAL PICNIC OF THE Members of the New Parish. Lady Fields Island on Point Pinole. SHELL MOUND PARK. On Thursday, June 2d, 1887. ADULTS TICKET, - FIFTY CENTS. Special train will leave Third and Townsend streets at 9 A. M.

RARE CHANCE For Those Who Wish to Buy the Best Quality of Groceries and Provisions. In the estate of Joseph H. Wilson, Bankrupt. Stock and Fixtures of a Well Established Grocery Business, Doing a Cash Business, for one of the most fashionable localities in the City of San Francisco. Inventory about $3,000. Will be sold for $1,500 cash. Reason for selling, Bankrupt. Address Assignee, Box 1, Post Office, San Francisco.

J. FISCHER & BRO. No. 7 Bible House, New York. HAVE PUBLISHED Hymn for the Golden Jubilee of the Priesthood of HIS HOLINESS POPE LEO XIII. By Permission of His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons. Price, 40 Cts. Orchestral parts, 80 cts. Choral parts, 20 cts. A. WALDTEUFEL, 737 Market St. San Francisco. San Francisco Prize Lager. THE NATIONAL LAGER BEER. Is made with Wisdom and Perfected by Experience. SILVER MEDAL PREMIUM. At the Last Mechanics' Fair. Try it for Taste and Flavor. Bottled for Export and Family Use. Brewery Bottling Dept. Cor. Bryant and Fifteenth Sts. Telephone Exchange. Wholesale & Retail Dealers. Offices and Depots. 1 & 3 Clay Street. DECKER BROS., WARNER & HAMLIN, IVERS & POND, FISCHER, SHERR BROS. PIANOS SOLD FOR $10 IN INSTALLMENTS. 137 Post Street.

REMOVAL. PRINGLE BROTHERS. Will, on May 2d, Occupy the Spacious New Store, 1109 MARKET STREET, Odd Fellows' Building. With a Large and Well-Selected Stock of Fine BOOTS AND SHOES. GILROY HOT SPRINGS. ROOF & TENNANT. Proprietors and Managers. These celebrated springs, situated in a spot of the Coast Range, 12 miles east of Gilroy, are now in charge of the undersigned, who have made them a popular resort. Their waters have been proved to be of great value in dropsy, kidney and bladder troubles, and all cases requiring a mild but effective aperient. Terms, $2 per day; $12 per week; $50 per month. Take the train (leaving Third and Townsend streets depot, San Francisco, at 8 A. M.) direct to Gilroy Springs. Address, Gilroy Springs, Gilroy, Cal.

MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER. THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

THE MONITOR, A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL. Devoted to the Protection and Defense of Catholic Principles. Published by the Monitor Publishing Co., Office: 536 Kearny St., San Francisco, California.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Per Year by Mail (or rate in advance) $1.50
Per Month (if paid in advance) 0.50
Six Months (if paid in advance) 0.75
Three Months (if paid in advance) 1.00
Per Year to Foreign Countries 2.00
To Priests of any of the Dioceses of California (in advance) $1.00, (not in advance) 1.50

JOHN J. CRONIN, General Manager. P. O. BOX 2260. P. O. Address, San Francisco, Cal. Post Office at Second-Class Rates. Entered at the San Francisco P. O. as Second-Class Matter.

For by Soul we are ashamed to say the Truth.....Strive for Justice for thy Soul, and even unto Death fight for Justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for Thee. (Ecclesiastes iv. 28)

The Monitor.

VOL. XXX. SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887. NO. 34.

THE COMMERCIAL IMPORTING TEA CO., 957 Market Street, Have just received a Cargo of the Celebrated ELECTRIC COFFEE. 30 Cents a Pound. WE ARE SOLE AGENTS FOR THE PACIFIC COAST. Country Orders Promptly Attended to. We have as Premiums at commission with other houses.

THE Commercial Importing Tea Company, 957 MARKET STREET, Bet. Fifth and Sixth. GOLD, SILVER AND NICKEL PLATING. Every Description of Church and Altar Ornaments ALSO HOUSEHOLD GOODS Repaired and Plated. With the above notice in the scale unofficial and on Valuation Extension. SAN FRANCISCO Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating Works, 653 and 655 MISSION ST. Bet. Fourth and Fifth Sts., San Francisco. E. G. DENNISTON, Proprietor.

DR. M. J. DUNN DENTIST. HOURS: 9 a.m. to 12 m. 1 to 5 p.m. ANÆSTHETICS ADMINISTERED. 1228 MARKET STREET. (Between Jones and Leavenworth Sts.) San Francisco, Cal.

THE DEVIL'S TURN CORSET. This Popular Corset is Worn by the Coast. Ladies' Corset Waists in Jean, Satin, Silk and Satin Jean

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

MEMORY'S GRAVEYARD.

LOVINGLY DEDICATED TO M. G'C.

In the graveyard of Memory lie buried
The ashes of departed years;
The short, little race of my pleasures,
The long, changeless dim of my tears;
And trembling I kneel by their tombstones,
And gaze on the verdant turf,
Where rosebuds my hopes as calmly
As the lam of the sea-lift surf.
I glance into vacuo unlighted,
Thin scanty murmur at last—
"Can it be ye all fell around me
In that silent and beautiful Past;
Did I stand by the bier that bore ye,
In sad, sad march to the tomb;
Did I chant that solemn requiem
Which told thy earthly doom?"

Did each day as it slept at sunset
Leave vacant a place behind,
Or did I see grow so sallent
That I seemed not at all to mind?
Did I heavily serve Youth's follies,
Toiling on with fixed brow,
Or was the Future, that page unwritten,
Tedious, and hard to be read?
Was the rise slow in turning crimson,
Or did life seem slip away?
Am I glad that in Memory's Graveyard
So many are sleeping to-day?
Did I cross paths of olden pleasures
And call on the Past in vain,
Regretting that youth's affections
Can never arise again?

Not I. Lurking now the tombstone
I deep there my loving tear,
I know it was better to lose them,
Though, then it was hard to bear;
I know that such flowers and fancy,
Which played in my life a part,
Was a shock of Fate, blighting
With bestial force my heart,
I know such hope and yearning
Which killed my peace, was bold
When I buried my aspirations,
My shadows were turned to gold;
Each day is an arc of the circle
Which bounds our mortality alone,
And the requiem I sing o'er many
Makes a sweeter eternity mine.

So I pass through Memory's Graveyard,
And lament my dead at rest,
Who sleep without thought of waking
In the dreamless home of my heart;
Nor do I, weeping vainly,
Beg the Past to rise once more,
For I feel, and I know it truly,
I am not what I was of yore.
Things, that be calm ye departed
Sweet spirits; rest ye in peace;
I, too, shall be one day like you,
And then shall end your sorrows shall cease.

ZARE.

May 16, 1867.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

DEO PAYENTE.

You planning worldling,
Hath no video of sad sorrow,
By timid ripple alone disturbed;
Ye like to subtend light (like light from loving eyes)
Sweet note of falling bird,
The only sound the stillness heard;
Violent protracting height of watching hill,
Pathos in the valley of sorrow.
Ye, a mount lurking, lowering in shape,
And we by storms ordain relentably set sail;
Purchase we reach the sheltering hill
Of Hope, we are pilot in safety still.

TRUMB.

San Francisco, May 11, 1867.

A LETTER FROM AMERICA.

"A letter from America!
O glory be to God!
Call in your father, Mary,
And just pass down a rod
Look! there's Pat Dempsey passing by,
And Jack across the way—
Call them in, and let them see, sure
My heart is big to day

And the simple folk were gathered
Around the blazing fender,
And poor Pat, the village scholar,
Read kind words and tender
Penned by his mother's fair haired boy,
Who crossed the ocean foam,
To win the bread and work that were Denied to him at home.

"O mother, now I'm nightly prayed,
This city of New York,
They're four houses in its streets
Thus over were in York.
Life pretty, I'm glad to know all
The people here are dressed,
And wing your daily work is slow
You can walk am sight the best.

"And so my sister, mother dear,
Is married, I see,
Of a house grander far than that
We used to name 'The Hall';
But ah! I don't care much for them,
My heart is never here—
I'm in the land where I have known
Of sorrow, joy, and care.

"There's nothing here at all that's like
The chapel on the hill;
Where long ago in childhood's days,
I knelt and prayed Father Phil;
And they all seem so busy here,
Each one has work to do,
One wish a Shillyl Nd and you
When a se old friends will rest

"Oh, I miss them all so sorely,
The old friends and the trees,
There's none can stand into the heart
Like those that with you grew
From boyhood's days to manhood's prime,
And shared each joy and woe—
I'd freely give my life for them,
The friends of long ago.

"God's blessing on you, mother dear,
And all the folks at home,
And O'd be with the boys and girls
That lay well wide my round
God's blessing on the land I love,
And God bless our freedom's day—
Gabriel's trumpet blow on the sun that lights
Poor Ireland far away."

E. H. M.

WHY MAIDS WILL WED.

A good wife rose from her couch one morn
And thought with sorrow dread
Of the piles on piles of clothes to be washed
And the dozens of mouths to be fed.
"There's Tom must be fed for the men in the field,
And the children to send away,
And all the suits to be skimmed and shrunk—
And all in one day."

It had rained in the night and all the wind
Was wet as wet could be,
There were puddings and pies and cakes to bake
And a load of bread for her;
And the day was hot, and her aching brow
Therefore nearly as she sat
"If matters but went what good wives know, They'd not be married to-that."

"Annie, what do you think I did Ned Brown"
Called the lassie from the well
"Last night? I refused to have him I love
And from my door I turned him."
"I was right," the old woman cried in reply
"I was right. That you—a girl so young
And the answer wife in time."

The farmer went back to the field,
And the wife, in a musing, sweet way,
Sang snatches of tender love songs
Her had not spoke in many a day.
And the pale in her hard wife cheek and her dimples
Were as white as the foam of the sea,
And the tones of her voice, as she sang
the song,
Were tender and full of glee.
The night came down and Hannah sheet,
And the girl sat musing and said:
"The world is false to love for those we love,
It is not strange that mother will wed.

Literary Miscellany.

A Happy Ending.

"Here, Alice, said Mrs. Darcy, glancing up from her mistress's paper, "here is something that may interest you.

She was a large, unwieldy figure, with a cold and unsympathetic expression. The girl whom she addressed was a slight and delicate creature, clad in mourning, and in appearance as different as possible from the elder lady, though she was the latter's own niece.

"You were saying," continued Mrs. Darcy, in a tone in which there was a tinge of severity, "that you would like to go away, and be independent, and earn your own bread. That I think was the expression you used.

Alice colored as she bent over the ribbon, the property of one of her cousins, which she was elaborately darning.

"I am young and healthy," she said, quietly. "I do not see why I should remain here to be a burden to you, Aunt Darcy."

"Have I ever complained of your being a burden?"

"No—certainly not, but—"

"But," repeated the lady with an accent of sarcasm—"but you are only dissatisfied under my roof and anxious to get away. Very well—I know that in such a case I would be the worst policy to endeavor to detain you. Besides, you are now of age, and as capable of judging for yourself as you will be six months hence. If you can find a situation to suit you, you suitable for a lady, and where you can be happier than in my family, I shall make no objections."

Poor girl.

She did not say, and yet Alice knew, as well as did Mrs. Darcy herself, that the true cause of this expressed willingness was to get rid of her niece. Mrs. Darcy had four unmarried daughters, none of them very attractive, and Alice threatened to be a dangerous rival to the two younger when they should come out, as she had already proven to Maude, the second, who was a year older than herself. For Miss Ling without set of fort had captivated the handsome, dashing, young Arthur Gordon, whom Mrs. Darcy and Miss Maude had carried their utmost powers of fascination and diplomacy to attract. Maude was the previous of the four sisters, and Mr. Gordon had appeared to like her until, in his visits to the house, he had met with Alice, whose beauty and sweetness had attracted him. Then there had followed a love affair—an engagement and a separation—nobody seemed to know exactly how and why it was, and Mr. Gordon had gone away, and Alice, after a season of what her aunt called moping had announced her wish to become a governess, a company, anything by which she could support herself independently.

Miss Darcy was searching through the paper for the item of interest to which she had alluded. It took some time to find it, and then she read aloud:

WANTED—A Companion for a invalid elderly lady. Apply at No. 73 M——Place.

"A companion—no age or qualifications specified"—said Mrs. Darcy, doubtfully, "and yet you may stand as good a chance as another. You country or not, as you like," she added, indifferently.

"I will go at once," Alice replied, and in less than hour she was turning with a brisk step and heightened color into M——place.

It was a quiet street, with old-fashioned residences which had once been aristocratic, but which were now mostly used as genteel boarding-houses. Alice ascended the high granite steps, and rang the bell. Presently a neat servant looking female in widow's dress. They passed down the steps together, the younger woman leaning her hand and the other mutterings something about hard to please. Then Alice found herself in the hall, making known her errand to a neat servant-maiden.

"Please walk up-stairs, miss," the latter said, civily. "Mama is been worn out seeing all the people as has called about the place, and I reckon you'll be the last she can receive today. I don't think she's made up her mind yet about which she to choose. They don't none of you seem to please her."

"Hush!" said the lady, in a tone which was a little more of a whisper than before, "I think was the expression you used.

Alice colored as she bent over the ribbon, the property of one of her cousins, which she was elaborately darning.

"I am young and healthy," she said, quietly. "I do not see why I should remain here to be a burden to you, Aunt Darcy."

"Have I ever complained of your being a burden?"

"No—certainly not, but—"

"But," repeated the lady with an accent of sarcasm—"but you are only dissatisfied under my roof and anxious to get away. Very well—I know that in such a case I would be the worst policy to endeavor to detain you. Besides, you are now of age, and as capable of judging for yourself as you will be six months hence. If you can find a situation to suit you, you suitable for a lady, and where you can be happier than in my family, I shall make no objections."

Poor girl.

She did not say, and yet Alice knew, as well as did Mrs. Darcy herself, that the true cause of this expressed willingness was to get rid of her niece. Mrs. Darcy had four unmarried daughters, none of them very attractive, and Alice threatened to be a dangerous rival to the two younger when they should come out, as she had already proven to Maude, the second, who was a year older than herself. For Miss Ling without set of fort had captivated the handsome, dashing, young Arthur Gordon, whom Mrs. Darcy and Miss Maude had carried their utmost powers of fascination and diplomacy to attract. Maude was the previous of the four sisters, and Mr. Gordon had appeared to like her until, in his visits to the house, he had met with Alice, whose beauty and sweetness had attracted him. Then there had followed a love affair—an engagement and a separation—nobody seemed to know exactly how and why it was, and Mr. Gordon had gone away, and Alice, after a season of what her aunt called moping had announced her wish to become a governess, a companion, anything by which she could support herself independently.

Miss Darcy was searching through the paper for the item of interest to which she had alluded. It took some time to find it, and then she read aloud:

WANTED—A Companion for a invalid elderly lady. Apply at No. 73 M——Place.

"A companion—no age or qualifications specified"—said Mrs. Darcy, doubtfully, "and yet you may stand as good a chance as another. You country or not, as you like," she added, indifferently.

"I will go at once," Alice replied, and in less than hour she was turning with a brisk step and heightened color into M——place.

It was a quiet street, with old-fashioned residences which had once been aristocratic, but which were now mostly used as genteel boarding-houses. Alice ascended the high granite steps, and rang the bell. Presently a neat servant looking female in widow's dress. They passed down the steps together, the younger woman leaning her hand and the other mutterings something about hard to please. Then Alice found herself in the hall, making known her errand to a neat servant-maiden.

"Please walk up-stairs, miss," the latter said, civily. "Mama is been worn out seeing all the people as has called about the place, and I reckon you'll be the last she can receive today. I don't think she's made up her mind yet about which she to choose. They don't none of you seem to please her."

"Hush!" said the lady, in a tone in which there was a tinge of severity, "that you would like to go away, and be independent, and earn your own bread. That

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY AUTHORITY.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sailing last month 11,854 Irish emigrants embarked from Queenstown, the number for the corresponding month of last year was 9,656.

—Cardinal Gibbons spent a portion of last week in Baltimore as a visit to Archbishop Walsh. He will sail in the Cunard steamship Umbria, which leaves Queenstown on next Sunday.

—We are now printing the little red leaflets for devotion to the Sacred Heart during the month of June, and we will mail several thousand of them on Saturday next to those who have already ordered them.

—The Pope has presented a gold medal to the Rev. Dr. Vincenzo De Vit on the occasion of the publication of the third volume of his "Dissertatione Totius Latinitatis." Father De Vit is one of the priests of the Roman Seminary.

—We gratefully acknowledge the receipt of numerous invitations to attend the closing exercises of Catholic female schools on this coast, and we are delighted to notice that "no flowers" are to be permitted to be presented to the pupils on such occasions.

—Twenty-four priests of the Catholic Church have been slain in Mexico since the inauguration of President Diaz, and not a single one of the murderers has been punished. Yet Diaz is a Catholic!

—We cordially acknowledge the receipt of numerous invitations to attend the closing exercises of Catholic female schools on this coast, and we are delighted to notice that "no flowers" are to be permitted to be presented to the pupils on such occasions.

—Rev. John Grafton and Timothy Crowley are at present in Chicago, and by permission of Archbishop Feehan are soliciting subscriptions for the completion of the O'Connell Memorial Church, at Cahirciveen, the birthplace of the great Irish Liberator.

—Every child should have a little altar dedicated to the Blessed Virgin during the month of May. It will obtain blessings upon the family; and a light burned in her honor, a few flowers wreathed around her statue, will increase devotion to her whom all should love.

—German papers announce the death of Old Catholicism in the cities of Baden-Baden, Basel, Shaffhausen and Heidelberg. It may be predicted with safety that within ten years from now Old Catholicism will be a name and "nothing more."

—It is now understood that Bishop Keane, of Richmond, resigned his See before going to Rome, where he was appointed President of the Catholic University. The names most prominently mentioned as his successor are Bishop Janssens, of Natchez, and Bishop Kain of Wheeling.

—Preparations are being made for Home Rule demonstrations throughout the west of England. Lord Rosebery will speak at Plymouth, Mr. Stansfeld at Newton Abbott and Lord Wolverton and Mr. Sexton at Exeter. Thus the English people are educated in Home Rule justice.

—Twenty-three Jesuit Fathers and Christian Brothers will have charge of the government of the proposed American Catholic University, but it is rather premature to speculate about such matters when we consider that the building is at yet represented only by the plans of the architect.

—That old "chestnut" about "England and the Vatican resuming official relations," is again revived in the daily press. This time the base of the rumor concerned Monsignor Jacobsen is "a gentleman in the confidence of Lord Salisbury," who may be safely set down as a fellow without flesh, frame, form or feature.

—Forty days more in all the Catholic Church has before she falls to pieces in America! This terrible fate is declared about to come to pass by a Protestant paper, unless the Pope of Rome abdicates in favor of Dr. McGlynn! Will all Monitor subscribers who know themselves to be indebted to us please settle up their accounts before the everlasting smash up occurs, as, if there is to be no more Catholic Church, the Monitor will have to be laid up in the Mare Island Navy Yard along with a lot of other vessels which are useful only in time of war! Well, well, what generous souls of the sectarian journals are!

—In the course of conversation with the representative of a Utah paper last week, a Mormon missionary asserted the reporter that in a life-long experience in the Mormon creed he had never known or heard of a Catholic who became perverted to their vile practices. This is a grand testimony of the power of Faith in keeping men from descending in the scale of humanity.

—Monsignor Pusey, of New York, announced recently that the first floor of his own house, which is attached to the episcopal residence, will be used as a dispensary where domestic, etc., may get the best medical attendance free of charge. Dr. Kelly, of Dublin, and more recently of Boston, will be the physician in attendance. This is a good idea and might be copied with beneficial results in all large cities.

—In order to associate the names of Alexander Sullivan, Patrick Egan and other notable Parnellites with the revolutionary element of the Irish race in America, a security deposit was published last week about "a split in the Clan-na-Gael Society, lest the contemptible connection drive from parent to devotee anybody save those whose shares to be duped by such disreputable dodges.

—Very excellent testimony of the real and enterprise of Catholic missionaries in India comes from a Mr. Grant Duff, a Baptist missionary of India, who says: "The Roman Catholics are everywhere in India. I would sooner contend with Brahmanism and Buddhism, or any other form of heathenism, than with Roman Catholicism." Miss Miller is correct in her judgment, and all the learn so wish her is that she may never die an old maid.

—The General Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of St. Louis, Mo., have resolved to receive Holy Communion in a body on the coming Jubilee of the Sovereign Pontiff. At the Council meeting a letter was read from the President-General in Paris, praising the work of the Society, also a circular stating that a committee of members from the St. Vincent de Paul Society would pay their respects to the Pope in person on the occasion of his Jubilee, and inviting the Conferences in America to send representatives.

—History is repeating itself in the case of the present Pope. Like his predecessors in the Middle Ages, Leo XIII is at present practically the peace-maker of Europe and the arbiter in international difficulties.

—A very imposing ceremony was carried out at St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y., recently, when a statue of the Blessed Virgin was erected by the students. The model copy was drawn up before the statue, and addresses were read by priests and students in rich rhetoric. The Rev. Father Freeman, S. J., officiated. After the religious ceremonies the military salute was given and 200 voices chanted the Magnificat. The military then marched around about the statue, and in uniform assisted at the Mass which followed.

—The German papers have begun an active campaign against Socialists. A large quantity of social literature has been seized and many persons arrested. At Mulhein, Konigsberg, Hamburg and Stettin the headquarters of Socialists were raided, and every person on the premises arrested. Among the documents seized were the posters of numerous Socialist organizations, and every person whose name appears in the lists subscribed will be arrested and placed under surveillance.

—A telegram published in the daily papers says that the Protestant preachers of Washington, D. C., have resolved not to marry divorced people who come before them to be tied temporarily—as it too often proves. Such action amounts to nothing, as non-Catholics can and do "marry" without preaches, parson, or even parental consent. According to modern ideas, and the ruling of some courts, any man or woman who agree to marry are joined in wedlock, no matter how many times they may have divorced themselves from other wives or husbands. Such "marriages" are a disgrace to our civilization, but they exist all the same.

—The twelve Irish constables who left their native land to try their fortunes in the New World are being feasted in New York. Last week some of the constables began work as salesmen in the London and Liverpool clothing house on the Bowery. A member of the firm said that they dropped into their places as naturally as though they had been bred to the business. The only unpleasant feature of the affair so far is the untimely fate of Patrick McDonagh, who is now in the asylum for the insane on Ward's Island. It is thought that McDonagh lost his reason because his sweetheart refused to leave Ireland and come to this country with him.

—Monsignor Kinsella, the representative of Propaganda in Palestine, has written a report on the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and that he may possibly be indicted to come, will be anything new to the many admirers of Mr. Gladstone in this country. Mr. Gladstone has expressed his admiration of the United States, but has heretofore been prevented by absorption in political affairs and other considerations, but it is to be earnestly hoped that the great English statesman will be influenced to accept the invitation extended to him by Hon. Jno. Fitzgerald, of Nebraska, which we print on another page.

—We are often astonished at the marvelous growth of the Church all over this land as we read of new churches, schools and charitable institutions being built in every city, town and village throughout the Union. Chicago, which was created an Archdiocese only seven years ago, has now more churches than the oldest sees in America, having 203 across edition of 1887 in New York. Chicago Catholic population is also seen dwelling 400,000, and it likely soon to rival Boston's Antipodes. Chicago has the gratifying number of 32,000 children in her parochial schools, New York has 32,000 and Boston has 20,000. Where the schools are numerous the scholars will be found, and the Church of God will prosper beyond all human calculation.

—The reported vision of cast members of Erdinson from Ireland is advanced by the passage of the last great act of Tory English infamy the Balfour Coercion Bill, reminds a Canadian paper of a passage in the history of Holland. 1663 Corvin, in the assembly of Burgomasters, in the year 1742, made this immortal speech: "I am an old man, upwards of eighty, and have seen miserable cult times than these; but by the blessing of God, on our firmness and resolution, we have hitherto preserved our own state. If at last we are overpowered, let us lay our arms under water, betake ourselves to our ships and sail to the Indies, and let those who are our country last make say, 'There lived a people who chose to lose their country rather than their liberties.'"

—The Hebrew Standard prints the remarkable letter of Dr. Joseph Tuke to the Anglican Bishop of London. It will be likely to attract the attention of Jew and Gentiles the world over. Dr. Tuke is a Jew preaching to London the Gospel of Christ. As he was a Jew, a learned and chaste man, and the son of one of the foremost of Jewish rabbis, Dr. Tuke's conversions brings to bear him, and some Jews accepted his preaching. But some Tukes has learned. He confesses to the Protestant Archbishop of London a conversion that he did not believe what he preached, and asserts his intention of returning to the faith of his fathers. His letter reads like the lamentations of the Prophet, and he prays that a life of penance and repentance may repair the wrong he has done both to Christians and to Jews. Dr. Tuke is not the only Protestant preacher who has little or no belief in what he preaches, but he is one of the few who have the courage to come out plainly and boldly.

—Preparations are being made for Home Rule demonstrations throughout the west of England. Lord Rosebery will speak at Plymouth, Mr. Stansfeld at Newton Abbott and Lord Wolverton and Mr. Sexton at Exeter. Thus the English people are educated in Home Rule justice.

—Twenty-three Jesuit Fathers and Christian Brothers will have charge of the government of the proposed American Catholic University, but it is rather premature to speculate about such matters when we consider that the building is at yet represented only by the plans of the architect.

—That old "chestnut" about "England and the Vatican resuming official relations," is again revived in the daily press. This time the base of the rumor concerned Monsignor Jacobsen is "a gentleman in the confidence of Lord Salisbury," who may be safely set down as a fellow without flesh, frame, form or feature.

—Forty days more in all the Catholic Church has before she falls to pieces in America! This terrible fate is declared about to come to pass by a Protestant paper, unless the Pope of Rome abdicates in favor of Dr. McGlynn! Will all Monitor subscribers who know themselves to be indebted to us please settle up their accounts before the everlasting smash up occurs, as, if there is to be no more Catholic Church, the Monitor will have to be laid up in the Mare Island Navy Yard along with a lot of other vessels which are useful only in time of war! Well, well, what generous souls of the sectarian journals are!

—In the course of conversation with the representative of a Utah paper last week, a Mormon missionary asserted the reporter that in a life-long experience in the Mormon creed he had never known or heard of a Catholic who became perverted to their vile practices. This is a grand testimony of the power of Faith in keeping men from descending in the scale of humanity.

—Monsignor Pusey, of New York, announced recently that the first floor of his own house, which is attached to the episcopal residence, will be used as a dispensary where domestic, etc., may get the best medical attendance free of charge. Dr. Kelly, of Dublin, and more recently of Boston, will be the physician in attendance. This is a good idea and might be copied with beneficial results in all large cities.

—In order to associate the names of Alexander Sullivan, Patrick Egan and other notable Parnellites with the revolutionary element of the Irish race in America, a security deposit was published last week about "a split in the Clan-na-Gael Society, lest the contemptible connection drive from parent to devotee anybody save those who shares to be duped by such disreputable dodges.

—Very excellent testimony of the real and enterprise of Catholic missionaries in India comes from a Mr. Grant Duff, a Baptist missionary of India, who says: "The Roman Catholics are everywhere in India. I would sooner contend with Brahmanism and Buddhism, or any other form of heathenism, than with Roman Catholicism." Miss Miller is correct in her judgment, and all the learn so wish her is that she may never die an old maid.

—The General Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of St. Louis, Mo., have resolved to receive Holy Communion in a body on the coming Jubilee of the Sovereign Pontiff. At the Council meeting a letter was read from the President-General in Paris, praising the work of the Society, also a circular stating that a committee of members from the St. Vincent de Paul Society would pay their respects to the Pope in person on the occasion of his Jubilee, and inviting the Conferences in America to send representatives.

—History is repeating itself in the case of the present Pope. Like his predecessors in the Middle Ages, Leo XIII is at present practically the peace-maker of Europe and the arbiter in international difficulties.

—A very imposing ceremony was carried out at St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y., recently, when a statue of the Blessed Virgin was erected by the students. The model copy was drawn up before the statue, and addresses were read by priests and students in rich rhetoric. The Rev. Father Freeman, S. J., officiated. After the religious ceremonies the military salute was given and 200 voices chanted the Magnificat. The military then marched around about the statue, and in uniform assisted at the Mass which followed.

—The German papers have begun an active campaign against Socialists. A large quantity of social literature has been seized and many persons arrested. At Mulhein, Konigsberg, Hamburg and Stettin the headquarters of Socialists were raided, and every person on the premises arrested. Among the documents seized were the posters of numerous Socialist organizations, and every person whose name appears in the lists subscribed will be arrested and placed under surveillance.

—A telegram published in the daily papers says that the Protestant preachers of Washington, D. C., have resolved not to marry divorced people who come before them to be tied temporarily—as it too often proves. Such action amounts to nothing, as non-Catholics can and do "marry" without preaches, parson, or even parental consent. According to modern ideas, and the ruling of some courts, any man or woman who agree to marry are joined in wedlock, no matter how many times they may have divorced themselves from other wives or husbands. Such "marriages" are a disgrace to our civilization, but they exist all the same.

—The twelve Irish constables who left their native land to try their fortunes in the New World are being feasted in New York. Last week some of the constables began work as salesmen in the London and Liverpool clothing house on the Bowery. A member of the firm said that they dropped into their places as naturally as though they had been bred to the business. The only unpleasant feature of the affair so far is the untimely fate of Patrick McDonagh, who is now in the asylum for the insane on Ward's Island. It is thought that McDonagh lost his reason because his sweetheart refused to leave Ireland and come to this country with him.

—Monsignor Kinsella, the representative of Propaganda in Palestine, has written a report on the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and that he may possibly be indicted to come, will be anything new to the many admirers of Mr. Gladstone in this country. Mr. Gladstone has expressed his admiration of the United States, but has heretofore been prevented by absorption in political affairs and other considerations, but it is to be earnestly hoped that the great English statesman will be influenced to accept the invitation extended to him by Hon. Jno. Fitzgerald, of Nebraska, which we print on another page.

—We are often astonished at the marvelous growth of the Church all over this land as we read of new churches, schools and charitable institutions being built in every city, town and village throughout the Union. Chicago, which was created an Archdiocese only seven years ago, has now more churches than the oldest sees in America, having 203 across edition of 1887 in New York. Chicago Catholic population is also seen dwelling 400,000, and it likely soon to rival Boston's Antipodes. Chicago has the gratifying number of 32,000 children in her parochial schools, New York has 32,000 and Boston has 20,000. Where the schools are numerous the scholars will be found, and the Church of God will prosper beyond all human calculation.

—The reported vision of cast members of Erdinson from Ireland is advanced by the passage of the last great act of Tory English infamy the Balfour Coercion Bill, reminds a Canadian paper of a passage in the history of Holland. 1663 Corvin, in the assembly of Burgomasters, in the year 1742, made this immortal speech: "I am an old man, upwards of eighty, and have seen miserable cult times than these; but by the blessing of God, on our firmness and resolution, we have hitherto preserved our own state. If at last we are overpowered, let us lay our arms under water, betake ourselves to our ships and sail to the Indies, and let those who are our country last make say, 'There lived a people who chose to lose their country rather than their liberties.'"

—The Hebrew Standard prints the remarkable letter of Dr. Joseph Tuke to the Anglican Bishop of London. It will be likely to attract the attention of Jew and Gentiles the world over. Dr. Tuke is a Jew preaching to London the Gospel of Christ. As he was a Jew, a learned and chaste man, and the son of one of the foremost of Jewish rabbis, Dr. Tuke's conversions brings to bear him, and some Jews accepted his preaching. But some Tukes has learned. He confesses to the Protestant Archbishop of London a conversion that he did not believe what he preached, and asserts his intention of returning to the faith of his fathers. His letter reads like the lamentations of the Prophet, and he prays that a life of penance and repentance may repair the wrong he has done both to Christians and to Jews. Dr. Tuke is not the only Protestant preacher who has little or no belief in what he preaches, but he is one of the few who have the courage to come out plainly and boldly.

THE MONITOR.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

May 29 Sunday Pentecost, or White Sunday
" 30 Monday Whit-Monday
" 31 Tuesday Whit-Tuesday
June 1 Wednesday Ember Days
" 2 Thursday
" 3 Friday
" 4 Saturday Ember Days
" 5 Sunday Trinity Sunday. Corpus Christi. Corpus Christi. First Day Fast

CONFIRMATION NEXT SUNDAY.

Next Sunday his Grace the Archbishop will celebrate Pontifical Mass at St. Mary's Cathedral, and will afterwards confirm a number children and adults. In the afternoon his Grace will administer the Sacrament of Confirmation to a large number of children in St. Patrick's church.

THE CHURCH AT MERCED.

We understand that Rev. M. McNamee, Rector of St. Patrick's Church, Merced, contemplates erecting a church in that city, and asked building. We hope to have the pleasure of chronicling the completion of the work shortly. The Catholic cemetery at Merced is in good order, and well cared for. The Catholic population of Merced is about 300, which were formerly attended by a large book will, which is now attended by a large book will, which is now attended by a large book will, which is now

Farm and Home.

Beautify Home.

Spring is here. The buds are bursting into verdure and blossoms, the fields are green with the promise of future plenty; the flowers are ready to bloom in beauty and fragrance; the birds fill the land with melody and nature is full of beauty everywhere.

Now is the time to beautify the home. It can be done without cost and with so little labor that all should enjoy the comfort and refinement of a beautiful dwelling place. It matters not how humble home may be, it is its household the dearest spot of earth, and it should be made fragran t and beautiful.

The laborer can devote his evening and morning hours of rest to the planting of trees, shrubs, roses and flowers, and there by gain the richest reward for his efforts Nor should he be alone in making home beautiful. Father, mother, son and daughter, should all be taught the necessity of making attractive the one place where most of their days and nights are spent. It will not only well pay all to plant fruit and flowers, but it will refine the taste and elevate the character of every one who enjoyt the beautiful home.

What Wives are For.

What the true man most wants of a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and man needs a companion with him.

A man is sometimes overtaken with misfortune; he meets with failures and defeat, trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to share his sorrow and sympathies. He has some stern battles to fight with powerful enemies and with sin, and he needs a woman that, as he puts an armor around her, feels that he has some thing to fight for, will help him fight, who will put her lip to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand to his heart and impart new inspiration.

All through life—through storm and sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and favorable winds—man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's and mother's love will hardly supply the need. Yet many seek nothing further than housework. Justly enough, half of these get nothing more. The other half surprised above measure, obtain more than they sought. Their wives surprise them by a noble idea of marriage, and disclosing a treasury of courage, sympathy and love.

How to Care Warts.

It is now fairly established that the common wart, which is so unsightly and often troublesome on the hands and face, can be easily removed by small doses of sulphate magnesia taken internally. M. Colrat, of Lyons, has drawn attention to this extraordinary fact. Several children treated with three-grain doses of Epsom salts morning and evening were promptly cured. M. Achaus cites the case of a woman who was disfigured by three excrescences, and who was cured in a month by a drachm and a half of magnesia daily. Another medical man reports a case of very large warts which disappeared in a fortnight from the daily administration of ten grains of the salts.

How to Save Boys.

Women who have some to care, and dread the domesticity infesmous of home education, ought to understand the nature of young manhood. It is exceedingly restless. It is disturbed by vain ambitions, by thirst for action, by longings for excitement, by irrepressible desire to touch life in manfold ways. Home, however wise and repressive of natural instincts, can not more to know them than into the society that cannot in any measure supply the need of their hearts. They will not go to the public house at first for the love of liquor, they go for the animated and hilarious companionship they find there, which they find does much to repress the disturbing restlessness in their breasts. Due to it, that they become compete with public places in their attractiveness. Open your blinds by day, light bright fires by night. Illuminate your rooms. Hang pictures upon the walls. Put books and newspapers upon your tables. Have music and entertaining games. Banish demons of dullness and apathy that have so ruled in your household, and bring in music and good cheer. Invent occupations for your sons. Stimulate their ambitions in worthy directions. While you make home thus delightful to them with higher purposes than pleasure, to bother they shall pass happy boyhood and enter upon manhood and refined taste and noble ambitions, which depends upon you. Believe it possible that with attraction and right means a mother and sisters may have more control of the destiny of her boys than any other influence whatever.

—Do not, even with oil cloth, cover your kitchen. Its floor can only be kept clean by daily washing, and it is also much more wholesome. A painted floor, or one that is simply oiled, is the most desirable in the kitchen.

DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY, (The Only Reliable Hoof Powder.) A SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Neuralgia, Ring Worm And all other Skin and Blood Diseases. IT ERADICATES THE LIVER AND KIDNEYS. Cures Dyspepsia and all Stomach ailments from Torpid Liver. Sold everywhere. Ask your druggist for DR. PARDEE'S REMEDY and take no other. Send for Circular to DR. PARDEE MEDICINE CO., Rochester, N. Y.

DO NOT POISON YOUR SYSTEM with medicines you know nothing about. Nearly every so-called remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia now offered to the public contains powerful and poisonous medicines that injure the stomach, or leave the patient worse off than before.

Do not use them, but take the old reliable one that has stood the test for twenty-five years. Use that is free from anything injurious to the system, composed wholly of roots and herbs, the medical properties of which are particularly adapted to blood diseases.

Dr. Pardee's Remedy is safe and effective. Can be used by both old and young with beneficial results. Five hundred dollars will be paid for any case where the use of Dr. Pardee's Remedy has in any way injured the patient.

PARDEE MEDICINE CO. Rochester

Family Fun.

Mrs. Dollinger's Caller.

Mrs. Dollinger, a Sioux Falls lady, who lives on Twelfth street, heard a rap at the front door the other afternoon and responded to find a very distinguished-looking gentleman, extremely dignified and handsome.

"Ah! Mr. Dollinger, I believe, he said.

"Yes, sir."

"My name is Harcourt. I live at Huron Mrs. Scott of that place is your sister, is she not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah, yes, I am very well acquainted with her. She requested me to call and do a little errand for her."

"Oh, yes, won't you step in, Mr. Harcourt?"

"Thank you, I believe I will. Very fine weather we're having."

"Yes, sir. Take the easy chair."

"Thank you; pray don't put yourself to any trouble on my account."

"Certainly not. Was my sister well?"

"Quite well. I am pleased to say. By the way, Mrs. Dollinger, I have a little work here which I would like to show, as I am sure you would be interested in it. It is called 'Daniel in the Lion's Den,' and is by the Rev. Thomas H. Dodsworthy, and it comes in twelve parts exquisitely bound in cloth, leather, or extra Russia, is finely illustrated and should be in every library, and I am taking his divide of orders, so you can see by examining this order book, not everybody would order it, and all promote it the most wonderful book since the days of the old Scriptures. It treats of Daniel in ten years when he started to go into the den, when he got a little further in, when he got clear in, when the lions came up to examine him, while they were making their survey, while they retired to consult together, when they decided a post mortem would be necessary, when they announced the result to Daniel, when he convinced them that he would not consent to an autopsy, when they loose resired and Daniel got out established with numerous cuts, plates, maps, and beautiful steel engravings, comes at $1 a part of $12 for entire work, just your name down here and pay as you receive each part, eleven parts now ready—here is a fountain pen, write under Mr. Brown's name at the bottom of the page."

"Mr. Harcourt," said Mrs. Dollinger, rising and suppressing her tears, "you're a mean, deceitful, book agent. Get out of my house!"

"I know, but just sign—"

"Go on, or I shall scream!"

"Certainly, certainly. I pon oratio; no thank you. But can you tell me the name of the lady next door, and where some of her family live. Ah, you won't do! I'll work another scheme, then. Good day, Mrs. Dollinger, good day; glad to have made your acquaintance."

Good as a Trade Mark.

Omaha Girl—Pa, who is that?

Omaha Pa—I don't know. He is a stranger.

"Has wonderful how many distinguished people come to Omaha now.

"How do you know that stranger is a great man?

"Way, his clothes don't fit him."

A Discovery in Natural History.

Mother: "Tommy, how are you getting on at school?"

Tommy: "Fine, ma."

"Mention the names of some of the domestic animals."

"The horse, the cow, the pig, the sheep."

"Now, Tommy, that will do. Tommy, the goose, the hen and the cock?"

"Yes, I was thinking of four-legged animals; what is the use, if, while live mostly in the house, but which often makes a dreadful row, that people can not sleep? Yes, Tommy, let people sleep." "Yes, Tommy, triumphantly: "Pa pizen."

Promptly Answered.

Old Lx y (to wicked little boys who are playing marbles on Sunday)—Little boys, what are you playing marbles on Sunday for?"

Little Boys—We're playing for "keeps."

An Abrupt Matrimonial Offer.

The following story concerning a Boston local man and his namesake, will be a unique contribution to hymeneal lore. A gentleman is nothing if not severely practical in many things, and notably in his opinion of the matrimonial relation. When he made up his mind to get married he took a rather short cut to the consummation of his determination, and, addressing the lady by her Christian name, voiced his proposal in the following unique style: "I consider marriage a purely business transaction; there is no force or sentiment about me; now, with this understanding, will you marry me?"

Such a frigid way of putting this all-important query appreciably lowered the temperature in that vicinity for a few minutes at least, and the lady is not to be blamed for the immediate "No" given in answer. "Very well," said Mr. Isiah, "think yourself. The lady, evidently regretting her hasty negative, immediately retracted with: "Yes, I guess I will have you." and Cupid, having complacently laid, picked his quiver and hastened to a warmer climate to get thawed out, leaving "Two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one"—well, as they always did, each thumping away on its own account.

Little Lambkin.

"Dearest," said a fond bat patient lover, after the weddingday had been set, "can you—or—do you know how to sweep?"

"Sweep!" repeated the girl, with a proud glitter in her eye. "At the party to-morrow night, George, dear, just watch me as I sweep into the room!"

—A lady passenger on a steamer and bound across stormy sea much amused at the flirtation of the steamer surgeon and one of the fair passengers. One day, when the ocean waited strongly in his direction, these words were born to her from the loving sculpt: "It's so shilly," said the young lady, "I feel as if a goose were walking over my grave." "Do you?" asked the surgeon, tenderly. "I wish I were that goose. No cards.

—"Bishop take unto themselves wings and fly away," said the teacher. "What kind of robbs is meant?" And the smart lad hop at the foot of the class and he "reckoned they must be oat-robs."

—"A sensible woman," so Dr. Aberneally would have called her, was once cured by a shy man, who made her a rather original proposal. He bought a wedding ring, and sent it to the lady, inclosed in a sheet of note-paper with the brief question, "Does it fit?" By return of post he received for an answer, "Beautifully."

—"What is an sphere du cour, papa?" said a small boy, who had been exclaiming to read the daily papers. "That mean he a sex name for a dog fight, and the old gentleman, as he reached for the paper

How to Gets Fresh and Strength.

Um after each meal Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are palatable as milk and aid digestion. Infinite people improve rapidly with these. Physicians, Clergymen, Lawyers, Merchants, recommended Dr Tutts Pain Ann. stop. 1 cent Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will shell mishap and be dained four pounds in a month.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SCALDS and BURNS should have prompt and proper care or they may prove very dangerous and perhaps FATAL. ACCIDENTS are constantly happening. A Kick of a horse or cow may cause a bad bruise; the slip of an axe or knife may result in a serious cut. Any of these things may happen to one of your family at any moment. Have you a bottle of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER ready for use in such cases? It has no equal for the cure of scalds, burns, cuts, swellings, bruises, sprains, sores, insect bites &c.—All Druggists Sell it. PERRY DAVIS & SON, PROVIDENCE, R.I.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS OF AN AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT BOND. (NOTE OF 1861.) These bonds are shares in a loan, (1) a interest of which is paid yearly in premiums (one times yearly) each bond is entitled to Three Drawings Annually. Until such and yearly bond is redeemed, with a larger or smaller premium, (2) Every bond must share in all the following premiums, as here as no bond is entitled to NO BLANKS. Premiums. Value. Total. 1 Premium of 100,000 florins 100,000 florins. 1 " 50,000 " 50,000 florins. 1 " 20,000 " 20,000 florins. 1 " 10,000 " 10,000 florins. 1 " 5,000 " 5,000 florins. 1 " 1,000 " 1,000 florins. 1 " 500 " 500 florins. Together 1,000 premiums amounting to 2,140,000 Florins. The next drawing takes place on the FIRST OF JUNE, And every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THE 1st of JUNE, UNTIL 1 P. M. P. M. is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn thereon on the 1st of June. Out of some orders sent in SEPTEMBER LAST, we have already paid over $1,000 in premiums to our patrons, who are largely interested in our Government Bonds. Parties ordering now (or before 1st June) will share in the premiums of the whole year. Single bond (per mail, insured) $1. Five bonds $5. Twenty bonds $20. Address all orders to BANKERS, 116 Nassau St., New York. Drawings Government Bonds are not to be compared with any Lottery enterprise, as fairly decided by the Austrian Government.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER. Imparts a delicate, fascinating grace, imparts an exquisite, lasting and delicious perfume, and is the most perfect of all Complexion Powders. Ladies who use it are charmed with it. For sale by all druggists throughout the United States and Canadas.

Tutt's Pills stimulates the torpid liver, strengthens the digestive organs, regulates the bowels, and are unequaled as an anti-bilious medicine. In unfavorable climates they are strictly unrivaled, as they promote perfect digestion, and a healthy action of the system. Their gentle purgative properties are unexcelled. Sugar coated. Price 25 cents. Sold Everywhere. Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WEDDING PRESENTS. A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS. Fine Ones Made and Design. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations. Each set bears Handles, per pair, $1.00. Ask for Price's Carvers. Sold by all Dealers. Manufactured only by Price's Cutlery Co. Chicago. Ill. Factory at Meriden, Conn. Factory at Sheffield, England. Send C. O. D. if dealer cannot supply. Sent free on receipt of price.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 611 Kearny St.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 707. I WANT TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Cooks, Waiters, Waitresses, Chambermaids, Dishwashers, Laundresses, and Married Couples for private families and country hotels. Also Farmers, Farm Hands, without any charge to employers. Family cooking rooms for sailors at 608 Clay street.

JULIUS H. MEDAU, 968 and 970 Folsom St., San Francisco. WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALER. Established 1870. We are selling Cheap for Cash and nearer. Sole Agents for Kentucky Belle Whiskey. The following low prices will convince you. Per Gallon. Table Wines 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00 Angelica Wines $1, $1.50 and $1.75 Mount Vineyard (ery), $1.50 Old Port or Sherry, $1, $1.25, $1.75 and $2 Kentucky Whiskies $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4 Bourbon Whiskey, $2.50, $3 $3.50 and $4 Pisco Brandy, 50c, 60c, $2 per Gal. and upwards. Orders from out of town promptly attended to. Address JULIUS H. MEDAU, 968 and 970 Folsom St., San Francisco.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD. THE PACIFIC RIGHT OF WAY. (COMMENCING AT SAN RAFAEL) Will be completed and open for business in the Spring of 1882. Passenger Trains will leave the Ferry Foot of Market, at Tiburon. Leave S F. Leave San Rafael. Sunday Excepted. Sunday Excepted. Stations. 7 45 A M. 3 00 P M. 8 00 A M. 3 30 P M. 8 30 A M. 4 00 P M. 9 00 A M. 4 30 P M. 9 30 A M. 5 00 P M. 10 00 A M. 5 30 P M. 10 30 A M. 6 00 P M. 11 00 A M. 6 30 P M. 11 30 A M. 7 00 P M. 12 00 M. 7 30 P M. 12 30 P M. 8 00 P M. 1 00 P M. 8 30 P M. 1 30 P M. 9 00 P M. 2 00 P M. 9 30 P M. 2 30 P M. 10 00 P M. 3 00 P M. 10 30 P M. 3 30 P M. 11 00 P M. 4 00 P M. 11 30 P M. 4 30 P M. 12 00 M. 5 00 P M. 12 30 P M. 5 30 P M. 1 00 P M. 6 00 P M. 1 30 P M. 6 30 P M. 2 00 P M. 7 00 P M. 2 30 P M. 7 30 P M. 3 00 P M. 8 00 P M. 3 30 P M. 8 30 P M. 4 00 P M. 9 00 P M. 4 30 P M. 9 30 P M. 5 00 P M. 10 00 P M. 5 30 P M. 10 30 P M. 6 00 P M. 11 00 P M. 6 30 P M. 11 30 P

AN IRISH NUN.

Sister Mary Francis Clare.

SKETCH OF LORD LANSDOWNE.

How She Worked to Save the Pensantry of Ireland.

"I love that William 11 Hines, editor of The United Ireland, is in Canada," said Sister Mary Francis Clare, better known as the Nun of Kenmare, in a Sun, reporter when he called upon her at St. Joseph's Convent and Home in Jersey City. He is in Canada to show to the Irish there how little of a friend Lord Lansdowne, their Governor-General, really is to them. I think he will have an interesting story to tell, but I really think I can tell a more interesting one."

It was a cheery voice and it came from a woman under medium height, robed in the sombre garb of her Order—the Sisters of Peace. Her keen, gray eyes looked out upon the world through steel-rimmed spectacles, but behind the glasses could be detected the sparkled and twinkle that betrayed a happy, cheerful mind. As she walked across the floor to welcome the reporter her step was firm and labored. Her lack of strength came, she said, from a recent long and painful illness. But the enthusiasm in a sick chamber had not disturbed the calm mind of the good Sister, nor had it taken away her interest in the affairs of the world about her.

"I am glad you have come to see me, and I think I can tell better than any one else in America all about Lord Lansdowne's trouble with his tenantry, and she settled herself down in a rocking chair in the plain reception room of the convent where she now resides.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

"I was born just half a century ago to-day," she continued, "in county Meath. My people are all wealthy, and my wealthy name is Cusack. The present head of the family is Sir Ralph Cusack. I went to live in England when a very young girl and when about 21 years of age, through the influence of Cardinal Manning, was converted to the Catholic faith, my parents were Protestants. I was about 25 years old when I took the veil and became an inmate of the convent at Surry, county Down. In 1861 I went as a several Sisters to found a convent at Kenmare, in Kerry. Lord Lansdowne's grandfather was then alive, and it was with great difficulty that I obtained ground for the convent. Here I spent many years looking after the poor in Kenmare.

"LORD LANSDOWN'S HEREDITARY ESTATES

comprise most of the county Kerry. His tenantry number over 90,000 people. His home, Derrey Castle, is a lovely spot it is, is about twenty miles from the town of Kenmare. Lansdowne spends none of his time there, however. Most of the country is a grazing district, and is wonderfully fertile. The grandfather of the present Lord left the estate badly encumbered. He had spent most of his time in London, was a fast man, and so when the present Lord came into the property he found himself heavily encumbered. Lansdowne spends none of his time there, however. Most of the country is a grazing district, and is wonderfully fertile. The grandfather of the present Lord left the estate badly encumbered. He had spent most of his time in London, was a fast man, and so when the present Lord came into the property he found himself heavily encumbered. He at once set about retrenching. He he is a saving, parsimonious man, and by his estate is under the management of Townsend Trench, whom he thinks was made before him.

"If I was at the request of Parish Priest O'Sullivan, afterward Archbishop, and Father Kennare. I first had my attention called to the appalling suffering of the Irish people as a result of English governmental protection of the landlords almost sixteen years ago.

"I was looking from the window of the convent one day and my eyes turned to the road from Kenmare to Killarney, when I saw a very touching sight. A son and his family, who were going to America as the result of an eviction, was parting from his father, a gray haired very feeble man. I can never forget the grief of the son and the intense agony of the father at that parting. It was terrible, and I asked myself the question, 'Why is this so?' From that time on I made a study of the question. I looked at the matter from every side. I read the laws and acts of Parliament. I went among the Irish tenantry, saw their suffering and degradation, and I think I know from actual observation just to what depth of misery and want our people are sunken in this island."

When Gladstone's bill for the protection of the Irish tenantry was passed in 1870, the landlords availed themselves by requiring their tenants to sign an agreement not to take advantage of the provisions of the bill before the land would be leased to them. This fact came out by the evidence of Lord Cork's land agent, Lesby, in a trial in Cork about a lease. Then Lord Lansdowne through his agent, Trench, did as all the other landlords did at this time in this matter.

"THE GREAT IRISH FAMINE.

"In 1879 came the great famine. People absolutely starved to death. The crops were an entire failure throughout Ireland. Even the farmers with the large farms were obliged to ask for aid. The suffering was intense and very general. It was at this time that the title by which I am known—the Nun of Kenmare—was given to me. There passed through my hands for distribution to the suffering and starving over $75,000 that came from America alone. To this fund John Wanamaker of Philadelphia, the late John Kelly, and Gen. Sheridan's wife contributed largely, though most of it came from Cardinal McCloskey and the various American Bishops. This money I distributed, not through Kerry county alone, but throughout all Ireland.

"During all this time Trench, Lord Lansdowne's agent, was pressing the people for their rent. The heavy encumbrances must be removed. Trench boldly declared in the streets at Kenmare one day that he had made £10,000 for Lord Lansdowne that day. 'How are? was asked, for the assertion seemed foolish in those starving times. 'By raising the rents all around,' he replied. If the tenants were not able to pay the rent, then came eviction. This was purely the cause of the custom known in Ireland as 'hanging gale'—that is, every tenant owes to the landlord a fortnight's rent in advance. No matter if the rent is in reality paid up in full, there is always hanging over the head of the luckless tenant this fictitious debt, and upon that cause he may be evicted at any time.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST LANSDOWNE.

"But the special complaints against Lord Lansdowne for his actions at the time are two. The will in Kerry, though fertile, is very heavy and not easily worked. Every tenantry there runs through the country a sub-stratum of lime rock. Upon every farm there was a little lime kiln, where the farmers were accustomed to burn the lime rock for manure. Lansdowne spends none of his time in the country, but finally went to Kerry, county Mayo, to the Sunny Kerry, and in the south of Ireland, and in the only Irish Bishop who subscribed to the Queen's Jubilee. I decided to go back to the Convent Cluny at Newry, county Down

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

CALIFORNIA.

Ours is a wonderous land so strangely blest
With ancient rules and historic name,
With dreamy grandeur of the Orient West,
Young in its beauty, elder in its fame.

Sentinelled the realm of Montezuma's line,
Hat stripped of honor Rome's ancient pomp and show;
Northward Siberia's reaching tundras spine,
Crowned with eternal coronals of snow.

Within at our feet in subjugated glee
The broad Pacific chafes her rocky strand,
Bearing the freighted Argo o'er the sea,
To deck the glory of our sun-set land.

How doubly bright Eureka's golden day,
When plume-padoes tangle the truth Pizzaro,
Raising the Eureka with a peaceful sway,
And schooling his heart within some forest shrine.

Loading his steps on paths they humbly trod,
Turning the land to plenty and increase,
While o'er it all a pleasant and festive God
Smiled—and His smile was Joy and Peace.

That youngerdame is gone—and now no more
The Indians' rule arains fill the air,
But in their place another race adore
The bonstorous Giver of a clime so fair.

It's calm clear blue reflective Heaven's light,
Its golden sands richer than Jason's Fleece,
Its stately mountains distant to the sight,
Its forests—keepers of past centuries—

This was the prized Utopia—so famed,
And here the pioneer pilgrim's march was done;
"Eureka!"—"I have found it!" he exclaimed,
Before his eyes the Land of Promise shone.

C. A. D.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

MONTH OF MARY.

Year after year, sweet Mary,
The roses their incense bring;
O'er the earth—regrets of color glowing—
The incense speaketh—Spring.

Year after year, dear Mother,
Bears thee its month of flowers,
Its garden of paradise and vestiaus,
Its rosary of Vesper hours.

The blossoms, like interpreting words,
Unfolding truth and love,
Rest with the fane of blushing faith,
And white—as a white young dove
Spreads its wings in the sunshine
So the incense to the hallowed air,
Distinct their fragrant offerings
As tender and silent prayer.

But the roses have thorns, sweet Mother,
Smite them on our sorrows, too,
For the sake of the crown which pierced thy heart,
Keener than sagaski knew.

San Francisco, May 24, 1887.

FORTY YEARS AGO.

As recited by Martin F. Ward at the Gaelic school in Assumption Hall.

The eye has lacked its fusion and the colors lost its glow,
The hair that blackly clustered now is neither black nor dark;
The cheek has grown rigid and the steps are short and slow,
And not unlike Yorick' come to this same forty years ago.

Where stalwart youths and maidens fair in gleeful mazes danced,
Would join in prayer and worship there some forty years ago.

What joy to join the dancers or to press the cool sward on the Dun!
But the answer lies beneath the sod, and the silent lips are sealed.

There is hope in the skylark as I hear his music free,
And if he shows an rivals there some forty years ago.

No song of Thrush nor Blackbird nor cooing of the dove,
Nor cuckoo's soothing prelude can soothe or the summer dale,
No meadow sward nor wild mint nor thorn is full
Have shared with me their fragrance since full forty years ago.

No more to Temple castle or to view the pilgrim's cell,
No more my Beede I'll on at the holy Sunday well,
No more I'll climb the mountain or view the vale below,
Or sample with my sweet hearts of some forty years ago.

No more we hear O'Shanahan, O'Brien, Clery or the rest,
Nor a blast from Charley Fearson, the last of that crew,
No more the village piper hands down the melodies,
He blew his bagpipe the very last, full forty years ago.

Those golden days of sunlight have taken wing too soon,
I thought it was but morning, alas, it's after noon;
The thoughts recall both joy and grief, and the sad sweet mingled lore,
For those that wept or laughed with me some forty years ago.

No sense of artless rhyming nor power of life touch,
Nor emotionally replying can recall those bygone days,
But the faith that I have now I'll abide the final blow;
And share more lasting happiness than forty years ago.

The Pen.

IMPRESSIONS ON VISITING KILLARNEY

Where, under Heaven's high vaulted dome,
Will pour so pleasant dell a home,
Where nature with so gentle a hand
Has strewn her treasures o'er the land,
Art, nature harmonized in combined
To cater to the human mind.

Rose, mighty monument of art,
Your ancient castle, ivy-clad,
Where over the lake by night,
Mid the moonlight's silvery light,
The minstrel's song, the sister's blast,
Have not consigned thee to the past,
But in colonial might you stand,
A silent history of the land.

To reach thy summit, Ashtabo,
And view the wonders around below;
To breathe thy fresh untainted air,
And hear thy graveyard, say "beware,"
I carry not the man who can tire!
We decide a lad or a man, or kind,
To be gone to 60 and fight time
To one swift glance each mystery.

Tore, thy sensuous rock, some sublime,
In a sublime valley with foot time,
Near present, ever passing,
As if greater force absorbing,
Till to earth, great boom choosing,
Parched stone, life intoning.

Muckross, thy hallowed ruin so quaint,
Of resting place for sage or saint,
When I am called on to leave thy
From this fairyish home of bliss,
I hope would in the hours lay
My bones till the Eternal Day.

THEBES.

Literary Miscellany.

A Charming Legend.

The Story of the Giant Who Staggered Under a Choice Weight.

The popular legend of St Christopher has been in place by the pen of a gifted writer, "Kavanagh, the sweetest and pleasant of all the writers except "Ringlebone" but it has been told better and more fully by Mrs Jameson.

Most Roman churches contain a gigantic image of Christ, which is now out of place, and will find the story of St Christopher told about the limited-edition page, by the "Boy who stood on the Burn." But the same yen had written out the legend some what earlier in a slightly different form, which in certain parts is best suited to our purpose. We shall therefore skip sometimes from one version to the other, but the narrative shall still be the author of "Marcella Grace."

I will tell you the story of the mighty St. Christopher, who is too little known in our country. The same Christopher is dressed from two classical words which means a bearer, or carrier, of Christ. When travelling in foreign lands, many of us are greatly surprised to see a giant with a benevolent face and a little child perched on his shoulder, looking down on us from pillars and nooks of the great cathedrals. Sometimes he is made of stone, standing under the light of some pointed window, a huge limb, rough and boarded, leaning on a club, with face upturned to the face of the infant, who pats him his face with a tender impulsive smile. He is also to be found in rare old pictures, struggling through lonely waters in the dim twilight, only lighted on his way by the radiance of the little face above his shoulder. I have met him where rude but loving hands had made a coarse image of him on the corner of a street or over some humble doorway.

In a cornerstone of the quaint old German town of Trier. I found him striding along through grass-green waves, and dressed out in all the colors of the rainbow. Close by stood the Roman gates, black and green with age, and streaked with tawny stains like rust, but the golden sunrise crowned them with warm blood against their sides. The hot sun shone on the browning necks of the grain, and on the grotesque image of St. Christopher; on the monument of the past, which had remained through so many ages, and the picture sprang from a legend which had remained almost as long in the people's heart. At such a time I should have been very not to know the story of the giant, the good and mighty Christopher, who carried the Lord of the world upon his shoulders.

His friend in very old times, belonged to the land of Canaan, and his name was Offero. People feared and wondered at him because he was such a giant, and he grew so proud of his strength that he would serve no master but the greatest king that lived. And he set out to seek for the kingdom of the greatest king.

After traveling a long, long way, he arrived at last at the gates of a palace, which he was told belonged to the greatest king dom on earth; and he knocked upon the gate with a great, loud knock, which startled the king and his friends, who were at supper.

The servants were greatly astonished when they opened the gates and saw the visitor.

"Tell your master" said Christopher, "that Offero, the giant has come to serve him."

The king was delighted to hear this, and invited his visitor to sit beside him. In the palace, I am afraid of Satan," said the king.

"What?" cried Offero, "you are afraid of Satan. I shall go and find this Satan, and I will make him serve me, since he is greater than you."

And off he went into the night alone. He traveled through storms and cold, across dark forests and desolate mountains; and just as the dawn broke, he was crossing a blank waste, when he saw a strange, dark looking person coming to meet him out of the shadows.

"Where are you going fellow traveler!" said this person.

"I am seeking for one Satan," replied Offero, "for he is greater than the greatest king on earth. My strength is mighty, and I will serve only the most powerful monarch that is to be found."

"We are well met, then," said the strangger, "for I am Satan, and I will take you into my service on the spot."

Offero was delighted, and they traveled on together till after a long way, they came to where four roads met and formed a cross.

When Satan saw this he shook and trembled. "We must turn back," he said.

"Why?" said Offero.

"Because," said Satan, "I dare not pass that cross."

"Why?" said Offero again.

"Because of Jesus Christ, said Satan very unwillingly. "The Cross is His sign, and I am afraid."

"What! You are a coward, you!" cried Offero, "Then you are not the greatest king after all! I will go and seek for Jesus Christ, and Him only will I serve."

So he said good-bye to Satan, and went traveling still further in search of Christ.

He asked a great many people to show him the way to Christ's kingdom, but everybody could tell him, for this happened a long time ago, when there were very few Christians in the world. Poor Offero was quite disheartened; he wandered east and west and north and south in vain, it seemed to him that all his good strength was good for nothing, since he could not find out to the service of the greatest king.

At last one evening he met an old grey hermit in a lonely spot and asked him the usual question.

"Old man, can you show me the way to kingdom of Christ?"

"That I can," said the old man gently and with great surprise, and he invited the giant to rest in his cave, and there he explained to him that the kingdom of Christ is not of this world; you that a man may do magnificent service while on earth for this magnificent of kings.

"But it is a difficult service," said the hermit. "You must fast."

"I could not fast," said Offero, "for my strength is my only possession, and were I to fast it would only possession, and were I

"Do not know how to pray," said Offero.

"Well, then," said the hermit, "if you can neither fast nor pray, will you go to you can die for Jesus Christ," and he fell Offero out again and showed him a place where a great river rushed down between the rocks with very strong current and where almost every day numbers of people were drowned in trying to cross the stream when they were swept away by the rushing waters.

"Here, he said, "you may serve the Lord by using your great strength to carry the poor people through the torrent. If you are a true servant of God you will not weary of the task.

Offero stayed joyfully. He built himself a hut beside the waters, and when anyone came to cross the stream he called aloud for Offero. The giant rooted up a young pine tree to serve as a pole, and leaning on this he waded lowly day after day and night after night through the treacherous waters, thus saving the lives of hundreds of his fellow creatures who would have be lost away in the night of his great master and was patient.

One night when asleep on his hut he heard a voice calling him. He ran out to the stream and saw a little child standing on the bank. He ran to the stream and saw a little child standing on the bank. He ran to the stream and saw a little child standing on the bank. He ran

THE MONITOR.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF ST. FRANCIS'S

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The priests of the diocese of Poitiers presented Bishop Spalding with a purse containing $5,100 during the celebration of his tenth anniversary feta a few weeks ago.

—The death is announced of the distinguished Catholic journalist, Don Francisco Margarit, editor of the Madrid Correspondencia. The paper will continue to be conducted on the same lines by his brother, Commendatore Stefano Margarit.

—The Sacr à Congregation of Rites has ratified the Office and Mass proper with insertion in the Martyrology of the Blessed John of Rochester (Cardinal Fisher), the Blessed Thomas More, and the other English martyrs recently beatified.

—The Christian Brothers, who preside over the Catholic schools of Ireland, teach their pupils to say the Hail Mary whenever the clock strikes. The pious observance is generally carried out through life by those who have been under care of the Brothers.

—Mayor Roche, the newly-elected municipal representative of Chicago did a graceful act when he decided that Mr. Dunlam should continue in office as City Collector. He is one of the very best representatives of an Irish-American Catholic gentleman in the United States.

—We cannot imagine a more thick-headed, brainless and dogged conception to Gladstone's Home Rule policy than that made by Chamberlain, where a recent dispatch credits with saying: "The success of Gladstone's policy would destroy the country and ruin the working classes."

—The St. Louis Western Watchman, edited by Father Phelan, gives this cautionary advice to all men who employ trusty clerks and agents: "Don't employ a Catholic who does not go to Confession. He is either immoral, and you have to take care of your wives and daughters; or he is dishonest, and you had better look after your daily cash balances. Every priest will resoho this advice."

—News has reached Rome that in Spain, prominent Catholics under direction of the Bishops, are actively engaged in organizing a great pilgrimage which will be one of the first to arrive in Rome for the Sacerdotal Jubilee of Leo XIII. On account of the difficulty of communication experienced in the vicinity of the Pyrenees and the civil war during the winter, the Spanish pilgrimage will arrive in Rome next September, bearing thus the first offerings of the Catholic world to the Pope on his jubilee.

—Cardinal Manning is described by a recent visitor as "wardly impressive at night." Wearing his black cassock and scarlet cap, sitting by a blazing fire in his study, his Eminence will discuss any subject for hour to comer, and use 3000 words where 300 would do. The Kensington Oracle is not shy in the hearts of the Catholic masses that they taught their children secretly to hate themselves and to pray, so that the living of faith was thus secretly transmitted from generation to generation—even while the sectarian soldiers of Satan were watching from the ramparts of religious error for any sign of "Popery" among the Papists.

In 1836, the brig Geraldin arrived at Honolulu from Valparaiso, having on board Rev. Robert Walsh, a Catholic priest; and no sooner was this fact learned by the fanatical firebrands who formed Luther's league in Honolulu, than they determined to prevent any "Popish priest" from setting foot on the Sandwich Islands. Fortunately, however, Father Walsh was protected by the British Consul, and he went on shore, only to suffer untold annoyance through the calumnies of the Calvinistic preachers of persecution for conscience sake. Father Walsh, therefore was permitted to reside in Honolulu, provided he did not teach his religion. Such is a sample of sectarian "liberty" as understood by the Puritanical Congregationalists who first scared a crop of "cookie" in the Sandwich Islands.

Notwithstanding the unjust and illiberal conditions which the Protestant preachers imposed upon Father Walsh, he must have accomplished some good for God's cause during his stay at Honolulu, as we are reliably informed that in the year 1839 the number of Catholics had increased to 222, and, in 1840, the faithful flock of Christ had grown to 1,057 souls.

Finding the number of Catholics increasing—despite their despicable designs—the Protestant preachers abandoned their open hostility and persecution of priests in 1840, and, instead of the Pope's Bull being read from the housetops, the Protestant preachers adopted their system of undermining the Church of God in every manner they preached to the natives. In the latter year, therefore, the children of the Church had grown so numerous as to suggest to the Catholic missionaries the propriety of creating a vicar-Catholic for Almighty God's perpetual adoration. With this grand object in view, the first Catholic Bishop in Polynesia was consecrated, and the faith began to spread with miraculous rapidity among the native population.

Intolerance still continued to be poured forth from Protestant pulpits and from lecture platforms, but, as Catholics well understand, "when God is with us we care not who is against us." The Church continued to grow in an atmosphere of continuity and calumny. Natives were converted even whilst the air was filled with anti-Popery platitudes, and at last the Church gives of such importance in the Sandwich Islands that the Sovereign Pontiff at present glories only reigning created them into a Vicariate Apostolic, nominating the present Vicar Apostolic—Mgr. Hermann Koehnmann—who was consecrated at St. Mary's Cathedral, in this city, in August, 1881.

The Islands where the evil spirit of Protestant intolerance prevailed for many years, to the entire exclusion of Catholic missionaries, are now dotted with Catholic chapels, schools and charitable institutions. Twenty priests of the Society of Purpetual the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, are engaged in leading the native population to God's light. Besides the Cathedral already mentioned, there are in the Hawaiian group sixty-five churches and chapels to accommodate native congregations.

In Honolulu, the College of St. Louis is conducted by the Brothers of Mary, whose Mother House, there is located at Nazareth, near Bayeux, Diocese, their Mother House being at Paris, France. St. Louis College is attended by male pupils, while the females of educational age are under charge of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart, who have 600 scholars. The Franciscan Sisters from Syracuse, N. Y., have charge of the leper children and females on the Islands, they having charitable institutions of their establishment at Honolulu, and also at the leper colony on the Islands of Maui and Molokai. Schools under the charge of the Brothers of Mary, Father Damien, by leaders have been in operation on several of the Islands during recent years, and the fame achieved by Father Damien, the heroic priest who voluntarily surrendered himself to a life of perpetual exile and a certain death through dreaded leprosy, in order to save the souls of those who were victims to this terrible affliction, has brought the Hawaiian group into great prominence as another convincing proof that the Catholic faith makes heroes of human beings where other so-called living "missionaries are mere mercenary money makers who preach the gospel for pennies, shillings and pence.

The total population of the Hawaiian group at present is computed at 80,000 souls. Of this number 15,000 natives, 15,000 Portuguese, and about 2,000 European and American residents are Catholics, so that the grain of Faith good seed sown sixty years ago in this pagan portion of His Vineyard, has virtually grown into a great tree of Truth, whose branches spread over many Islands over which flutters the celestial emblem of the Cross of Christ.

The Pope and the Powers.

A cablegram from Rome, under date of the 25th ult., says that the Pope, in an allocution yesterday, referred to the religious peace with Prussia, which the Pope and he had made every effort to attain. Continuing the Pope said: "Thanks to the equitable and pacific sentiments of Emperor William and his counsellors, the Prussian Government removed the more serious inconveniences and then accepted the various practical conditions of peace by which some of the former laws against the Church have been repealed and others mitigated. Something remains to be done, but we must rejoice at what we have obtained, and above all in regard to the free actions of the Pope in the government of the Church in Prussia. God grant that Italy, which is peculiarly dear to us, may share the spirit of peace with which we are animated towards all nations. We remarks Prussia that Italy should put aside her unhappy differences with the Papacy, whose dignity is violated thereby by the conscription of sects. The means of obtaining concord would be objected to by no power in the enjoyment of full and not illusory rights, the free exercise of religion."

The Evictions at Bodyke.

It is actually pitiful to read of the inhuman cruelty of British landlords to their unfortunate tenants. Our pulse trembles, our eyes moisten, our lips relax, and the flush of indignant anger suffuses our cheeks as we endeavor to express our utter condemnation of the relentless tyranny of a foreign and viperous horde of landlords who unconscionably practice their God-dishonored brutality in the light of our 19th century, and with the brilliant notions of the world's world as witnesses of their wretched crimes which cry to Heaven for vengeance! The transactions at the Bodyke Island evictions will remain on record as a damaging evidence of English misrule in Ireland. Amidst all the exciting and sorrowful scenes that were enacted at Bodyke, we manage to find some gratification in knowing that the brave tenantry, led by the patriot Dwyer, resisted determinedly and with more than partial success the unjust invasion of their rights by leasing back the bullying British bailiffs with boiling water, and by knocking some into the scenes of the red coat soldiery with fists and stones. We are also proud and gratified to learn that the Supreme Arbiter was on hand to assuage in some degree the sorrows of his persecuted flock, and to stand side by side with Dwyer, pls and enter his solemn protest against the heartless cruelty and upon outrages perpetrated under the mask of legal sanction by the native and imported ruffian retainers of Irish landlords. The spirit of the Irish people cannot be broken by starvation, persecution or eviction. It will live and widen and grow stronger as England's Tory tyranny grows apparently more relentless and blood-thirsty. And when England finally exhausts her resources and recoils weakened from the combat with a great principle; this will, the genius, the valor and the manhood of Erin will unite in welcoming the peaceful dawn of Freedom and Home Rule. God grant that the time for such a glorious consummation is not far off.

—Mr Peter White is the American representative of the principal milling industries of Ireland, nearly all of which are consolidated into a company of which Michael Davitt and E. Dwyer Gray of the Freeman's Journal are active members. Mr White recently received a $40,000 order for woollen goods—the largest order ever sent to the mills of Ireland. "He is a fortunate representative for Ireland," says the Boston Pilot "a perfect business man and a sincere Catholic and singular simplicity. He will break the ice of every Irish industry. We congratulate him and the country he represents on his splendid success at the very start in America." And we also bid him Godspeed in his patriotic enterprise. Whatever tends to bring before the eyes of the world the industries and resources of Ireland, will also have a direct and beneficial influence on the present agitation for self-government.

Catholics and the Canadian Press.

It is a matter of congratulation for Catholics that because a few bigoted Orange journals have shown their illiberal and unchristian hatred of Catholics by rousing religious fanaticism in the operational field, the Catholic press of Canada is in a respectable grasp of Canada is in league with the lodge-room lying scribes who draw a small society from a point of unity and imported bigots by catering to their Irish prejudices. The case is entirely in the other way. Here are a few samples of the manner in which the press of Canada speaks of Mr. O'Brien and the imbecile tyrant, Lord Lansdowne. The Montreal True Witness says:

> It is perfect sympathy with the great mass of Canadians. The men who are called upon to opposition have demonstrated the Italians of their own, for some half-dozen years, by their entire zealous and incapable of meeting an opponent's argument either in fair debate or in such a manner as to win by threats of violence.

La Croix, a French paper of Montreal, has this to say:

> "If Mr. William O'Brien—admitted as one of the most eloquent Irishmen—is known in the Dominion of Canada he is also known as a man perfectly cool in dealing with the Canadian Tribune.
>
> Since the Governor-General has his duty with cheerfully, he does not send the commission to the Lieutenant-Governor of any of the provinces, in the exercise of his duty, of liberty of speech, or of action, which constitutes the glory of the British Empire. Lord Lansdowne at the tenants in Ireland as the Dominion of Canada. If Mr. O'Brien, it is not surprising that he is there looked upon as a dangerous agitator.
>
> "Do among the loyal French population of our province responded to the loyal of the Queen's representative. With the spirit of Long live O'Brien! down with the Orange tyrant!
>
> "If O'Brien came to Quebec to-day fifteen thousand people would meet him at the station and applaud him.
>
> "Even with the Orangemen, the race of ignorance, the prejudice of the Catholics, the enemies of Ireland, O'Brien is a hero.
>
> Another French journal, le Peuple du Bas Canada, says:
>
> "O'Brien, either of Ireland or Canada, is now visiting Canada, in order to announce the imminent ruin of the Orange Lodges. Ireland is acting very badly towards his former tenants in Ireland. From a private letter we learn that Gladstone makes very bad use of his influence in the Dominion of Canada. The Catholics of Ireland are not the only victims of the Orange lodges which Canada gives the Mother Country, and which the Mother Country tolerates upon him. Here he believes like a minister, he is called in his country, and whom he condescends to forgive as a great Frenchman. I appeal to the Catholics of Canada, to water he is a petty tyrant who grinds down his tenants and would like to deliver other Irish.
>
> "It is well known that the best tenants are those who have the most land.
>
> "Mr. O'Brien is accompanied by Mr. Kilbride, an evicted farmer, lately dispossessed by the agents of Lord Lansdowne. Mr. Kilbride is a man of the highest moral worth, and his character is which the Irish people have bestowed by the great lords whose ancestors stole Ireland from the ancestors, the Irish people.
>
> "Mr. O'Brien is a brave man. He went to Ireland to escape from the Tyrants, prepared to pay bailiffs.
>
> "He will have crowded meetings at Boston and New York, after which he will immediately return home to take his place in the Irish Commons. In his absence, he was last week elected member for the same borough as Parnell, by this it can be seen that Mr. O'Brien is not an adventurer. He was also a member of Parliament in the past, and is one of the strongest and most eloquent orators of the Irish Parliamentary party.
>
> The News, of Toronto, speaking of the lately of the O'Brien meeting in Toronto, says:
>
> "The great majority of those present were evidently anxious to hear the eloquent Mr. Mesmer, O'Brien and Kilbride, but a few applauded the Orange sentiments of Lord Lansdowne and the Orange Lodges of Ireland.
>
> "The great majority of those present were evidently anxious to hear the eloquent Mr. Mesmer, O'Brien and Kilbride, but a few applauded the Orange sentiments of Lord Lansdowne and the Orange Lodges of Ireland.
>
> "Amidst all the exciting and sorrowful scenes that were enacted at Bodyke, we manage to find some gratification in knowing that the brave tenantry, led by the patriot Dwyer, resisted determinedly and with more than partial success the unjust invasion of their rights by leasing back the bullying British bailiffs with boiling water, and by knocking some into the scenes of the red coat soldiery with fists and stones. We are also proud and gratified to learn that the Supreme Arbiter was on hand to assuage in some degree the sorrows of his persecuted flock, and to stand side by side with Dwyer, pls and enter his solemn protest against the heartless cruelty and upon outrages perpetrated under the mask of legal sanction by the native and imported ruffian retainers of Irish landlords. The spirit of the Irish people cannot be broken by starvation, persecution or eviction. It will live and widen and grow stronger as England's Tory tyranny grows apparently more relentless and blood-thirsty. And when England finally exhausts her resources and recoils weakened from the combat with a great principle; this will, the genius, the valor and the manhood of Erin will unite in welcoming the peaceful dawn of Freedom and Home Rule. God grant that the time for such a glorious consummation is not far off."

Pleasure in Simple Things.

There is hardly a more fortunate endowment than the power of finding pleasure in simple things. The heart which is easily satisfied is the happiest heart. When the feeling of a flower is the most full when he looked only for grass and rushes, brings light to the eyes and a smile to the lips. When a chance meeting with a friend, seen in a country lane, a walk by the shore, or the coming of a letter which he is expected, makes the morning delightful, the pleasure of the day, the happy man is meant is to be congratulated.

We talk of the art of pleasing, the art of being pleased is equally as desirable, and almost equally as attractive. The joy of many a young life is that, before the blossoms of youth with has faded, the taking for granted of the friends, proves and people, bishop. Longfellow of Brooklyn, has broke ground for a 5,000 school building and a prosperous Diocese, and in the course of an address on that occasion he expressed the numerous value of Catholic schoolmen.

> "One of the most important duties that devolve upon the Catholic Church is to see that suitable schools are provided for the youth, so as to fit in due course of nature the citizens of a free state, and better the world which is beyond the grave. Nothing low only for a time. One of the grandest things on earth is to be duly prepared for our last moments in this world. Without religion the highest attainments will not avail the human race. Religion is the groundwork of happiness. Education, properly given, is a blessing. It enables men to appreciate the glories of religion. From the beginning of the world the most learned men have been the most zealous advocates of the Church. It is the duty of the Church and of parents to prepare children for a happy life hereafter in the world to come. I see youth about me. They will doubtless become people of the schools the ground for which I have just now broken, and I trust, in the future, worthy citizens of our great, happy and glorious country

Farm and Home.

An Early Start

In these three words may be found the secret of most successful work in the home of housekeeping. Alas for the houses that are hurried all day and every day! The fraction in such homes is very wearing. The minutes rise late, the breakfast is behindhand, hurriedly prepared and hurriedly eaten, and things are at sixes and sevens the whole day. And so it goes on through the week. Monday's washing is begun late, and lops over into Tuesday. Tuesday's duties make inroads upon Wednesday, and so all the various special duties of each day. In many cases a difference of half an hour, or even less, would make all the difference. It is false economy to spend an extra fifteen minutes in bed when one has to pay for it by hurrying all day to make up for the lost quarter of an hour.

One Name Sufficient.

"Give your daughter but one name in baptism," cried out a thoughtful clergyman once, "and she ought to be perfectly content with that." This brings us to speak of a custom coming only too much into vogue of dropping the good, old fashioned English terminations of female Christian names adopting the "ie" termination, in imitation of the French. Hence our Johns, Sallies, Caddies, Mattie, Pullie, Lucie, Mamie, Nellie, Kittie, and what is to be deplored of all, Marie. This "Marie" is a corruption of Mary, the sweetest of all female and female names. It is derived from the Hebrew and signifies "exalted." The Magnificat will show the great exaltation of Mary the Blessed Virgin, who was Mother of the Son of God and such a Mother as all ages since her time the name of Mary has been conceded to be the most exalted, and in pious Catholic families it is most always preferred for a daughter. Let the great name of Mary, therefore, continue to be preferred. It is not only endorsed to us by religion; it has ever been a favorite name with the poets.

What is Good Breeding.

Genuine good breeding is simply a general wish in life which always avoids giving unnecessary pain, which seeks itself, and which is uniformly kind to all people. A factory girl in this sense may be and often is as well bred as a princess.

The very height of good breeding is to behave one's self properly, and there are millions of hard working matrons and maidens who can do that, and such are more than that. The flowers and the fun, the frolics and the fairy-like abundance of enjoyment which wealth can purchase, are often, it may seem, unequally divided.

But good breeding, the art of always being frank and yet dignified, of patient self-control, of thought for others, of kindness to all, is as general as the gift of a heart. A duchess, in the best sense of the term, is no more well-bred than a milkmaid, if the latter has a gentle mind and disposition.

A Remarkable Dog Story.

John Templeton is the blacksmith who a few specimens of the English mastiff. Recently Mr. Templeton was working in his forge, putting a new steel in a peck. The new steel was slightly burned in the heating, and, instead of welding, flew in half a dozen pieces. One piece struck the blacksmith just above the right eye with such force as to fasten itself in firmly. The blacksmith staggered and fell backward. How long he was unconscious he does not know, but when he recovered the big piece was where he had first struck it, the piece lay a short distance from the dog. The faithful brute had added the hot steel with his teeth and drawn it from the frontal bone of Mr. Templeton's head. The dog's mouth was found to be badly burned.

Switchers of Bird Flight.

Thomas Alexander, in his book entitled "Game Birds of the United States," says that wild ducks, smelled by the wind, fly from sixty to one hundred miles an hour, and that the blue-winged teal, "going fast, the wind at the top of his speed, will make fifty-one hundred and fifty miles an hour—possibly more." The swiftest bird on the wing is the frigate bird, a sort of pirate bird of prey. Sailors believe that it one start at the pop of duck from the coast of Africa, and follow the duck trade winds, land on the American coast before sunset. It can undoubtedly fly more than two hundred miles an hour, but we do not know of any trustworthy record of the speed of which it is capable.

—A good word is an easy obligation, but not to speak ill requires only our silence, which costs us nothing.

—The golden beams of truth and the silken cords of love twined together will draw men on with a sweet violence, whether they will or not.

—What man want is not talent, it is purpose; not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.

A LETTER

From the Mother of Miss Jessie Benedictus.

Rochester, N. Y., April 22, 1886.

GENTLEMEN:—It is with pleasure I add my testimonial to the many well-known cases which your most excellent remedy has effected. For more than two years I was a great sufferer with rheumatism, being scarcely free from pain during the time. I found no relief until I procured Dr. Pardee's remedy, and it cured me completely. It is now two years since I discontinued its use and I have had no symptoms of the disease since. I know from my own and from the experience of many others also, that it will cure any case of rheumatism or neuralgia.

I am, very truly yours,
MRS. H. S. BENEDICTEUS.

Syracuse, N. Y.

GENTS:—I have been troubled with Rheumatism for three years, at times very badly afflicted; was in that condition about two weeks ago, when I got a bottle of Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy, and in three days time was greatly relieved, and have not been troubled with it since I finished this bottle. I feel like recommending it in the highest terms, as I believe it will do all that is claimed for it.

Yours truly,
JOHN BLODGETT,
63 Mill St.

Lockport, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—I think the medicine prepared by the Pardee Medicine Company is in fact the best rheumatic medicine now on the market; its equal is not known. My boy only six years old was confined to his bed with rheumatism; I got a bottle of the medicine and in a few days he was out of bed and playing around the house. I can cheerfully recommend this medicine to all rheumatic sufferers.

J. K. PERRY, Shoe Dealer.

Ask your druggist for Dr. Pardee's Remedy and take no other. Price $1 per bottle; six bottles, $5.

Pardee Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Family Fun.

Commercial Courtesy.

Clerk Silverstone—"Mister Schaumberg, in dat forme I want you to draw me out me mit more politeness and considerations."

Boss Schaumberg (indignantly)—"You want more politeness, eh! You blame fool, you think I boys you terrebble titlers I vook to make mashes on you, eh!"

Birthday Compliment.

Jones—"This is my birthday, Smith."

Smith—"Indeed! How old are you?"

J.—"Just forty to day."

S.—"Humph! Forty! Well, there is an old saying that every man at forty is either a fool or a physician. You are not a physician, I believe!"

Who Was Sold?

"Sambo! You infernal scoundrel! Where are you?"

"Dis you call, massa?"

"Did I call? Oh, no; I was just whispering to myself. Where are those shoes of mine?"

"Why, massa, you tole me take 'em down an' hab 'em soled."

"Well," (impatiently) "that was last week; it ought to be done by this time."

"Ah dun done, sah! I took 'em to a Jew on Sabenth street, an' he sold 'em yesterday. Hesh am de money, sah, twenty five cents, sah."

The Journalist's Revenge.

Tired Reporter—"Mr. Sneers, the men you sent me to interview a girl mad."

Mr. Sneers—"Ha ha!"

"And choked me."

"Eh?"

"And bit me in the eye."

"Ye Powers!"

"And kicked me down stairs."

"The low lived scoundrel! Spell his name wrong!"

Making His Son Work

Jay Gould—"Want a yacht, sah! Well, you've got to make the money to buy it. I'll take a walk down the street."

Son George—"Yes, father."

"I'll sip on the parlement."

"Yes, father."

"And have myself brought back in an ambulance."

"Yes, father."

"Then sleep with drop and you buy."

"Yes, father."

"Then I'll go out on the front pavement and dance a jig."

"Yes, father."

"Your stocks will go up and you sell."

After a Market.

Traveling Man—"What state are we in now?"

Conductor—"Kansas."

"Kansas! Kansas! My gracious! This is a prohibition state, isn't it?"

"Yes, been a prohibition state for a long while."

"I'm sick at the first important town."

"Have you a temperance lecturer?"

"No, I'm selling a remedy for the jim-jams."

"Be Properest Way."

"Which am de properest way to suppress cocoa?" Does yer say? "We sets at de table, or, 'we has dun sip at de table?' Ah, yes, de properest way of doing dis question, which was:

"In de same ob you two niggahs none ob you am right."

"What am de proper way to say: 'We sated at de table, Uncle Moses?'"

"De properest way for sich cattle as you two am to say: 'We fed at de trough.'"

She Took a Flyer.

"Is this where they sell stocks?" she asked, stepping up to the counter with sagging top-piece.

"Yes-m. Did you wish to invest?"

"Well, yes—no; the fact is, I don't know exactly. My Cousin Charley does nothing but buy stocks, and they say he makes lots of money. Now I thought I'd like—

"Ah, yes, I understand. You thought you'd take a flyer."

"Yes, I guess that's what I wanted. What funny names you brokers have."

"And what stock do you desire?"

"Oh, I want one of those you buy for ten dollars and sell to morrow for fifteen."

"Just so. Keely Motor is what you want."

"Is it? Well, of course you know. You ought to cut off a few samples, I suppose! I don't know, you know, whether they are wanted by the lady who asked me to inquire, you know."

"Very sorry, madam, but we never give patterns."

The lady looked straight into his face, tossed up her chin and flounced out with the remark: "Well, I swear!"

Small Smiles.

A sickly smile—Lemonade.

It is a paradox that of all shoes a fell shoe is the least fair.

The only man we can excuse for wanting the earth is the pottery manufacturer.

A "premature smile" is one that comes in a woman's face before she is married.

The red flag in Chicago will hereafter signify that the Anarchist party is up at auction.

Explorer Stanley's arrival at Bassam would seem to argue that he is standing on slippery ground.

The Honest Nine may live on nectar and ambrosia but none of them can command a $10,000 a year salary.

It is never too late to mend; but a man cannot expect to have a button sewed on much after midnight.

It was the Old Woman.

Every drunken man thinks all the rest are drunk, and he is the only sober one. Lucy now may be more intelligent, but they are just about as near.

An eastern dreamer who was in Knoxville listened to the complaints of a mountaineer about very hard times, for ten or fifteen minutes, and then observed:

"Why, man, you ought to get rich, playing green corn in the Northern market."

"Yes, I reckon," was the reply.

"You have the land and can get the seed, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you go into the speculation?"

"No sir, stranger," sadly replied the native; "the old women in yo-onder may be able to do the plowing and planting."

Ever since Adam blamed his sin upon his wife, women have been bothered enough ready to charge their wives with the results of their own shiftlessness.

—Telephoning between New York and Philadelphia is now as easy as it was between points about a block apart a few years ago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. PARDEE'S REMEDY is The Greatest Blood Cleanser. Cures Spring Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Sciatica, Rheumatism, AND Constipation REGULATES The Kidneys & Liver.

IF YOU HAVE MALARIA OR PILES, SICK HEADACHE, DYSPEPSIA, COSTIVENESS, SOUR STOMACH and SEASICKNESS it will cure them and are similiated and you have an appetite. Tutt's Pills

Sold Everywhere.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS. He Cuts Meat and Dodges. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

Buck or ivory Handles, per pair ... $1 00
Price's Celebrated Razors, extra strong and in red lint ... 1 00
Both with a plating ... 1 50
Price's Celebrated Razors of English and American Tools ... 2 00
Price's Celebrated Razors, 6/8, 7/8, 8/8 ... 3 00
Strop and repairing.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 415 Kearny St.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 606 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 787.

A WATE TO BE HAD—FIRST CLASS HOTELS, Help, Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Bakers, Butchers, Gardeners, Grocers, Waiters, Chambermaids, private families and laundries, and good reliable Female Help, without any charge to employers. Switch shifter wanted for sawmill at 300 Clay street.

JOS. PESCIA, Physician and Surgeon RESIDENCE, 1230 Taylor Street. OFFICE, 611 Wash-ington Street.

McCORMICK BROS., Book and Job Printers, 410 Sansome St., 410

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.

QUICK TIME AND CHEAP FARE To Eastern and European Cities via the Great Transcontinental All-rail Route of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. (Pacific System.) Daily Express and Emigrant Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East. For sale at all Coupon Offices in the United States and Canada. Through Tickets to all points in the East, Europe, Australia, Africa, Mexico, Central and South America, Japan and China, may be secured in San Francisco at the Company's office, 613 Market street, opposite Palace Hotel. Baggage checked at Market street, and Ferry Depot, Oakland, free of charge. Sleeping Cars are run through without change between San Francisco and New Orleans, and Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars through to Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Montreal, Quebec and the Canadian Pacific Railway. Emigrant Sleeping Cars through to Boston, Montreal, Quebec and the Canadian Pacific Railway. Emigrant Sleeping Cars through to Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Montreal, Quebec and the Canadian Pacific Railway. Emigrant Sleeping Cars through to Boston, Montreal, Quebec and the Canadian Pacific Railway. Emigrant Sleeping Cars through to Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York,

OUR SCHOOLS.

Graduating Exercises of the Various Catholic Institutions

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of St. Mary's College took place yesterday at the Union Opera House in the evening of Tuesday, June 21st, were of a character to indicate the high state of every one of the pupils of this institution in all of every sense of the word of Christian education. The vast Opera House was crowded. The stage was occupied by the members of the graduating class and by the clergy of the city. Hi Honor Mayor Sullivan, Archbishop Alemany, Archbishop Gross of Oregon City, the Archbishop of San Francisco, Rev. Father Chiesa of Chicago and Rev. J. E. Cross of the Oakland, were seated in a prominent position. Many other clergymen were noticed. Rev. Joseph Sadoc Alemany, Rev. Father Prendergast, Rev. Father Gallagher, Rev. Father Bernard, Rev. Father Shinnick, Rev. Father Caverly, Rev. Father Scott, St. Joseph's, Rev. Father Barry, St. Patrick's, Rev. Father Shea, St. Ignatius' Church, Rev. Father Kelly, St. Peter's, Rev. Father Mullarkey, Star of the Sea, Rev. Father Wadhams, Rev. Father Brady, Rev. Father Sorin, Rev. Father Kenny, Rev. Father Shinnick, Rev. Father Caverly, Rev. Father Scott, Rev. Father Barry, Rev. Father Shea, Rev. Father Kelly, Rev. Father Mullarkey

OUR SCHOOLS.

Graduating Exercises at the Various Catholic Institutions

AT MARY'S COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of St. Mary's College which took place on Wednesday, June 29th, were of the usually interesting character. The attendance of the cities of Oakland and San Francisco on this occasion was crowded. The stage was occupied by the graduates of the graduating class and by students of the college. His Grace, Most Rev. Archbishop Riordan, Rev. Brother Mary, Rector (Chancellor of the Archdiocese), Rev. Father Bernard Chiesa and Rev. Father Brown of the College, were stationed prominently on the stage. Among the other stage boxes were noticed Rev. Father Rade, S. J., and several others. Brother Ignatius Church, Rev. Brother Mary, Rector, Rev. Br. Cassian, Director, Br. Cyprian, Prefect of Discipline, Rev. Br. Oswald, Vicar, Rev. Br. Gerard, Rev. Br. Ignatius, Rev. Br. Victor, Rev. Br. Valentine, Rev. Br. Leander, Rev. Br. Patrick, Rev. Br. Leopold, Rev. Br. Aloysius, Rev. Br. Ambrose, Rev. Br. Alphonsus, Rev. Br. Cornelius, Rev. Br. Sebastian, Rev. President of St. Mary's College, Rev. Father Brown, Rev. Br. Boniface, Rev. Br. Gregory, Rev. Br. Peter's school, Rev. John J. Robinson, Master Robinson, Master Frank Robinson, Master Donnie Robinson, Master Maurice Kennally, Chaplain of St. Mary's, Rev. Bro. Simon, Director Head College, Rev. T. Brenaghan, St. Bridget's, Rev. Br. Jerome, St. Bridget's, Rev. P. O'Connell, St. Mary's, Rev. J. Caswell, Immaculate Conception, Church, Oakland, Rev. John Cassidy, St. Peter's, Rev. B. A. Foley, Napa, Rev. J. M. Donald, Berkeley, Rev. Bro. Lentulus, St. Patrick's school, West Oakland, Rev. Bro. Lawrence, St. Joseph's Academy, Oakland, and about 200 persons from the various schools of the College and Academy of the Christian Brothers were also present. The exercises commenced promptly at 7:30 P. M.

The orchestra having rendered in a pleasing manner an overture entitled "Globe March," Mr. Edward Fitzpatrick came forward and delivered an essay on the late Charles J McCloskey the truly lost eloquently recounted the life and labors of that distinguished patriot and paid a glowing tribute to the virtues and abilities that characterized his earthly course.

"Mother Machree" by the Glee Club, followed by the choir, after which Mr. Thomas Phelan came forward and in a pleasing manner presented his essay on the subject, "Patrick Mahoney." Father Mahoney was a priest. The speaker extolled the zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls that marked the life of this worthy son of St. Ignatius, as well as his unbounded charity to the poor of him to presents his explorations of an unknown land, thereby making known to the world the grandeur, beauty and heroism of the Missionary Priest. All this was a worthy tribute to the memory of the departed.

"Victory Overcomes Day," a double quartette excellently rendered by the St. Cecilian Glee Club, followed. The essay on "Woman's Influence in Society" was read by Master Mahoney, and "Hail Mary," showing an expanded range of feeling on the subject. He lamented the great spread of infidelity in France, which reached its climax at the time of the Commune. Modern infidelity, he said, was the legitimate daughter of the so-called Reformation, when reason became the supreme god before which men bowed down in service and adoration. He showed that the history of the Catholic Church and its influence was the only safeguard against the flood of infidelity, and that knowledge and moral development and the common good of society, of kings, and that liberty and morality are deeply rooted.

An interlude "La Souvenir" by the orchestra was the next number on the programme.

John S. Barrett gave an interesting history of the "Redemptorists" from the time of the organization of the Society of the Holy Trinity in 1726 and that of Our Lady of Mercy in 1729 through the long years when hence men dared to their lives to redeeming fellow Christians from the bondage in which they were held in the interest for which they were established was accomplished. Nothing now remains but to, of those who were, to pray that the members are devoted to Mont-mary labors and the education of youth. The manner in which Mr. Barrett treated the subject, and his graceful allusion elicited the hearty applause of the assembly.

"Ave Maria" by the choir followed.

An impromptu song in response to shouts of "Yoke Dunne," from Master Dunne, "Oh! Cruel Bulls," sweetly sung by John A. Conlon and Joseph J. Farrow.

"Ownership in Property" so presented by Mr. John J. Mahoney would in all probability set forth the anathemas of Henry George & Co. the essayist said that the advocates of Communism are making an onslaught on society. They insist on taking their property, if property they be, to the minds of the working classes, and it is deeply to be regretted that these advocates of Communism receive the support of many, who should be the conservators of the rights. Such had been the Anti-Christian teachings in the fourth century St. Augustine, who thought capital shelter spiritual, was called by a sect calling themselves Apostolici. By close adherence to the teachings of Christ, Mr. Mahoney proved the undeniable right of man to acquire, possess and enjoy the goods which inheritance has brought, as well as those which, by his ability, energy and industry have enabled him to acquire.

The choir sang a rondo (Gaetano) "The Farmer and His Bride" then Mr. Charles W. Lynch commenced a brilliant essay on "American Literature," speaking from the French philosophy, a. The Bonald, herald, "Literature is the expression of society." Claiming that the speaker observed closely the rules laid down by our common humanity, and intended at one aim, whether it be fictitious or real in poetry or prose, consists within the appropriate portrayal of literature. To complete a nation's greatness something more than force of arms is required. Monuments or crumble, empires fall, and even the evidence of their desolation may pass away, but if any thing survives it is the thought of a people exhibited by the creative magic of literature, a true nation is young, but already she has taken her place in the first rank of literature.

The choir having sung a vocal quartette, "The Song of the Whippoorwill," Mr. John F. Richards, the last speaker on the programme, discussed on the "Irish in America." His subject was one that appealed to the feelings of the audience, and he handled it in such a way as to call forth frequent bursts of applause.

"Nor Forget the Poor" was the theme of the essay of Liberty in America and Ireland. The Irish people had ever been the champions of liberty, and the Irish people had ever been the champions of the freedom where liberty's bell rang out the call to arms. That patriotic band were first man with I-y. They rushed into the field, and side by side with the men of other climes, England found arrayed against her in the new world the same fearless foeman whom on a century of opposition could not subdue in the old. Intimately linked with the names of Adams and Washington are those of Sirkie, Wayne, Pitcher, Rice and Moylan, Irish men, Irish men, true, and then there was many Irish Navy and Irishmen, who fought for the Navy and Army, and Irish men, who fought for the Navy. Mr. Richards said that the awakening glory of the Irish in this country—a glory arising from deeds most fruitful in blessings to this land in the number of distinguished men and saints whom they have given to the cause of religion and education, the faithful priests administering to the people, the noble sisterhoods which have done such a splendid work in many and in fostering charity and wounded, whose ranks have year been largely recruited from the virgin daughters of the island of Saint.

The essay of the young gentleman were universally praised.

The audience was for above that generally fond of the subjects, the English was polished and scholarly, and they were all delivered in a style which showed considerable natural ability and careful training by the instructor is identified.

In the absence of Rev. Rev. Bottelle, President of the College, the Archbishop, Rev. Rev. Sebastian conferred the honors, His Grace presenting the decorations and diplomas to the honor recipients. The Hold Medal for achieve in Christian Doctrine, donated by the Most Rev. Archbishop, which was so closely and vigorously contested, was won by Mr. John Dunne of Class of 88. His Grace placing the medal upon the young gentleman, Master Joseph Dunne, Master Frank Dunne, Master Donnie Dunne, Master Joseph Dunne, Master Joseph Dunne, Master Joseph

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

A DREAM.

Only a dream, like a fitful gleam
From the shadow world of thought;
Only a bright antelope shy,
Touched by the care of sought.
I dreamed I bound, with sought of sound
To me like music full,
An island bright, 'mid sunny light,
And all things fresh and fair.
The sweep dash high, and the winds low sigh,
Around my island shore,
Yet it came to pass there was no grass,
Is calmly breathing of me.
My soul at rest—my heart a nest
Of peaceful thoughts and still,
Yet as it seemed, for something gleamed,
And through my soul did thrill.
The sky's arched was pierced with red,
With streaks of glory bowed;
The amber gaze, where angels wall,
On pinion shape turned;
And fonds of might, of heavenly light
Came pouring through jubedum,
A pathway rare, for form most fair
For angel feet to press.
They came alone, their spirit strong,
And seemed to fill the air;
In sun I gazed, and all amazed,
My dark was spell-bound there.
The heaven-sent band, by grains of sand
Which crowd the wide seashore,
As dream of the sea they seemed to me,
As I tried to count them o'er.
They hovered yet, and seemed to fit
Ash-cast in summer sky,
Then one by one they sailed adown,
Below where dwell bells lie.
And one went east, and one went west,
Unto the haunts of men,
Unto the homes where love s'er reams,
And which chastening sorrows kiss.

* * *

When an infant form, a babe new-born,
In its mother's arms is pressed,
By a spirit brightness, whose own's own light,
By an angel-guard is blessed.
When from heaven is sent, to earth is lent,
The little child most dear,
A band of might, from more till night
Will make its pathway clear—
Will guide its feet o'er childhood fleet,
And own youth's bright day,
And when manhood speeds, to see it leads,
Our spirit-land way.
Aye; from more of life, till death of strife,
Till the world's strife is o'er,
And we stand alone before heaven's throne,
And our Judge and Lord adore.
And the angel voices, as the demon knays
He records dark, yet clear,
And points the white, with threes'ning smile
As our spirit quakes with fear.
While our angel-guide, the ill to hide,
With his cause to blot it out,
Will mark the line, which must s'er assign
Our victory or rout.
Or What joy will be to pen and me,
When the balance of good will slide,
And we stand beside the angel band,
At our angel-guardian's side.

* * *

And this was the dream, like a fitful gleam,
Which illumined my soul with light,
As I gazed s'er head, in a sky all red,
At the beautiful wonderous sight.
How it startled my heart, and from seeking apart
The meagre comfort of man,
I turned to my God, like a broken rod,
And I cried aloud for Heaven's shrouds,
Which wrapped my soul from light;
Oh, God! please now on the sinner's bow
Thy benediction bright;
And keep my soul, with Thy control,
And let it s'er be true;
Until it wake at the amber gaze
Within the Father's home.

LORETTO E.

San Francisco, June, 1867.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

SEIN'S DEFIANCE.

We have flung the gauntlet at you,
Cursed tyrants—at you all;
By the die of our own casting,
We shall stand as we shall fall;
You have rifled, starved and killed us,
Thro' the wrecks of ages past,
But we'll tear our birthrights from you,
Though you clutch them strong and fast.
Oh! we are not now cowering
At the scope of Royalty's throne;
We come not to thee weakened
With starvation's plaintive moan;
But we stand before you, tyrant,
With your Throne and your lords,
Heading not your threats of potent,
Nor the slight of guns and swords.
Bold is front we stand, Victoria—
Fool dangerous is Victor's sight—
With the might of brain and bullet
To secure us in our rights;
And a living God of Justice,
Who has record of thy crimes,
Will award the triumph to us
In His Mercy's just designs.
So; come on! ye lords and Sirkes,
With Cossacks's cruel ban;
To oppress a valiant people,
Here we wish ye, man to man;
And our eyes shout forth defiance—
Not an inch do we retreat,
By the home, noble mother,
Ye will know what is defeat.
While our arms are strong to strike ye,
While our life is in the land,
While the Genius of our nation
Has its dwelling in hand,
We will keep a tireless vigil,
We will wage a ceaseless fight,
Till the glow of Freedom's sunshine
Lights Oppression's weary night.

C. ANTHONY DOYLE.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

OH GOD ALL.

Man's life is formed of love,
Man's love steeps all in light;
It is the priceless gift
That endows all things bright;
That makes life worth living,
And dash the darkest night.
Death! that iron force severs
Friend from Friend's fond embrace;
Then Hell Heart Hope whispers:
"In Hell's home you're a place;
In light—Hell's bright shadow,
You'll see Him face to face."
Love feels no Hope. Th'well;
But what we see our own
Beyond man's world, so dark
For want of love. So long!
Shall we see them, know them,
Love them—same in heart and form?
In God we feel perfected
That which is man here;
He, the Good, the Perfect!
Man, the Good, the Wise,
Shadow by His every attribute,
And His shadow we love.
Shall we remember our loved?
Who can self? You ask I.
Methinks they will remember
Whom, as man, in the day
Before that great light, the Sun;
Enough we know—"In God only."

JACQUELINE.

Literary Miscellany.

Breaking Through the Mist.

A Catholic Story of California.

WRITTEN FOR THE MONITOR BY MISS MAY ROSCOMBE.

CHAPTER IV.

We will pause a very little while with Army in the pleasant town of O——. The Angelus has long since pealed from the convent. She, stands in the aisle gateway. Her hand clasps Sister Philomena's.

"One kiss, Sister. No scolding," she says playfully.

"My child, your walk is lonely at this hour. It was wrong to come."

"O, Sister Philomena, above is faith! Must we avoid all reliance on God's calls. Did blind Cecelia ever have a thought of fear in her ramble through Pagan Rome?"

"No dear, but—"

"But," Army interrupts sweetly. "Your prayers are protection."

She goes a short distance wrapt in the blaze of having knelt for the first time with the holy inmates of convent walls, when she hears her own name spoken in a tone of pleased surprise. It is almost dark so she does not instantly recognize the speaker.

"Mr. Black" she says, delighted, yet with a vague uneasiness. "Can it be really you?"

"It is really me. The same question almost escaped my lips. When we parted we little dreamed of meeting here. Didn't you promise to watch for me at the old mill some day next September?"

"Yes. For there the water falling like music through the rusted machinery, the hundred broken windows, where I imagine ghosts flirting in the moonlight; the Autumn leaved ivy—all are living poetry, that you alone can appreciate."

"Cannot Claude?"

"Mr. Chandler has something else to think of," she is angry with him for mentioning Claude. "I hate to talk to you because you are only a schoolboy. Aren't you?"

"I used to be," he says, not very sensibly.

"Pardon me, Mr. Black. You have looked books aside during vacation, I suppose, and naturally do not enjoy hearing about them?"

"I keep my book." She wonders if he intends presenting a Bible. He shows her a pocket-book. "You remember it?"

"Give it to me, quick! I am going to read that page."

"You shall some day. It is not complete." He smiles.

"What! Couldn't you spare me even a few moments thought?"

"I have wasted many," he expected to find her slightly embarrassed, while here she is exasperingly indifferent.

"Well, if you will be so agreeable. It might prove dangerous to remain longer with you. So—good-by."

"It may be forever," he says, detaining her hand.

"And if may be for years," she hums softly.

"Why, yes. How also!" Why does the laughter die on her lips, and that sharp pain shoot through her heart as her eyes meet his?

"Army, Army," calls a grisly voice. She draws her hand from his and hurries toward the house. On the piazza she turns and looks at the figure rapidly moving from sight. "Perhaps I shall never see him again," she says with a little regretful sigh. Then smiles and he is forgotten for the present.

A gloomy November day is slowly closing. Claude and Army are resting in the centre of a grove of charred pines. The falling, hazy sunlight casts long, fearful shadows across the yellow grass, moving gently in the Autumn breeze.

"Just the place for a duel. Look Claude, even the grass." Slipping away from him she lays one hand on a blackened trunk, while the other plucks a red rosebud from the bosom of her snowy dress, and drops it reverently into the excavation. "Years ago Clara Harris and I played 'Marmion and Douglas,' on this very spot.

"Months ago, Army Delbus, I lay on this very spot through the darkness and dew of a whole night thinking of you. Had other scenes, but your face shone free among them all. There is one whom I would wish to meet here." His eyes flash and his breath comes in short gasps.

Army gazes bewildered. Strange tales of his father are afloat in the village. Can Claude's brain be affected also?

"What?" she stammers.

"George Black."

Army's laugh echoes oddly among these ghastly trees. "What has he done?"

"Done! Did you not prefer him to me at the picnic? Hasn't he aven now a spray of your flowers? Can you deny that you owned, drove or walked with him every evening in O——, after my telling you that he was unfit for companionship with you?"

"How dare you?" Army's face is flushed and every nerve tingles with anger. "Who considers it insufferable upon them to chastise my every act? And you—enough, to listen! With me Mr. Black is a gentleman. What else he maybe matters not. If I choose him for a friend by what right do you interfere! You have told me that he was a gambler. Were you never one?

"I was and shall be again." He smiles now. "I gave it up for you, heartless coquette. You caused me from Purgatory to spat me into Hell. What I have suffered during the last six months would drive any other man mad. Keep George Blackie. Hold him high above the drunken brute your cruelty has made."

"Claude, Claude," she catches his arm. He throws his hand back quickly and strikes her on the temple. She falls crushed to the ground, and he hurriedly leaves the place.

The sun's last beam kisses her fair brow; its stars peep out and try to comfort her; a hunter unloading his gun, the bullet finds a resting place in a tree above her head. Then she awakes. "Were you never a gambler?" kisses in her ear. How many prayers on her part, how much mental agony on highest broken this habit! And now? Gambling, the joy of that moment! They forced the fast-approaching separation.

"Claude, I love you so much," the girl says, kissing his marble brow.

"My darling, my darling, I cannot leave you. The breeze blowing over golden fields through the western window seems to whisper me. He raises on one elbow. His gaze which has been riveted on Army, answers seem gentle kindly covered with yellow grain, tiny glimpse of silver sand between Indian wigwams lying by the river, in shadow, mountains garlanded with wild orange blossoms and blooming nutmegs; long lines of stately redwood, solemnly silent, nothing. Then he speaks in his old unusual voice.

"Earth is too beautiful. I am young. I will not die."

Army turns away to hide her tears, but he sees them.

"Do you wish it? he asks.

"You will be happier, Claude, she vainly tries to chide down sobs.

"And you? You will marry George Black."

The pained, proud look in her face recalls all the past. He sinks back, covering his face with his hands.

"Go away, Army. I do not deserve to see you."

"Yes, Claude. Let it be forgotten like unto forgive Black. How hard it is to utter that name.

"Really! You do not care for him! Then why so cruel to me! If you knew half of what I suffered before that evening, you would forgive me. I loved you. A stranger word is impossible. You never gave me the slightest ray of hope. Smiles for others, sighs for me. Your face was before me always, yet, had I dared, I had not a name, much less a home to offer. And—and—you rather—Army!—his strength and dexterity fails.

She lays her face against his, no longer endeavoring to repress the tears.

"It must I die," he says in an agonized, scarcely audible tone.

"If you were forgiving with me." Again silence reigns in the room. Army weeps on Claude's dim eyes watch her tenderly. Claude's dark sweet shroll ery rises on the air.

"Army, be calls feebly. "I thought I heard you laugh. No I remember speaks darling. Let me hear your voice once more.

"Claude, she says, with an effort. "We will soon be before God. Are you prepared?"

A frightened look comes over his face He clings desperatingly to her hand.

"I dare not. Help me help me.

"Shall I send for Father Nevin?

"He will come. He promised. Hurry—hurry—I am dying. Send for him."

"After—afternoon those fears will vanish. Remember, Claude, very soon you will be with Him forever. Who on earth can paint that happiness!" She kneels him pass nately, kneels an instant in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament, then Father Nevin takes her place, having just arrived.

Around by the corner of the house, under the same dropping rosebush, gazing upon the same scene, listening, perhaps, to the same sweet, plaintive, tender voice, stands a slight young girl. Suddenly the voice breaks into a sob. The hands drop with a discordant thud upon the instrument as. "It was best to leave you Claude," she hears her small audience.

Two sharp rings of the door-bell. Army snatches a yellow envelope from a messenger boy and with trembling fingers tears it open. The common but forever heart rending message, only changed in name.

"Claude Chandler ill. Come immediately." Running upstairs, she sees rosy-cheeks in a neat traveling suit.

"My precious child sit down. Your train does not leave for an hour. Perhaps maybe here before then. Kind old Mr. Rogers says.

"No," Army answers. "It is but half past eight. I shall have a few moments in the church.

"Wait. See how dark it is. You cannot go.

"I must," the self-called girl says. "Its not worry, my guardian angel cares for me. Hurry closing the door she walks hurriedly toward St.——

To night the weary and thick-rent before our eyes lady's altar. She bows her head on the railing and sways. Through her mind come tingling pictures of the past. Pale, tales of Claude's drunken insanity. Then faint whispurings of Madame Gough. Last and hardest, the cold contempt, half hidden relinds of those who were as far beneath her in every virtue except humility, as earth from Heaven. O, what a relief death would have been to her jaded, pitiful spirit. So her real genius prompted. Love came to her rescue. Claude's soul should be saved. It was not affection for Him in whom all joy, all thus is found, but for a frail clay idol. Still prayer drew her upward. Dreary months passed. Her faith was unyielding. Thoughts of that Saviour brought her to his feet. In Holy Thursday lives had not been the vigil of an hour. From six in the morning till twelve at night she knelt before His flowery throne, watching with fervent gaze each taper burn out, that she might do him even the tiny service of replacing it.

Good Friday's chime rolled. The hour when nothing is ever refused, found Army before with tearful upturned face, pleading for a stricken.

To those at home the dolorous chorus and heavy eyes of the girl told that she was lonely. They sent her to Italy, where her spirit sat and almost childish gaiety was taken of friends. Tonight at home. She felt that soon her prayer would be granted. Can we wonder if there was much agony mingled with thankfulness.

The village clock chimes four in a starry, fairly evening as Army alights from a fleet-received vehicle. Hesitating by convent door on the temple, She falls into the room where death will soon follow. The large hollow black eyes turned toward her are not the sparkling brown ones of Claude Chandler. They kindle on seeing her. A faint flush tinges his cheeks as she gets both arms around his neck and presses her lips to his.

"My Army, my darling again," the dying man whispers, drawing her closer to him.

CATHOLIC NEWS NOTES.

Church Concerns in Many Countries.

On Nov. 21, Father Bansen, S.J., will celebrate his golden jubilee in Chicago.

Ground has been purchased for the new Hermann Cath. Church at Omaha, Neb., has been let.

—In two years from now the Sec of Balmo will be well wooded with a fine park.

The Diocesan Catholics of Buffalo have petitioned Rt Rev Bishop Hoffman for a church of their own.

—Bishop Watterson was the second Cath. Bishop from the United States to visit the Holy Land.

—Ground has been purchased for a church at Ashland, Neb., and work will be begun on the new Sunday of this month.

The Mc Mac Inhans still sing the true gospel Mass taught them in centuries ago by Jesus successors.

—The cornerstone of the new Church of St Francis de Sales, Utica, N.Y., was laid on the 19th ult by Bishop Ludden.

There are over 40,000 members in the Confraternity of the Holy Face, established in the Carmelite Chapel of New Orleans.

The 16 orphan asylums in Minneapolis, which are conducted by Sisters of Charity, have received in their care 1,000 children.

The cornerstone of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, was laid on the 4 inst in the presence of a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen was laid on the 4th inst. The cathedral is intended to cost, when completed, $250,000.

—Recently the Rev. Dr. James J. Mooney, rector of St John's church, Utica, received into the Catholic Church Dr. Ed. and Hutchinson, the celebrated physician of Central New York.

—Her Lorna Cook, Redemptorist and author of "Ecce Ancilla," Clarke, of Hexent, Mich., who goes to St Louis, as superior of the Sisters of the Holy Redeemer.

On the 24th ult., the funeral of Rev John O'Connell, curate at St Mary's church in Lowell, Mass., was the largest ever in that city. The church, it is stated

THE MONITOR.

PRESTON'S TYPE OF VERACITY.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—His Holiness Pope Leo XIII., has thrown another worthless wool over the wall which separates the Kingdom of God from the world, the flesh and the devil.

—Two valuable lives were lost last week by drowning in the Russian river during the militia encampment at Healdsburg. If these disasters are going to continue, we suggest that a Coroner and an Undertaker be added to the Colonel's staff of each regiment of the California National Guard.

—A colloquoy from Rome states that three new Dioceses are about to be added to the Church in America. Cheyenne, in Wyoming Territory will shortly be made the seat of an Episcopal See which will include all Wyoming, and new Dioceses are also projected for Lincoln, Nebraska, and for Wichita in the Diocese of Leavenworth, Kansas. It is announced in the colloquoy that Rev. Thos. M. A. Burke of the Diocese of Albany, has been nominated to preside over the new Diocese of Cheyenne.

—The great American philosopher and essayist Brownson never wrote a truer phrase than when he said: "Methodism is a compound of sensationalism and animal magnetism" and, it has were alive to-day, he might have included the names of all the other heretical bodies in the same category.

—In a letter of thanks to Eugene Kelly of New York for $25,000 which he recently received for its Irish Evicted Tenants' Relief Fund, Mr. Parnell says "there is pressing need in this direction, as evictions have alarmingly increased during the last quarter and are being still further stimulated by the Crimes bill. I trust all of our friends will redouble their amounts for those unhappy victims of landlord oppression." The MONITOR will gratefully acknowledge all funds contributed for this purpose, and forward them to Treasurer O'Reilly in Detroit.

—The Earl of Aberdeen was in Chicago last week and in the course of an interview he told the representative of a local paper that "the facts in regard to the Irish question here which had most favorably impressed him was the entire absence of the Irish-hating, fanatic element which Englishmen had been taught at home was universal in America. He was exceedingly gratified to discover this, and believed that if the English people generally were better informed on this subject, much good would be accomplished." This goes to prove that "the man been said: "The most ignorant people in the world concerning Irish affairs are the English people themselves." Such statements as Aberdeen's, however, will help John Bull to open his eyes to the fact that England does not comprise the whole —The Unionist Bill having passed the House of Commons in passage through the Lords is only a mere matter of routine, hence very likely it will be in full force and effect in Ireland during the next ten days. But as to its enforcement—that is still a debatable question. The Irish people are almost a unit in opposition to this cruel and anti-Christian law, hence those who suffer under it will be looked upon as martyrs and their sufferings will serve to cement still closer the union which now prevails among the Irish Prelates, priests and people. It is a fact universally admitted that the time the drastic clauses of this cruel law are enforced in Ireland the Tory Ministry will be politely informed by the laboring masses all over England, Scotland and Wales, and such opposition will be arrayed against the Government by the Gladstone Liberals and their allies both inside and outside Parliament, that the Tory Ministry will be glad to resign in favor of "the grand old man."

Bombastic Furious Fulton.

The notorious Dr. Fulton, the Baptist preacher who has set out on the same footsteps of Father Phelan, who used to pervert Catholics into Baptists—arrived in this city last week and performed the character of Bombastic Furious in the First Baptist Church in this city last Sunday morning. The following graphic description of Fulton's fulsome oration on that occasion is copied from Monday's Chronicle.

> He is a fine, dark complexioned man about 50 years of age, burly, but not fat, and somewhat gray, but very Baptist-looking, with an impressive delivery, and a voice that rings through every corner of the house. He took as his text the 20th chapter of Revelations, 12th and 13th verses, and the Doctor, Chairman and Congregation of the Baptist Church, in response to a request of the trustees, set up a chair in front of the pulpit, and placed the Bible upon it, and throughout the sermon he was constantly by the Rev. Dr. Fulton. On Sunday, July, 3rd, he was not present yet. (The speaker had apparently an impression that the deposition of Fulton was that the Post Office had been robbed.) Let us pray that Father Fulton be kept all right and that the robber would go with him. We say stay with him, for he is a good man, and I know him well, but I don't know how the victory has come in this country and in the world, but I know that God has given the victory to us. Satan is the god of this world and water worship is Satan. It seems to me the speaker is going to prepare for the crusades against the Pope and the Catholic Church. Satan is the god of Romish Party, when meant, he said, opposed to the Catholic race."

Now, in all Christian sincerity, we ask the Rev. Minister, the Deacons and the members of the First Baptist Church if they will tolerate such a character of preaching such a feast of falsehood and such an avalanche of antipaternal calumny to be poured forth from the fanatical lips of a man who is either crazy or possessed by the Father of Lies? We call on the members of this Baptist Church to clean out the stables of this brainless religious bigot when is a disgrace to the sect he claims alliance with as well as a living scandal to all sectarianism. Such freaks should not be tolerated in Christian churches and we hope this heretical brother will be banished from the Baptist denomination as a "Jonah" whose presence in a church is sure to bring disgrace and disaster upon the whole congregation.

An Old Sectarian Subterfuge Revived.

To garble the writings of Catholics, to misquote Scripture, to mutilate and falsify facts, to pervert published laws and to misrepresent the sentiments of even the Saints of the Church—have ever been the favorite weapons with those Don Quixotes of the past who were merely fighting windmills when they imagined themselves warriors who were Dauntless Angels engaged in the total annihilation of the Catholic Church.

Protestantism being nothing more and nothing less than a protest against Catholic doctrines and relatives of deceased members during the past year alone, $31,284.60. Since its organization the sum great to help the deceased relatives of those nine thousand women who died in good standing amounts to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars! What a glorious record for a most useful society! Yet how blind to their own interests must be a large number of Catholic parents in California to, when such a safe and splendid Catholic Association can count only 2,730 members after an existence of nine years in the midst of half a million Catholics!

Justice to their children and foresight for themselves makes it an imperative duty on the part of every Catholic father and mother who have to labor for their daily bread, to insure their lives. "But," says some careless parent—"look at the cost!" Let us reply to this common objection by telling such one wise people, that it will not cost them over $1.50 a month to insure an acceptable life in this Association for $2,000 at death. Last year the assessments amounted to $17.00, and this and entrance fee is all the expense attached to membership, there being no dues, no fines, no fees of any kind on members, save the single dollar paid when a member dies.

What prudent laboring man is there who cannot spare one cent a day out of his wages so as to secure $2,000 for his widow and children when the head winner is called to a better world? And think of it! The price of a single glass of beer devoted daily to life insurance is the Grand Mutual Benevolent Association assessment, and for this a $2,000 policy at the death of a Catholic father or mother will yet people hesitate to secure such a blessing?

The labor that Father McNally has displayed in this organization, if given to upholding some quasi-secret non-Catholic insurance society under the title of "Grand Sachems of the Sachedrim," the "Crown Cavaliers of California," the "Knights of the Kingly Knacks," or some such nonsensical title would have gathered in a membership of fully 50,000 non-Catholics, neglecting Catholics and bad Catholics. His because the society is purely Catholic, because it has no "Grand Lodge," "Grand Officers," with very grand salaries, "Grand State Lecturer," and "Grand Keeper of the Golden Keys"—the Society has to struggle along where it should run like lightning, it has to resort to annual additions by a few paltry hundreds, when Catholics should flock into it by tens of thousands.

We are glad the Association re-elected Father McNally President at its last meeting, and we hope he will manage to provide against the recurrence of such a misfortune as the loss of Peter. "Catholic parents save your children!" cry the Bishops in every Pastoral Control.

And how shall this salvation be brought about? By giving them a good, practical Catholic education, and by insuring every year in every diocese in this coast, and those Catholic parents who desire to perform this duty towards the souls and bodies of the souls of those children who find his blessed them will should send them to a Catholic school if they would have them grow up in the knowledge, the fear and the love of God. And without this all important knowledge what hope can any Catholic parent have that his little self and his children will ever behold the Beatific Vision in the world to come.

Catholic parents have a conscientious duty to perform in this serious responsibility. No father or mother who do not have their children to attend Catholic schools and practice of Catholic faith can feel any assurance for their own salvation. We have given a sermon a letter from the Roman congregation of the Propaganda, addressed to the Archbishops of Baltimore, Quebec, Oregon City, Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Cincinnati, New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, San Francisco, Santa Fe, Mobile, Natchez, Richmond, Wheeling, Newark, Hartford, Portland, Buffalo, Erie, Covington, Nesqualy, Vancouver, Nesqualy, Vancouver, Nesqualy, Vancouver

Farm and Home.

The Old-Fashioned Girl.

Bishop Cosgrove, of Davenport, Iowa, delivered a notable sermon in that city on a recent Sunday on the immoral tendencies of the times through the breaking down of safeguards which once protected girls and young women. As a model for the rising generation the Bishop pictured the "old fashioned girl" of thirty years ago in the following words:

"She was a little girl until she was fifteen years old, and she helped her mother in her household duties. She had her hours of play and enjoyed herself to the fullest extent. She never said to her mother, 'I don't believe in your obedience was to her a cloveted virtue. She arose in the morning when called, and we don't suppose she had her hair done up in papers and crimping pins, or bringed over her forehead. She did not grow into a young lady and talk about her beau before she was in her teens, and she did not read dime novels, nor was she fanying a hero in every plough-boy she met. The old-fashioned girl was modest in her demeanor, and she never talked slang nor used by words. She did not mimick old people nor make fun of cripples. She had respect for her elders and was not above listening to words of counsel from those older than herself. She did not know so much as her mother, nor did she think her judgment was as good as that of her grandmother. She did not go to parties by the time she was ten years old, and stay till after midnight dancing with any chosen young man who happened to be present. She was in bed in season, and doubtless said her prayers, and slept the sleep of innocence, and rose up in the morning happy and capable of giving happiness. And now, if there be an old-fashioned girl in the world to-day, may heaven bless her and keep her and raise up others like her.

Relief for In-growing Toe Nail.

For that very painful affection, ingrowing toe nail, the simplest measure of relief which has been advocated is the application of tannin. One who has had many years' experience with it says: A concentrated solution (an ounce of perfectly fresh tanin acid dissolved with six drachms of pure water, with gentle heat), and have the soft parts around the nail painted twice a day. Two cases recently had no pain or lameness after the first application, and went about their work immediately, which they could not do before. After about three weeks of this treatment the nail had grown to its proper length and breadth, and the cure was complete. No other treatment of any kind was used, though formerly he introduced lint under the edge of the nail in such cases.

Onions as a Nervine.

Those who are in the habit of indulging in raw onions may be consoled for the social disadvantages which result from their use by the knowledge that onions are a most nervine known. No medicine is really so efficacious in cases of nervous prostration, and they lone up a worn out system in a very short time. Their sheerheat properties are also most valuable, especially in times of epidemic.—Medical Journal.

Wisdom from Charles Dickens.

To a contented mind, all things are a palace. Out of bad things good things sometimes arise.

Clothes, though dear to buy, are cheap to pay.

It is easier to burn men than to burn their principles.

A sorrowful air will sometimes outlive generations of men.

Friendships which are founded on a partnership in doing wrong are never true.

It is dreadful to observe how long a bad example will be followed; but it is encouraging to know that a good example is never thrown away.

What invents grow out of the graves of rich men, sowing perjury, hatred and fine in among men's kindred, where there should be nothing but love.

Open Your Windows.

Many a woman and child have been scattered to save the carpet and keep out flies. Many a fit of sickness has resulted from the same cause. Many a shortcoming has been traced back to unclean rooms as a begining. Multitudes of women and children are only half living, because half fed, famished and light and air are as much food for the body and soul as the fruits and grains and vegetables that we take into our stomachs, and we cannot get a surfeit of them as of food. The more we have the better. Open your windows, then, my sisters, and let the sun, that always carries health in his rays, have free access to every part of your houses. Screens will keep out the flies, and if you have occasion to temper the heat of the sun, use a white curtain that can be rolled up and down at will.

—Bishop Kaizer lately received from Rome official notification that J. H. Wigmore, of his diocese, had been made a Knight of the Order of St. Gregory the Great. The bull conveying the title is a large piece of parchment written at length in Latin, sealed with the Pope's seal, the Fisher's Ring, and signed by Cardinal Ledochowski, Prefect of the Congregation of the Holy Cardinal of the Propaganda, Simeoni, sent an autograph letter of congratulation.

Dr. PARDEE'S REMEDY is The Greatest Blood Cleanser. Cures Spring Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Constipation and Regulates The Kidneys & Liver. One bottle taken according to directions will give better results than a gallon of Sarsaparilla, or any of the so-called Blood Purifiers with which the market is glutted. At Druggists, price $1.00 per bottle.

$500 REWARD will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which Dr. Pardee's Remedy, properly administered, fails to relieve.

Family Fun.

Advice to Husbands.

Never talk in your sleep unless you are sure what you are going to say.

Don't be discontented. It is much easier to make your sweetheart feel that way.

Never tell your wife that she is a charming singer unless you happen to be deaf.

Don't flatter yourself that you know more than your wife until you have got home from her funeral.

Don't be too friendly with your prospective son-in-law. He may think you intend to live with him after he is married.

Don't try and fool your wife about dinnerbig unless you happen to marry an idiot.

There is not a word white to do so.

Never tell your wife how much better any other woman dresses than you have money to buy them you know what to do with.

Never boast to your wife about the value of your past experience. Your mother-in-law may settle herself down on you to-morrow.

Never find fault with the quality of your wife's cooking. You may possibly drive her to pick some cooking club, which would be much worse.

He Had to Wait.

On a Michigan Central train the other day as the "butcher" came into the car with a basket of oranges an old man, whose wife sat beside him, was very anxious to buy half a dozen, but she waved the boy on with—

"He can't have 'em. He never eats one without the juice run down on his shirt bosom."

"Shut! but I want two or three, Hannar," he protested.

"You behave yourself! You want to get orange seed into a crack, you don't you!"

The boy soon returned with bread figs, and the old man beckoned to him and began to lick his chops.

"Fare right on!" said the woman to the boy. "He isn't eat a fig for thirty years, and I guess he can go thirty more."

The boy passed on and returned with peanuts. The old man was ready for him, but the wife protested.

"He can't eat 'em. I've been ten years since he had a tooth in his head, and he'd have to swallow 'em whole. No, I'll shell you let peanuts alone."

Twenty minutes later the boy was back with candy packages in which there were prizes, and the old man exclaimed:

"I'll bet one of 'them or—hunt!"

"Then you'll hunt," she replied as she mentioned the boy to pass on. "It's again the Lord and the law to take chances, and you wouldn't get nothin' nohow.

"But I'm going to buy sunthin," Hiram cry.

"Well, you wait. You can't have ice cream nor lemonade, and if he comes with popcorn or lunarpsch don't you dare to raise a fuss. Just you wait. Well he in Detroit at 6 o'clock, and then, if there happens to be a grocery handy by, you can buy sunthin' to eat. Ice cream, Hiram is sunthing to stand by you, Hosbem, and the bands and tails will keep mosha away and are good for warts. We've got too old for gewgaws, Hosbem. What we want is the with of our money."

Her Husband's Night Caps.

A lady coming from the Continent asked the Custom House officer that she had nothing but wearing apparel in her trunk, but he went to the bottom of the article and found a dozen bottles of brandy stowed away. "Madam," said the officer, "do you call these wearing apparel?" "Yes," the lady demurely replied, "they are my husband's night caps."

Too Much Enthusiasm.

"Teaching, to me," said an enthusiastic young school-ma'am, "is a holy calling. To sow in the young mind the seeds of future knowledge and watch them as they grow and develop is a pleasure greater than I can tell. I never weary of my work. I think only of—"

"I am very sorry," interrupted the young man to whom she was talking, "that you are so devoted to your profession. Miss Clara, I had hoped that some day I might ask you—in fact I called to-night to—but I hardly dare go on. In the light of what you have told me—"

"You may go on. Mr. Smith," said the young lady, softly. "I'm a little too enthusiastic at times, perhaps.

In Business for Herself.

Dry Goods Dealer (to saleswoman)—I was very sorry, Miss Satinette, to receive your resignation. Aren't you satisfied with you place here?

Miss Satinette—Yes, sir; but I've had the offer of a better one.

Dry Goods Dealer—Well, if it is a question of salary, Miss Satinette, I would be willing—

Miss Satinette—It is not a question of salary, sir. Young Mr. Highroller of the furnishing department made me an advantageous offer last evening which I accepted. I'm to be his junior member of the firm.

Has Him Well in Hand.

Minister (making a call)—And do you always do as your mamma tells you to, Please?

Flossie (emphatically)—I guess I do, and so does papa.

A Great State.

"Yes," said a Pueblo sleeper at the Hoffman House recently, "California is a great State for timber. There is one kind in particular that we can beat the country."

"What kind is that?" he was asked.

"Prodigonal timber," he whispered, "and don't you forget it!"

War to the Knife.

Miss Shawgardan (of St. Louis, to Miss Breezy of Chicago)—Well, how is everything in Chicago? Dull as usual, I suppose?

Miss Breezy—No, things are looking very bright. How is the pasturage in St. Louis?

Couldn't be Too Late.

"Hurry! hurry!" cried Brown, impatiently up the stairs, "we'd be too late for church."

"Oh, yes, dear," replied Mrs. B., buttoning her gloves as she came down, "we can't be too late. I've got on my new suit."

Turned About.

"Women are unreasonable creatures," observed Brown, as he ordered another round for the boys. "Now, there's my wife. Before we were married, when I went to see her she always thought it was too early for me to go home, and now I can't go home early enough to suit her."

He Didn't Bite.

"No," said Tompkins, "I no longer call on Miss Hobbleaw. You know she's a fine performer on the piano, but I got tired of hearing the same piece every time I called."

"What was the piece?" asked Tinmarsh. "Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March.'"

—The many remarkable cures Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes are sufficient proof that it does possess peculiar curative powers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cholera Morbus Cramps Colic Diarrhoea Summer Complaints Dysentery

All Cured by a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Pain Killer in a little Milk or Sugar and Water. ALL DRUGGISTS SELL IT. 25c.

5% INTEREST. WITH FIVE DOLLARS IN THE GREAT AMERICAN CO-OPERATIVE SYNDICATE

5'- IMP. AUST. 100-FLORIN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1866

These bonds are shares in an Austrian Government loan, and are guaranteed by the Imperial Government and redeemable in drawings twice annually, until each share has received in cash, from the Government, the sum of 100 Florins. A part of this capital is thus distributed in accumulative margins from the fortunate holders, leaving the remainder of bonds unpaid in each drawing, the bonds also bearing interest all the time, which is added to the capital, payable with annually. Every bond is entitled to

Two Drawings Annually,

Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must drawn one of the following premiums, or there are

NO BLANKS.

Premiums.	Florins.	Florins.
1	100,000	100,000
1	50,000	50,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
2	2,000	4,000
5	1,000	5,000
10	500	5,000
100	100	10,000
1,000	50	50,000
1,000	40	40,000
Together 1,000 premiums, amounting to		1,276,000
Number of bonds participating in the drawing		1,000,000

FIRST OF AUGUST,

And every bond holder of one or more bonds is entitled to one or more of the above premiums, which will be paid to the Owner Thereon on that date.

Out of the money sent in Emperor Leopold, on the 4th of June, gave 40 more sets of these bonds for the next drawing. Prospectus payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 106 Fulton Street, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1874.

We are a strict Government Bankers and not to be confounded with Lottery Dealers, and advertisements of such nature will be rejected by all decent Journals.

N. B.—In writing please state that you are this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

A Noted Divine Says: "I have been using Tutt's Liver Pills for Dyspepsia, Wind Stomach and Constipation, with which I have long been afflicted."

Tutt's Pills ARE A SPECIAL BLESSING. I never had anything to do me so much good. Dyspepsia, Constipation, Piles, to all is the best pill. Rev. F. R. Overton, D.D., Pastor Methodist Church, Galveston, Texas.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 767.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Bedding, Down Quilts, Comforters, Blankets, Sheets, Pillows, Cushions, and Marine Couches for private families, without any charge to employers. Outside sitting rooms for ladies at 608 Clay street.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS. Warranted Equal to any Made. Challenge the Strength of Imitations. Each set in Fine Satin Lined Case. Sold by Jewelers everywhere. Ask for them. Price, per set, Ivory Handles, $5.00. Stag Handles, $6.00. Ebony Handles, $7.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, $8.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Fine Blades, $10.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, $12.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, $15.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, $18.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, $20.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Fine Quality, $25.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, $30.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, $35.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, $40.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, $45.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, $50.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $60.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $70.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $80.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $90.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $100.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $110.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $120.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $130.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $140.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $150.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $160.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $170.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $180.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $190.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $200.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $210.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $220.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $230.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $240.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $250.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $260.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $270.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $280.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $290.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $300.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $310.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $320.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $330.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $340.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $350.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $360.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $370.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $380.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $390.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $400.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $410.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $420.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $430.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $440.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $450.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $460.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $470.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $480.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $490.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $500.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $510.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $520.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $530.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $540.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $550.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $560.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, $570.00. Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Extra Fine Blades, Silver Ferrules, Silver Plated Knives, Forks and Steels, Finest Quality, Ivory Handle Carving Knife, Ivory Handle Carving Fork, Ivory Handle Carving Steel, Ivory Handle Knife, Fork and Spoon, Ivory Handle Pocket Knife, REVOLUTION OF 1792.

(CONTINUED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

how long it was to New Year's Day? "Ten month," said the child, "because I have grown taller." "Ah, you are a clever little boy! I see you have studied hard." "Yes, I know how to read by them." He—Good land, and on New Year's Day he said to his mother: "Have is your New Year's gift, I know how to read." In return his patience, sprightliness and intelligence were the admiration of the roughest of his guards. After his father's death it was the Queen's chief comfort to watch, tend, and teach him. She even contrived to pay him some of the respect due to his rank as hereditary king of France. But one day the order came that the child should be sent to the Temple. Then for the first time the Queen lost self-possession. She shrieked:

ANE RESET TO THE GAOLERS;

she struck them with her fists. But this boy was taken. He was placed in a dark adjoining room of the prison, under the care of a shoemaker named Simon, an atheist, a sot, and a scoundrel. Simon's instructions were significant: "Here am I to treat the wolf cub as I choose." "Is he to be treated?" "No." "Is he to be killed?" "No." "What, then?" "He is to be got rid of." "I understand, Simon, and he is at himself to worry the child to death. He took off the Prince's clothes, and dressed him in the revolutionary garb. He abusively shrieked and cursed at him. He kicked, beat, and swore at him. He made him drink brandy, and drug, and curse, and swear with him. He sometimes exhibited him in this state to emissaries of the government, who came daily to see him. The miserable mother, suspecting these things, used to secretly ply them, when, after long hours watching, she caught a glimpse of her child through the chinks of the boarding. Then once again, but for the last time, the poor boy had strength to show she grew frantic with despair. "I cannot pray any more," she said; "God has forsaken us."

BUT THERE WAS WORSE TO COME.

At her trial a document was read, containing an utterly monstrous accusation against her. The document was signed by her son. It had been got from the terrified child under the influence of drugs, brandy, and the whip. The Queen had borne much with such queenly dignity that even the bloodthirsty men had filled her court applauded. But the boy, though more than half unconscious of what he had done, and utterly ignorant of the falsehoods, bitterly repented. He spent nights in sleepless remorse. He sighed he arose, and he dwelt in prayer. Simon saw him, and, taking a pitcher of water, threw it on him with it. Then he flung a heavy shoe at him, and left him wet and wounded. "Pull yourself together," said he, "or I'll get up in the night and pray like a monk." After this the child's heart seemed broken. He fell into a sort of stupor, and, as continued, more or less, until his death. Meanwhile Simon was guillotined, and a new guardian appointed. This man was in some respects worse than Simon. He fixed a grating of iron across the young King's cell, and let him literally rot inside it. The boy's bed swarmed with vermin; his body became infested with foul sores; his mind became dulled and almost imbecile. So he was kept for six long months—officials of the government, by stealth, every day. After Robespierre's execution some pity was shown. He was cleaned, dressed, and brought to a terrace in the sunlight. He was seen to grow warm, smile, and make them up into a little bonquet; this he laid at the door inside which he supposed his mother to be. But the sunlight soon weds on the wall of his cell. This much only could be ascertained. "Mamma is your pain?" pleaded. Night came as he died. "I hope you do not suffer," said his attendant. "Yes, I suffer," he said, "but the music is so beautiful." "Where is the music?" asked the attendant. "Up there!" said the child; "listen, listen; and through all the voices I hear distinctly Heaven." Thus died Louis XVII., King of France and of Navarre. The Revolution had been a great convulsion; but I hope of none whose fate illustrates more strikingly the dreadful characteristics of delirious persistency which marked these revolutionary excesses. Whoever was to blame, this child was necessarily blameless. To kill him might have been, in a certain sense, justifiable; but by a colder criterion, but I know

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

WHAT DO YOU LACK?

Tell me not of the blue eyes,
That are warm, and pure and true,
Tell me not of their beauty,
Unless you see not of their hue;
Tell me not of how wistful
The blue eyes seem to gaze
Like the vaults of Heaven,
Mean-grown with length of days;
For we see blue eyes everyday.

Oh! tell me not they are bright,
Tell me not of their glory,
Though gazed on in every sight.

Tell me not of the brown eyes,
Tell me not of passionate fire,
That choose to lower at times,
Or flash with the deepest ire;
Tell me not they are sparkling,
More sweetly than words can do,
They may be bright and sparkling,
Perhaps all the world to you;
They may pierce your heart with a crisl,
A bitter and steady pain,
Yet may win a world of trouble,
Or the fiercest tempest raise.

Tell me not of the black eyes,
That can dance so lightly and cold—
A smile to the lips of the weary,
And bring joy and content to all;
Tell me not why they are happy,
Oh! tell me not they are glad,
Yet they bring with all the merry,
And they morse with all the sad;
Tell me not of the soft, soft eyes,
With hapelisme full and bright,
Though close as the moon at harvest,
And radiant as the sun at night.

If bliss eyes do not please me,
And the brown eyes cannot charm,
And black eyes have no power,
Oh! tell me not they are glad,
And bring joy and content to all;
Tell me not why they are happy,
Oh! tell me not they are glad,
They may bring with all the merry,
And they morse with all the sad;
Tell me not of the soft, soft eyes,
With hapelisme full and bright,
Though close as the moon at harvest,
And radiant as the sun at night.

If bliss eyes do not please me,
And the brown eyes cannot charm,
And black eyes have no power,
And will only work me harm;
How can I praise them justly,
Or worthily adge I say,
To the wise, to the pure, to the loiney,
To the wistful eyes of gray?
For blue eyes are too common,
And brown eyes are too gay,
And black eyes cannot win you
Like those tender eyes of gray.

Oh! look at the lofty window
In those gray eyes soft and sweet,
Where faith and hope and candor
Are ever your glance to meet;
For a sweetness shows the blue,
For a lover shows the gay,
Black eyes have spirit, merry,
But for friendship choose the gray
For pure as the blue, and bright as the brown,
As merry and soft as the black,
But full of firmness and kindness rare,
Want thou do gray eyes lack?

Janet M. Oxnen (Cure.)
Spokane Falls, W. T., July 15th, 1887.

NOW AND THEN.

Lovingly dedicated to S. M. L.

When our foolish dreams have failed,
And our planned fancy lies
In the dust with dreaming pleasure,
From her nestling in the skies;
When the fragile vase is broken,
Which
Seeks a truer world beyond;
When the tide has ebbed and retreated
In the God-made's holy bond;
When alone by Life's cool river
We shall love the loving bower,
Will the mending flesh before us
Of the strange and eerie now?

Will we see as now we know
Causes light and shade to blend,
How the darkling glow would blind us,
If it lasted to the end?
Alter lessons hard and bitter,
Will the sweet and slightly tears
That such flower cause a shadow
While it's swaying in the air?

Aye, in quiet retrospection,
Through the calm mirage of years,
We shall see what now is hazy
Through the mist of blinding tears;
With the dim and turmoil over,
We shall hear life's fear notes,
And we shall hear the soft vibration,
Through Memory's wave it floats.

Then we'll see
In the one the Father's guiding
With His loving, watching care,
While in the other, unerring
And until Life's parallel,
We shall see which chosen
How the weak ones were the mighty,
And the foolish were the wise.

Oh! the many crystal fountains,
From the rock our faith shall bring;
Oh! the precious grace we fathom,
Through our constant morning;
Though the way is long and dreary—
It is rendered sweet by love,
Here we not the wonderous manna
Helped upon us from above?

When at last we're only waiting
Till the winter frost is over,
When we've only looking forward
To the steady realm of peace;
When we see the bright dawn breaking
Or the hill tops far away,
Then the heart shall know no aching
In that calm eternal day.

Annie Wiese.

WERE ARE WICKED FOLKS BURIED?

"Tell me, gray haired sexton," I said,
"Where in this field are wicked folks laid?
Have wedged the quiet graveyard through,
And eye the epitaphs, old and new;
But on monument, shelak pillar or stone
I read of no evil that was here done."

The old sexton stood by the grave near by mate
With his pick on his hand, his hand on a spade;
I saw by the gleam of his deep set eye
That his heart was thickening his lips to reply.

"Who is to judge when the and idiot the right?
Who is to judge what the wrong and the right?
Which of us mortals shall dare to say
That our neighbor was wicked who died today?

"In our journeyings through life, the better we speed
The better we learn that humanity's need
Is charity's spirit, that prompts us to find
Other virtues than in lives of our kind.

"Therefore, of deeds we record on these stones,
The evil may do not's the with their bones;
I have labored as sexton for many a year,
But I never have found a bad man here."

SEND OR CATHOLIC NEWS.

We would most respectfully ask the Rev. Clergy, or any of our readers of other Parishes, to send us items of interest for our paper. Also, We wish to make the Monitor a thoroughly Catholic Homesteadpaper relating to the progress of religion, but we cannot do so unless we are aided by those who have the knowledge of the Parishes of their vicinity. Bare to we are all in work. Will our friends please lend us a hand?

—In a pecularity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that it is the best blood purifier, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

Literary Miscellany.

The Doctor's Story.

A Thrilling Tale in Three Parts.

FIRST PART

Toward the close of a certain day—a May evening, by the way, I was seated in my consulting-room reading a pilling, as it was my custom to do, of my day's visits. It was not late—evening was only closing in, and I had accomplished my work for another day at an end. As a general rule, I found my practice was not large. I had not long commenced to practice, which will account for my desire being of a scarcely busy character.

On this November afternoon, as I have said, I was occupied in my little room in the rear of the shop. I had not been long seated, when a call rattled up to the door, and dropped a tall, foreign looking man, who, entering and waving signs of no little excitement, inquired for me. Surmising that I was about to be introduced to a "new" case, I left my chair and went into the shop. The tall man was breathing hard, as if he had run a couple of miles for me, instead of driving in a hire wheeler he had done. I was not prepossessed by his appearance. There was something like a treacherous cool open his face, which I well knew—and his carriage, I half decided, was at any rate in part, assumed.

"You are Dr. Ambrose?" he inquired, in a voice in which anxiety was well disguised, his restless beady black eyes seeming to search me through and through. I nodded, as if he had run a couple of miles for me, instead of driving in a hire wheeler he had done. I was not prepossessed by his appearance. There was something like a treacherous cool open his face, which I well knew—and his carriage, I half decided, was, at any rate in part, assumed.

"You are Dr. Ambrose?" he inquired, in a voice in which anxiety was well disguised, his restless beady black eyes seeming to search me through and through. I nodded, as if he had run a couple of miles for me, instead of driving in a hire wheeler he had done. I was not prepossessed by his appearance. There was something like a treacherous cool open his face, which I well knew—and his carriage, I half decided, was, at any rate in part, assumed.

"Yes, sir, he is," I replied, in a quiet, deliberate way.

"Yes," replied my assistant, "and he said he would come back and see you again."

"That's the card he left."

I took it eagerly and read, "John H. Cooder."

"Let me see, sir, address, and I would, if I could," he paused a moment, as if pondered the affair long, but could make nothing of it. "It was patent to me there was unalloyed villainy about; but the more I looked over it the more clearly did I realize how powerless I was to interfere. However, I resolved it was my bounden duty, and I did, to communicate to the police authorities, and I did so without delay. A well skilled detective sergeant, by the name of Holland, was put on the case, and with him I discussed the matter at considerable length and in all the aspects.

"In the very outset we were non-plussed, in that I was unable to point out the house to which I had been conveyed.

"I don't really see," said Holland to me after we recollection-thrown when we met by appointment early in the succeeding day, "I don't really see how we are to set about it, unless you can give me no clue to the street, the house, or even in what direction you were taken. There is only one way I can think of, though, and that is for you to scour the neighborhood; for, course, we should open the houses, you will, of course, know it again.

"I had thought of that but when I recollected that all houses in the street were alike, or nearly so—for I had no more to note that much before passing in behind the so-called "John H. Cooder" I was even doubtful of my ability to do what the fellow was asking me to do, and, moreover, I had no easy, no pleasant duty to perform, and he not on my "side of the question.

"Well, I said, partly, "it is impossible for me to be of service to the patient." I must be understood what a wrong."

I said "idiot" intentionally on the spur of the moment.

"You must see him, sir, upon your doctor," he exclaimed, rushing on, and glaring at me, his brows again angrily lowering.

I already perceived from this incident that my first decision as to the sex of the patient was the right one. I was now fully informed as to what sort of a man I had to deal with—one with an unscrupulous, unfeeling nature, prone to base beating, and that there was some villainy afloat I was thoroughly convinced. We were alone in the apartment with the patient, who had never once moved since my arrival, indeed, I had seen no one else as yet. I was some paces from the bed, but making up my mind to see more, I approached it, and, as the same moment partly wrenching aside the clothes that covered the head.

I had time to see a pinched, white, livid face, the muscles fixedly set, a blue tinge surrounding the eyes, which were closed. To act and perceive these things was but a second's work; then, turning and facing the stranger, whose features were fairly contorted by passion, I exclaimed the three words—the first that occurred to me.

"This is murder!"

Nobody had the accusation found utterance when a stunning blow on the right side of my head, from a heavy bag, relieved me of my senses, and I sank unconscious to the ground.

SECOND PART.

When I came to myself I was lying on the little couch in my own room behind the shop, my assistant doing what he could to recover me. The wound on my head was very painful, but, I was glad to find, was not of a serious character. Naturally, I was weak in my senses, I was surprised at finding myself there, and asked an explanation, for I remembered nothing after the blow.

"The same gentleman brought you back in the cab," I was informed. "He said you had tripped in stepping out of it, and he feared you had received a severe hurt to your head. He was greatly upset, and, after getting you in, there, said he was sure so ill he couldn't wait lest more go at once for another doctor.

"Clearly fellow!" was my impulsive comment. "But "His wife, did he say? I repeated, in bewildered

"Yes," replied my assistant, "and he said he would come back here and see he you get on. That's the card he left."

I took it eagerly and read, "John H. Cooder." "Let me see address, and I would if I could," he paused a moment, as if pondered the affair long, but could make nothing of it. "It was patent to me there was unalloyed villainy about; but the more I looked over it the more clearly did I realize how powerless I was to interfere. However, I resolved it was my bounden duty, and I did communicate to the police authorities, and I did so without delay. A well skilled detective sergeant, by the name of Holland, was put on the case, and with him I discussed the matter at considerable length and in all the aspects.

"In the very outset we were non-plussed, in that I was unable to point out the house to which I had been conveyed.

"I don't really see," said Holland to me after we recollection-thrown when we met by appointment early in the succeeding day. "I don't really see how we are to set about it, unless you can give me no clue to the street, the house, or even in what direction you were taken. There is only one way I can think of, though, and that is for you to scour the neighborhood; for, course, we should open the houses, you will, of course, know it again.

"I had thought of that but when I recollected that all houses in the street were alike, or nearly so—for I had no more to note that much before passing in behind the so-called "John H. Cooder" I was even doubtful of my ability to do what the fellow was asking me to do, and, moreover, I had no easy, no pleasant duty to perform, and he not on my side of the question.

"Well, I said, partly, "it is impossible for me to be of service to the patient." I must be understood what a wrong."

I said "idiot" intentionally on the spur of the moment.

"You must see him, sir, upon your doctor," he exclaimed, rushing on, and glaring at me, his brows again angrily lowering.

I already perceived from this incident that my first decision as to the sex of the patient was the right one. I was now fully informed as to what sort of a man I had to deal with—one with an unscrupulous, unfeeling nature, prone to base beating, and that there was some villainy afloat I was thoroughly convinced. We were alone in the apartment with the patient, who had never once moved since my arrival, indeed, I had seen no one else as yet. I was some paces from the bed, but making up my mind to see more, I approached it, and, at the same moment partly wrenching aside the clothes that covered the head.

I had time to see a pinched, white, livid face, the muscles fixedly set, a blue tinge surrounding the eyes, which were closed. To act and perceive these things was but a second's work; then, turning and facing the stranger, whose features were fairly contorted by passion, I exclaimed the three words—the first that occurred to me.

"This is murder!"

Nobody had the accusation found utterance when a stunning blow on the right side of my head, from a heavy bag, relieved me of my senses, and I sank unconscious to the ground.

A STUPID CALUMNY.

Irish Aid in the American Revolution.

A writer in the North American Review pitches into Lafayette and Rochambeau in expert scoffing of Massachusetts shipowners, Christopher Gadsden, a leader of downright Know Nothingism. For the chief characteristic of the Whigs was an intense complete knowledge which he possesses less than half so broadly as every Tory Rochambeau and Lafayette superiorly which the Vitality of Toryism during and after the Revolution and it to the success of know Nothingism is below the mental and moral capacity of the Tory Gadsden. Gadsden pleased to dominate "Foreigners as the principal and most powerful agents of freedom." All this is in the shift but vicious essay on "Irish Aid in the American Revolution."

The writer asserts that the Irish "cannot point to a single name like Lafayette, Rochambeau, Pulaski, or Steuben, but there was Conway, and there was "Conway's Gallas." He quotes from Bancroft, whose treatment of this portion of history is inadequate and misleading, both as to the Irish in the American army and in relation to the sympathy of the people of Ireland with that Revolution. He cast pole Gradam in the attitude of hostility.

Bancroft's fault is truth many serious of information on this questions of which Mr. Gadsden did not avail himself. Thus, for instance, the report of the Committee of Secret Aid of Congress from 1776, and to be found in the British Museum, although rare certainly, it is. Thomas Bancroft was a member of the committee who was to inquire into the conduct of the American Tory, Samuel Seabury, and Gouverneur Morris, Robert Morris, Richard Bartlett, Silas Deane, Thomas Jefferson, Thomas Lynch, Jr., and others, they assert in about Washington's army, and in the Revolution.

"We swore that Gen. Lee informed him that the parade army "were Papists, and would not fire upon those that came with Lafayette will be found the names of well known Irishmen, Dr. Dwyer, a Roman Catholic Clergyman, Dr. Ryan, a Protestant Clergyman, Dr. Ryan, a Protestant Clergyman, Dr. Ryan, a Protestant

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF SAN FRANCISCO.

THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The Runs of England presented to Queen Victoria, as their jubilee offering, 550 guineas ($5,600 pieces) articles of clothing for distribution among the poor. In their letter accompanying the immense pile of body-covering the Sisters say "our offerings are but poor, but they are the work of our hands, and they come from religious women who have vowed poverty and whom Irish are devoted to the poor." What a beautiful thought, and how truly Christian is not Catholic charity!

—Among the Jubilee offerings made to Leo XIII., one of the most remarkable is certainly that of the Carthusians, who have presented his Holiness with a valuable property in the Via Aurelia, together with a very considerable sum of money, which will permit the Holy Father to instal in it a charitable institution, where poor children may be received and trained in the useful arts and farming. The Indipendente degli Abruzzi has profited by the joint munificence of the Pope and the good monks, and has already taken possession of the place. The Sovereign Pontiff has just addressed to Father Anselm Mary, the Superior of the Carthusians, a touching letter of thanks.

—A correspondent enquires why the daily press does not advocate the promotion of sobriety and morals by closing the saloons on Sunday. But the interrogator overlooks the important fact that the daily press caters more to the immoral classes than it does to those who would like to have morality the motive power in all society. The daily press is no longer the leader of public opinion but the craven and obsequious servant of its subscribers and advertising patrons. The last Plenary Council required all Catholic liquor dealers to close their saloons on Sundays, but we fear there are many Catholic saloon-keepers who never heard of the last Plenary Council. The bar-keepers as a body should demand Sunday as a day of rest—and then the Sunday closing of saloons would be quickly accomplished.

—That fraudulent sect which called itself "Old Catholics" is gradually disappearing from the few places in Europe where it had a foothold. It would appear also that there is a strong tendency in several quarters to restore to the Catholics the churches which have been taken away from them by the authorities and unjustly handed over to the schismatics, all the more so as in several cases the latter have scarcely any use for them. Such is the contention of even Conservative Protestant organs like the Journal de Genève, which remarks that the State ought to proceed in the work of restitution of its own accord, and adds that, in several "Old Catholic" parishes there are now no longer any "Old Catholics." One Continental Council has applied to the Cantonal authority to be allowed to restore the Church and appliances to the Catholics, which, it says, would be only fair, as that of M. Theodore de la Rive, belonging to one of the most distinguished families of the city.

—The Infidels who rule France for the time being seem to be carrying things with a high hand in that country. Here is their latest pretending proposal with regard to the numerous Catholic churches which were built centuries before infidelity was known in France. It is announced on the French papers that a majority of the Commissioners appointed by the French Chamber to study the question of the separation of Church and State, is said to have approved a project of law drawn up by M. Boysset, which is nothing less than monstrous. After repealing the Concordat, the Organic Articles, the Decrees concerning seminaries, fabrics, and ecclesiastical establishments, and, generally, the rights of the ecclesiastical hierarchy in particular, it goes to hand over to the Dépositary, all churches as their absolute property, with the residence of the religious edifices and religious employees of every power to let them out on hire, as well as the duration to be fixed with the approval of the State, to "religious syndicates" or associations to be established for the purpose. The Church, in fact, is to be allowed to have its churches at a fixed rent, and it is to be a tenant on sufferance, for, if any of the religious syndicates overpass the bounds within which they are about to be given permission to enjoy the full and free benefit of the document issued by Pope Leo XIII. in order to excommunicate Dr. McGlynn.

Are Catholics such slaves as to submit to that base Sterne's alone thing in their faces under the guise of a genuine document issued over the signature of the Vicar of Christ? If they are, let them pass such purposely concocted calumnies calmly by—and there will be no need to do so. If they are not slaves, they will insist by saying their dollars from increasing the exchequer of any paper which indulges in this class of indecent and insulting literature.

—Here Thunnisel, a Protestant "pastor" at Remschied, has just been prosecuted at Elberfeld for "abuse of the Catholic Church and Holy Sacrifice." The Court of Appeal of the Elberfeld court, confirmed in his sentence, and the following extract from the pamphlet entitled Ecclesia Magdalenica and Romish Friends: "The over zealous Papist pamphleteer has been fortunately punished and sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, and his partner to two months. If every Catholic bigot who is fully aware of his guilt could be treated the same way what a number of sore scam cracks and anti-Christian agitators would find themselves in the gaol of felons!

—The signs of the rapid return of the spring of peace to the Church in Germany are multiplying. Three admirable teachers of youth, the Pauline Sisters, will within the next few months open higher schools for girls in Trier, in Boppard (the site of the former branch of St. Hedwig's College), and at another town not yet designated.

The Very Latest Anti-Catholic Calumny.

The enemies of God's Church never tire of rendering her. They are not from what infernal source their inspiration comes, nor do they stop at adopting the "chestnuts" of calumny which appeared in the corrupting and indecent literature of past centuries. The latest form of assault upon the Catholic Church comes in the shape of an extract from Tradition Shandy, a book filled with the foulness of Laurence Sterne—a Protestant preacher (God save the mark!) who died born in 1713 and died in 1768. He order to make his work popular with the lovers of impure literature, and to gratify his gorgeous taste against the Catholic Church, Sterne introduced into Tradition Shandy a form of excommunication supposed to be used by the Church, but which he connected from the depths of his own debased imagination. And now after a lapse of over a century—this false form of excommunication is dug up from its surrounding dirt and heralded forth by the papers that delight in holding up the Catholic Church to ridicule, as the form of a genuine anathema used by Pope Leo XIII., against Dr. McGlynn.

The malignant miscreants who thus performed the part of literary ghouls in profaning this anti-Catholic calumny from the literary vault of Sterne, purposely added the name of the deposed McGlynn to the disreputable document, as such the more readily to dupe and to malign their estimated Catholic readers. This is what is called "enterprise" by papers that are daily performing the devil's work through the lies, lasciviousness and avoral tilt which they are constantly disseminating.

The writer from whose work this precious—made pervision of truth was copied, is an notoriously bad odor with the best critics of English literature. He was such a heartless and immoral character that Walpole said of him that "Sterne could smile over a dead ass, to the neglect of his live mother." Another authority depicts him as "the lax in principle, a bad husband, a fastidious liver—offering his affections to two or three married women at once, the dupe of every coarse flattery and false to his professions of virtue or sensibility. "There is not a page in Sterne's writings," says Thackeray, "but has something that were better away—a latent corruption—a hint, as of some impure presence; the foul Satyra eyes leer out of the leaves constantly."

And this is the loving lascivious literary profligate from whose polluted pages the "no Popery" papers derive their base libels to fling at the Catholic Church! Yet there is a singular consistency even in this, as it is a notable fact that the papers which have insulted their Catholic readers by placing Sterne's spurious "excommunication" before them with the name of the infuriate Dr. Doctor McGlynn injected into it, is precisely the most suitable sewers through which such century-old corruption should flow.

But as Sterne was in being "a profligate hidden in the parson's gown," his book was a filthy—even in his own debased and immoralized mind—that he was ashamed to put his name on the title page. Yet it is on the foetid atmosphere of such garbage being thrown from the sewers of "enterprising papers" that Catholics may read the very latest "news of the day." It matters not how fiendish or how brutal the calumny may be against the Church of God, the "big shot" must be filled, and in it goes—regardless alike of the feelings of Pope, Prelate, Priest or Pagan!

Is there no remedy for this? Assuredly there is. When Catholics cease to be asleep against their Church, they must, the Pope or anything else pertaining to their religion, the best remedy is to stop that paper. In the meantime, the proprietors of journals where anti-Catholic pollution is shovelled into their columns to fill up "the big paper," will continue to give their Catholic readers insults in small sentences first, paragraphs next, and whole columns thereafter.

Catholics must cease from mendicant if they would be respected by the press and their Protestant fellow-citizens on that land. They can command a decent respect even from those who malign them, by throwing back into the faces of those who use their columns to insult them, the shows that circulate such fostering footsteps as the example "Sterne's excommunication" literature which we have shown to be the product of a prodigious who preached to the world with its pulpitering on Sunday. The Church, in fact, is to be allowed to have its churches at a fixed rent, and it is to be a tenant on sufferance, for, if any of the religious syndicates overpass the bounds within which they are about to be given permission to enjoy the full and free benefit of the document issued by Pope Leo XIII. in order to excommunicate Dr. McGlynn, the syndicate is to be dissolved, and each of its members punished with the loss of citizenship. Such is "liberty of conscience" in France!

Two New Kansas Bishops.

Alluding to the colloquium raining the apparitions to the new Seva in Kansas, the Kansas Catholic gives the following biographical sketch of the Bishopelect.

The Rev. James O'Reilly, who will be consecrated Bishop of Wichita, is the present rector of the Church of the Assumption at Topeka, and is as well and as favorably known to the people of this State, that he needs no introduction at our hands, and we sincerely congratulate the people of that Diocese on the selection. Father O'Reilly was a native of the County Cavan, Ireland, studied partly in Ireland, but studied theology at St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee, Wis., from which place he was ordained Priest. He succeeded the present Vicar-General, Very Rev. J. F. Cummings, as rector at Topeka, which place he has filled with wonderful success during nearly six years. Rev. Jas. O'Reilly is about forty years of age, and has for some time past been Treasurer of the Irish National League of America at Topeka. He stands as well as religious reputation as a man as the State.

The Rev. Richard Scannell, who will be consecrated Bishop of Concordia, is at present Vicar-General of the Diocese of Nashville, and as one time was Administrator of that Diocese, and is felt a fine grasp the service of Father O'Reilly. He is a native of the County of Cork, Ireland, and studied theology at All Hallows College near Dublin, Ireland. He is a popular speaker, speaks French, about as well as English, and speaks French and Italian fluently.

How the Present Public School System Originated.

It is only right that both Catholics and non-Catholics who believe in the preservation of Christianity in this land should fully understand the infidel source from whence the system of the education which the State at present follows originated. The system has worked and have sown the seeds by creating not only entire unbelief in any form of religious observance in the minds of American children of Protestant parentage, but also by inspiring them with infidel ideas which kill all scruples of conscience, free the mind of all moral obligation, and leave young men and women on the threshold of life fully imbued with the principles which make them—as they make money, so that every appetite may be gratified and every passion pampered.

This is precisely what education without God has led to throughout all ages in the past, and the laws governing the results of such a system of education are as immutable as they are enduring. People who talk about the "moral" influences of education without God, cannot appreciate the absurdity of the proposition. As well might they expatiate upon the "light of the world" in the absence of the sun, as to think that virtue, morality, honesty, fidelity, and all the other attributes which combine to make man "God's noblest work, can exist in that moment, or at any time, when the Creator of all is entirely ignored.

Republics have risen and fallen long ago, and it is a well-established fact that the passions of the people—engendered and encouraged by the influences of paganizing education—had a large share in their downfall. Then, as now, corruption—both of public morality and private society—led to the disintegration and final destruction of the republics of Sparta, Athens, Thebes, Carthage and Rome. History, as repeated itself in other respects, and the parallel—as which all thinking citizens of this Republic should ask themselves—may not the historical evidence of the Past be repeated in our Future.

As long as the manners of the Romans were regulated by the principle which inculcated the fear of the gods, a time held a strong conservatism, Plutarch, and "future state of rewards and punishments—the Romans were great, free and virtuous people. But when the substantial doctrine of Epicurus—which insinuated itself into Rome under the captivating title of philosophy—was adopted by the people, the passion for luxury and lascivious ease became almost universal, and the once great Republic went down in the vortex of its own seething corruption.

A whole volume might be written in order to show the analogy which exists between the present state of public and private morality in this land and the dawn of decadence in the ancient Republics we have mentioned. But for the present we can only glance at this phase of a vital question with the American people, in order to point out the necessity of a system of public education which shall not be a mere form, but a reality. Let the Catholics of Protestant parents be such as to exert that influence which will lead to a system of education which shall be free from the influence of infidelity, and which will make them, as citizens, and as men, good citizens and men.

The Catholic Church is exerting herself to extend this system of education in every parish throughout the land, and to gather her children into parochial schools, even as a prudent hen gathereth her chicks under her wings when her vigilant eye discerns a hawk upon the horizon. In this way the Church will keep alive Christian faith in the land, while the different sects who have not already taken, or will not take the precaution in future, will disappear from the Protestant world every as the present system of public school education emanated, we feel assured that they will realize the danger to liberty, to life and to property which lurks in that State system of educating children without an acknowledge of the love and the fear of God in all their actions to their fellow-men.

Voltaire in Whose Footsteps was to America what Socrates was to the world in his day—the model citizen, the profound philosopher, and the public teacher. Both men were hated because they exposed popular fallacies, both antagonized public sentiment, and both stripped popular idols of their many-colored Aroll, for that alone—to win against the popular idols, both were made to partake of the bitterness and draught of men's hatred—the former during life and the latter at his death.

Sermons works are a sealed book to the great mass of the American people, for the simple reason that the professional pulpiteer and the gesticulating lecturer find more charms in a flowery rhetoric. The idea that "no Protestants" should learn wisdom from "yon Papists," still prevails in the popular mind, notwithstanding the fact that popular notes many Americans, because they consume nothing but loafing and the Mr. Barnum of modern educational chapstick for sewing, looking neither to the right nor to the left, for fear of being called a Papist, or the American Prelates, or some Anti-Christ, or convert like Brownson should happen to be within ear shot of the "Gentlemen" upon the slippery path which environs the freedom of a nation that has no room for God in the minds of citizens of the Republic.

Thirty-four years ago Brownson plainly pointed out to the free sons whether what at his fact, the coming church which were to overturn the Republic through the system of education which was then in vogue. Brownson's prophecy has been fulfilled, and the system—as we have shown—has been the means of making the children of good Protestant parents into Agnostics and Infidels, while Catholic children attending public schools are made worse by among "Christian" companions than they would be if they were compelled to attend the public schools. Let the Catholics of Protestant parents be such as to exert that influence which will lead to a system of education which shall be free from the influence of infidelity, and which will make them, as citizens, and as men, good citizens and men.

The Functions of a Catholic Paper.

An article from the pleasant pen of Mr. Hugh E. McHenry recently appeared in a New York secular paper, in the course of which the experienced journalist thus sagely sketched the functions of a Catholic paper, and we feel no little pride in recording the fact that the Monitor is modelled precisely upon the same pattern as that drawn so deftly by Mr. McHenry, whose long connection with the Catholic press gives his views additional authority:

He says that a Catholic paper should be a complete whole. About this there ought to be little doubt, and yet both publishers and readers of Catholic papers often forget it. Some—perhaps the majority of the weekly newspapers will answer the requirements of the times. A monster collection will cost nine may need the folly of such proceedings. Newspapers are meant to publish the news, and in the present circumstances of the press, the news must be furnished daily or the very first of it. A newspaper for a weekly is complete with a daily on this score. The news is stale to-day, and to-day's news will be answered history to-morrow, or rapidly drop into the waste of the matter of news. We do not command the news, the events, the crude and inaccurate as it must be, of the world's doings, but the fact that it is presented to the public with reverence and is collected to kill the foolish superstition of any weekly to be a complete whole. Indeed, at the same time there is a limited—as the entertainment of the news which does legitimately fill the space of a weekly, and that is to guarantee its accuracy, and to avoid matters as far as possible distorted, and to give such news as is daily procedure matters are so of little the importance or of little interest. News of this kind is sometimes the most urgent and of the most interest. They all this, however, the main purpose which a Catholic weekly subscription, as Mr. McHenry puts it, is to be a journal of ideas. Its main purpose is to be a journal of ideas. Its main purpose is to be a journal of ideas. Its main purpose

Our Young Folks.

All Proofs, original contributions or matter will be accepted for our Department.

Address all communications and contributions to "Our Young Folks" Box 1818.

Communications should be written on one side of the sheet only, with pen and ink, and in a legible manner.

Accidental Discovery.

Accident has been a suggester of a number of important scientific discoveries in the world's history. These discoveries have been earned, however, before they have looked out from observant, thinking minds. Galileo had observed many times the lamp in the church swinging with measured beat; but to them it meant nothing. Yet when, in the Cathedral at Pisa, one of the vergers, after replenishing a lamp with oil, accidentally left it swinging to and fro; Galileo, then a youth of 18 noticed it, and conceived therefrom his invention of the pendulum, which he completed after fifty years attentive study and labor.

A tiny spider's web suggested to Capt. Samuel Brown, of England, the invention of the Suspension Bridge, and the peculiar shape of the shell of a lobster gave James Watt the solution of the problem of how to carry water by pipes along the unseen bed of the river Clyde.

And so, also, Sir Isambard Brunel, in reproducing upon a larger scale the movements of the little ship worm, which perforates the wood in one direction and then in another until the archway is complete, constructed successfully the great Thames tunnel, a triumph of engineering.

God Sees Us.

A man once went out to steal some corn. He took his coat, a bright little fellow of eight years along with him. When they came to the edge of the corn field from which the father expected to steal the corn, he locked up and down the road to make sure that there was no one to witness the intended theft. He could see no one, and thinking the coast clear was about to go into the field when the little fellow caught him by the arm and looking up into his face said, "Papa, you therefore look one way."

"Which way?" asked the father.

"You forgot to look up."

The words struck conviction to the man's hardened heart and he turned home without stealing the corn.

A Good Word for the Flies.

It is wonderful how little matters effect great deeds. We cause across a funny story as told by Randall, the man who wrote the large biography of Jefferson, which shows how the signing of the Declaration of Independence was hastened. Says he, "While the question of independence was before Congress it had its meaning near a livery stable. The members were short breeches and silk stockings, and with hand-kerchiefs in hand they were diligently employed in lashing the flies off their legs. Very vacatious was this amusement, and to a great an importance did it arouse the sufferers, that it hastened, if it did not add, to inducing them promptly to affix their signatures to the great document which gave birth to an empire republic. This anecdote I had from Mr. Jefferson at Monticello, who seemed to enjoy it very much, as well as to give credit to the influence of the flies. He told it with much glee, and seemed to retain a vivid recollection of an attack from which the only relief was signing the paper and flying from the scene."

Cast a Line for Yourself.

A young man was listlessly watching some anglers on a bridge. He was poor and desolate. Presently one of the fishers spoke to him:

"If you will take this rod and hold it you could sell them at a very fair price and buy me food and lodging."

"I will give you just as many and just as good fish," said the owner, who had chanced to overhear his words, "if you will do me a trifling favor."

"What is it?" said the other.

"Only to send this line till I come back; I wish to go on a short errand."

The proposal was gladly accepted. The old man was gone so long that the young man began to get impatient. Meanwhile the hungry fish snapped greedily at the baited hook and the young man lost all his depression in the excitement of pulling them in; and when the owner of the lines returned, he had caught a large number. Counting out from them as many fish as were in the basket and presenting them to the young man, the old fisherman said:

"I fulfil my promise from the fish you have caught, to teach you, whenever you see others earning what you need, to waste no time in fruitless wishing, but to cast a line for yourself."

A Model Salesman.

A story is told of a "green hand" on a good selling round, who could not learn how to keep a mountain, a sure sign of a blue twilight night, and the captain told particularly the vessel toward a bright, was dinging, which he pointed out. "This right, but R, for a short time all was well, the vessel, though she was veering rapidly before the course, and rushing green at the wheelbed. Very pleased the excited commander. "For you, good for you mean?" Where's the other? What do "Dear captain," timidly, devious helmsman, "keep looking at the excited—never signed! I lost the boat! found another, brighter and better, than the one you showed me!"

Dr. PARDEE'S REMEDY

is The Greatest Blood Cleanser.

Cures Spring Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Constipation AND Regulates The Kidneys & Liver.

One bottle taken according to directions will give better results than a gallon of Sarsaparilla, or any of the so-called Blood Purifiers with which the market is glutted. At Druggists, price $1.00 per bottle.

$500 REWARD

will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which Dr. Pardee's Remedy, properly administered, fails to relieve.

Family Fun.

A Census-Taker's Experience.

The census-taker has been going his rounds in San Francisco. He has been getting a part of one day a spectator to his repartee, and from it we make the following extract:

At one house I saw the women upstairs at the window and I went up the front steps. A fat, good-looking girl came to the door, and I commenced taking her statistics.

"Any children been born here during the last year?" says I.

"Don't know, says she, never been here but three weeks. I'll go and ask mamma," and away she toddled up stairs. Pretty soon she came toddling back, and says:

"Mamma wants to know what you want to know for?"

"Tell her I am taking the city census, as required by law each year, says I, and away went the girl again. When she got back she said:

"Yes.

"How many? says I.

"Only one, says she.

"Boy or girl? says I.

"Girl, says she.

"What name? says I.

"Dimple, says she.

"That's her baby name, says I. "What's her real, full name?"

"I don't know, says she, and up she went.

"Beatrice Bramsmithe Brown," says she.

"When was she born? says I.

"I'll ask mamma, says she, and I whistled "The Watch on the Rhine" clear through before she came back.

"Day before Christmas, says she.

"What is her father's name?

"Mr. Brown, of course, says she.

"What is his christian name? says I.

"I'll ask Mamma." The girl was fat, and began to puff as she went up the stairs.

"Benjamin Bruce Brown," says she.

"What does he do? says I, thinking I says I.

"Keeps a store, says she.

"What's her mother's name? says I.

"Dishwasher Bridget Brown, says she.

Just then the woman came to the head of the stairs, and a pr.

"Seems to me you're asking a great many impertinent questions."

"Yes, I am," says I. "Where were you born?"

"Buffalo."

"How old are you?"

"None of your business" Matilda, shut the door.

Suggestive Smiles.

—"Alas" said the heavy tragedian mournfully, as he stepped from one railroad car to another, "there are times that try men's souls."

An old tramp who agreed to saw wood for half an hour for his breakfast from a Baltimore woman, quit at the end of half an hour and said, "Madam, I have struck for more breakfast and less work, are you willing to arbitrate?" "Certainly," she replied, and she left the man in the hands of her bulldog, who ran the tramp half a mile and decided that a lockout was inevitable.

A well known minister was sent South from New Jersey a few years ago to labor among the colored people. They received him with many demonstrations of joy, and at the first meeting which he held one colored preacher prayed for him with great earnestness thus: "O Lord! Bless dis par brother whah come down from the North to preach de Gospel to us. Nobut him with the kerkerness of salvation, and set him on fire."

"Pray, sir, can you tell me the way to the Tremont House?" asked a stranger of a Boston boy. "Yes, I can," was the reply. "Shall I show you the way?" "Yes, if you please." "Then follow me." "Shall I carry your carpet bag?" "Yes, if you please." "Shall I carry your umbrella?" "Yes, if you please." "Shall I carry your cane?" "Yes, if you please." "Shall I carry your—" "Stop! I can carry myself!" "Yes, if you please."

An Inquisitive Wife.

"Mr. dear," said Mrs. Paters to her husband the other day, "what's this I read in the papers about Home Rule mean?"

"It means," said Mr. Peters, with the air of a sage, "that the Irish want to govern themselves."

"They are tired of the tyranny of the Czar, are they?"

"The Czar! What are you talking about!"

"Oh, I mean the Emperor."

"Worse, and more of it. Do you mean to tell me that you don't know that Ireland is under the rule of England?"

"Oh, so it is. Isn't Queen Victoria good to them! I know she loves to read one in her pictures. She can't be very horrid."

"She's horrid enough to the Irish. Do you listen and I'll explain the Home Rule business to you. I want my wife to be informed on so important a subject. You know all about Gladstone, don't you?"

"Oh, yes; he's Queen Victoria son or something, isn't he?"

"What are you talking about! Have I married a raving lunatic?"

"There, now, you go to getting cross about nothing. I wouldn't talk to my wife like that for all the Irish in creation. Who's mine is the King, or President, Czar, or whatever the ruler of Ireland is, isn't he? But it doesn't sound like an Irish name.

"He's no more Irish than I'm Chinese. Now you pay attention and I'll tell you all about it. For years the people of Ireland have long been dissatisfied—"

"With Gladstone?"

"No, no—"

"With Victoria, then! Well, I—

"Not with her aloud! They have been shamefully oppressed, and their rights and liberties restricted through oversion and—

"Oversion means the same as prohibition does here, doesn't it?"

"Heaven help you, woman! Do you like to see the English rulers try the prohibition game on the Irish in freedom? This house-rule middle wouldn't be any thing. Coercion is a species of tyranny that deprives the Irish of almost all individual liberty. You've heard of Parnell?"

"He's the man who has just been round the world on a bicycle, isn't he?"

"Great Cesar! I've a notion to go right down town and apply for a division. Any jury in the land would give it to me in ten minutes a half. Here! where's my hat and coat? I'm going off to hang myself for marrying such a—

"Family jar, I guess! no mean as you can be! I'm sure I've understood every word you've said, and I wish I stood your abuse."

Hat Peters had fled.

"You asked me to bring you a little pin money," said a young husband to his wife.

"Yes, dear," said the lady, expectantly.

"Well, to save you the fatigue of going out to this job earlier I have brought you some pins instead."

—Wife—Now that you have bought a cow, who will milk it?

Husband—Oh, he says the calf does that. So we'll have all the milk we want.

—Hills and pimples and other affections arising from impure blood may appear at the season when the blood is heated. Hoods Sarsaparilla removes the cause of these troubles by purifying, vitalizing, and enriching the blood, and at the same time it gives strength to the whole system.

Cholera Morbus
Cramps
Colic
Diarrhoea
Summer Complaints
Dysentery

All Cured by a teaspoonful of Perry Davis's Pain Killer in a little Bitter Sugar and Water

5% INTEREST. WITH FIVE DOLLARS

5'- IMP. ASST. 100-FLORIN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1880

These bonds are issued by the Austrian Government and are guaranteed by the Austrian Government. They are of the same security and nature as the Austrian Government Bonds which have been so much in demand during the last few years. A part of the interest on the whole sum is paid every six months, and at maturity the entire principal is returned, the holder of a coupon being entitled to the number of prizes attached to the coupon, payable on maturity, every bond is entitled to

Two Drawings Annually.

Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must win one of the following premiums, or it does not.

NO BLANKS.

Premiums.		Floring
1	60,000	120,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
1	2,000	2,000
1	1,000	1,000
5	500	2,500
10	100	1,000
100	50	5,000
1,000	40	40,000
1,000	30	30,000
1,000	20	20,000
1,000	10	10,000
1,000	10	10,000

Together 3,000 premiums, amounting to 256,000 Florins. The next redemption takes place on the 1st of January, 1890.

And every bond must participate in this drawing and must have a premium or a prize. Any person who sends us from one to twenty bonds at a time, and remits the amount of the purchase money, will be entitled to receive the bonds with the premium or prize they may win, by return of mail, without any further deposit of money. Every bond is entitled to Gained 15 Pounds.

—I have spent a great deal of money for Turpid Liver and Dyspepsia. Every thing I ate disagreed with me and I gained nothing.

Tutt's Pills

I can now digest any kind of food; am free from dyspepsia, have gained fifteen pounds in weight.—W. C. Gwyn, Lee, Columbia, S. C.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

D. MENCARINI, 911 Mission St., Manufacturer and Importer of RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC. Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc. THE ONLY COMPETE COLLECTION ON THE PACIFIC COAST. Catalogue sent free on application.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 767.

WEDDING PRESENTS,

A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS. Elegantly Made and Design. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

Back to Ivory Handles, per pair. $1.00
Ebony Handles, per pair. 1.50
Price's Silver Spoons, plated on coin silver. 2.50
A well selected stock of English and American Table Knives and Forks. Best C. O. D. or by mail. Catalogue and Price-list free.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 416 Kearny St.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAIL ROAD.

"THE DUFAUX SHORT LINE."

COMMENCING MONDAY, APRIL 16, 1888, AND UNTIL further notice, Boats and Trains will run as follows: Leave Tiburon Ferry Foot of Market Street, as follows:

Leave S.F.	Arrive Tiburon	Arrive S.F.
9:00 A.M.	9:25 A.M.	9:40 A.M.
2:00 P.M.	2:25 P.M.	2:40 P.M.

Leave Tiburon for San Francisco, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, at 9:50 A.M. and 3:00 P.M. Leave Tiburon for San Rafael, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, at 7:35 A.M. and 5:00 P.M. Leave San Rafael for San Francisco, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, at 6:15 A.M. and 1:45 P.M.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Sausalito to Mendell, or San Francisco, $1.75, in Saloon Seats, $1; to Sausalito, $1; to Tiburon, $1.50.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Saturday, Sunday and Monday, to Sausalito, $1; to Tiburon, $1.50; to Mendell, or San Francisco, $2.50; to Santa Rosa, $3; to Healdsburg, $4; to Cloverdale, $5; to Ukiah, $6.

Round Trip Excursion Tickets to Mendell, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Cloverdale, Ukiah, Calistoga, Napa, Sonoma, Glen Ellen, Sebastopol, Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Harbison Springs, Highland Springs, Kelseyville, Soda Springs, Bartlett Springs, Madison, Yolo and Davis, at reduced rates.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Sausalito to Mendell, or San Francisco, $2.75; to Santa Rosa, $5; to Healdsburg, $6; to Cloverdale, $7; to Ukiah, $8.

From San Francisco or Sausalito to Santa Rosa, Round Trip Tickets, $3.00; to Healdsburg, $4.00; to Cloverdale, $5.00; to Ukiah, $6.00; to Calistoga, $5.00; to Napa, $2.50; to Sonoma, $2.00; to Glen Ellen, $2.50; to Sebastopol, $3.00; to Petaluma, $1.50; to Santa Rosa, $3.00; to Fulton, $3.50; to Windsor, $3.50; to Healdsburg, $4.00; to Lytton, $4.50; to Geyserville, $5.00; to Cloverdale, $5.50

TRUE TEACHER.

[DISCUSSED FROM THIS CASE].

Thus ends. He will but be every side the great truths of Christianity publicly assailed and defended in the land to-day. All this makes it more imperative that the rising generation should be well instructed in their religion, and imbued with an extensive and practical knowledge of the teachings of Divine Faith. Such shall be the knowledge imparted in those Christian schools. The child shall learn, every branch of science suitable for his position in life, but religion shall be his book of delicacy, and his religious inspiration will outlast his knowledge of worldly wisdom. Such shall be the teacher to expand, to subdue the passions, to regulate the affections, and to prepare his mind for that world, full of danger, into which he shall soon be obliged to enter.

We welcome, then, Brothers, coming as you do to strengthen our ranks in this great work of Christian education. But we welcome you also as coming from Irelaud faithful Ireland, the motherland of sages and of saints. [Applause.] At the present hour the eyes of the civilized world are fixed upon Ireland, her struggles, her aspirations, her obtaining her triumphs. [Applause.] Her sons at home, with unprecedented ardor and untainted loyalty, assert their inalienable rights, resolved never to relax their efforts until they shall have secured a full measure of self-government, with all its privileges. [Applause.] But it is not to the political struggles of Ireland that I would now desire to call your attention. I would wish rather to commemorate her devotedness to religion, which can never be surpassed; her faith, pure as the purest gold that issues from the crucible, her piety, rivalling the brightest ages of the Irish Church; her charity, that superabounding in good works; her missionary zeal, carrying souls to Christ in every quarter of the globe. [Applause.] Bright and pure are indeed was the sacrificial spirit of chivalry in the first ages of her Christian history. It is no less bright, no less illustrious at the present hour. [Applause.]

THE SAGE OF ST. ALBERTUS

described the Irish Church as "rich in the wealth of science, and as thickly set with learned men as the firmament is with stars." A thousand years later, another Sagacious writer, Camden, would affirm that "no man came up to the Irish scholars in Ireland and Britain for sanctity and learning; and they sent forth swarms of holy men all over Europe to whom the greatest monasteries in France, Italy, Germany and Switzerland owe their origin." In our own day the learned Dr. Lanigan, Ulster, has affirmed with no less eloquence that "when we look into the ecclesiastical life of the Irish people, we are almost tempted to believe that some potent spirit had transported over the sea the cells of the Lavras of Ireland, with all their hermits, its monasteries, with all their inmates; these centuries gave saints to the Church, and, while it divulged the eternal attributes of the sciences, enlivened with especial care the religious contemplation of her communities as well as in the mists whose they produced."

BUT WE NEED NOT THE TESTIMONIES

of these writers. The religious monuments which still remain, the cyclopean towers of round stone and cells and monasteries that mark each fairest spot, the silent glen, the green hill, the smiling valley, sufficiently attest how widespread through the length and breadth of the land were the blessings of the faith in those days of old. [Applause.] At the present day beside those venerable ruins we see the new monuments, stupendous grand schools and churches, noble convents, magnificent cathedrals—charitable institutions of which any nation of Europe might be justly proud. In no other country perhaps, except Ireland, has the faith, the battle for Christian education been so persistently fought; and I may add that on this religious battle-field no laurels have been more bright than those won by the Christian Brothers. [Applause.] I might cite many proofs of the efficiency of the Christian Brothers' schools and of the success which attended their labors in the great cause of Christian education. I might cite many, or, only two witnesses who, before the Royal Commission on the endowed schools, gave testimony to the truth. Mr. Crawford, assistant commissioner, reported as follows:—

"THE MOST EFFICIENT SCHOOLS,

in addition are those managed by the Christian Brothers. Counting out from them so—ever in the basket and presenting the young man, the old fisherman so—"I (full) my promise from the fish have caught, to teach you, whose you are, clearly earning what you need, for no time in fruition wishing, but to labor for yourself."

[CONTINUED FROM THIRD COL.]

A Model Helmsman.

A story is told of a "green hand" and a coasting vessel, who could not steer by a mariner's compass. It happened one night, and the captain partitioned the vessel toward a lighthouse, which he pointed out to the green hand, for a short time, rapidly before the course, and steer great at the wheel. "Always remember, Pat," said the captain, "you mean I Where's the lighthouse?" "Dear captain," replied the devious helmsman, "keep yourself entirely easy in my hand, I put the blood another, brighter and bolder than the one you showed me!"

Dr. PARDEE'S REMEDIES

The Greatest Blood Cures Cleanse Spring Humor Salt Rheum Scrofula, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Constipation AND Regulates The Kidneys & Liver

One bottle taken according to directions will give better results than a fifty Sarsaparilla, or any of the so-called Purifiers with which the market teems. At Druggists, price $1.00 per bottle.

$500 REWARD

will be paid for any case of Blood which Dr. Pardee's Remedy, properly administered, fails to relieve.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

ARMAGH.—At a special meeting of the Armagh Nationalists, held on June 27th, in the Catholic Reading Rooms, Cathedral street—Rev. P. McGearty, C.C., presided—the following resolution was proposed by Mr. Patrick Hanlon, and seconded by Mr. John McCrudy, and carried unanimously:—"Resolved, that considering the condition of the public accounts, and the danger of incurring serious income tax, we recommend the Nationalists of the city to carefully avoid all responsibility for the accumulating difficulties of the Town Commissioners by taking no part in the forth coming municipal elections."

ANTRIM.—On Tuesday, June 28, the ship Lebanon, 1,020 tons, of London, in command of Captain Nowlan, arrived in Queenstown Harbor, after a protracted voyage from Portland, Oregon, with a cargo of wheat to consignees. Captain Nowlan, who appeared to be in much grief, caused by the recent death of his son, whose body was on board the Lebanon, stated that on the 28 of March last, while his ship was running before a fierce gale of wind and heavy seas, she was suddenly taking on board a seaman named Smith fell from the main topsail yard and was drowned. It was impossible to render the unfortunate man any assistance, as the ship was scudding before the fury of the gale. Smith was a good seaman, and much respected by those on board. He was a native of Belfast.

CARLOW.—The plans of the new Rev. P. M'Donald, P.P., has at a cost of a monument to incorporate the Wolstead Cistercian Abbey of Graiguenamanagh with the parish of Tullow, Co. Carlow, and restore, as far as possible, the old chapel of Graiguenamanagh. The work of this nature will cost a great expense; but the people of Graiguenamanagh are to be congratulated on the faith that is in them by subscribing so a work of this nature. The work of this nature, however, owing to the extent of the work and the labor, a large sum is necessary, contributions are invited from those outside of the parish.—Those wishing to help on the work of Christian charity can communicate with Mr. John Murphy, Globe Hotel, Graiguenamanagh, who is the treasurer, or Mr. Patrick O'Leary, Graiguenamanagh, Secretary.

CORK.—On June 30th, one who was a conspicuous figure at all the conventions of the Nationalists in England, has been removed by death. Mr. James O'Brien, who was in his 70th year, was one who took the pledge in 1842 and remained a much respected Total Abstinence Advocate. Mr. James O'Brien, who was in his 70th year, was one who took the pledge in 1842 and remained a much respected Total Abstinence Advocate. A Catholic Marksman, county Cork, he was a lad of 17 years when the Rebellion broke out. He witnessed the cruelties then perpetrated by the yeomanry and the soldiers in the name of law and order. He had a lively recollection. His remains were interred in Kilmalkedar Cemetery, Limerick.

With deepest grief it is our melancholy duty to record the death, at the advanced age of 80 years, of the Very Rev. Father O'Brien, of Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo, parish priest of the Diocese of Cork. After years of hard and arduous labor for such was the summary life of the worthy priest of the Cross was taken to their people in the famine year, the dire, Father O'Brien presumably injured this life on the 26th ult., at the residence of his nephew, in Midleton, Co. Cork, under, though a priest of the Cross. He was long the beginning of the century, of most respectable parents at Ballinla, near Liscarroll.

The death of the parish priest of Saint Patrick's, Cork, the Right Rev. Monsigner Sheehan, which took place on Monday, June 27th, will be heard with great regret by the many friends of the deceased prelate in Cork Mgr. Sheehan labored long and zealously in his native city as a priest whilst he was Dean of Cork, and his social work and his benefactions were numerous. Under his auspices the Christian Brothers built the handsome little church of St. Joseph's, Blackpitt, and he was chosen to succeed Dr. Patrick, in which position he discharged his duties for many years of his life. Mgr. Sheehan had been ailing for several months before his death.

CAVAN—Mother Mary Ignatius Corbett, of the Dove Clares' Convent, Cavan, died on the 13th of June, in the 75th year of her age and 48th of her religious profession. Her character of a century ago followed came to Cavan from Newry and founded the convent in the former place. She labored with such prudence the glory of God and comfort His poor, and was followed by the members of the community and a large circle of friends. Her loss will be felt in Cavan.

CLARE.—At all the chapel gates throughout West Clare, Sunday, June 26th, collections were made after the Masses for the erection of a monument to the memory of the late Rev. Father Cleary, P.P., Kilmaley, Co. Clare, who died in the prime of life, and in the 25th year of his ordination. Father Cleary, who appeared to be in much grief, caused by the recent death of his son, whose body was on board the Lebanon, stated that on the 28 of March last, while his ship was running before a fierce gale of wind and heavy seas, she was suddenly taking on board a seaman named Smith fell from the main topsail yard and was drowned. It was impossible to render the unfortunate man any assistance, as the ship was scudding before the fury of the gale. Smith was a good seaman, and much respected by those on board. He was a native of Belfast.

CARLOW.—The plans of the new Rev. P. M'Donald, P.P., has at a cost of a monument to incorporate the Wolstead Cistercian Abbey of Graiguenamanagh with the parish of Tullow, Co. Carlow, and restore, as far as possible, the old chapel of Graiguenamanagh. The work of this nature will cost a great expense; but the people of Graiguenamanagh are to be congratulated on the faith that is in them by subscribing so a work of this nature. The work of this nature, however, owing to the extent of the work and the labor, a large sum is necessary, contributions are invited from those outside of the parish.—Those wishing to help on the work of Christian charity can communicate with Mr. John Murphy, Globe Hotel, Graiguenamanagh, who is the treasurer, or Mr. Patrick O'Leary, Graiguenamanagh, Secretary.

CORK.—On June 30th, one who was a conspicuous figure at all the conventions of the Nationalists in England, has been removed by death. Mr. James O'Brien, who was in his 70th year, was one who took the pledge in 1842 and remained a much respected Total Abstinence Advocate. A Catholic Marksman, county Cork, he was a lad of 17 years when the Rebellion broke out. He witnessed the cruelties then perpetrated by the yeomanry and the soldiers in the name of law and order. He had a lively recollection. His remains were interred in Kilmalkedar Cemetery, Limerick.

With deepest grief it is our melancholy duty to record the death, at the advanced age of 80 years, of the Very Rev. Father O'Brien, of Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo, parish priest of the Diocese of Cork. After years of hard and arduous labor for such was the summary life of the worthy priest of the Cross was taken to their people in the famine year, the dire, Father O'Brien presumably injured this life on the 26th ult., at the residence of his nephew, in Midleton, Co. Cork, under, though a priest of the Cross. He was long the beginning of the century, of most respectable parents at Ballinla, near Liscarroll.

The death of the parish priest of Saint Patrick's, Cork, the Right Rev. Monsigner Sheehan, which took place on Monday, June 27th, will be heard with great regret by the many friends of the deceased prelate in Cork Mgr. Sheehan labored long and zealously in his native city as a priest whilst he was Dean of Cork, and his social work and his benefactions were numerous. Under his auspices the Christian Brothers built the handsome little church of St. Joseph's, Blackpitt, and he was chosen to succeed Dr. Patrick, in which position he discharged his duties for many years of his life. Mgr. Sheehan had been ailing for several months before his death.

CAVAN—Mother Mary Ignatius Corbett, of the Dove Clares' Convent, Cavan, died on the 13th of June, in the 75th year of her age and 48th of her religious profession. Her character of a century ago followed came to Cavan from Newry and founded the convent in the former place. She labored with such prudence the glory of God and comfort His poor, and was followed by the members of the community and a large circle of friends. Her loss will be felt in Cavan.

CLARE.—At all the chapel gates throughout West Clare, Sunday, June 26th, collections were made after the Masses for the erection of a monument to the memory of the late Rev. Father Cleary, P.P., Kilmaley, Co. Clare, who died in the prime of life, and in the 25th year of his ordination. Father Cleary, who appeared to be in much grief, caused by the recent death of his son, whose body was on board the Lebanon, stated that on the 28 of March last, while his ship was running before a fierce gale of wind and heavy seas, she was suddenly taking on board a seaman named Smith fell from the main topsail yard and was drowned. It was impossible to render the unfortunate man any assistance, as the ship was scudding before the fury of the gale. Smith was a good seaman, and much respected by those on board. He was a native of Belfast.

CARLOW.—The plans of the new Rev. P. M'Donald, P.P., has at a cost of a monument to incorporate the Wolstead Cistercian Abbey of Graiguenamanagh with the parish of Tullow, Co. Carlow, and restore, as far as possible, the old chapel of Graiguenamanagh. The work of this nature will cost a great expense; but the people of Graiguenamanagh are to be congratulated on the faith that is in them by subscribing so a work of this nature. The work of this nature, however, owing to the extent of the work and the labor, a large sum is necessary, contributions are invited from those outside of the parish.—Those wishing to help on the work of Christian charity can communicate with Mr. John Murphy, Globe Hotel, Graiguenamanagh, who is the treasurer, or Mr. Patrick O'Leary, Graiguenamanagh, Secretary.

CORK.—On June 30th, one who was a conspicuous figure at all the conventions of the Nationalists in England, has been removed by death. Mr. James O'Brien, who was in his 70th year, was one who took the pledge in 1842 and remained a much respected Total Abstinence Advocate. A Catholic Marksman, county Cork, he was a lad of 17 years when the Rebellion broke out. He witnessed the cruelties then perpetrated by the yeomanry and the soldiers in the name of law and order. He had a lively recollection. His remains were interred in Kilmalkedar Cemetery, Limerick.

With deepest grief it is our melancholy duty to record the death, at the advanced age of 80 years, of the Very Rev. Father O'Brien, of Ballinrobe, Co. Mayo, parish priest of the Diocese of Cork. After years of hard and arduous labor for such was the summary life of the worthy priest of the Cross was taken to their people in the famine year, the dire, Father O'Brien presumably injured this life on the 26th ult., at the residence of his nephew, in Midleton, Co. Cork, under, though a priest of the Cross. He was long the beginning of the century, of most respectable parents at Ballinla, near Liscarroll.

The death of the parish priest of Saint Patrick's, Cork, the Right Rev. Monsigner Sheehan, which took place on Monday, June 27th, will be heard with great regret by the many friends of the deceased prelate in Cork Mgr. Sheehan labored long and zealously in his native city as a priest whilst he was Dean of Cork, and his social work and his benefactions were numerous. Under his auspices the Christian Brothers built the handsome little church of St. Joseph's, Blackpitt, and he was chosen to succeed Dr. Patrick, in which position he discharged his duties for many years of his life. Mgr. Sheehan had been ailing for several months before his death.

CAVAN—Mother Mary Ignatius Corbett, of the Dove Clares' Convent, Cavan, died on the 13th of June, in the 75th year of her age and 48th of her religious profession. Her character of a century ago followed came to Cavan from Newry and founded the convent in the former place. She labored with such prudence the glory of God and comfort His poor, and was followed by the members of the community and a large circle of friends. Her loss will be felt in Cavan.

CLARE.—At all the chapel gates throughout West Clare, Sunday, June 26th, collections were made after the Masses for the erection of a monument to the memory of the late Rev. Father Cleary, P.P., Kilmaley, Co. Clare, who died in the prime of life, and in the 25th year of his ordination. Father Cleary, who appeared to be in much grief, caused by the recent death of his son, whose body was on board the Lebanon, stated that on the 28 of March last, while his ship was running before a fierce gale of wind and heavy seas, she was suddenly taking on board a seaman named Smith fell from the main topsail yard and was drowned. It was impossible to render the unfortunate man any assistance, as the ship was scudding before the fury of the gale. Smith was a good seaman, and much respected by those on board. He was a native of Belfast.

DOWN.—On Sunday, June 26th, a sad fatality occurred at Camlough, a village about three miles from Newry. A lad named Joseph Wells, aged 16 years, who belonged to Portadown, lost his life by drowning. It appears that Wells, who was a servant in Camlough, went to bathe in a lake adjacent to the village, and nothing further was heard of him until his clothes were found on the bank by a man named William Kearny. The lake was then dragged for the body, which was not discovered until a late hour in the evening. Mr. Joseph Kearney, Coroner, Newry, Esq., summoned a jury, and a verdict of accidental death was returned.

DUBLIN.—In view of the passing of the Coercion Act, the following particulars relative to Resident Magistrates in Ireland, may prove interesting. There are 76 of these "Lords Lieutenant of Justice," every one of whom is removable at the pleasure of the "Castle," Inclusive, good, bad, or indifferent, notwithstanding. Of the total, 55 are from the fighting services—police or military, there are no fewer than a dozen Generals, and there is no conspicuous of the numerous jet nominees of the aristocracy, who is described as "gentlemen" of no future association.

On June 29th, at the Convent of the Sisters of Charity, Milltown, Dublin, Miss E. Kelly, Dublin; Miss J. Dailey, Dublin, and Miss M. Dunigay, Kyle House, Rathdowney, were professed. His Grace the Archbishop presided at the ceremony.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

ELEMENTS OF ASSAYING LABORATORY. By Joseph Bayma, S.J., Professor of Mathematics at Santa Clara College, Santa Clara, Cal. San Francisco: A. Waldteufel, publisher, 525 Market street.

We unhesitatingly a valuable work on Analytic Chemistry, which we have carefully perused and find 100 problems are pleasingly clear and concise. The book contains tables of logarithms of numbers from 1 to 12,500, which will make a very valuable reference for students. The author, Rev. J. Bayma, S.J., is a distinguished mathematician with an established reputation both as a practical teacher and as the author of several excellent treatises on Geometry and Trigonometry.

WORKS OF MRS. ANNA H. DORSEY. Uniform Edition. Baltimore: John Murphy & Co., publishers, 1887. Contents: "Tom Quad; Adelli, Beth's Promise, Reason of Carrington, Old House at Glenevan, Elder Sister, Fate of the Dunn, Mary and Wood, by Mrs. Anna H. Dorsey.

The name of this distinguished Catholic authoress is familiar, no doubt, to many of our readers, who have read her numerous serials from time to time in the American Catholic publications. Mrs. Dorsey's writings may be briefly and correctly summarized as refined, intellectual and thoroughly Catholic in tone. If she is not a powerful writer, she is at least a conscientious one, and a rule of sincerity and pathos runs through her entire works. No better reading could interest Catholics. Within moderate limits it is decidedly excellent, yet there are dramatic climaxes in several of the volumes. All the stories are about the refined and most healthy and dignified tone for the minds of our Catholic youth. Mrs. Dorsey has lessed her latest works in this uniform edition at the suggestions of Cardinal Gibbons and Bishop Ryan. Each volume is tastefully bound in cloth and gold, and the typographical appearance is pre-possessing.

GILROY HOT SPRINGS.

List of Late Arrivals.

From San Benito—J. Hayes, Hayes, Dorsman, N. Levy, Mrs. N. Levy, Miss Levy, Miss Gertie Levy, Gertie Hollenbeister, T. Mitchell, Phil. Mathieson, M. Sharp, John Martin, M. Kirk, J. O'Kane.

From Salinas—T. W. Fenwoll, Mrs. Fenwoll, Miss Fenwoll.

From San Felipe—Miss E. Day, Miss L. Day, Miss Pauline Mahoney, Mrs. Mahoney, Miss E. Kenneth, W. Malaby.

From San Jose—Miss E. Clayton, Mr. Fluck, Miss H. Fluck.

From Watsonville—T. W. Hutchinson, Mrs. T. Fred Hutchinson, Miss Hutchinson, Master Fred Hutchinson.

From Gilroy—Mrs. Hutchinson, Mrs. Fenn Railroad—Miss Stanton.

From Cherry Creek—W. A. Dodd.

From Tres Pinos—Miss H. Mapes.

From Tres Pinos—Miss Mapes, Miss Mapes, Miss Mapes,

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

LEO XIII. AND ERIN.

From every Christian land on earth,
A joyous tribute swells
In fonts of deepest filial love,
To where earth's Pontiff dwells;
To holy Rome, Saint Peter's throne,
Loved Leo fills it now,
Christ's Vicar's first blest thars rests
Upon this sacred brow.

Souls in celestial lustre gleam,
What living silver yours!
'Tis the radiance soft and holy
Of his Priesthood's fifty years:
O consecrated Prince of God,
Our Father and our Friend,
To bless thy Golden Jubilee,
Our hearts and voices blend.

And though then are a captive one,
Beneath the Robber's frown,
Yet still again Earth hails thee King,
Thou art Prince within the crown;
God's Priest by half a century,
Christ's Holy Vicar now,
Behold two hundred millions bend,
And for thy Blessing bow.

More than two hundred millions own—
Yea, love to own thy sway!
Did Caesar such dominion have
In their most powerful day?
True-hearted Friend of all mankind,
Defending the oppressed,
Thy holy counsel charms to peace,
In which are nations blest.

And thus thy Benediction rolls
Our weary land across,
And islands of the ocean roar—
All pour their gifts to thee;
As grand O'Connell sent his heart—
His proof of love to Rome,
So hearts of Erin's blood and Faith
Unite around Thy throne.

Though Erin's children exiles are,
For centuries, not years,
Their alms received by every skies,
By every land their tears;
Of margins'st strangers, thy child's truly proved,
Mid persecutions dire,
Their holy Faith but brighter glows,
Tried in oppressor's fire.

Thus Erin, queen of sorrow, kneels
Mid bonders and mid tears,
For thy holy Benediction—
That soothes earth's bitter fears;
And deep it pierces the Irish heart
In exile or at home;
To see the Holy Father dear,
A Prisoner in Rome.

A stranger tyrant's iron scourge,
Makes mourn their own fair land—
But to see Christ's Vicar smote in Rome
By a sacrilegious hand.
Fierce Hun, Attila, savage grand,
Would to Christ Leo be—
But the free-hearted Roman of to-day
Robs not Leo now.

Tis sure that Justice long withheld,
One day the scoffer comes,
Like the destroying angel's awful flight
Ov' Egypt's firstborn sons;
O deadly flight! O dreadful night!
Hear! Egypt's woeful wail,
For death in all its bitterness
Overspreads Nile's fertile vale.

Hear! It again thou robber king,
Despoiler of God's throne—
And ye who plunder Erin's isle,
And make her children groan;
Ye empire-builders—
Is just as swift to day,
As when power—
A delightfull nation lay.

One spake of earth world sink yon down,
One phrase to world being yon pen,
While from your midst, protected, free,
God's faithful ones will go
Through the Red Sea from their tyrants,
Free as God's Priests and people are
Where Pharaoh and his mighty hosts
Perish every one.

MARY J. COLEHAN.

Livermore, July 25th, 1887.

TWO LIVES.

Two babes were born in the self same town,
On the very same bright day;
Two souls were given to two mothers' arms,
Never of the world away;
And both neared pain and hardship
As falling flakes of snow
But one of them lived in the turnpike house,
And one in the street below.

Two children played in the self same town,
And the children both were fair;
And one had curls brushed smooth and round,
The other had tangled hair.
The children both grew up alone,
As other children grow;
But one of them lived in the turnpike house,
And one in the street below.

Two maidens grew to the self same town,
And one was wedded and loved;
The other died—for the curtain's part,
The world wins her sister moved.
And one was smiling, whose the hope
The other knew care and woe;
For one of them lived in the turnpike house,
And one in the street below.

Two women lay dead in the self same town,
And one had tender care;
The other was left to die alone,
Or her pallet on this and bare.
One had many to weep for her,
For the other few tears would flow;
For one had friends in the turnpike house,
And one in the street below.

If the Lord, who died for rich and poor,
Is wondrous, holy love,
Took both the sisters to his arms,
Then all the difference where?
Then all the difference where, indeed,
Yes, in Heaven, some would know
Which of them lived in the turnpike house,
And which in the street below.

THE PRAYER FOR IRELAND.

Oh! God, enthroned above in Power!
A suppliant entreat from
Is this, for people's trying hour,
Yes—hear her mighty pray'r.
That Ireland may be saved, we cry!
That Ireland may be saved,
With them we pray to Thee on high
That Ireland may be saved!

With Thy (unshelent) Eye Thou seest
Her bitter wrongs and woes;
Her ruthless oppressors we've been
For many long years—
Bow to Ireland's cause, we cry,
Thy outstretched arm! Thy thorne on high
Our mariyrs pray'r receive on high,
That Ireland may be free!

Yet, not from vengeance we implore;
A nation's right is all
We ask Thee, O of, to be restore;
For this we treating, call
That Ireland may be saved, we cry;
That Ireland may be free!
Our martyrs pray'r receive on high
That Ireland may be free!

Throughout our Ireland's sunlain black
Still—cannot have no foes;
On plain, in glades, hills and rock,
We're still clung to the Cross,
That Ireland may be saved, we cry!
That Ireland may be free!
Our martyrs' pray'r receive on high,
That Ireland may be free!

Chronic Coughs and Colds
And all diseases of the Throat and Lungs can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion, as is contained in the testimonial of Prof. Lowe (M) and Hypophosphites in their fullest form. "I consider Scott's Emulsion a remedy par excellence in Tuberculous and Strumous Affections, to say nothing of ordinary colds and throat troubles." W. R. S. Conrad, M D, Manchester, O.

Literary Miscellany.

The Doctor's Story.

A Thrilling Tale in Three Parts.

THIRD PART

Absently I shaped my course for the scene of my previous evening's adventure, and at most before I knew it found myself upon its threshold. It was well on toward dark. The street was entirely deserted save for one solitary figure, which I passed, and all the outward indications of being without occupants; but as I looked up at the top windows I fancied I saw a sudden flash of light. In doubt as to the reliability of my eyesight, I continued to gaze upward. Again there was the flash as of a candle passed behind a Venetian blind. No longer hideous of the fact I speedily left the spot in search of Mr. Holland, pleased to be able to strengthen my position even thus trivially.

The collective pursed up his lips in a peculiar way when I breathlessly told him of the light; then putting on his great coat we left the office in company, repairing with as much celerity as we could to H——street. The distance between the police chambers and H——street was no inconsiderable one but Holland and I were not long in covering it, which we did in silence.

We took up our posts immediately opposite the tenement, where we waited in the chill winter air for two whole hours unseen from the other side; but, to my extreme disgust, nothing was visible. The light did not again appear.

"Doctor, look here," said Holland finally, as we turned away, "I cannot for the life of me see how any person could live in that house after the examination we made to-day. But, to satisfy you and put the matter at rest, although I myself think it will be fruitless, if you agree we will come back here to-morrow, get inside the house, and remain quietly in it till night. What do you say?"

"Very well," I agreed, glad to have an opportunity of settling the affair, and they only put out at the soon access of a second visit to the locality; "that ought to decide in one way or other."

"You know, continued Holland, taking pity on my gloomy demeanor, and contradicting his previous opinion in doing so, "it is just possible some one may go in at night, when, of course, we shall ask him. Is there any person's fear, Doctor?"

"The following afternoon, at o'clock, so arranged, I met Holland, and together we paid another visit to H——street. We quickly entered the house with little noise as possible, and took up our quarters in a room on the first floor. Our wait was a protracted and tiresome one, cooped up in a damp, close atmosphere. The time passed with leaden pace. Daylight was replaced by gloaming, and then night fell. Seven o'clock had struck, and the darkness of night was quickly setting in, though to us it seemed nearly enough in coming. Eight o'clock sounded from the neighboring church spires, and still no one had come to the house. Holland and I sat in the room, we stood in silence in the dark room; but I knew he was rapidly losing patience, as I had done long before.

"Hist! Something creaked above us. Neither of us spoke. We held our breath for what was to follow. The creaking noise was repeated, accompanied by a dull hammering that either drowned or startled the deserted chambers. I felt the sweat gather in every pore as my eyes strained upon the door, as if they would burst from their sockets. Holland stood by my side, his right hand raised to my ear, his whole frame on the stretch, his fingers, with the pistols and friends of the students. When the tree-tops of the College Green were shaking with a very quiet one, I fancied. But I thought you were positive of the house, doctor," he added, drily. "Well, so I was, till I saw Mr. Holland, I been tenanted, and view then the dog strangled by former fellow."

"By the way, we have never seen that dog, Holland. It must have belonged to the last occupant of this house.

"I think that must be the explanation, although it must have been in the other room, for I saw it.

"Well, well. We've explained everything as we go along, said Holland grimly and turning to the policeman who had entered the room at our heels, "You go down to the hall door, and get in if you can. I expect you won't manage it."

The policeman disappeared, obedient to the order of his superior, and we crept through the building to the hall door.

The garret apartment we occupied a little again in this fashion, had to all appearances been used for the storage of lumber. The rattling noise Holland had heard was distinctly audible in the stillness of the night, where we stood. Holland's assertion seem came back to report, as we expected with leaden step

THE MONITOR.

PACIFIC ERA OF FUNDITION

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—It is ten years since James Lick, the millionaire of this city, died, leaving the bulk of his large fortune for charitable and scientific purposes, yet the most practical of his bequests—the training school in the trades for young lads—has never been begun. In their first ten years of management the Lick trustees spent $150,000 for legal fees.

—Readers of the MONITOR will be no doubt much gratified to learn that a New York publisher is about to issue a Corpus Schoolchildrorum. We hope, however, that none of our readers will try to pronounce this word at first sight, as it may result in serious dislocation of the vocal organs!

—Mr. Parnell's habit of extreme cautiousness makes all the more forcible the words of encouragement which he uttered at the National Leagues Dublin Convention last month. He went so far as to predict that before many months the Liberal policy of Gladstone would prevail in Parliament, and that Gladstone would be recognized as the only great man in British politics. That is a prediction of victory in a far sooner date than Mr. Parnell has heretofore made.

—A Rome correspondent of the MONITOR sends us the welcome intelligence that Rev. Gregory Antonucci, who for several years had charge of the Chinese mission in this city, has been nominated Vicar-Apostolic of the Province of Canton, in China. Bishop Antonucci will be consecrated in Rome at the hands of the Cardinal Prefect of the Propaganda.

—Readers of the Washington City Church News must have been astonished to find a poem in its pages recently under the title of "The Alameda," which must have sounded strangely to ears unaccustomed to such a Spanish phrase. The poem in question was written for the MONITOR by Miss Cooldige, and stolen from us without credit. This style of appropriating poetry is neither churchly nor Catholic.

—A meeting of the parish priests of the diocese of Raphoe was held at Letterkenny recently in order to nominate a successor to the Most Rev. Dr. Logue, recently elevated to the Primacy of Armagh. The Most Rev. Dr. Logue presided. The result of the voting was Very Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, Rector Dunboyne Establishment, Dignissima, 14; Very Rev. Hugh McFadden, P. P., V. G., Donegal, Dignior, 4; Rev. Charles McGlynn, P. P., Dungloe, Dignus, 2.

—We are in receipt of last week's issue of the American, a kind of a tail to Pilsby's Knownothing "American" party kite. A double page engraving in the current issue contains a view of the residence of the relations of Pilsby, Horack, Wiggington and other sore-pellers in this quasi-secret society, just as they landed on American soil a few years ago. They are, indeed, a very looking lot, and the American has hurt its party's prospects by printing such a picture of Pikeymanus in its page!

—We publish on an inside page this week, a very interesting account of the Confraternity of the Cord of St. Thomas, in which every Catholic who desires to preserve the grace of virtue should join. Any Dominican Father in the city, Benicia, Vallejo or elsewhere will receive members or impart any information desired. The aim from which people are saved by means of this Confraternity are those which destroy the faith sooner in the souls of otherwise pure and good Catholics.

—In the Dublin Freeman's Journal, in announcing the return of Peter Dignan, 118 A, of St. Patrick's Church, Home, says: "The corner-stone will be laid on December 29, the feast of the Pope's Jubilee, when the Most Rev. Dr. Croke, Archbishop of Cashel and the Most Rev. Dr P. J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, the two greatest Prelates and the most renowned Irishmen in the United States, will be present. One feels like uttering the prayer of the Roman Balladist, in the "Lays of Ancient Rome" "Heaven send Romes fortune! Ay, and send you there to see."

—When "the hat was passed around among the ladies of the British possessions in Burmah, in order to receive their rupees as a jubilee offering to England's Royal Majesty recently, the Burmanese ladies were naturally disgusted at the idea of such a gaudy begging onfit from them as her subjects. "Why should their sovereign want money," they inquired, "especially so soon after the annexation of Burmah?" "Has she no rice?" and "can it be that she has no bedcloth?" were frequent queries. For, as all Burmese ladies smoke several cheroots daily, they become deeply sympathetic at the idea that their Queen should be without the solace of tobacco and her State cares, lest they never once imagined that no woman on England loves the British "sovereign" better than Victoria loves the so-called coin of her realm.

The penny wisdom party organs of the one called "American" political anti-Catholic organization, are endeavoring to continue their dupes that their platform is not proscriptive against Catholics. That will do to fall for the marines, but when such a typ of true blue bigots as Pixley, Wiggington and Horack stand sponsors for such a combination, the word "anti-Catholic" is branded on the party with the red-hot branding iron of the "Boss" of the bottom pit! We hope no Catholic citizen will become a "Pig" in the Knownothing sty constructed by the three notorious "spiders" who weave just such webs every time there is a presidential election coming, so as to put money in their own purses through the foolishness of men who are led to follow them in their un-American secrecy against law, and adopted faith the citizens of the land. Let these whose three political lapses are unworthy be—

Black Stains on Our National Character.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25th, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:—

Dear Sir: I have read with pleasure and, I think, with profit, the articles upon your paper on the French Revolution, and I take the liberty to address these few lines to you, not to criticize the articles, but merely to make a few remarks regarding the thoughts which presented themselves to my mind while reading the valuable history of the French revolution.

I have often asked myself: Are we not in some measure responsible for the calamities to the one in which the French people were shortly before the revolution? Is it not your duty and mine, as Catholics, to counteract the warfare people to make a living for themselves or to raise a family? Is it not our part of the approach of a revolution, as terrible and bloody perhaps as the one which your writer describes so graphically? Do not our poor get poorer and our rich get richer every day? Is not discontentedness and a spirit of rebellion growing right along in Christ and mightily in Ireland? Are we not in some measure responsible for the stains which have been accumulating about our national escutcheon? Are we not in some measure responsible for the wrongs which have been committed by our fellow citizens against the Church by the reformers in the sixteenth century still continues, and tends to this end, that by the denial of all revelation and the suppression of the supernatural order, the reason of man may run riot in its own conceits. This error, which unjustly deprives its name from reason, forters the pride of man, lessens the rights of all his passions, and thus it has deceived many minds which are now in their dotage on civil society. Hence it comes, that, by a new sort of impiety, unknown to the pagans states constitute themselves independently of God, or of the order which He has established. Public authority is declared to derive neither its principle nor its power from God, but from the multitude, which, believing itself free from all bindings, rises to such a pitch of rashness as to carrying the doctrine. Supernatural truth being rejected as a contrary to reason, the Creator and Redeemer of the human race is ignored, and subjected from the moment of the lyceums and schools, as also from the public exercise of human life. The rewards and punishments of a future and eternal life are forgotten in the pursuit of present pleasure. With these doctrines which spread, and this extreme license of thought and action, it is calculated that the sphere of a just enjoyment that men of the lowest order, weary of the poverty of their lot, and of their hard workshops, should yearn to raise upon the buildings and possessions of the rich, that there remains neither peace nor tranquility in private or public life, and that society is brought to the brink of destruction.

Jubilee Offerings of Peter's Pence.

It is authoritatively announced to several of the leading Catholic papers of Europe that the number of pressing that have already arrived in Rome, and that are either pressed or on their way, for the Holy Father, is so great that they are beginning to embarrassment. The desire has therefore been expressed that England—and the United States also—should signalize their interest in the Pope's Jubilee rather by diminishing Peter's Pence than by sending a fresh instalment of presents of works of art or of industry. The great centesimo fatto piece of which the Vatican Library forms the nucleus, is now in course of preparation for the Exhibition. But it is foreseen that large sums, it will be much too small to represent the number of Religious Spain and France are not only sending presents to represent the diocese, but every parish—sometimes even a parish in a diocese—desires to send its offering to the Pope—the time has passed to be represented singly as well as collectively. Religious Congregations, too, are sending each their own present, but every community is hesitating to have a present from its congregation, is preparing to send its own separate present. At least this is happening in many instances. Germany has determined forty square yards of space for its present of books. A single French publication alone is sending a wagon load of works of literature and religion, and so of the rest.

Whilst all such presents are appreciated, they can in no way be utilized for the progress of religion, the spread of the Church or the encouragement of Christian education—three objects always dear to the Sovereign Pontiff's heart, and which the Vicar of Christ can best promote through Peter's Pence. The Pope, among other things, desires to complete and enlarge the great Industrial School in Rome for Lost boys, and to leave an endowment for the maintenance of the Catholic parochial schools of Rome, which he now supports out of his own current income. Religious Orders who have been expelled by the Italian Government, foreign missionaries, and congregations in every portion of the Kingdom of Christ, look to the Chief Pastor for assistance, and, too, too few are the offerings of the faithful that go to the shrine of Peter's Peace.

—Even at this late day it is highly gratifying to see Catholics to notice the "change of heart" which is coming over our Methodist brethren on the question of public school education. They are beginning to discover that the true school is the one which teaches Catholicity to death in America, has a sufficating effect on sectarianism also, hence they are "hedging" over towards the Church in her plea for denominational schools. Among the editorial notes in the local Methodist organ of last week we have, with pleasure that "Denominational Schools Their Importance and Improvement" was the subject of the essay of Rev. J. P. Mahaffy of Santa Clara, read on the previous Monday morning. Brother McCrary says that the essay "was liberal and put in words our high schools and State colleges, yet contended for distinctly Christian schools. It was a strong plea for better provisions for our church schools." We congratulate our Methodist brethren on the fact that they have thus emerged from the slough of sectarian prejudice in which they so long wallowed merely to gratify their opposition to a measure for the benefit of Christ's kingdom, it was imagined by the Catholic Church.

A Protestant clergyman of Lowville, Ry., Rev. S. S. Steel, pastor of Walnut street M. E. Church in that city, and the Rev. Mr. Ferguson, congregation The Pope was right in condemning Dr McGlynn's infringement of Henry George's doctrine of property, so long as every jubilee year is conducive to or enrichment is sold to the highest bidder, so long as a venal press pours its daily deluge of filth, falsehood and foolishness before every community, and the people speech their thirst for knowledge at such reeking fountains.

Religion—a return to God—may save the Republic, but without this we may expect things to go on from bad to worse in this country until some supernatural Power will lift the American up to that exalted standard of morality which guided in the days when to be an American citizen meant a man of pure morals and unprofaneable patriotism.

Protestantism by means of its baneful influence in the world at large is also responsible for much of the disloyalty and disorder which is causing the people to throw off the Sovereign Pontiff at present glorious religious and in an Encyclical issued during the first year of the Pontificate, also alluding to the dangers that threaten society.

These attempts of pernicious men, who circulate to undermine civil life, and fill all thinking minds with alarm, had their origin in the poisoned doctrines broached long ago, like seeds of corruption, which are now producing their destructive fruit. You are aware, venerable brethren, that the warfare raised against the Church by the reformers in the sixteenth century still continues, and tends to this end, that by the denial of all revelation and the suppression of the supernatural order, the reason of man may run riot in its own conceits. This error, which unjustly deprives its name from reason, fosters the pride of man, lessens the rights of all his passions, and thus it has deceived many minds which are now in their dotage on civil society. Hence it comes, that, by a new sort of impiety, unknown to the pagans states constitute themselves independently of God, or of the order which He has established. Public authority is declared to derive neither its principle nor its power from God, but from the multitude, which, believing itself free from all bindings, rises to such a pitch of rashness as to carrying the doctrine. Supernatural truth being rejected as a contrary to reason, the Creator and Redeemer of the human race is ignored, and subjected from the moment of the lyceums and schools, as also from the public exercise of human life. The rewards and punishments of a future and eternal life are forgotten in the pursuit of present pleasure. With these doctrines which spread, and this extreme license of thought and action, it is calculated that the sphere of a just enjoyment that men of the lowest order, weary of the poverty of their lot, and of their hard workshops, should yearn to raise upon the buildings and possessions of the rich, that there remains neither peace nor tranquility in private or public life, and that society is brought to the brink of destruction.

More Misery in Store for Ireland.

Letters from Ireland convey the sad intelligence that Connaught is not the only and the Irish people will have to contend against during the present year. It is predicted that the famine of last year will be felt in the land in consequence of the almost entire failure of the crops.

The prevailing summer has been the driest season ever known in Ireland, and the result is that only in a few place did the crops ripen. The potato crop in Ireland was extremely backward and cold, as a consequence the planting and seed sowing were greatly done. Towards the end of April came a change. Summer set in extremely as well as prematurely, and, wanting the necessary rain, the crops were forced into unnatural growth. The heat during the entire month of June was well nigh tropical, the thermometer frequently recording 90° in the shade, and 120° in the full blaze of the sun. Such a high temperature has very rarely been recorded in either England or Ireland. Still no rain came, and the very dose ceased to fall. As a natural result, the earth was baked as if in an oven, and the growth of grass, green crops and cereals at this early period was completely arrested. What is the only crop that could possibly stand such dry and scorching weather, but wheat is no longer sown in Ireland. The oat and barley crops are described as presenting a completely blighted appearance, the straw being so miserably short, and the ears so lean and shrivelled. The potato crop, with the exception of what is planted in nearly or deep soils, is not expected to produce more than half an average yield, while the green crops, after being sown, have been pronounced utterly worthless. Naturally the poor will be the greatest sufferer, and it is scarcely possible that more than one-third of the average crop will be gathered.

The reliable scares from which we derive our information—says the writer—states that the well-informed on the country have become dazed at the rapidity with which the prospects of the rich have ceased to be, and that the rich have ceased to be, and that the conspicuous large numbers of cattle have perished, and are perishing, from sheer exhaustion. The unusually dry weather has rendered the pasture so short and scanty, and the heat so intense, that the cattle have perished in the fields

Our Young Folks.

All short, original contributions of merit will be accepted for this department.

The proper address and address of contributors should accompany their MS.

Communications should be written on one side of the sheet only, with pen and ink, and in a legible manner.

The Princess' Veil.

Once upon a time, in the year of 1103, Duke Ludopold and his aide Agnas, who was the daughter of Henry II., who was the emperor of Germany, were standing on the bulwarks of their castle overlooking the Danube, talking of their wish to build a home for the twelve good priests, who were going around in their dolcelike dressing all they could in their kind, Christ-like way. But where to build the church then was the question. The duke seemed to think Vienna was a good place, but his wife said: "Nay, the hill to the north with woodlands above the river, would make a more peaceful home."

As they were arguing thus, the wind arose, and lifting the veil of the princess, a light cross thing, carried it off toward the northern hills.

"We will hold the home where the veil rests," said the duke.

Couriers were sent out; they searched the woods night and day, but the veil could not be found.

Three years had passed, and one day the duke, who had forgotten about the abbey-home he had intended to build, was hunting in the woods beyond the Kahlenburg, the mountain of the Leopoldberg, where his castle stood. He stopped to rest under the shade of a lime tree, and looking up he saw something white all spangled with gold. He drew it down with the hilt of his sword and behold, it was his wife's lost veil!

Instantly he gave orders for the ground to be cleared, and the foundations of the abbey to be laid. There it stands to this day. The home began for twelve poor priests is now the world renowned Klosterneuburg, the richest monastery in Austria. In its old treasure room is the old linen, upon which the veil rested, and in a crimson velvet lined golden casket lies the veil itself, tarnished with golden knots twinkling through its fold.

Facts in Natural History.

Frogs, toads and serpents never take any food but that which they are satisfied is alive.

When a bee, wasp, or hornet stings it is nearly always at the expense of its life.

Serpents are octenarians that they will live six months or longer, without food.

Turtles dig holes on the seashore and bury their eggs, serving them to be hatched by the sun.

Lobsters are very pugnacious, and fight severe battles. If they lose a claw, another grows out.

A sea-goldfish produces more than a million of eggs in a season.

A whale suckles its young and is therefore not a fish. The mother's affection is remarkable.

Toads become torpid in winter and hide themselves, taking no food for five or six months.

Serpents of all species shed their skins annually, like snakes and lizards.

It is believed that crocodiles live to be hundreds of years old. The Egyptians embalm them.

The head of a rattlesnake has been known to inflict a fatal wound after being severed from the body.

If the eye of the newt (a pot out another one is restored by rapid growth.

Fishes have no eyelids, and necessarily sleep with their eyes open.

Alligators fall in a lethargic sleep, during the winter, like toads.

The power of serpents to charm birds and small quadrupeds is a well authenticated fact.

There are agricultural ants in Texas that actually plant grain, and reap and store the harvest.

Children' Games.

Probably our boys and girls have no idea of the great age of many of the games and pastimes they take pleasure in. Why, in the time of Alexander the Great, Roman and Pompeian children blew their whistles and walked on stilts just as you boys do today; they spun their tops, whipping them in the classic streets of ancient Rome, and the stately Roman matrons scanned their babies with restless, as your mothers do. A little girl once said she felt so sorry for Cain. "He must have been so lonely, you know, with nothing but his tops to play with." Hit she was comforted when a friend told her that Adam, no doubt, made a whistle for his little boy; that he had lots of nets, and very probably while on Mamma Eve's lap whose the seed-pod of some plant for a rattle. The Bible says "The children played games in the streets." Who knows but what they played some of the very games you are familiar with? The game of croquet was many years ago the famous ball mall, in which kings and princes were glad to take part. Mallets and balls were used in the game, but the object was not to drive the balls through arches on the ground, as now are. The pall mall balls were sent flying up in the air by a stroke of the mallet, and their "wicket" was a ring suspended from a lofty pole. It required skillful strokes to send the balls through the rings, often swinging as high as the tree-tops, and to be known as "a good hand at pall mall" was quite a distinction.

Dr. PARDEE'S REMEDY is The Greatest Blood Cleanser. Cures Spring Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Constipation AND Regulates The Kidneys & Liver.

One bottle taken according to directions will give better results than a gallon of Sarsaparilla, or any of the so-called Blood Purifiers with which the market is glutted. At Druggists, price $1.00 per bottle.

$500 REWARD

will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which Dr. Pardee's Remedy, properly administered, fails to relieve.

Family Fun.

A Singular Circumstance.

"The most singular case of deafness I ever had anything to do with," said the family physician, in that of a woman up on Fremont Place. She has such a frightful noise in her head that she can't hear a thing except when she sets in a hardie, when the rattle of the vehicle seems to drown the noise in her head, and she can then hear as well as ever. She observed this peculiarity of her affliction and when she woke up one night but being home a watchman's rattle and a pair of cymbals. She didn't say anything until her husband came home and set down to dinner. He thought it was the blessing, and also, wishing to make remarks, he got to bang away on the cymbals. He stopped right in the middle of his blessing, and asked her scrutinizingly if she was crazy, to which she responded by whooping it a little louder, whereupon he rushed over to my house and said his wife was raving insane. I went back with him to try and tie up matters, but just as soon as I opened my mouth, she let fly with the watchman's rattle. The outcome of it is that my friend gets all his meals down to the town and spends his evenings at the City Club, while his wife, armed with her crockery, goes calling on her neighbors, and fools the children into believing that the circus has come again.

A Consequential Coon.

I like the fellow who is always asking or saying to himself, "Don't you know who I am?" It is human nature to be ashamed of being mistaken for anything but a gentleman. The occupation does not depress a man of that sort of being of some importance to the world. At the same time, it is a man who always remains so quickly as being asked, "Don't you know who I am?" Nobody in creation can keep the answer internally, if he can keep it to himself, of "Don't, and I don't care a ——."

There was once a very imperious State official in California who thought that everybody knew him or ought to know him. He was one day walking through a field, and made for him with his head down and turns in a position to raise him. He was a State official, a man of dignity and political power and natural pomposity, but he ran. He ran even better than he did his office, and he got to the fence first. He clambered over out of breath and dignity, and found the owner of the bull calmly contemplating the operations.

"What do you mean, sir," asked the track official. "What do you mean by having an infuriated animal like that roaming over the fields?"

"Well, I guess the bull has some right in the field."

"Right! Right! Do you know who I am?"

The farmer shook his head.

"I, sir, am General ——."

"Why in thunder didn't you tell the bull?"

"And What of That?"

James T. Fields was a noted teller of stories. In the "author's parlor" at the store of Tickner & Fields he was sure of his audience, and almost invariably made that any clever thing would be sure of wide and speedy circulation. It may be therefore, that the following story has appeared in print, but, if it has, it is good enough to be told over again. A young Englishman, Mr. Fields used to say, who had imbibed Anglomania while in London, reached Boston on the night of the 3rd of July. His sleep was disturbed by the sounds of a row in the night before the Fourth, and he came down to the family breakfast table in a state of very English irritation.

"Mawshah," he asked, "what is the prepaiwation of pyrotechnics in the night, this most demoaiy inharmonious sounding of bwass and that sort of thing? Blahmed blahs jingled so that I couldn't sleep at all, don't chwe know."

"Why, John, it's the Fourth of July."

"The——a——Fourth of July! Yaas. I'm aware that its the fourth day of the current month, mawshah, but——what of this?"

Scene at the Sessions.

Recorder (to prisoner)—"How do you live?"

Prisoner—"I do, particular, as the oyster said when they asked whether he'd be roasted or fried."

Recorder—"We don't want to hear what the oyster said. What do you follow?"

Prisoner—"Anything that comes in my way, as the locomotive said when it ran over a man."

Recorder—"We care nothing about the locomotive. When is your business?"

Prisoner—"That's various, as the cat said when she stole the chicken."

Recorder—"That comes nearer to the line, I suppose?"

Prisoner—"Also gether in my line, as the rolling stone when chasing the moss."

Recorder—"If I hear any more absurd comparisons I will give you twelve months."

Prisoner—"I'm done, as the beefsteak said to the cook."

Digging a Well.

An Irishman took the contract to dig a public well. When he had dug about twenty five feet down he came one morning and found it caved in—filled nearly to the top. Pat looked cautiously around, and saw that no one was near, he took off his hat and coat, hung them on the windlass, crawled into some bushes, and awaited events. In a short time the citizens discovered that the well had caved in, and, seeing Pat's hat and coat on the windlass, supposed that he was at the bottom of the excavation. Only a few hours of hard digging cleared the loose earth from the well. Just as the anger citizens had reached the bottom, and were considering where the body was, Pat came out of the bushes, and good naturedly thanked them for relieving him of so sorry a job. Some of the tired diggers were disgusted, but the joke was too good to allow anything more than a hearty laugh, which soon followed.

Kissed Is All Around.

Some little time ago a young lady, who had been teaching a class of half grown girls in the Norway school of Dr. Ha church, Brooklyn, was called away from the city, rendering it necessary to fill her place.

The superintendent, after looking over his available material for teachers, decided to request one of the young gentlemen of the congregation to take the class.

It so happened that the young man upon whom fell the superintendent's choice, was exceedingly bashful—so much so, in fact, that he insisted upon the superintendent going and presenting him to the class. Accordingly the two gentlemen appeared on the platform, and the superintendent began: "Young ladies, I shall introduce to you Mr. C., who will in future be your teacher. I would like to have you tell him what your former teacher did, so that he can go right on in the same way."

Immediately a demure voice of fourteen years arose and said: "The first thing our teacher always did was to kiss us all around.

The low price from sewer-gas, salt rheum or other humors. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. 100 doses one dollar.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cholera Morbus
Cramps
Colic
Diarrhoea
Summer Complaints
Dysentery

All Cured by a teaspoon full of Perry Davis's Pain Killer in a little Milk or Sugar and Water. All Druggists Sell it.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS YOU CAN INVEST IN THE AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN GOVERNMENT BOND. ISSUE OF 1870.

Three Bonds are entitled to four, the total of which is paid without further deposit, if the bond is not drawn, and entitled to

Three Drawings Annually.

Each such and every bond is redeemed with larger or equally premium. Next drawing after the close of the following month, as follows:

Premiums.	Florins.	Premiums.	Florins.
1	100,000	1	100,000
1	50,000	1	50,000
1	40,000	1	40,000
1	30,000	1	30,000
1	20,000	1	20,000
1	10,000	1	10,000
1	5,000	1	5,000
1	4,000	1	4,000
1	3,000	1	3,000
1	2,000	1	2,000
1	1,000	1	1,000
1	500	1	500
1	400	1	400
1	300	1	300
1	200	1	200
1	100	1	100
1	50	1	50
1	40	1	40
1	30	1	30
1	20	1	20
1	10	1	10
1	5	1	5
1	4	1	4
1	3	1	3
1	2	1	2
1	1	1	1

Equivalent, 1,000 premiums, amounting to 11,000,000 Francs. The next redemption takes place on

FIFTEENTH OF AUGUST, and every bond bought of us TAKES PART IN THE DRAWING, and we will send to each purchaser of one bond, a certificate of the Government, in which the Government guarantees the payment of the Premium Bonds, and the Government Bonds, and the Government Bonds, and the Government

SYMPATHY FOR ERIN.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

tude the dawn of better and brighter days for their beloved country (applause).

HEAR HEAR AND WELL WELLS.

Mrs. Mills said—Whilst this message has been in course of signature, we have sometimes been asked, with a doubting smile—"What is the use of all this waste of time and effort? It will do no good." And even from others, who, whilst they sympathise with our cause, seem to have the power of grasping only the material side of things, has come the question, "What is the good of it? If you want to show sympathy then money and clothing, for instance, Well, we have done the one, and, if needful, treat we shall not leave the other unless that honor and conviction is that not clearly but justice at this moment Ireland's deepest need. To this questioning I should like to reply in the words of a letter lately received from Frederick Douglass, an escaped slave, who forty years ago found not only to England but to Ireland, and especially in Dublin, great sympathy and help, and is now waiting for old friends in Europe. He writes—"I have just read your message of sympathy to Ireland, and am deeply moved by it. It carries me back to those dark days in my life when every honest word of sympathy with me and my oppressed brethren was worth more than silver and gold. Such words saved me from despair, were a consolation in sorrow, and a harbinger of hope for the future. Your words will be a balm to a very bruised Irish heart." Could you, madame, have read a-thing of the hundreds of earnest heartfelt letters we have received on this subject, you would know that this has been a spontaneous labor of love for which all concerned will feel richly repaid, and if in ever so small a degree our message of sympathy should also prove to be a "consolation in sorrow, a harbinger of hope for the future," a brighter one for the thousands of hopeless Irish hearts, the thousands of homes in poverty, to present to you, the Lady Mayoress of Dublin, and through you, to our Irish sisters, this address (applause.)

THE ADDRESS.

Mrs. Mills then read the address as follows:

"TO OUR IRISH SISTERS.

Home is so remedy.

Home is so sacred and sweet.

—We, the undersigned women of England, Scotland, and Wales send loving and sympathetic greeting to our suffering sisters in Ireland, and declare that we strongly condemn this Coercion Bill, and will use all the influence we may have to urge the speedy and measure of Home Rule as will satisfy the just demands of the Irish people as made through their representatives in Parliament. Meanwhile, we attest them for their own sake to embrace as patiently as they can the woes of eviction and other sufferings now bearing so hardly upon every class, but which will, we are convinced, be soon put an end to by the voice of the indignant and justice-loving masses of Britain.

Miss Colsden, daughter of Mr. Richard Cobden, said it was with the deepest sense of gratitude that she formed one of the deputation who brought this message of sympathy to their suffering sisters in Ireland. This was only one of the many marks of sympathy which they felt for the Irish women in their sufferings in consequence of political mismanagement. This painful accounts of the evictions occurring in the different parts of Ireland had brought home with the deepest abhorrence for the oppression which it showed to have been perpetrated. That the present system of government could not last was plain to any reader of English history, and would soon be replaced by the universal desire of the country by the people themselves (hear, hear).

Mrs. Schwann, who was much affected, said—Madam, whilst it is a source of satisfaction to us to have been allowed to express you our sympathy with your fellow-countrywomen in this time of national crisis at the same time we cannot help feeling that shame and sorrow that this expression is necessary—that there has not always been in the past that natural sympathy between our whole you might have claimed as a sacred right from sister to sister—that where your countrymen have taken a large share in building up the greatness of our common country—we have as proud a right to the names of Swift, Grattan, Goldsmith, Burke and Sheridan as very forgetful of our duties. We have proofs of your generous willingness to forget the past and to clasp the hand of friendship, though, unfortunately, too hastily offered. We hope much from that generosity which is a noble instinct of your people; and that as our countrymen and country remain here more fully all that you have suffered, are now called upon to suffer, that we may be forgiven, if we do not realize as they have never done before, the sacred obligation that we believe now rests upon us to fulfill your national demand (applause).

THE LADY MAYORESS, IN REPLY, SAID—

Mrs. Mills and ladies—Speaking the sentiments of millions of patriotic Irishwomen, I bid you a hearty welcome to Ireland, and tender you thanks for the beautiful message of sisterly love and sympathy of which you are the bearers. I think each and everyone of the kind-hearted women who have signed this noble address, or have received my appeal, and I am confident that the grateful feeling which I now endeavor to express will be shared by my countrywomen, not only throughout the extent of this island, but throughout the world wherever there is one spark of the divine. Amongst the names appended to this address are several which are known and honored throughout these kingdoms in connection with works of benevolence and humanity; and it is with delight I read on the head of the list that of the wife of the great statesman, the friend of Ireland and England, William Ewart Gladstone. Madam, I am happy to see represented the names of Cobden and Bright. So far as I know, nothing like the presentation of this message ever before occurred in the long history of the connection between Ireland and England; and I regard the incident as one of the many signs that we are even now at the commencement of happier relations between the two countries.

As you have new courage to-day, which in a few days will be passed into law, there can be no doubt that, if worked as originally intended by it authors, it will inflict injustice and unfeeling torture upon thousands of innocent men; and when the men are struck down women and children suffer with them, but we have good hopes that the promoters of this cruel measure will be deterred from carrying it, they would wish by the recent indications that the heart and conscience of England are revolting against the hateful policy. I feel confident that the women of Ireland will act in the spirit of the wise and kindly counsel given them in this most welcome address. They will believe with you that this vile Coercion Act will not long be allowed to stain the pages of the statute-book of England, and that instead of it we shall have a measure of Home Rule which will allow the Irish people to manage the local affairs of their own country. When that right shall have been conceded peace and prosperity will take the place of angry strife, and both England and Ireland will be stronger and happier than ever they were before. I believe that all who fully to think about that better state of things take part in a lady work, and I feel hope that I share in it, Julius, will have a place in history, and will never be forgotten by the Irish people (applause).

—Negotiations will be opened in No. vember between the Vatican and Portugal, with a view to the establishment of a Catholic hierarchy on the Congo.

Correspondence.

We appreciate which correspondence from all parts of the Pacific Coast on matters pertaining to the progress of the Church or the spread of its divine work.

All communications should reach this office by Tuesday noon, so as to insure insertion.

A ZEALOUS PRIEST REWARDED.

Father Blake's Departure from Utah. The Faculty of All Hallows College Present Him with a Sensitive Purse.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 27, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

Dear Sir—Father Blake, who came to Utah in 1884, left for San Francisco on Tuesday last. On his departure, he is followed by the empties by presents a great deal more of honor, and proceeding him with a beautiful gold watch. During the three years that he had been in Utah he worked faithfully and zealously, and in all his undertakings success crowned his labors. After his arrival in Utah he was appointed Pastor of Park City. He was only two months in that place when the little church was burned. Encouraged by the good Catholics of the place, he immediately began to rebuild, and in less than six months succeeded not only in rebuilding the church, but in leaving it free from debt, and also in erecting a school of the same material and dimensions. He succeeded also in build a parochial residence. He remained and in less than two years had church, school, and residence free from incumbrance. His work thus being completed, instead of seeking that rest to which he was so justly entitled, he yielded to the suggestion of Bishop Scanlan, and came to Salt Lake to take charge of All Hallows College. There he worked during the past year unceasingly. His management was great and his success great, especially when the many disadvantages he had to contend with are taken into consideration. He was never idle, and his disciples were placed under his charge, and through assiduity by a corps of able lecturers and practical teachers, the great work of moulding the character of the pupils, and of laying the foundation of a college, developed on himself. In this he succeeded as well, that public, and others accustomed to college life, when visiting the institution were surprised at how unspoiled, or rather (as I said to the good order, and deportment of good Father himself would just be right with pride.

The faculty of the college, entertaining for their veteran and devoted fellow-worker the regards, arranged with Father Chatenhay, Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, to have a purse in his honor a beautiful, and present him with a beautiful gold watch. After Mass, which was presided over by Bishop Scanlan, the following address was read by one of the pupils:

Dear Father Blake—Your departure from All Hallows College we receive with sorrow, but we sadly filled. The resolutions one of your pupils, and the kind consideration during the year of the College's existence, together with the great success which attended your efforts in teaching and guiding our members by the faculty of the College. To testimonial Professors alike are you, to first President, or dean, I present The former, on the art of their departure for vacation, gave expression to their gratitude, and toward you, by the presentation of a gold hunter and the latter feel that any presentation they could make as any expression of their appreciation of your zeal and devotion to duty, and could not measure the depth of their feelings and sentiments. We, as students, feel that we owe you all we can do to make the College shall be a place for you, in the future, as it has been in the past. Where the duties of your office will allow you to visit well with us to another year to place where the students will be happy to see you, will receive its reward. We ask you present, for the time being and as occasion may permit during the past year under your administration. We shall not forget the kindness of the members of All Hallows College, your name shall always be a cherished one in our memory, and we shall ever cherish your memory ever revered. For you dear Father, we have a sincere and lasting affection, and we pray that wherever you may be consider that any gift which we may present you with would be as sincere and as unspoiled as that you have done in building up and giving you to All Hallows. This time-piece, which we present to you, is to remind you of the friends, from whom you are about to depart, of the many grateful friends who wish to hold a place always in your memory. We hope and trust that the time of day, on your onward march that will be spent in the service of God and the good of souls in Utah, and of the happy days spent at All Hallows.

Father Blake, who seemed to be in good health, was deeply affected. He said that he could not express his feelings on the occasion. He looked back with pleasure over the period of time he had spent in Utah, and at the present moment he was inspired to work on by the remembrance of the kindness of his friends in Utah. After coming to Utah, and seeing the churches, schools, and hospitals that dotted the various parts of the Territory, as monuments of his labors, he felt that it was his duty to do all in his power to have these institutions in a few years, how much could be done in the cause of religion. He was not ashamed to state that he was poor when he came out of the world, abundant and wholesome. About 3 miles from Utah, are situated the famous Valley Springs, the analysis of whose waters proves them to be superior to the celebrated Vichy Springs of France. Wonderful cures have already been made upon those who have taken the waters of these springs, and he felt that he could place their healing if asleep.

The waters are pure, healthy and beautiful, and I know of no more delightful resort where, this world is spoiling the world. Great improvements are being made in the place, and it is now in the assuring care of society, to use and listen to the doctor's lecture upon speaking here in the gentle whole, the Saint's song, the soft music of the dove, and the sweet, sweet chirping of the birds.

By making special arrangements with the Department of the Pacific, people will be able to visit and bathe in the Vichy waters which are very valuable in cases of dyspepsia.

Bishop Scanlan, who came to Utah in 1884, left for San Francisco on Tuesday last. On his departure, he is followed by the empties by presents a great deal more of honor, and proceeding him with a beautiful gold watch. During the three years that he had been in Utah he worked faithfully and zealously, and in all his undertakings success crowned his labors. After his arrival in Utah he was appointed Pastor of Park City. He was only two months in that place when the little church was burned. Encouraged by the good Catholics of the place, he immediately began to rebuild, and in less than six months succeeded not only in rebuilding the church, but in leaving it free from debt, and also in erecting a school of the same material and dimensions. He succeeded also in build a parochial residence. He remained and in less than two years had church, school, and residence free from incumbrance. His work thus being completed, instead of seeking that rest to which he was so justly entitled, he yielded to the suggestion of Bishop Scanlan, and came to Salt Lake to take charge of All Hallows College. There he worked during the past year unceasingly. His management was great and his success great, especially when the many disadvantages he had to contend with are taken into consideration. He was never idle, and his disciples were placed under his charge, and through assiduity by a corps of able lecturers and practical teachers, the great work of moulding the character of the pupils, and of laying the foundation of a college, developed on himself. In this he succeeded as well, that public, and others accustomed to college life, when visiting the institution were surprised at how unspoiled, or rather (as I said to the good order, and deportment of good Father himself would just be right with pride.

The faculty of the college, entertaining for their veteran and devoted fellow-worker the regards, arranged with Father Chatenhay, Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, to have a purse in his honor a beautiful, and present him with a beautiful gold watch. After Mass, which was presided over by Bishop Scanlan, the following address was read by one of the pupils:

Dear Father Blake—Your departure from All Hallows College we receive with sorrow, but we sadly filled. The resolutions one of your pupils, and the kind consideration during the year of the College's existence, together with the great success which attended your efforts in teaching and guiding our members by the faculty of the College. To testimonial Professors alike are you, to first President, or dean, I present The former, on the art of their departure for vacation, gave expression to their gratitude, and toward you, by the presentation of a gold hunter and the latter feel that any presentation they could make as any expression of their appreciation of your zeal and devotion to duty, and could not measure the depth of their feelings and sentiments. We, as students, feel that we owe you all we can do to make the College shall be a place for you, in the future, as it has been in the past. Where the duties of your office will allow you to visit well with us to another year to place where the students will be happy to see you, receive its reward. We ask you present, for the time being and as occasion may permit during the past year under your administration. We shall not forget the kindness of the members of All Hallows College, your name shall always be a cherished one in our memory, and we shall ever cherish your memory ever revered. For you dear Father, we have a sincere and lasting affection, and we pray that wherever you may be consider that any gift which we may present you with would be as sincere and as unspoiled as that you have done in building up and giving you to All Hallows. This time-piece, which we present to you, is to remind you of the friends, from whom you are about to depart, of the many grateful friends who wish to hold a place always in your memory. We hope and trust that the time of day, on your onward march that will be spent in the service of God and the good of souls in Utah, and of the happy days spent at All Hallows.

Father Blake, who seemed to be in good health, was deeply affected. He said that he could not express his feelings on the occasion. He looked back with pleasure over the period of time he had spent in Utah,

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

PURE THOUGHT.

Only a beautiful lily,
Fresh with the morning dew,
Pure as the crystal water
That wends the valley through!
Robed in snowy whiteness—
Not even a shadow to blight;
The fair, bright spotless earnest,
Radiant in purity's light.

Into my soul stole its sweetness,
And a calm content and peace;
The Artist who modeled the flower—
Of its work, then, too, formest a part;
Thy soul should be pure and fair
Than this trifle of beauty you hold;
More treasured than pearls or rubies,
More precious than silver or gold.

Why, then, should you willfully tarnish
This mirror of God's holy love,
Wherein are reflected the graces
Which Heaven bestows from above?
Virtue's jewels grow brightest when shaded
Refects from a pure stainless soul.
And Purity's pearl lies the deepest,
In the wave of God's grace as they roll.

A pure thought is merely an echo
That rings from the depth in the heart;
And the mind is indeed truly noble
When Purity leads it a part!
O'er the life that knows not a blemish,
Wisdom's king with sole power shall reign,
And God, his most beautiful image,
Engraves on a'bool free from stain.

Let not a foul thought, then, rob you
Of a beauty of priceless worth;
Give not for a moment's pleasure
A soul of immortal birth;
Valiantly battle temptation,
For the virtue of purity wins
Its in glorious light of the sunset
Then illumine Christ's setting sun.

ZITA.

San Francisco, Cal.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

ROBERT EMMET'S CENTENNIAL DAY.

We hail thy great memorial day,
Green Erin's brave and noble son,
A century has passed away
Since thy life's blood for Erin ran;
Around the lips of hallowed time,
Are Erin's best and noblest men.

Thine eyes forever beyond the time
That mortal hope and fear surveys,
The nations hold thy name sublime,
Where Liberty is kept alive;
The kindling speech thy genius gave,
In glory burns above thy grave.

Taught by thy life and martyr'd death,
Patriot men on every sphere,
Through all the bounds of mighty Earth,
Still hold thy name in memory's store;
Despite the power of palace domes,
Loved Freedom yet shall light thy home.

We pray that Heaven will hasten the day
That Ireland may be free and gain sway,
When o'er the land in glam of May,
Her proud old flag shall wave again;
When power of right through Earth's broad plains
Shall never there oppression's bands.

Farewell, young patriot, ever true,
To right fair Erin's many wrongs,
Though Freedom bade her shores adieu,
Thy name shall live in deathless songs;

One day, young Emmet, o'er thy bones
A giant marble tomb shall rise,
When Erin shall ignore all Thrones,
And live as free as light at skies;
Ray of thy soul's resplendent light,
Guide Erin's sons to paths of right.

JOHN F. MCDONELL.

Gold Hill, Nevada.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

TO THE SOULS IN PURGATORY.

(A free rendering of an old Latin hymn, translated by Miss Marcella A. Fitzgerald.)

In thy mild and sweet companion we hap of thee, O Mary!
To bestow with assistance to the souls that writhe in pain
And especially for those, imploring "neath keenest purgation
While the cleansing flame effacies every sin's defiling stain.

To the souls of the departed, O Mary! be propitious,
Thou who voice of pure entreating is all-powerful with thy Son;
Daughter of the world's Creator, Mother of its King and Saviour,
Ask thou that the bonds which hold them, by thy mercy be undone.

The dead, O pious Mary! send up thine alpha and longing,
Darling, ah! so fervently, that they may be set free
From the torments laid upon them, and within thy glorious presence
Dwell and joys that are eternal for evermore with thee.

Oh! hasten, dear Mother Mary; show the depths of thy compassion
Unto those who have intensities in the bitterness of woe;
Obtain for them that joyous life by His Sacred Wounds would heal them—
Wounds from which flowed forth the Precious Blood that gladdens all above.

True hope of those who cry to thee, O Mary!
Of the multitude of faithful who for their Redemption, thy is mercy to appease thy Son's just anger
And win for them the blest reward of Heaven's unfading day.

O good and gracious Mary! grant that the inner of sorrow
We shed before the Judge's foot may cleanse the crimson fires,
And the souls set free from prison rear up on wings of praise ecstatic
To chant their Maker's praises amid angelic choirs.

And when in God's awful judgment the Son shall come in splendor,
Searching all hearts with a rigor language but to purify pulses,
Judging all with strictest justice, pray for us, for us, O Mary!
That we then may be found worthy to be numbered with the saints.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE BOAT THAT NEVER WENT TO SEA.

It lies forsaken on the sand,
Forgotten on the lonely beach,
A thing of neither sea nor land,
Beyond the wave's foremost reach,
The stay may fall, the tide may rise,
The wind may whistle joyfully,
It has no fear that replies—
The boat that never went to sea.

Ah! happier were the dwellers
That toiled with the tireless waves
Where currents of the sea are filled
Above the sides of deep sea caves,
It had the part of storm and ebbing,
It bore its colors valiantly,
Its load has cleft the bitter billow;
Its sails were set, it went to sea.

And happier even were the wrecks
Where boats are swamped and sails are torn,
Ah! waters must quit the dock,
Ah! waters must quit the dock,
That never, driven by the wind
And blind with foam, run desperately
With rocks before and storm behind—
This boat that never went to sea.

The wild seaweed lies even in needs
And blooms above the sea worn planks
That never met the water wide
And passed between their parted ranks;
The rudder, that remembers not
A hand to guide it steadily
Through warring wave, must waste with rot—
The boat will never go to sea.

E. CAVIERA.

Literary Miscellany.

A Set of Sapphires.

A Domestic Story with a Moral

"John"—pretty Mrs. Cecil Morgan stood beside her husband's chair with a strange hesitancy of look and manner—"would you let me have a little money?"

John Morgan, head book-keeper in the commission house of Macray & Co., laid down his morning paper with a slight sigh. He looked up kindly into the fair, rose-tinted face of his young wife, whose sapphire blue eyes were bent on his face expectantly. She was a lovely, loving, but thoughtless little woman—she was his wife and he loved her devotedly—but sometimes, not often, her vanities jarred on his finer sensibilities; for Cecil Morgan was not the woman to fully understand a man like her husband, whose worth, honesty, and nobility of thought was simply, incomprehensible to her tender but shallow nature.

"So you want a little money. How much, Ceci?"

He smiled as the dimples came and went in the smooth pink cheek.

"Oh, ever so much, John."

Cecil's spirits rose as she caressed her jewelled fingers, and she laughed in a childish fashion.

"Well, out with it. How much? Tell me"—as she hesitated. "I must hurry to town, as we are unusually busy just now."

"You are always that when I want anything," pouted Cecil.

"Business is business," he said, rather impatiently. "Tell me what you want."

"Why, you know that lovely set of sapphires in Ruby & Co.'s window—Mrs. Morgan paused, and her spirits fell a trifle, for John's face grew suddenly clouded; "they are just perfect and would suit my style—match my eyes, you know—and they are only $200. I want them to wear with my white moire at Mrs. Canal's reception."

"Indeed!" was John's comment, as he coughed slightly.

"Cecil, I am sorry to refuse you, but I cannot spare that amount of money at present."

"But they are just lovely, John," persisted Mrs. Morgan, with heightened color, "and so unique. The settings are peculiar in design—so chaste and delicate, and they are so cheap. Only $200 the complete set."

"Cecil"—John Morgan looked as if he was about to tell some very unbelievable truths—"what would my employer guess, if my wife wearing a $200 set of jewelry! Some of your evening dresses have already excited comment; but no one knew I had walked to and from the office, denied myself cigars, and even the daily papers, to pay for your extravagance.

"My extravagance," cried Mrs. Morgan, with a subdued wail, as she put her handkerchief to her eyes and burst into childish tears—a weak woman's best defence. "That's always my cry—my extravagance.

"No, Cecil," he said, gently, as he laid his hand on the sobbing shoulder, "not extravagance. But I am tired of living on our poor fare, and the everlasting pinching in everything but dress. You do not need this jewelry, and it would not be advisable to wear it if you had it; for men with only moderate salaries must pay up with moderate incomes. I will deny you nothing in reason, but you must have been more careful.

"Now, Cecil, my wife, I am sorry to refuse you, but I cannot spare that amount of money at present.

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-FIRST YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1887.

THE HOLY FATHER AND THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

Leo XIII., whenever occasion arises, emphasizes his sense of the mission of the Catholic press, and the useful labors which its men are addressed to the editors of the Unità Cattolica breathe the spirit displayed in his pontifical sentiments to the utility and importance of Catholic newspapers. His Holiness says: "Continue to protect religion and society from the innumerable snares which menace them today. This work is, indeed, arduous, but trust in the help of the Lord, whose heavenly grace we invoke in your behalf." The great Pontiff knows the difficulties which Catholic editors have to encounter, and he gives them encouragement and his blessing.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—We call the special attention of our readers to the magnificent sermon of Cardinal Gibbons on the first page. Both Catholics and non-Catholics alike may derive profit from reading it.

—Upwards of a thousand bishops and priests have signed the petition to the Holy Father in which the privilege of celebrating the Holy Sacrifice three times in one day—at present only granted upon Christmas Day—is sought to be extended to All Souls Day.

—About the middle of this month the great French pilgrimage of the Catholic Workmen's Association is expected to arrive in Rome. The pilgrims will number about 1,200, and will be under the guidance of Cardinal Langenieux, Archbishop of Rheims.

—The distillers of Kentucky have formed what is known in commercial circles as a "combine" so that whiskey has gone up. We are very glad of it, too, because the aforesaid fiery fluid has been going down for centuries, to the great destruction of the souls and bodies of battalions of men who deserved a better fate.

—Even as unprincipled an opponent of Gladstone as the London Times has been forced to acknowledge the power of his eloquent appeals in the cause of Home Rule before the English people. In a late issue the Times says: "It is a fact beyond question that Mr. Gladstone's oratorical performances beat the record of all statesmen who ever attempted to govern the country by the gift of speech. We stand amazed at the fecundity of language and physical endurance displayed by a man completing seventy-eight years."

—As the 11th day of November approaches, the authorities of Chicago are redoubling their vigilance, and are making every preparation to head off what they believe to be tremendous mischief—a bold front is shown that the Anarchist element will realize the folly of such an attempt. In plain language the fear is widespread that there will be an outbreak on the day the seven convicted Anarchists ascend the gallows, and that the scenes which will follow will make the Haymarket massacre seem insignificant.

—The graceful offer of the Dominion Government to Cardinal Taschereau of the use of the vice regal quarters in the Citadel of Quebec, until his own residence, which was recently destroyed by fire, should be rebuilt, was a kindly and thoughtful act of courtesy. His Eminence has been forced to decline the offer, however, the apartments provided for him temporarily in the seminary, although not so commodious as those proffered, being nearer the ecclesiastical archives, and more convenient for the management of his diocese.

—The Freeman's Journal says with forcible truth "the parochial schools of New York City are attended by forty thousand children. It takes thirty dollars a year to keep a child in the public schools—at least, the tax-payers that much. Those parochial schools save the public treasury over $1,000,000 a year, and the Catholics still pay their proportion of the school tax!" The same may be said of San Francisco, Sacramento and every other city in the Union, and we hope it is only a question of time until the rank injustice of this triple taxation of Catholic citizens down upon the impartial mind of the American people—and a remedy is applied to this great wrong.

—Mr. Thomas Ellis, M. P., introduced as the "Parnell of Wales," this concluded a pithy and pointed speech in Dublin recently: "The Catholic Church has thrown in its lot with the people in their struggle for a livelihood and for freedom, and now stands strong, brave and honored. The name of the Irish gentry is the glory of the Catholic Church. To the honored head of that Church, I desire, as a Welsh Nonconformist, and as one of the people who have themselves felt the keen edge of oppression and the bitterness of attempts at proselytizing, to say that I unite with you all in adding my mood of praise and admiration of Dr. Walsh, Archbishop of Dublin."

—Speaking of the forthcoming Jubilee of the Holy Father, Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, recently alluded to the Church in the United States in these words: "The navigator from Genoa, the Catholic discoverer of this continent, came here in his bark of the Constitution before the pilgrims from England in the Mayflower. The Church that was built on the rock of Peter sent her brave children to this land long before Puritan foot touched the rock of Plymouth. The first standard of civilization planted here was the Catholic cross, and here it shall remain to bless with the benediction of Christianity the society of this New World. There is evidently nothing in the genius of the Catholic religion incompatible with the genius of our Constitution, and the present Pontiff must feel, like his predecessor of happy memory, that in no country in the world is he more truly Pope than in the United States of America."

Remember the Poor Suffering Souls.

Our Holy Mother the Church, which is all Charity, and, in the exercise of this attribute of Divinity, she has devoted the whole month of November to the poor Suffering Souls, so that her living children may help her faithful dead to arrive at that longhoped for eternity—if we may so speak—of fetters of sancta and the hope of sanctus.

St. Francis de Sales says: "We do not often enough remember our dead, our faithful departed friends, who belong to the Church of the Faith urgently appeal to the living relatives of this dead for their prayers so as to help the poor Suffering Souls to procure immunity from the pains of Purgatory and to secure happiness in heaven.

It is further to be seen that there is not a single reader of the Monitor but who has some parent, relative, or friend in Purgatory whose sufferings can be shortened by Masses and prayers. Will they be given in order to plead for God's mercy towards that poor Suffering Soul? Yes! In the name of that Christian Charity which the Christ teaches, let every reader of the Monitor during this month of poor Suffering Souls, have Masses celebrated for them; let Communions be offered up for them; let the Rosary be recited for them; let Religious Communities, Confraternities and Sodalities be invoked to pray for them, and let a generous God like mercy burn brightly in each Catholic heart so that a united appeal may do violence to Heaven and thus liberate thousands of captive souls who have long languished in the penal prison of Purgatory.

It is in the power of every Catholic in the world to work and pray for the poor Suffering Souls. There is no poverty like that of the Catholic dead to whom Christianity has supplied the prefix "poor," because their lot is so pitiful through the neglect of the children they may have lived and even died for, the relatives they may have cherished and cared for, and the acquaintances whose friendship culminated in a floral offering at their funeral!

To die and be forgotten by the world is the fate of even the most honored in life. But God grant that such inhuman ingratitude may never be found in a truly Catholic heart towards the suffering dead! Masses and prayers are all they ask of us—and who is so poor as not to be able to give both? The perfumes of a single Dulce and Ave floated up with a humble heart for some poor suffering Soul, is more fragrant and forcible in the sight of God than a pyramid of flowers as high as Mount Ararat laid upon the coffin-lid of a dead Catholic and single Mass for the Souls in Purgatory possesses more intrinsic value to the departed than a Mausoleum costing a million dollars built over the rotting bones of a Bonanza king. And yet, even Catholics are found who spend thousands of dollars in flowers that fade and mortuary fabrics that fall to decay, whilst they have neither Mass nor prayer for the poor soul thus falsely and uselessly honored.

What says the Church to her children concerning their duty to the dead? Hear hells them that "it is a holy and a wholesome thought to pray for the dead that they may be loosed from their sins." And what say the poor Suffering Souls themselves! They cry aloud in spirit to every Catholic "Have pity on me, at least you my friends, for the hand of the Lord hath touched me." Or, in the words of the Psalmist, they say "Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: the Just wait for me, until thou reward me."

Shall the Church speak to us in vain? Will Catholics turn a deaf ear to her counsels? Must the poor Suffering Souls continue to suffer from year to year, from decade to decade, and from century to century, simply because their children, their living relatives, or their worldly-disturbed friends have forgotten them?

Why, the very thought that for every soul released from Purgatory by Masses and prayers advocates are gained in heaven for the friend on earth who thus procured their eternal happiness, should be enough to animate Catholics to have hundreds of Masses offered up and to recite thousands of prayers every year for the poor Suffering Souls. Let this thought sink deep into all Catholic hearts now. Let our present piety and alms-giving make up for past indifference. Almighty God is an all-merciful Judge and He only awaits the holocaust of the Mass and the petitions of the just in order to say to the thousands of poor Suffering Souls who have languished long in the cleansing fire: "Come ye blessed of my Father, possess the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Thus Masses and prayers are the spiritual keys which unlock the gates of Purgatory and set poor captive souls free—and where is the Catholic who will not share in such a holy and a wholesome work.

—The cable representative of the American press in London sent a message last week in which he gives this view of the poverty and destitution which exist in London: "With a sous difficulty I have been able to obtain the following figures, which, more eloquently than words, show the misery prevailing here, of which the mobs of the past ten days represent the dangerous element. The paupers of the metropolis number, according to this week's report of the Board of Guardians, 91,000, against 71,000 for the corresponding week of last year. The secretary of the Organized Charity Society informed me that an inquiry by members of the society had just been conducted, which shows that there are 100,000 persons in the metropolis whose condition is one of actual suffering and distress." A little House Monsoney ago on the part of well-paid English journals, and a reasonable size from Queen Victoria, might remedy this evil—it is impossible to draw blood from the lips, especially when they spring from Protestant seed.

—Archbishop Walsh, Archbishop Croke, and all the other leading Prelates of the Catholic Church in Ireland, and the Archbishop of Irish birth from other parts of the British Empire, have arranged to visit Rome early in January, when conferences will be held, and a foundation stone of a cathedral in honor of St. Patrick will be laid. The stone is to be a block of Irish marble.

A Queer Oakland Celtic.

It seems that there is at least one man in Oakland who is displeased with the reference made by Father Sasia, S. J., to Catholic parochial schools in his address at the laying of the cornerstone of St. Mary's College on Sunday last. Here is what the gentleman in question says through one of the local organs of our sister city across the bay:

On a memorable yesterday were lampooning and denouncing the Catholics of the Catholic Church in San Francisco and Oakland. Aside from the absence of the Cardinal there was a new Father Sasia, in his eloquent and scholarly oration, spoke of the glory of Catholic schools. The free non-sectarian schools are dear to the American heart; they are patronized by the majority of our people as the corner-stone of the Republic, and nothing could persuade them to have those schools replaced by denominational schools supported by the State. Catholics have their separate denominational schools, and we have no quarrel with them; they are lovely institutions in themselves; but Father Sasia seems to forget that the great majority of Americans will consent to the abolishment of the public schools and a division of the school money sectarian, for there are no signs that such a thing will come.

The candor with which this critic tells us that Catholics "are freely permitted" to erect, pay for, support and pay taxes on their own parochial schools, as well as to pay their proportion of taxes for the support of the public schools, evinces an amount of erudition and liberality not usually found in common place critics outside an insane asylum. In fact during the long years the Monitor has been pleading for justice to Catholic parochial schools, denominations on the public school question, we never once dreamed what delightful privileges Catholics enjoyed in educational matters until we were enlightened by the electric flash of the Oakland critic. How fortunate it is that Catholic bishops and priests have never been charged or indicted for building school houses or supporting schools. Ah! We Catholics have much indeed to be grateful for when we contrast that—as the unusually wise words of the wisdom seller of Oakland—we actually have "free permission" (just think of it) "free permission" to support our own schools out of any few dollars we may have left after paying the State for an education we cannot use. Why, such liberality our liberalizes Liberty itself! The word "Freedom" with all its synonyms of independence, fails to develop the fainest analysis of the "free permission" which the pundit at Oakland Point has perspicuously pointed out for the admiration of the present and future generations of freemen upon Freedom's soil!

We are really sorry, however, to be compelled to differ with this modern Solomon when he says that "Father Sasia errs" in his opinion that denominational schools will prevail in America. Father Sasia is right and the critic from Oakland errs in his wrong. Anti-Catholic critics both in England, Ireland and Canada hold the same wise-man of Oakland, and yet denominational schools exist in the countries named today, and all classes are well pleased. In some of the Southern States and some of the Northern States and some of the Eastern States and some of the West, the same spirit prevails—and the Union still exists! In like manner denominational schools will supplant public schools just as sure as the intelligent and fair-minded masses of the American people find out that the "free permission" enjoyed by Catholics and Protestant Christians to tax themselves for their own schools as well as the public schools is a "Blight on our land" the Solomon of the Siloran age imagines, but a piece of rank injustice unworthy of any nation calling itself Christian.

The Oakland pundit seems to think that Father Sasia, S. J., is alone in his opinion that denominational schools will supplant the present system of public schools. But in this also Sir Oracle is oblivious to the progress of Protestant thought upon the question. Here, for instance, is the expression of a single Protestant preacher out of a hundred we could name) whose Protestantism cannot be doubted. We quote from the New York Sun, of the 23rd ult., the following paragraph which will no doubt prove a "startling disclosure" to the Oakland wiseacre

At a recent meeting of the New Haven Congregational Club, when the subject for discussion was "Religion in our Public Schools," Dr. Dexter, of the Yale Divinity School, said that the public school system, which he studied very carefully, was a Godless one. He expected the Church and State, and yet a failure to teach religion, and in so much a failure to teach good American citizenship. He said "This system takes away from parents what is their right and duty, to have their children brought up religiously. It also tends to develop hypocrisy in teachers, as every one who has religion is bound to propagate it, and will, even unconsciously. There is no objection to the Israelite, or Roman Catholic or Protestant Christian, but there is no place in this system for the Christian. There are those who want the Roman Catholic to close his child from the influence of his religious knowledge, if he is bigoted. Religion should not be taught in schools, but it should be taught at home, and children should not be sent to schools where religion is not taught. I oppose the system because it is a fact, an America, injurious, unnecessary, and unchristian. According to my figures and opportunities, I can hound to labor for the disestablishment of the common schools.

Dr. Deems is one of the leading lights of Protestantism in the Atlantic States, and when he holds an opinion at variance with the Oakland oracle, it is equal to the influence of an extinguisher upon a candle—the light of Oakland is luminary gone out, whilst the extinguisher remains intact and ready for future victims.

What the Oakland critic says about "the free non-sectarian school" being "dear to every American heart" is all "bosh." We feel in our heart-of-hearts that there was any monopoly in this "American heart" business. The man who is willing to accord equal and exact justice to all men in relation to religion, education, and rights of conscience and citizenship possesses a far nobler "American heart" than the man who thinks Catholic citizens should be thankful for being "freely permitted" to pay three times the taxes other citizens are called to pay in order that their children may preserve Christianity in the land.

—Messrs. Hardman Bros. has sent us a timely little book entitled "A Novena for the Relief of the Poor Suffering Souls in Purgatory," compiled by a monastery of the Sacred Heart. We heartily commend the work to all our readers and promise they can purchase copies at all the Catholic book stores. The price is only 10 cents a copy, or $1 a dozen, and the proceeds are devoted to a worthy work.

Poison Found in a Peculiar Place.

Last week we received from Ambrosius of the Sydney Freeman's Journal, Australia, a pretty account of a Protestant Sabbath School paper entitled the Glow Leaf, issued in that distant country, and which is circulated under the guise of a good paper by Christian children. And yet, singular to relate, the poison which Satan's agents are for ever on the watch to find a place for in the weekly papers, fountain of anti-Papery, has crept into this paper with thirty pieces for young people for no other purpose than to prejudice their minds by means of malignant falsehoods concerning the Catholic Church.

On the third page of the number before us is an engraving supposed to represent Italian children and the pious teaches of the Glow Leaf are assisted that they are far better off than any Italian children for the following reason set forth in the pestiferous paper

"The Italians are nearly all Roman Catholics. The Pope not allowing them to read the Bible, they can't have the people read for themselves. They want them to be ignorant, so that they can teach them what they please. They do not want them to read the Bible. Now, what do you think be a Roman Catholic? Would you like to have the Bible taken away from you?"

Such is the scandalous style in which the Pope—Christ's Vicar and the Priests of the Catholic Church are vilified and vituperated in a Sabbath-School journal supposed to furnish pure reading for religiously minded young people. Christian Sabbath School Protestant preachers thus sow the baneful seeds of bigotry in the minds of non-Catholic children! Simply in order that they may become blind bigots early in life, and then grow up to hate the very name of Pope and Priest and Catholic. These unsuspecting deceived children cannot give a single reason for their antagonism to the Catholic Church beyond the fact that they have been taught by people to be ignorant so that they can teach them what they please! Assuredly it never entered the head of the infuriated bigot who wrote this wilful falsehood that the Pope proclaims precisely the same doctrines in America and all over the Christian world as he does in Italy. As well might the slandering scribe say that Christ selected ignorant men for His Apostles so that He might teach them what He pleased, as to say that the Vicar of Christ and the Pontiff of the Catholic Church keep people in ignorance in order to teach them any kind of religious folly.

The fact is that the Pope and the Priests are constrained to differ with this modern Solomon when he says that "Father Sasia errs" in his opinion that denominational schools will prevail in America. Father Sasia is right and the critic from Oakland errs in his wrong. Anti-Catholic critics both in England, Ireland and Canada hold the same wise-man of Oakland, and yet denominational schools exist in the countries named today, and all classes are well pleased. In some of the Southern States and some of the Northern States and some of the Eastern States and some of the West, the same spirit prevails—and the Union still exists! In like manner denominational schools will supplant public schools just as sure as the intelligent and fair-minded masses of the American people find out that the "free permission" enjoyed by Catholics and Protestant Christians to tax themselves for their own schools as well as the public schools is a "Blight on our land" the Solomon of the Siloran age imagines, but a piece of rank injustice unworthy of any nation calling itself Christian.

More Cable Nonsense.

A pretended telegram from Rome, originally concocted in London, appeared on Saturday's dailies in which it was stated that "the Holy Father is greatly alarmed at the results of Prince's mission to Ireland. The Pope has made no secret of his displeasure. Things in Ireland are simply the creation of the remarkably unctuous Protestant, who is the man who manufactures cable news in Rome for the American market. The Vatican is not responsible for the nonsense displayed.

Perhaps, says the cable man in the mask, "originally failed, having returned with more vague declarations. The truth of this assertion will be made manifest when Monsignor returns from Ireland. Mgr. Persico was sent to Ireland in consequence of his diplomatic tact, peculiarly adapted to such emergencies. He is acting as representative of the Holy Father. Hence assertion No. 2 is a transparent falsehood.

"The Pope hoped, says the unreliable cable stuffer, "that a favorable result of Persico's mission would have contributed much towards rendering easy negotiations for a renewal of diplomatic intercourse with England." Precisely the contrary is true. England is anxious to re-establish diplomatic relations with Rome, and the Pope is not responsible for balking what appeared to be a certainty. Persico's mission failed because the cause of Ireland in the minds of the Canons and Pontiffs, let Leo XIII. Even the Holy Father is not free from the baneful seeds of bigotry in the minds of non-Catholic children! Simply in order that they may become blind bigots early in life, and then grow up to hate the very name of Pope and Priest and Catholic. These unsuspecting deceived children cannot give a single reason for their antagonism to the Catholic Church beyond the fact that they have been taught by people to be ignorant so that they can teach them what they please! Assuredly it never entered the head of the infuriated bigot who wrote this wilful falsehood that the Pope proclaims precisely the same doctrines in America and all over the Christian world as he does in Italy. As well might the slandering scribe say that Christ selected ignorant men for His Apostles so that He might teach them what He pleased, as to say that the Vicar of Christ and the Pontiff of the Catholic Church keep people in ignorance in order to teach them any kind of religious folly.

The fact is that the Pope and the Priests are constrained to differ with this modern Solomon when he says that "Father Sasia errs" in his opinion that denominational schools will prevail in America. Father Sasia is right and the critic from Oakland errs in his wrong. Anti-Catholic critics both in England, Ireland and Canada hold the same wise-man of Oakland, and yet denominational schools exist in the countries named today, and all classes are well pleased. In some of the Southern States and some of the Northern States and some of the Eastern States and some of the West, the same spirit prevails—and the Union still exists! In like manner denominational schools will supplant public schools just as sure as the intelligent and fair-minded masses of the American people find out that the "free permission" enjoyed by Catholics and Protestant Christians to tax themselves for their own schools as well as the public schools is a "Blight on our land" the Solomon of the Siloran age imagines, but a piece of rank injustice unworthy of any nation calling itself Christian.

The Slavery of Sectarian Bigotry.

Readers of the Monitor will remember that a few weeks ago the Pacific of this city charged the Catholic Church with enslaving a portion of the people of Europe by the tyrannous canon law. We challenged the Pacific to prove the truth of its charge, and then again we asked some other question of the enslaving Church, if not Ireland, but when asked to say had scarcely the courage to hope that the Protestant pen would be found to write a reply. We have given our reasons for the paternal guide to deny now pass to the other part of the charge, namely, that the Church has been the main, or, indeed, the only, cause of the enslavement of Ireland. The dodgeball idea that a Catholic priest or bishop is deliberately determined among our unsuccessful fellow citizens as if the Pope had ordered us to read the gospel of Christ! Has such conduct been confined by keeping Protestant minds somewhat in the dark, thanks of sectarian bigotry? Let this question be precisely what Protestants and other sectarian papers hope people who thus pay their cash for a Catholic paper, and the chance against the Catholic Church.

The Rome well-grounded minded readers of their Catholic fellow-citizens imagine that they help Protestantism by this calumniating Catholics. If they do they are mistaken. Such conduct is not a sin of a fact that many converts have been attracted to the true fold of Christ by means of underlying Catholics in their own ranks, which they afterwards are successfully refuted in the Catholic pipes. Just as the Catholics Key refuted the calumnies of the Protestant Bible, and thereby made Christ's Key more valuable to the Catholic. Every Protestant in Christ Romanism does not have to be the enemy of truth, than it does to the Roman Catholic Church.

The ministers of the Brighton Mass were: Rev. A. Varsi, S. J., Celebrant; Rev. E. J. Roberts, S. J., Deacon; Rev. Vincent Ferrer, Subdeacon; Mr. J. Cullinan, S. J., Master of Ceremonies. The Rev. Fathers were assisted in prayer by Rev. Wm. Kenna, S. J., President of Santa Clara College and Rev. E. Masson, S. J., of St. Ignatius Church. The Religious Sisters were represented by the Mother of the Church in the presence of Mother Dolorosa and a number of the sisters of that Holy Family.

It was a most edifying sight to notice all the near relatives and a host of Father Kelly's dear friends approach the altar and receive from the hands of his self-sacrificing brother and spiritual director, the Bread of Life. The beloved priest received communion from his brother, and then, with the aid of the deacon and the priest who can perform the office of Sub-deacon, he administered communion to the priest of God

Farm and Home.

Do Try to be Natural.

Girls, talk to the young men you meet as unaffectedly as you do the boy friends of your brothers, or, if you have no brothers and therefore no brothers friends, as you do the neighbor lad, who was "the class shows" for your father. Do not imagine when you meet a gentleman that your conversation must be remarkable or unusual to be entertaining. The hearing of an intelligent, gracious gentleman is one always to be anticipated, but this should be your everyday behavior. You should have no company manner. Assume no extra kicks or demure simpy manner you are in the company of a young gentleman instead of a young lady.

Do not suppose the strange gentleman you meet is a typical novel hero. He is no more a hero of romance than you a heroine. You are both just plain, everyday humanity. Don't get foolish notions that you are anything but ordinary clay and try to act like the young person who figured as chief character in your last novel.

In the Embrace of a Reptile.

A correspondent of a New York contemporary says: "Richard Engleiton, a farmer in the town of Vienna, Wm. had a thrilling experience recently with a large spotted adder which would have proved fatal had not assistance arrived. Engleiton, who is eighty years old and paralyzed on one side, was driving along near his farm, accompanied by his daughter, when he saw in front of him, coiled up in the roadway, the snake, which as the team advanced evinced no disposition to move aside. E gleiton was afraid to drive over it for his horses might receive poisonous wounds, and therefore alighted to drive it away. As he approached, the venomous creature, darting forward violently, in a twinkling entwined itself spirally around the old and helpless man. It darted its fangs into its victim's unprotected leg, but fortunately did not reach the flesh. The terrified daughter, fearing for her aged father's safety, hastened away and gave the alarm at the first farmhouse. Several men immediately ran to the rescue, and after a severe struggle, in which the snake fought desperately, succeeded in killing the creature and releasing the old man, whose face was purple from the constantly tightening folds of the monster. Besides nothing loose from the terrible pressure to which they had been subjected, the old man sustained a severe nervous shock; but he will probably recover. The snake measured a trifle over six feet in length, and was fully three inches in diameter where its body reached the largest swell. No such reptile has been seen here for many a day."

Oil on the Waters.

While a staunch little vessel was sailing in very high seas, the waves shooting in the air flooded the decks with water and threatened to swamp her, the officers caused a bag to be filled with oil and placed it so that the oil would drip on the sea. It spread and formed a "slick" thirty feet long. As soon as the great waves reached this "slick" they subsided and became swells through which the vessel rode without shipping water. The gale continued twenty-four hours—three quarts of oil in four hours kept the "scuttery" down and enabled the barque to make good speed.

The good ship Home often rides through a gale of high tempers. A contrary wind blows through the whole house, and floods of angry words break over the family. How comfortable it is when mother brings the "bag of oil!"

Sometimes a good-natured big brother or generously disposed sister furnishes the oil. Whenever brings it, the quieting effect of a little is marvelous. Try it.

A New Shirt Linen.

A through revolution in the manufacture of all grades of linen is possible, and it seems probable that satisfactory results will follow late attempts in that direction. The production of pure straw-linen oatmeal by the association is being vigorously discussed in European journals. It has long been known that straw contains about 25 per cent of pliable fiber, cohesive and capable of bleaching; but it was not till 1861 that a French patent was taken out for soaking finely cut straw in hot water, and then in a solution of caustic soda, under atmospheric pressure, for the production of a straw-linen substance. This process succeeded very simply, but it required many experiments before a method could be perfected which would produce the result cheaply and certainly. The important features of the new method are the chemical treatment of the straw and boiling under a pressure of five atmosphere until the water runs away colorless and the fiber is smooth and pliable to the touch.

Hints for Housekeeping.

Don't hang a picture so that it will be necessary to mount a stepladder to view it. Hang it so that the center will be about five feet and a half from the floor, a little below the vision of a person of average height.

Don't select furniture whose "season of support" do not appear adequate. Chairs with spindle legs inclined too far inward or outward have an apparent tendency towards disruption and are constant terrors to sellers.

Straight, substantial legs suggest strength and inspire confidence.

Don't treat a hallway as though it were a dooryard, and no part of the house proper. A hall should be inviting and hold out to the visitor a promise of the beauty of the inner rooms.

Don't put a piece of furniture into a room merely because it is pretty and will fill up. Every article should have its real or apparent use; as a general thing the necessary pieces will comply all the space that should be alloted to furniture.

Don't put paper on the walls of a nursery; it is better to either paint or kalsomine.

Don't have a drawing room so filled with frail and delicate bric-a-brac that the least movement is fraught with danger of costly and wholesale breakage. This does not conduce to ease.

Don't place a dark carpet and walls in a room that is deficient in light. Only apartments on the outer light will stand tones in decoration.

Don't hang a picture from one nail. Aside the mere question of safety, the use of two nails, the cord stretched across from one to some down symetry to the eyes of the frame has a symmetrical effect, and makes the walls look very much more finished.

Don't have a carpet patterned with grapevines or other natural flowers. They harmonize with nothing. The colors in a carpet should, in a great measure, complete the color scheme adopted for the room.

Don't place a picture or a bit of decoration where it does not serve some artistic purpose. If a picture is intended to be seen in a strong light do not put it in an obscure corner, and, on the other hand, if it be painted in a high color key, do not bring it within the direct influence of a brilliant sunbeam.

OUR AGENT AT LOS ANGELES.

Mr. J. K. Chalmers, dealer in Catholic books, artistic of devotion, stationary, school books, etc., 710 South Main street, corner Main and Third streets, Los Angeles, will hereafter have the Monitor for sale regularly every week. He will also receive the names of new subscribers and furnish the Monitor at $2.00 per year.

Family Fun.

A Man Who Never Heard of the Great Yacht Race.

"Well, well," remarked a Frisco citizen to his neighbor in the street car, "the Volunteer did nicely."

"Hey?" responded the man spoken to, who seemed a little deaf.

"Volunteer, I said, did nobly."

"Yes, indeed," replied the deaf man; "in fact they fought better than the regular troopers."

"Eh, I wasn't talking about the war," rejoined the yacht crank, testily; "I was speaking about the race between the Volunteer and the Thistle.

"The what?

"Thistle."

"Oh, yes, I see. Yes, the thistle is a great nuisance to the farmer—terrible pest—no way of eradicating it at all. Dunkeys like to eat it, though.

"I was speaking about the yacht race," replied the Frisco man, with some asperity.

"Well, I don't approve of the race at all. I am a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. I think such treatment of horses is shameful, besides being demoralizing to public habits."

"I guess you only caught my last word. I said yacht race.

And he laid a very impressive emphasis on the word "yacht."

"Yes, I heard you; but I think the better the more the more cruel they are. Speeds the horses worse, you see."

"Yacht! I said," and the Frisco spoke very loud, while all the people in the car manifested an intense interest in the conversation.

"Yacht!

Tom was from the deef man, and was put forth in an inquiring tone, as his injured tone said:

"What's that?"

The deaf man began to thirst for information.

"What's what Yacht!"

The Frisco Man's tone was supercilious and incredulous.

"Yes; what's yacht!

And the man really seemed to be very anxious to know.

"Don't you know what a yacht is!

"No, sir. Is it the name of one of the horses that ran in the race you mentioned?

"Gracious! man, where have you been? The Thistle and Volunteer are yachts—boats, you understand—the one is an English and the other an American vessel, and they raced for the America's cup. Though everybody knew all about it."

"That's the first I have heard about it," replied the deaf man. "What is the America's cup, anyhow?

"Great Cousar! man, where are you from?

"Philadelphia."

And then the other buried himself deep in his newspaper and did not see the sly wink the deaf man tipped to the seat full of people opposite.

The Difference.

Elsie (shouting to Edith)—E-e-dith! You was wanted a mess to do yesterday.

Edith (shouting back)—Tell mamma I can't, I'm busy, I'm busy.

Elsie—It's not mamma who wants you. It's papa.

Edith (hastily)—Mi-i-ll-ph. Tell him I'll be there in a minute.

The Old American Navy.

English Naval Officer—My stars! What is that for! Your man-of-war is coated with jaminous paint!

American Naval Officer—No, it always shines that way at night.

English Naval Officer—It does!

American Naval Officer—Yes, old wood is always phosphorescent when it's wet.

Better than Beads.

"I see that you have a new cashier," remarked the president of one bank to another.

"Yes, we set him to work yesterday."

"Had any experience?

"Lots of it."

"Under heavy bonds, I suppose! Our man is under $150,000."

"Well, no; we did not require big bonds."

"Great heavens, man, he'll run off in two weeks with the whole bank."

"We have every confidence in him."

"Well, you'll pay dearly enough for it. He'll be in Canada inside of a month."

"I think not. You see he has just run away from a Canadian bank with $200,000. I think he is safe enough."

He Lived by Crime.

Visitor—"Perhaps, madam, you could get your husband to put his name down on the roll of our society.

Lady of the house—"What is the society?

Visitor, impressively—"The Society for the Repression of Crime."

"I, of the B.—!" "I don't think my husband would care to put his name down for any such thing. He makes his living by crime.

Vy, horrified—"Is he a criminal!"

L. of the house.—"No, he is a policeman."

She Had Two Dresses.

De Haven—I tell you the lady, De Young, I have the sharpest wife you ever saw in your life. Why, I gave her just barely enough money to go out and buy one dress, and I pow'll believe it she came home with two.

De Young—That is sharp. How did she manage it?

De Haven—Why, she bought one and the other she had on when she went out.

Cold Comfort for a Wife.

Friend—Well, Elias, how do you like your husband?

Elias—He is a villian.

"All men are; but what has he done?

"You know he was a widower. Well, I've found out that all his love letters to me were copied verbatim from the ones he wrote to his first wife when they were courting."

"Well, I wouldn't mind that. He never will send you any more."

He Earned His Harp.

St. Peter (to applicant)—What was your occupation when on earth?

Applicant—Editor of a newspaper.

St. Peter—Big circulation, of course!

Applicant—No, smallest in the country.

St. Peter—Pass out your harp.

His Father Would be Left.

"Suppose, Tommy," said a San Francisco teacher, "that your father owned forty lots and a house in China chopped his sixteen of them and a man from St. Louis should buy twenty, what would he left?"

"Where are the men from," asked Tommy, "Chicago and St. Louis?"

"Yes."

"I'm would be left; he wouldn't get any money."

—Hood's Sarsaparilla is a purely vegetable preparation, being free from injurious ingredients. It is peculiar in its curative power.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Lactated Food

The Mother's Favorite.

Send for our Circular entitled

"LETTERS from MOTHERS," which shows a large number of letters, some of which say the life of their baby was saved by the use of LACTATED FOOD.

Send those letters and if you wish, write to the mothers and get their opinion. Positive will gladly answer.

If your baby is not hearty and robust try it is also a Perfect Nutriment for INVALIDS.

LACTATED FOOD

In either chronic or acute cases. Wish stomachs accept it when all else is rejected. Thousands of Physicians recommend it as the best of all prepared foods. Its reputation is increasing.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists Etc., 50c. $1

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1867-BABIES-1887

To the mother of one half born this year we will send a pamphlet containing Diary of the "Jewelwell Infant, Instructions how to Nurse, Bathe, Feed, Dress, Prevent Sickness, Cure Colic, Cholera Infantum, Constipation, Scurvy, Rickets, Sleeplessness, Fretfulness and Restlessness. For 1887 we will send the Diary, Instructions, etc., free to any Mother who will write us and mention this paper. J. I. PEARSOL, Sole Prop., Jewelwell Building, St. Louis, Mo.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

PUT ONE DOLLAR A WEEK

IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN

GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1872

These bonds are always in demand, the interest is paid out in premiums three times yearly. Every bond is entitled to one

Three Drawings Annually.

Until each owner has been in receipt of a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must come out with a premium, and then participate in all the

NO BLANKS.

Premiums.	Premium.	Premiums.
1	$15,000	$15,000
1	10,000	10,000
1	5,000	5,000
2	2,000	4,000
5	1,000	5,000
10	500	5,000
1,750	300	525,000
Total		$1,000,000

Together 1,800 premiums, amounting to $1,000,000. Further, the next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF DECEMBER,

and every bond begins of an OUT OR BEFORE TIME (as of DECEMBER 1ST), E. F. is entitled to the whole premium that may be there thereon on that date.

Out of two orders sent in EXCHANGE LETTER, in October, we will secure one of those bonds for the next drawing. Orders payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

120 Nassau St., cor. Ann St., New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1871.

☞ Beware of spurious imitations. Genuine bonds are not to be compared with any Lottery transaction. Our business is conducted on the principle of selling bonds, and not in similar wise as by the lottery or the Gift Enterprise.

N. B.—In writing please state that you saw this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

Advice to the Aged.

Age brings infirmities, earth by clog; Sick heads, weak kidneys and dulled sight and torpid liver.

Tutt's Pills

have a specific effect on these organs. They restore digestion, clear the sight, give a healthy appetite, without straining or griping, and to the kidneys, bladder and liver. They are adapted to old or young.

IMPARTING VIGOR

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

508 and 510 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 767.

I WANT TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS BOYS for Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Herdsmen, Gardeners, Coachmen, and Married Couples for Farms, Hotels, Boarding Houses, and good reliable Office Help, without any money, both parties. Information free; no charge to employers. Intelligent young women seeking a good home.

CALIFORNIA NURSERY,

San Bruno Road and 25th St.

FLORAL DEPOT.

638 Sutter St., bet. Stockton and Powell.

HENRY MELDE,

Florist and Decorator.

Choice Cut Flowers and all kinds of Floral Work at Reasonable Prices.

M'CORMICK BROS.,

Book and Job Printers,

410 Sansome St., 410

POZZONI'S

MEDICATED

COMPLEXION

POWDER.

D. MENCARINI,

911 Mission St.,

San Francisco, - Cal

Manufacturer and Importer

OF RELIGIOUS

STATUARY,

ETC.

Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc.

THE ONLY ESTABLISHMENT OF ITS KIND ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

☞ Catalogues sent free on application.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF

PRICE'S Famous California-Made

CARVERS.

His Own Make and Design. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

Best or Ivory Handles, per pair $6.00
Price's Celebrated Razors, per pair 1.00
Price's Guard Razors, warranted, set to cut the first time 1.00

A well selected stock of English and American Table Cutlery and Plated Ware. Sent C. O. D., or by mail. Catalogue free.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler,

611 Kearny St

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

"The Humboldt Route Bonds" (NORTH PACIFIC COAST RAILROAD, AND NORTH PACIFIC COAST RAILROAD) and Tacoma and Tacoma extension Bonds, Sonoma Railroad Bonds, Sonoma Railroad Bonds, Marin County Railroad Bonds, and Sonoma Railroad Bonds, and Sonoma Railroad Bonds, and Sonoma

O'BRIEN IN JAIL!

Three Months Imprisonment.

EXCITING SCENES IN COURT.

Ruffianly Conduct of the Police.

DUBLIN, October 31.—William O'Brien, M.P., was at Middlebrown, County Cork to-day, where his appeal to Recorder Hamilton of Cork, against the decision of the magistrate sentencing him to two months' imprisonment was heard. Mr. O'Brien traveled by train from Midleton to Cork. He drove to the Victoria Hotel and an immense crowd assembled in the street to greet him. He left by train for Middleton when he was met by Mr. Harrington, M.P., John Dillon and Mr. Lane, M.P.

On his way to Middletown O'Brien alighted from the train at Queenstown Junction, where he was greeted by an immense crowd of league members, with bands and banners. Some of the crowd were untouched, and all displayed in their hats green cards of membership of the league. The cavalcade lined the roadside far beyond the depot. O'Brien drove to Carrigtwohill, where there was another imposing demonstration in his honor. An address was presented to him, and in his reply O'Brien said he never saw before such evidence of the unconquerable spirit that animated the Irish people. The thought of the imposing spectacle would compensate for him for the wretched three months he should have to spend in prison, and for his life long hardship of the Irish cause. He asked the leaders of the Irish people to show a spirit of defiance and resistance to the Government. O'Brien from their purpose to march to Middletown. On reaching Middletown there was a further demonstration. The police, however, interfered and suppressed it.

En route O'Brien was greeted with address. Mr. O'Brien was accompanied by Mr. Maudeville, and both drove into Middletown. After Mr. Dillon, M.P., had addressed a few words to the people on arriving in Middletown, Mr. O'Brien entered the court accompanied by Mr. Dillon. The clerk of the Crown called "William O'Brien, M.P., appellant; the Queen, respondent."

Mr. Carson—I appear for the Crown in this case, your Worship. This is an appeal brought by William O'Brien.

Mr. O'Brien—I am the appellant in this case, and am sorry that I was not in court before.

The Recorder—Oh, not at all, Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. O'Brien—If you allow me to make a short statement I shall gladly abbreviate.

The Recorder—If you wish to do so, Mr. O'Brien, you may.

O'Brien—I had instructed counsel not to appear for me, and I was anxious to learn the opinion of an old established, equitable tribunal upon the proceedings of the Court below, which, to my mind, is a court of very novel and despotic jurisdiction. Unforeseen events have occurred which have forced me to abandon that expectation and to reconsider my opinion. If you will permit me, I will refer very lightly indeed, and in a very abbreviated manner, to those events. I do so because I find it absolutely necessary for me to do so. A gentleman who is well known as an English judge wrote—

Recorder—I really must interfere. If the case is to go on it must go on in the usual course.

O'Brien—I am accustomed to be treated in this way by this gentleman. It seems to me that the gentleman assumes the demeanor of a gentleman who treats the irritable under his Act as merely subordinate to himself.

The Recorder—I think that the case should be settled in the ordinary way, and as you are not represented by counsel, Mr. O'Brien, I shall give you the fullest opportunity of making any statement you desire to make afterward. I assure here with a perfectly unprejudiced mind. I want to hear the case against you, and I want to hear it supported by evidence. It is the usual course for the Crown to make its case. Mr. Carson may not be able to make his case, but if he does, then of course I shall give him ample opportunity to make any statement.

O'Brien—Of course I shall accept your suggestion. I think I should have spared public time by making the statement.

Mr. Carson then proceeded with his statement. Mr. O'Brien then, in a short speech, explained that in consequence of the eulogium passed upon Baron Dowse and the Recorder, and in consequence of the statement with reference to his case which the Attorney was pending made by Baron Beaumont, he could not expect a fair trial of his appeal.

The Recorder—Do I understand you to withdraw your appeal?

O'Brien—I have said, sir, what I thought necessary to defend my conduct. You can, if you perfectly sure, know what the law has in store for me.

The Recorder—Well, I do. Go on with the case.

The formal proofs were then handed in, and the Recorder, in a short speech, confirmed the decision of the Court below.

Three months' imprisonment.

Mr. Carson was proceeding to open the second case and was reading Sergeant Cox's evidence, when Mr. O'Brien rose and proceeded to the body of the court, evident about to leave. He was at once seized by District Inspector Creagh and a number of policemen. He struggled to get away, asserting that there was no warrant for his arrest.

Mr. Harrington rose in court and said that he was counsel for Mr. O'Brien in the Recorder's absence, and he wished to draw the Recorder's attention to the fact that Mr. O'Brien, against whom there was no warrant, was prevented from leaving the court by a number of constables.

The Recorder—If Mr. O'Brien wishes to retire to the Magistrate's, he may go there.

District Inspector Creagh—Yes, your Worship, but I cannot allow him to leave the court.

The Recorder—I am afraid not. Captain Stokes take Mr. O'Brien into custody.

The constables, who had been preventing Mr. O'Brien from leaving, then arrested him. Mr. O'Brien struggled with the policemen and managed to get to the solicitor table. He said, "Allow me to speak. I don't know, sir, whether I am entitled to ask your opinion on a question of law. My legal rights are very few, but I would like to know whether I have a legal right to leave the court and whether I should be assaulted when I attempt to do so?"

Recorder—I am very sorry that you should have been assaulted, but you may refer to the Magistrate's room.

Mr. O'Brien—I propose to leave the court.

The Recorder—I am afraid you cannot.

Mr. Harrington—There is no warrant. The certificate of confirmation of the appeal signed by the Petty Sessions clerk of the district, is in possession the magistrates who imposed the sentence, and they are to make out their order.

Captain Stokes, the Petty Sessions clerk—Get the certificate.

Mr. Harrington.—I contend that it was never heard of in any Court of Appeal, in order that the warrant might issue then to signed. The invariable practice in when the Court of Appeals upheld the decision of the lower Court the certificate was made out by the Registrar that the sentence had been confirmed. The certificate was then sent dressed by him to the Petty Sessions clerk of the district where the sentence was originally pronounced. The Petty Sessions clerk called together the magistrates who had imposed the sentence and they made out the warrant.

Mr. Carson argued that Mr. Harrington's contention was incorrect and that Mr. O'Brien was lawfully in custody.

The Recorder said that the contention of Mr. Harrington's contention was correct and that Mr. O'Brien was at liberty to go.

Captain Stokes, D. M. then called out loudly to the police—"Arrest that man! I authorize you to do it on my own authority. I will be responsible for the consequences."

The police, under District Inspector Creagh, then seized Mr. O'Brien and dragged him toward the door of the court. Mr. O'Brien resisted with all the power at his command. Mr. Dillon, M.P., and Mr. Tanner, M.P., at once rushed to Mr. O'Brien's assistance and a scene of indescribable confusion and excitement arose. A lady in the court fainted and was carried out. Mr. O'Brien resisted with all his might, but the force of police was overwhelming and he was dragged out. In the collision not only Mr. O'Brien, but Mr. Dillon, Mr. Harrington and Mr. Tanner were roughly used.

The excitement of the people was intense when the news of what was going on inside spread amongst the crowd in the outside. It would have been impossible to prevent a disturbance but for the exertions of the Rev. Father Keane and other clergymen. Mr. Tanner returned into court and said that he had reason to believe that Mr. O'Brien had been injured, and as a member he asked that he should be admitted to see Mr. O'Brien.

The Recorder—Certainly.

Mr. Dillon came back into the court and proceeded to address the Recorder upon the illegality of the proceeding that had just taken place.

Recorder—I won't hear you.

Dillon—Then you had better send me into custody with Mr. O'Brien.

Recorder—I will send you into custody if you persist in this.

Dillon—Then I will be heard.

Harrington called Dillon off to his seat of the court and they held a consultation, in consequence of which Dillon said no more.

When Mr. O'Brien was brought into the court to the Bridewell, which is situated at the back of the building, he looked very much exhausted from the injuries he received during the struggle in the court. He was bareheaded and the jailoresses. When Captain Stokes ordered his arrest, although the Recorder said he was at liberty to go, he was attended by Dr. Tanner. Happily O'Brien's injuries are not serious, although he was very roughly used. Later on Mr. O'Brien was taken from Middletown to Cork under an escort of hussars.

At 5 o'clock William O'Brien and Mr. Maudeville, surrounded by military and police, arrived in Cork, and lodged in the County Jail. As Mr. O'Brien's carriage passed through the country from Middletown to Cork, bad cheers from the people greeted the honorable gentleman, and by the time he reached the jail, quite a procession of cars followed O'Brien's carriage. The streets were thronged, and cheering and waving of hats were continued. At the jail entrance a force of mounted police prevented the people from approaching nearer than a hundred yards of the prison. When O'Brien and Maudeville stepped from the carriage and entered the portals of the jail there was loud cheering, and "God save Ireland" rang through the air to inspiring music.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Antrim.—Miss Harriet McAlister and Miss Margaret McAlister, daughters of Mr. Alexander McAlister, Belfast, were committed to jail in default of bail, for refusing to give evidence in the case of the Queen against Patrick Carolan, of Sister Mary Austin and Sister Mary Agnes.

Cavan.—A Balinamore correspondent says the recent Nationalist meeting at Ballinlough in Cloone parish, County Cavan, was attended by Orangemen, some being thrown and others had their clubs taken from them. Orangemen stopped a cartload of people going to the same meeting, rendered them late for the trial.

Carlow.—On the evening of September 30th, Monsignor Panzini, Papal Nuncio, addressed a large gathering of people at the Vincentian Seminary, Carlow. Two Commissioners, in the room of Mr. Bolton, were present, accompanied by his secretary, Father Donald, the Most Rev. Dr. Jordan, Coadjutor Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin; Rev. Father Burke, President Carlow College; Rev. J. Kavanagh, Athy; and the Rev. J. Byrne, C.C., Carlow, the school of the Christian Brothers. Address Excellency was received by him, in which the loyalty, morality, and industry of this through the different rooms of the spacious building.

Clare.—On the morning of the 1st inst., Captain O'Grady, sheriff of Clare, accompanied by a force of 30 police, made a rather extensive seizure of cattle in the Scariff district for rent. The seizure was at the suit of Mr. Michael Hogan, who resides near Scariff, County Limerick, and who happened to be the landlord of the district. The authorities had intimated to the tenants that they should not offer any opposition to the distraint or his bailiffs, who in less than an hour seized 32 head of cattle.

Cork.—Sir John Pope Hennessy has purchased from the Corporation of Cork, for a sum of about 800 acres for the sum of £17,000. The property is beautifully situated in the city of Cork Harbor. Sir John returns to London in a few weeks, but contemplates retiring from the political service.

Kerry.—Mr. Bagot Bartlett writes to the Daily News correspondent in London that he has received from his tenants, street tiers, gratitude, prayers for good out of the abundance of their satisfaction, answer for manners. He doubts the benefit of the jury and admires the National League to test the landlord's title to the country.

Limerick.—Mr. William Power, of Clonmore House, Adare, has resigned his position as agent of the Brittain property. Mr. Power was a Protestant and a Tory.

Longford.—On Thursday morning, October 6th, Miss Moore, only sister of Mr. J. Moore, Fisher, died suddenly at her residence, Ballinalee. It appears she departed evening before, and was only about 12 years of age, had for a long time suffered from heart disease.

Monaghan.—St. Joseph's Church, Knockcandoo, Sunday, October 2, County Monaghan, on Sunday, October 2, by the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clogher. The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Richard Dunne, Professor of Theology at Maynooth.

Meath.—Nature was recently the scene of the largest demonstration witnessed in Meath for years. The object of the gathering was to give a welcome to Mr. Pierce Mahony, the nominee of the Parnell Commission, who has been well as the president of the English Home Rule Union, Dublin, Mr. Mahony, who is a native of Meath, was received by the people with great cheering.

Mayo.—The Mayo Examiner (Oct. 5, says the Very Rev. T. J. Lynch, Dean of Lacken, who has been for some time past in very bad health, and improvement, as we had to learn, was not at all favorable. The priest, who arrived at Castlebar on Oct. 2, was waited on by a deputation of his flock, who came to express a reflection of their rank. After carefully considering their circumstances, he gave twenty per cent. reduction on the rents due in November. This concession has given great satisfaction, and his efforts to improve the condition of his country on all occasions has met with general approval.

Roscommon.—At the Haley Show recently held in the Agricultural Hall, Castlerea, Irish butter more than held its own, and exhibits of Roscommon butter, which were numbering all the others put together. Out of 20 prizes offered for butter, 18 were carried off by Irish fresh butter the many Roscommonites. The butter was made in Roscommon. The first place was won by Miss Stackpoole, the Kilsallagh, Castlerea, and the third by Miss Kelly, Doonyaver, Tyrone. Fifty of the exhibits were highly commended, so that among the merit of this exhibition there must have been a considerable amount of merit.

Tyrone.—On October 31, a band of soldiers on the streets of the Catholic quarter of Omagh in Tyrone, were pelted by their enemies. Not a conflict took place, and the police had to disperse the crowd. Shots were fired by the Peelers, and used their bottle freely. They were compelled to resort to their barracks by the police, with the assistance of the people.

Waterford.—Mr. Kyran Lafan, Hon. Sec., and Mr. Michael Gee, Athletic Association, and a big number of members, on Sunday last, at the early age of 22 years. He was with the Young Irelands in 1848, and died on the death. The interment took place on Tuesday, the 25th, and the funeral was followed by a large concourse of people. The coffin was taken from the house to within half a mile of the graveyard and carried by the members of the G.A.A., and there will be a fine for the house.

Wexford.—On Wednesday, Oct. 5th, Mgr. Panzini visited the Christian Brothers' Schools, in Wexford, where he got a magnificent reception. The pupils having been grouped to receive his Lordship, the Rev. Brother Murphy rose to address Mgr. Panzini, in the course of his address, said—"My dear children, it is a pleasure to see that the schools of the Christian Brothers are so numerously attended. I congratulate you because you enjoy the great advantages of a good education, and that advantage and that benefit will be felt by you in after life."

IN MEMORIAM.

MAGGIE GRIFFEN.

Died in Gold Hill, Nevada, October 24, 1887, Maggie, beloved daughter of John F. and Julia Griffin, aged 20 years and 9 days. She was born in San Francisco and when this city was visited with her parents to Gold Hill, where she resided up to the time of her death. She was a most exemplary young lady, loved by her friends as only those do who whose hearts she had thoroughly tested. She was a member of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and died in the full hope of a happy resurrection. Her death was caused by a long and lingering illness, which she bore with fortitude and resignation worthy of the Christian. The remains were followed to their final resting place beneath the shade of Mt. Davidson, there to sleep until the final summons awakens her to life with those who have died in the Lord. As the last tenderly lowered the remains into the grave, the choir sang the touching lines of a favorite hymn, which, in the opinion of many, were well suited to the occasion, the lingering firm in life for ever more when life on earth was free from strife, the eternal joys of heaven.

Death another visits claims
A more and holy work,
While we are with a Christian love,
Unshaken and very by a love
For all that's good and pure,
A crown of glory Maggie wins,
Which shall from her endure.

Let not her when into a more child,
Her little feet would stray
Be thinking of the world and sin,
With phone work to pray,
And when at catechism time
The children gathered round,
Dear Maggie with her lessons learned,
Would always there be found.

Long ago on the that once happy home,
Fond hopes were centered in
Thee, and when in joy and joy,
Thy parents thee would
Be thinking of the world and sin,
Be sweet left behind,
Who are engaged in form of love,
Who was to good and kind.

God summoned her while yet so young,
From this cold world of strife,
That she might in a brighter one
Enjoy eternal life.
Her Maggie, rest, sweet sister,
Thy work is done, we know,
For all the cares you have exchanged
For a bright eternal rest.

H.

Gold Hill, October 27, 1887.

Market Report.

MORTON STREET.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday Evening, Nov. 1, 1887.

WHEAT—No. 1	90 @ 92½
Feed Wheat	80 @ 85
Corn—Cracked	1 17½ @ 1 20
Barley	60 @ 80
Flour, Extra, wholesale	3 75 @ 4 00
Corn Meal, retail	30 @ 35
Mill Stuff	20 @ 22½
Gold Nuts, 1 load	1 50 @ 1 75
Hay	14 @ 17
Potatoes	1 00 @ 1 25
Pot—Ind
Hogs, P lbs wholesale	5 00 @ 6 00
Turkeys, P lb wholesale	12 @ 14
Geese, P head	1 00 @ 1 50
Ducks, P pair	1 00 @ 1 50
Hens, P dozen	4 00 @ 5 00
Eggs, P dozen	25 @ 30
Butter, P lb	25 @ 35
Cheese, P lb	12 @ 14
Bacon, P lb	12 @ 14
Ham, P lb	14 @ 16
Lard, P lb	10 @ 12
Pork, wholesale dressed	7 @ 8
Beef, wholesale	3 @ 4
Mutton, wholesale	5 @ 6
Veal, wholesale	5 @ 6
Pork, wholesale dressed	6 @ 7
Eastern Sugar-cured Hams	12 @ 13
California Hams	12 @ 13
Eastern Breakfast	12 @ 13
Lard, P lb wholesale in kgs	9 @ 10
Vegetables—
Beans, white	2 50 @ 2 75
Cabbage, P doz	50 @ 75
Turnips, P sack	90 @ 1 00
Beets, P sack	1 00 @ 1 25
Onions	1 00 @ 1 25
Garlic	2 50 @ 3 00
Green Peppers	2 50 @ 3 00
Tomatoes	1 00 @ 1 25
Garlic, P lb	1 @ 2
Squash	1 @ 2
Celery, P doz	1 00 @ 1 25
Cucumbers, P doz	1 00 @ 1 25
Green Peppers, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Fruit—
Lemons, P box	2 50 @ 3 00
Oranges, P box	2 50 @ 3 00
Apples, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Pears, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Quinces, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Pears, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Pears, P box	1 00 @ 1 25
Pears

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

A VESPER PRAYER.

(FROM THE STANDARD.)

Life is fragile, she is cruel,
And unmitigated is the fool,
Jane Christel,
Jane Christel,
What the cause of Thy grief,
Lays our hearts and heals and faces:
In our sorrows, oh! assist us,
Dulce Sancte Jane Christeus!

Thou, O Mary pure and mild,
Mother of Jesus and holy Child—
Jane Christel,
Jane Christel,
Speak with Him who knows our soul,
Lead us to the Elysian goal;
Cheer us, bless us and assist us,
Modre del Infinite Christeus!

Seraphs of sweet Heaven, hear
The fine pleading of an ewer—
"Jane Christel,
Jane Christel"—
Quoting Mercy's instant laws,
Oft with Christ defend our cause;
In our hours of pain assist us,
Angels del Infinite Christeus!

—G. ARTHOR DOYLE.

THE SUN UNDIMMED BY TIME.

O glorious, bright, transcendant orb,
Changless, immortal, fadeless light of Day—
Reaping through the vast starry realms
Thou hast gazed upon creation's dawn, and
With thy fiery beams inspired the first man
To love, to hope and sweeten Heaven's grace
Commanded. The Lord of all that lives and moves
Dr. Keith's broad domain, has seen all events
Of Time; History's pages thou hast mark'd
With thy unmistakes beams; Eden's Vale beheld
Thy gladsome warmth from the Great Creator's
Hand, fresh and new, whilst the progenitors
Of man, before the fall—Adam and Eve—
With glad hearts walked beneath thy kindling beams.
Neither change of Time, nor fall of Empire
Can ever conquire to dim the lustre of thy Bright unvanished glory. A thousand years
To thee are but as yesterday, when placed
In the balance of decay, and serve to Propagate thy course through Time and sublime
Space. Ah, fadeless King of Day, changeless as Immortality; pilator of the dawn
Of Heaven's ray, spontaneous from Night,
Hiding in the broad noon-day of glory,
Superbly supreme throughout the Universe.

JOHN F. MCDONELL.

Virginia City, Nevada.

ONLY A WAIF.

The sun was hot, her feet were sore,
And she longed to be far away,
Away from the city's bustle and hum,
Away to the country so fair and sweet
To the place where her mother lay!

She passed through crowds in the busy streets,
And saw in her hurried flight
The homes where wealth and luxury smiled;
But no one heeded the beggar child
With her face so pinched and white.

She passed through verdant country lanes,
As the sun sank in the west;
She heard the birds, and the little brook murmuring,
She smiled at the song that the reapers sang,
For all spoke of peace and rest.

How gladly she gathered some fragrant flowers—
Wild roses and ivy-green tall!
Then she paused to bear in the echoing breeze
As it gently sighed in the fair, green trees,
The death angel's dreamy call.

Oh! he sang a song in her brain and heart
That was strangely, wildly sweet;
It was the music of the angels' lyre
Was the trend of the angel's feet.

The pale moon rose in a cloudless sky,
When she laid her down to rest;
Then the angels bore her safely home
Where her sorrows never can have power,
For she lay so her Saviour's breast.

J. M. C.

THE ALTAR BOY.

It was in far-off Erin,
Historic legends say,
In dark days of oppression,
When tyrants held full sway;
That priests were hunted down like wolves,
A price put on their heads,
Our insulted gospels—the law proclaimed
For such—slave or dead.

No temple could they find for a home
Where Shannon's waters glide;
No longer by Killarney's lakes
In peace could they abide;
But legal Kerry's grand old hills
And Connaught's mountains high,
Afford them a safe retreat
At least, in peace to die.

One early dawn a foot-sore priest
Strayed lonely around a cave,
And spied a wayside chapel, where
Some Mass-boys knelt to pray;
He knelt down by the altar steps,
But none was there, alas!
To aid him with the offering—
No boy to serve his Mass.

His calmly spoke the mystic words,
And reverently once chanted
Though well the reverend Father knew
No altar boy was said.
The wine and water duly served,
The "Sanctus" responded to,
Left low responses, like music, came
From lady's sweet chorus.

When Mass was o'er the Father turned
To thank his blest royal child,
But he had gone, as he he came,
The great priest only smiled.
To after years he so far forgot
That chapel in the mute, grey
Where God had sent an angel boy
To serve his morning Mass.

—Adon.

BROWN EYES AND BLUE EYES.

Brown eyes and blue eyes, coy and cold,
Boldly working—three little girls;
Digging a sunny corner, then making cakes,
Sweet in the pleasure innocence takes;
Selling their dresses, pouting their lips,
Struggling so bravely, never minding their woes.

Brown eyes and blue eyes, hale mines early,
School books and papers—three other girls—
Translating Virgil, conjugate Greek,
Laughing spontaneously, asking to "speak;"
Talking of parties, dresses, and "feet,"
After commencement—then a long rest.

Brown eyes and blue eyes twinkling like stars,
Watching the sickness—three good mamsies
Making new dresses, mending the old,
Soothing philanthropists, love never cold;
Patiently sitting, heather with joy
Towards Heaven's portal each spot and boy.

Brown eyes and blue eyes faded and dim,
Three aged grandmas with knitting for film;
Dreamily gazing toward sunset skies,
Thoughts of the other world—Paradise.

Brown eyes and blue eyes closed evermore,
Footsteps so weary passed from this shore;
Three little graves in a lonely place,
Three lost lambs—carefully have to
Twilight saw fallen, labor all done,
Life's work completed—to-day was.

GOD BLESS MOTHER.

A little child with dress Nair,
And sunlight eyes so sweet and fair,
Who's made, when twilight on the land lay,
And from whence bring the fairy fall
Five seconds of this simple prayer,
"God bless!—God bless my mother!"

A youth upon life's threshold stand,
Who leaves a gentle mother's side,
Yet keeps sanctuary within his breast,
Her words of warning still the best;
And whispered when temptation tried—
"God bless!—God bless my mother!"

A white haired man who gazes back
Across life's weary, furrowed track,
And sees, 'mid scenes of joy and sorrow,
Heart words of light that led astray,
And prays, with unwonted fervor,
"God bless!—God bless my mother!"

GEORGE COOPER.

Literary Miscellany.

The Ocean's Prey.

BY L. O'NEILL DATNE.

CHAPTER I.

Calm as the moonlit lake or sea, the heaven discloses;
While many a sparkling star, in cyclet fire,
Shines out from the deep, cloudless sky expanse.
The mighty main she stands, sky-skyey
Enrobed with a sense of
A cross of light and shadow bright
That makes her wakeful sea more bright.

WILSON.

One lovely, lovely, autumny morning in June, about ten or twelve years ago, a young girl might have been descried standing in the small garden that fronted her grandfather's cottage, which was situated, adjoining the seashore, in a northern English shire.

Very sweet and pretty Katie Winthrop looked as she stood among the bright flowers still bathed in dew, and with one hand shading her eyes, gazed out to seaward. Her neat print dress showed off her slender figure to advantage, somehow she thought, as she trimming or ornament. Her dark wavy hair was caught up in a low coil at the back of her head, and in front divided over a white, open brow. Her eyes were grey, with a clear, frank, trustful expression, and looking into them one seemed to read the innocent soul within.

Only for an instant or two did she stay to inhale the fragrance of the morning and the flowers; then, as if in response to a call from the house, she re-entered the little porch all surrounded with honeysuckle and with roses just bursting into bloom.

Katie was the sole nurse and attendant of her old grandfather, who mother to two little sisters, sole and undisputed mistress of the cottage. Her mother had died a long time previously, with her last breath entreating Katie to fill her place to the utmost of her power.

Tom Winthrop, the father, was a fisherman, and seldom at home, and for a few months back the only brother, Dick, had joined his father in his fishing expeditions. They were absent now, as Katie took her place at the breakfast table, after first helping her grandfather to his own special corner, where he sat comfortably enough in a roomy, padded arm chair.

Their talk was principally on the prospects of a good "catch," on the return of the men, on gratitude for the fine weather, and kindred topics. There was a mingling of music of anything like gossip or sadness accounts of their neighbors' lives and actions.

Breakfast over, Katie rose and took down from a peg two little brown straw hats.

"Dick! tose your hats, dears, on the road," she said, as she fled the hats on the fair, curly heads of her young sisters. "Here are your slices of bread. Have you your books all right? There, kiss me and run away. Tell Sister Elise I shall be up to morrow at the convent. It is the anniversary of my First Communion."

"Is it indeed, Katie?" asked Cissy, the youngest, with an expression of pleased wonder.

"Of course it is, you little goose; don't you remember.

Agnes, the second sister, exclaimed with a laugh; "Why, Katie, we shall be lost, maybe next year we'll be able to say the rosary ever so."

"Why, how can we?" argued Cissy, with blue, wide open eyes.

"Don't stand talking, children, or you'll be late," urged Katie.

So, still arguing the point, they walked away, slowly at first, but presently coming to an agreement, they joyfully ceased, and the loving eyes that watched them from the open doorway

In the kitchen—a room half sitting-room, half kitchen—Katie found abundant employment for some time in washing and putting away the breakfast things and making sundry preparations for the next meal. The girls she brought her grandfather and his chair to the porch, and left him happily established with a newspaper. She found further employment in the sleeping-rooms, and finally, having put things in order for the day, she took her needlework and stationed herself in the garden, where her eyes could from time to time obtain a glimpse of the sea. But the hours passed rapidly away, and the children returned from school, and still the dear ones so anxiously looked for had not made their appearance

That day dread like many another. Some neighbors, young girls for the most part, came in the afternoon, and chatted with Katie in the garden, or sewed with her in the cottage. Some of the girls were of her own age, or thereabouts, and some were old men, as old as himself, at discussing politics and the chances of the fishing with Ben Winthrop.

The dusk grew deeper, and all departed to their homes. Then the little family sat down to supper, after which Katie saw her sisters to bed, first making them say their prayers, and watching with tender eyes their reverent attitudes and clasped hands.

But long after the old man had gone to bed, long after the children had gone to dreamed happy dreams, Katie remained kneeling at the unshuttered window, looking out with wistful eyes upon the waters of the ocean that lay now quieted in the dark, soft moonlight. Her thoughts were not unlovely with the fear and brother who pursued their avocations on the treacherous bosom. They took another direction.

She wondered what the future had in store for her, if she would always thus lead a peaceful life in the little seaside cottage.

"Dick will marry," she thought with a pang, "and I may have to find out my own living."

Then she dropped her head on her hands, and prayed for resignation to whatever lot God might have in store for her.

"I have something to tell you," she thought again, "thus forecasting what never may happen; I have to prepare for Communion to-morrow, and devotedly making the sign of the cross, Katie gave herself up for the next half hour to her prayers. Time fashioned, she went to bed, after ascertaining by an other glance through the window that the night was calm, and that the waveless dancing and sparkled as the tide moved out. The noise of a cuckoo from a distant wood mingled with the sighs of waters in sadness. Katia fat asleep, ere her head had been three minutes on the pillow.

CHAPTER II.

For her if morrow lay in wait,
She saw not in the night;
And if a smile could dazzle Fate,
He might have passed her by!
Oh, would that Time's speed had been slow!
Then had that such been happy day
Henry Tatum

—Hyde-Park still.

Hid thy will good-and all well,
Know God—and bring thy heart to know
The joys which from Religion flow.

THOMAS PERKINS.

The next morning rose bright and cloudless, just as the day before had risen, to cause more and more intense. The cattle stood pawing in the fields, the birds crowed to sing, the glare from the waters crossed full to the sight. Katie had attended early Mass at the convent where she had learned her lessons as a child

At a shutter window stood a man absorbed in the reading of a letter, from which she scarcely raised her eyes, when a lady Sister approached her with the words:

"Katie Winthrop would like to see you for a few minutes, Sister Elise."

"Yes, in a moment," she answered.

But not for many moments did she stir from her place at the window, and there were tears in her eyes as she finally folded the letter and turned away.

"My poor sister" she murmured, "would it not could bring you back to the faith and love of your earlier years. And yet what would they have in store for you?"

She sighed, and again the tears fell from her eyes as blinkingly that she found it necessary to enter the chapel, there to grow composed before presenting herself to Katie

"Did you think I never was coming?" she asked, with so bright a smile that no suspicion of her tears could have entered

"The little ones gave me your message yesterday. Come with me and we shall have a little chat by ourselves

Sister Elise led the way by a sashed door into the garden.

"How are you getting on, dear child? This, I know, is the anniversary of your First Communion, made how long ago?

"Five years ago, Katie hastened to say.

"So long! But its memory abides with you—he let be to the end. Each returning anniversary brings us nearer and nearer to the Eternal Communion in heaven. I must give you a picture before you go as a keepsake. And let me tell you how pleased we are to hear such constant good accounts of you. You are an example not only to your own family but to your Protestant neighbors, and that reounds to the glory of our holy religion.

Sister Elise paused a moment, looking at Katie, whose downcast eyes and blushing cheeks bespoke at once her joy and her humility.

"I shall tell you a story," she went on, "of that sweetly perceptible pause during which she had prayed for strength to preserve her calmness.

"There were once two sisters whose mother died when the eldest was nine years old and the youngest three.

"Clotilde, the eldest, was fortunate to have been in a great measure formed and trained by that pious, loving mother, because, unknown to her father was a man who approached the Sacraments, although he did not live in the world. Clotilde's pious precepts, Neither did he interfere with his eldest daughter, for although he a young a child when her mother died, she had loved that mother dearly, and had only resolved on enjoying her example in all respects.

"But it was otherwise with Yadie the youngest. Scarcely was there ever seen a lovely, so wilful a creature. She enchantered every one with the magic of her beauty and her cleverness. Her father was her slave; the servants fawned and adored her, for, with a sharp, biting, clever tongue, she had also great generosity and generosity of disposition.

"Her sister loved her—oh, so dearly! But she was powerless to curb the wilful child who had only to carry her complaints to her father to be made certain of obtaining her own way in all things.

"Clotilde made her First Communion, and Yadie, then five years old, and more clever than many a child of twice her age, was greatly interested in the various preparations for the happy event—the wreath, the veil, the white dress.

"Marguerite Lacroix's sister was married the other day, she said, and Marguerite told me she wore white things like yours. Are going to be married?

"Clotilde hesitated before answering.

"Yes, Yadie, she said finally. "I am to be the bride of Our Lord to-morrow, and I will pray to Him for you!

"Pray, she said tenderly, "I wish I could give my life for you, child! I thinly you cheer you length of days!

"Her manner more than her words startled him.

"Clotilde, he said, 'what do you say? I see it in your face. I am so fully deathbed?

"He sank back upon the pillows, unable to arrise to choke back her sobs, and she answered:

"But now reconciled to our Lord, she whispered. "You will stand in His presence

"Her voice failed.

"Then she laid the crucifix on his breast, and with her few hidden in his hands she prayed more fervently than I can tell you

"I thought sobbing ceased in the room for some minutes, at the end of which I felt a hand on her head, and her father's voice said

"Send for M. le Curé, and may God bless you, my child

"Grace had conquered. The priest arrived and saw the sick man, spent a considerable time with him, while Yadie wandered to and fro, with a pale and troubled face, restless and unhappy.

"The next day the priest came and remained some time in private with his penitent. Then Clotilde prepared a temporary altar in the sick room, and the Holiest sacrament being had thereon, Yadie and the household were summoned to witness the giving of the last Sacraments.

"Yadie's face cannot be described. Impatient, love, regret, absorbed thoughts of a time, [illegible] received a short profession of faith before the Sacraments. Silence was profound, when Yadie broke in in a startling manner

"Yes you believe—do you believe in that? she said, stepping forward and pointing to the sacred species in the pyxis?

"Yes believe! Indignant exclaimed her father; while Clotilde flung her arms round the girl and tried to drag her away, but she shook herself free.

"Yes, I believe! she said passionately; and I believe that if I had been a young child I do not believe—no, not even when I approached the altar for the first time.

"Child, you have killed your father! the sobbing sister said, as Yadie, pale, cold, stepped up hastily to the bedside.

"Then the flush died out of Yadie's face, and gave way to a doubly pallenss. She stepped sideways and would have fallen had not one of the priests caught her. Yadie was upon a carried her from the room.

"Her father recovered, however, and when he left with his confessor and Clotilde the last Sacraments were administered, she such a bit of weeping as neither of the lady attendants had before seen a man indulge in.

"He sent for his youngest daughter, and Clotilde left them for awhile. Presently there was a scream from Yadie, and Clotilde and the Curé ran in to find that death had called for its victim. Barely was there time to pronounce the final absolution.

Sister Elise looked fatigued for a moment.

"And what became of the poor sisters? Katie asked breathlessly.

"She had a worldly life—not positively bad—but wholly unspiritual, she was married to a man who cared not for God, and long after, having lost sight of her sister, he was in India, for he had left the old home and wandered far and wide in search of fortune. She went to India, for she had married a Protestant, and her sister had heard of she had married a Hebrew, and of her death.

"Hist, Katie and in a hurried tone. "Hebrew—Mohammedans are not Christians

"No, they are not. But which is worse, a believing Christian, or a Mohammedan? Not come," the nun resumed, rising from the bench on which they had been seated, "time has flown by, and I must be off to your little children now that they are in mischief, I suppose, and I must be serious. Let them make it with fault, and I hope we shall pray for Yadie, for poor Clotilde, for your father, for herself.

"She led the way to the chapel, where they knelt in silent prayer

Three Sister Elise beckoned Katie out. "There is a visitor waiting for you, she said. "Did you make many resolutions during your Communion, Katie?

"I don't know, Sister, answered Katie, with a blush that I made—my one.

"May I ask what it is, inquired Sister Elise.

"To do everything as well as I could to please God, no matter what it cost.

"You seem very good child, she said, with a well known smile, a prominent smile applied and was given a pch. Atop do last. Katie, with a blushing face, gave a start—large in the many faces around her. Her father was there, and the other sisters were there this morning, but now sunk into a dreamy sleep.

She began to make inquiries among the other girls, and learned that Yadie was the cause they could not unknowingly, in her anger the night of the second day she determined to see Yadie, and endeavor to reconcile her before time. She was given a card with two days' leave of absence, and packed her two pockets and one down bonbin in the morning. The stranger then told him that he was going to the land of his fate, and which he was to be the bride of the machine and steam power.

"Yadie was undoubtedly the person spoken of by the priest, and Katie, as she rose from the chair, with Mr Bryant received him very politely, and wanted to know what he could do for him. The visitor frankly told him that he had been Mr Bryant evangelical replied that he had not been misinformed, and that miracles, through the mercy of God, had sometimes been wrought in his house. He then remarked to the visitor that all was necessary was simply to pray, and he would receive. Mr. Bryant pointed to a window, and pointed out a little girl, who had early lost her mother, and had prayed for her father, and that he had hopes that she would be cured.

The stranger stated that he had joined in the prayers, although for the last time he had not performed a single act of religion. The eyes of the sick man smoothed, and at first, she said that she could not read a single word from the sacred volume, and that she had lost her. However, after repeated entreaties, she began to read, and the stranger was surprised at the ease with which she read, and the sweetness of her voice. However, after repeated entreaties, she began to sing

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-FIRST YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1887.

THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR.

A Double Issue for a Double Great Occasion.

☞ In consequence of the forthcoming CHRISTMAS MONITOR containing two illustrated Supplements—a Christmas Supplement and a Jubilee Supplement, making a Double Number of the MONITOR, we are compelled to go to press much earlier this week, and all contributions (whether in prose or poetry) for the Christmas Monitor, must reach this office not later than Saturday Noon on Nov. 26th, so as to have the names of accepted contributions announced in our issue of the 30th inst.

☞ Subscribers and all persons who desire to procure extra copies of this Double Number of the Christmas Monitor should send in their name now and ten cents per copy for all copies desired, so as to save disappointment by delay. The forthcoming Christmas Monitor will be profusely illustrated with engravings such especially as befit a journal, like that of this city, and it will be the largest and best Catholic Christmas paper ever issued in the United States.

☞ Now copies to send to your friends at home and abroad now, or you may be sorry if you delay, as there is going to be a great demand for the Christmas Monitor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Since June, Bishop Fitzgerald confirmed twelve thousand people in the Archdiocese of New Orleans.

—A cablegram from Rome under date of the 4th inst., announces the death of Cardinal Antonius Pellegrini, who was born Aug. 12th, 1812, and elevated to be a member of the College of Cardinals March 12th, 1877. R. I. P.

—Messrs. O'Connor and Esmonde, Ireland's envoys at present touring on the Irish Question in this country, were accorded a very enthusiastic reception at Lincoln, Nebraska, on Monday, 31st ult. They are expected in this city on Friday next.

—Henry George's attacks on the Catholic Church have caused him a Waterloo defeat at the election held in New York yesterday. Last year George received more than 68,000 votes for Mayor. This year he received 36,000 votes for Secretary of State. So much for throwing mud at the Pope!

—The Marquis of Ripon—one of the most distinguished Catholic converts in England—is fast proving himself a friend of the Irish by advocating the interests of the working classes. He says that a large number of Parliamentary representatives of the people should be taken from the working classes, as they understand the proper legislation for the people better than the shoddy-crowd who make up the main body of representatives in the British Parliament.

—Rev. P. O'Keefe, C. C., of Berwick, has recently issued a valuable book entitled "Sermons at Mass." They are short, simple, aspirative and practical discourses which afforded much delight to Cardinal Manning that he wrote the Rev. author a letter in which his Eminence says: "I am wickedly in the habit of saying that the three maladies which hinder piety are fanciful books of devotion, theatrical music in church and pulpit oratory."

—The prominent wealthy Catholics who reside on the West Side in Chicago are certainly generous gentlemen. A few of them met recently to make arrangements for the celebration of the golden jubilee of the great Jesuit missionary, Father Damen, S. J., and instead of presenting the veteran Soldier of the Cross with any temporary trophy of their true friendship, they wisely decided on erect in his honor a free hospital to cost $50,000. This is a few second Catholics, who have the true spirit of Catholic faith in their hearts, undertaks a work that will redound to their spiritual good both here and hereafter. The MONITOR wishes them all the success they pray for in their great good work, and we hope that Father Damen may live to see the free hospital flourish for many, many years!

—It is now definitely settled in England that during next summer there will be held a great congress of lay and clerical delegates from all English-speaking communities of the world. Preliminary meetings were recently held at which three main subjects for discussion were suggested, namely, the attitude of the Catholic Church towards education in general, whether it is possible to arrange for greater co-operation of the laity in the work of the Church, and to consider what steps should be taken for the diffusion of Catholic literature among the masses. Cardinal Newman, Cardinal Manning and a majority of the Catholic Hierarchy in England approved the proposal, which is to be submitted to a full meeting of the principal and most influential Catholics. This scheme has been under for two years and now seems likely to be realized.

—The Dublin Freeman's Journal has discovered a new duty which the Irish constabulary are called upon to perform, and regarding which it says: "The latest expedient for pacifying Ireland is to supply the members of the Royal Irish Constabulary with pocket cameras for taking instantaneous photographs unbeknown of those they are about to summon. This is Mr. Balfour's own patent idea. It is a fact that the order has been given for those pretty little toys. The education of the force grows apace. They must now be amateur photographers as well as amateur stonepitchers. We hope they will make a better hand of the former than they have of the latter art. By the way, alas! a pity there was no one to take a sweet photo of Mr. Balfour when he got the nose of the eclipse of the proposition of the Lord Mayor. We would have given ten pounds for it outselve."

The Cowardly Cruelty of Knownothingism.

Rev. John Bapst, S. J., died on the Feast of All Souls, at Mount Hope Asylum, near Baltimore, and his remains now repose in the Jesuit Cemetery near Woodstock College, in that peace which the enemies of the Church refused to give to her body in this world.

The death of Father Bapst will recall to the minds of thousands of Monitor readers the ruffianly outrage perpetrated upon the body deceased by the rowdy Knownothings of Ellsworth, Maine, in the Spring of 1854. The Native American Party at that period was irresistable throughout the Eastern States, and every political victory they gained was celebrated by the total destruction of some Catholic Church or some outrage against Catholic citizens.

Father Bapst, S. J., was Rector of St. Joseph's Church, at Ellsworth, in the State of Maine, in 1854, and as there were several Catholic children attending the public school in that place, the parents naturally complained to their pastor that their children were compelled to read the Protestant version of the Bible every day. Father Bapst, accordingly, had an interview with the school teachers, explaining to them that such compulsion was an infringement of the rights of conscience granted to people of every persuasion under the American Constitution. The teachers saw the matter in the same light and the Catholic pupils were excused from reading a book which they did not recognize as the full, complete and authorized version of the Sacred Scriptures.

This action of the school teachers coming to the ears of the Native American school committee, they ordered the teachers to compel the Catholic scholars to read the Protestant Bible, under penalty of expulsion for refusing to do so. Some of the Catholic children refused and were expelled, then the parents of the children appealed to the Civil courts to protect them in their rights to liberty of conscience. Fearing that the law would decide the question adversely, the Knownothing fanatics determined to take the law into their own hands and also to wreak summary vengeance upon an intrusive priest who peacefully pleaded for the legal rights of his people.

A meeting of the Native American town trustees was held, at which inflammatory speeches were made denouncing the Church, the Jesuits, and Catholics in general, and the proceedings culminated in the passage of the following preamble and resolution which were inscribed on the town records on July 8th, 1854, and which has brought the burning blush of shame to the cheeks of all Christian citizens of Ellsworth, Maine, ever since:

WHEREAS, We have reason to believe that we are indebted to one John Bapst, S. J., Catholic priest, for the library of the present lawyer, now enjoyed by the school committee of Ellsworth—therefore be it

"Resolved, That should the said Bapst be found again on Ellsworth soil, we manifest our gratitude for his kindly interference with our free schools and schools of Dutch by his library therefrom, by presenting for him and trying in a suitable mode of trial, the same as is meted to hoard at the shop of say tailor, and that this resolution be presented with a free pass for three Ellsworth upon the first railroad opera train that may go into effect."

This murder-suggesting resolution, which was calculated to ignite the fires of religious intolerance upon Freedom's soil, and which was discussed one hour an minutiae black stain of bigotry upon the character of the intelligent element amongst the citizens of Ellsworth, was passed unanimously and ordered by its Knownothing compilers to be printed in both the papers of the place. Father Bapst resided at Bangor, from whence he journeyed to Ellsworth on certain Sundays to celebrate Mass for the few Catholics residing there. Accordingly, on the evening of Saturday, October 14th, 1854 (more than three months after the passage of this illegal and shameful resolution), Father Bapst repaired to Ellsworth as usual, and put up at the house of Mr. Kent, whose hospitality he generally enjoyed. About 9 o'clock at night the Father was hearing confessions in the parlor of Mr. Kent's residence, when a mob of murderous Knownothings broke into the house, dragged Father Bapst into the street, where they tore off his clothes, rifled them of his watch and purse, placed him on a rail more dead than alive, and carried him some distance when the rail upon which he was placed broke and the martyr priest fell prone and almost lifeless upon the muddy ground.

In this naked and helpless condition the inhuman Knownothing mob covered his shivering body with soiled tar, then sprinkled a sack of feathers over him, and left him where he lay, bestowing upon him at parting a volley of blasphemous maledictions, too horrible even to think of.

When the innocent maltreated martyr of the vengeance of the vicious and intolerant Native Knownothings was left lying upon the ground and the last of the horde departed, Father Bapst fell into a swoon from which he awoke chilled to the marrow from the cold drenching rain which fell upon him during his unconscious condition. Then he arose and dragged himself through mud and murky darkness back to the home of his kind host, who—like the good Samaritan in ye—God bless him!—helped this poor, abused and afflicted priest to free himself of the tar, feathers and petrify with which his holy anointed body was covered. Mr. Kent, seeing the sorrowful condition of nervous prostration into which Father Bapst has been precipitated by the perpetrators of the wanton outrage, pressed the suffering Jesuit martyr to partake of some nourishment, but as this irate fellower of the suffering Son of God cast his eyes upon the chair, he saw it was just midnight, and no food or drink could induce him to break a rule of the Church. Thus this heroic priest offered to God a gross personal privation, and this might celebrate for his little flock the Great Sacrifice of the Mass on the Sunday morning just dawned! No sleep rests on the eyes of Father Bapst through the intervening hours, but when his frightened little flock met in God's sanctuary to offer up the indignities suffered by their pastor, they found Father Bapst at the foot of the altar praying for his enemies. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

When an account of the outrage upon Father Bapst appeared in print it aroused the just indignation of every true American and did much to demolish the political prospects of the Native American party. Non Catholics of every denomination denounced the dismoral spirit of the ruffians who perpetrated it, and a number of Protestant gentlemen in Bangor subscribed for a gold watch which was presented to Father Bapst in place of the silver time-piece which had been stolen from him by the things who outraged him. An address was also presented to Father Bapst by the citizens of Bangor in which they indignantly protested against the brutal conduct of the Ellsworth mob and expressed their determination to protect every citizen in future from such outrage to justice. But Father Bapst preferred that his persecutors should repent and live, so as to atone to God for their sin against religious crime, hence a prosecution was never pressed.

The undivided missionary never fully recovered from the excessive nervous shock which his nerves received at the shame and outrage, and the situation in which he was placed by his cruel and cowardly assailants. Years after the deplorable and disgraceful occurrence his reason became affected and finally his mind gave way altogether, and it was found necessary to place him in an insane asylum until he went to that bourne across whose lifeless the raiment of his enemies can never reach him.

Father Bapst was born at La Roche, Canton of Fribourg in the year 1810, and was educated in the Jesuit College in that city, where he entered the Society of Jesus when he became of legal age. In 1848 he came to America with other Fathers of the Order, and his first missionary labors were performed among the Pawnees and other Indian tribes in the West. He was subsequently sent with Rev. Lizy Vigilanti, S. J., Rev. Basel Paccarani, S. J., and Rev. Kessler, S. J., to Kentucky, to take charge of down towns and outlying missions in the State of Maine, which was at that time in charge of Jesuits, and he remained in the Diocese of Boston.

Such is the simple yet startling recital of one of the most ruffianly acts ever perpetrated in this United States upon an inoffensive priest of the God of Peace. Father Bapst was not guilty of even the most venial offence against the laws of humanity, but because he happened to be the representative of a Church men hate and an order they endeavor vainly upon the same principles with which men hated, condemned and crucified the Son of God—he was made the unseen victim of a mob's most Satanic violence and violence.

The evils that outcrop from secret political societies in the Knownothing cabal of the past, and the so-called "American" party of the present, are always disastrous to law and order—and their political trail is dyed in criminal tints.

It is well therefore that Catholic young men should fully understand the antecedents of the Native Knownothing party, and be on their guard against the craft and disgrace which clings to membership in a party whose war cry is "Anti-Romanism" and whose principal aim is to deprive Catholic citizens of their civil and religious rights. Of course there is no possibility of this honor-promoting and religion-hating one called "American" party ever attracting to its ranks a majority of the voters of America—but there is a party—entitled in those times demonstrates very clearly that the enemies of the Catholic Church and Catholic citizens are still as active, as aggressive and as inclined to iniquity as they were thirty-seven years ago—when their ancestors were fired by the fanatical harangues of the Jawsmitha of the Wigwam to perpetrate a deed which has left the deep mark of infamy on the Stars and Stripes, as it says, "will be perpetually omitted from the children's life, and it will as naturally drift into indifference to the Church and Christianity as a rudderless ship drifts upon the rocks or thousands of an adjacent shore.

Prosperity Christianity in any country, education must not be divorced from religion, and the sooner those Protestants and non-Catholics of every persuasion who are honestly desirous of the welfare of their country awaken to the dangerous whirlpool into which their children in the public schools are every day drifting—the sooner will they join the Catholic Church in her plea for denominational schools where every religious sect will be represented, and—as the Times properly expresses it—where religious training is optional and within the parents choice—thus drawing a safeguard around religious freedom which will work equal justice to all citizens.

St. Dominic's Church.

Our Most Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII., has benignly conceded a Plenary Indulgence, applicable, by manner of suffrage, to the souls in Purgatory, to all the faithful who shall assist at the dedicatory services of the new St. Dominic's Church, on this city, to take place on next Sunday morning, the 13th inst., or also shall visit it during the day and offer there some prayers, according as the Pope's intention, for the spread of divine faith on earth, provided they on that day receive worthily the Sacraments of Penance and the Holy Eucharist, in any church they desire.

A correspondent of the Presbyterian organ in this city, calling attention to Oakland as a mission field for well paid Presbyterian preachers, candidly admits that "those who give up the Romanish ideas become either indifferent to all religious or become infidels." Evidently, however, these apostates from the Church of God are looked upon by Presbyterian preachers far more favorably as "infidels" than they are as Catholics. And this is a bad sectarian call "among the gospel seed of Christ in Christ!"

The first case of a public school holding religious services in a school house has just occurred in Madrid, Mass. The Board of Aldermen of that city has issued the necessary permit for the use of a room in the school house for a nominal rent of $20 per month for parochial schools.

—Archbishop Corrigan has publicly stated that there is no truth whatever in Dr. McGlynn's statement that he has been selected to return to the Church. The statement is merely "a George falsehood," there being no change in the attitude of the Church towards the unfortunate excommunicate.

An Anti-Catholic Paper on Godless Education.

When the name of the London Times is mentioned it is scarcely necessary to say that it is bitterly and unrelentingly anti-Catholic. And yet, with all the hate which the London Times is constantly manifesting against all things Catholic, it has been literally compelled—in its sober second sight—to denounce the Godless Education system as a curse to America—to admit that on the all important question of Education, the state-ridden government by the Catholic Church is the model one for all Christian governments to copy plus by which Christianity can be preserved in any country, and the name of God be honored in society.

The sentiments of the Times were expressed on a recent occasion when commenting on an official Educational Report in which it was shown that department, advancement and retrectiveness of memory was better in denominational schools than in institutions where secular education alone was imparted. In the course of a long review of the Report alluded to, the Times advances these sound arguments in favor of having education fortified by religion:

"Those who hold that religion should be stonedded to religion, and who fearing it has accordingly, and more so than in the world in their conclusions. In England some of the public schools are denominational, others are not. . . .

In the Iona Report there is a good deal of evidence bearing on the vexed question of religious training in schools. The results are such as we have from it is that the established system works well, and that the objection raised to it are mostly of a somewhat captious kind. The system is that which makes religious training optional and within the parent's choice, is a safeguard of religious freedom. No child can be taught one word of a creed or of a doctrine against or in opposition to its parents wish. In boarding schools, where the denominational system is allowed, the choice lies between giving such instruction as all denominations will approve and omitting religious instruction from the school course. There is no doubt as to the direction in which the feeling of this country approves. The fact is that it and religion from school teaching is found every frequently to imply its omission from the child's life. In French government schools the thing has been tried on a wide enough scale to show that it does not satisfy, and they are such as English parents would most strongly deprecate and imagine.

With the dusty arrow of religion there lingeringly the best and most trustworthy moral safeguard, and the child that grows up with no religion and no moral principle is not a type which we could wish to see spread, of which we would really consent to go out of our ground way to produce.

For years the Mormons have been trying to open the eyes of our non-Catholic Christian brethren to the fact that what is popularly known as "spiritual wives" are simply and under the present public school system, would as surely kill Christianity in the hearts of the rising generation, as the Gospel preached in the present public school system, would as surely kill Christianity in the hearts of Protestant children, as the baneful effect had for years been illustrated upon the minds of Catholic children. Cause and effect are not confined to any creed, and those laying non-Catholics who think to admit the Bible in their schools, while they hope to destroy Catholicity by means of a godless system of education, will find out to their cost that in trying to do so to others they have unwittingly supplanted sectarianism with infidelity.

It is with pleasure, therefore, that we find a paper of such world-wide prominence as the London Times making such an admission as the "The fact is, that to oust religion from school teaching is found very frequently to imply its omission from the child's life." Hence it is very clear that a non-Catholic child is taught nothing concerning God in the course of its school life, and therefore, as the Times paper says, "will be perpetually omitted from the child's life," and it will as naturally drift into indifference to God and Christianity as a rudderless ship drifts upon the rocks or thousands of an adjacent shore.

Prosperity Christianity in any country, education must not be divorced from religion, and the sooner those Protestants and non-Catholics of every persuasion who are honestly desirous of the welfare of their country awaken to the dangerous whirlpool into which their children in the public schools are every day drifting—the sooner will they join the Catholic Church in her plea for denominational schools where every religious sect will be represented, and—as the Times properly expresses it—where religious training is optional and within the parents choice—thus drawing a safeguard around religious freedom which will work equal justice to all citizens.

Pumpkin Funds for Ireland.

An Eastern telegram sum uses that Rev. Charles O'Reilly, Treasurer of the Irish National League, has issued a circular letter to the American public and friends of Irish freedom, stating the renewed struggle in that country, all the forces brought against them, and the great need of supplying them with money to carry on the struggle to a successful end. Money is wanted, and for this support is made. The Irish National League executive mean to wear a pension of popular belief in the righteousness of Ireland's claim. Every subscriber thereto is requested to place this or her name and address opposite the subscription. The roll of honor will be sent when completed to Ireland, and the name of every person and organization that has subscribed since the Philadelphia Convention will be engraved thereon.

The Monitor will gladly receive school collections and any sums our subscribers may desire to contribute in this critical emergency of Ireland's struggle for freedom, and we hope that a generous response will be given to Father O'Reilly's request.

In this connection we are happy to announce the receipt of $48 from fourteen faithful and generous friends of Ireland in Scott's Ranch, Nevada. The generous gift places Rose Ingham first on Father O'Reilly's Roll of Honor, and we trust their example will be followed by every friend of Ireland on this coast from Alaska to New Mexico.

Rev. Mr. Denis Hurley truly says in his letter accompanying the funds: "The Irish National League is engaged in a life and death struggle with the Tory Government of England, which—other than our gender—landlordism—is centering from the blows it has received from the Plan of Campaign, and it is now a struggle for existence on the floor of the British parliament. The Government is in a rage at being defeated and baffled by its opponents. The present struggle is a decisive one, and—as patriotic Irishmen in this land of freedom should be—liberals of a pacific character.

Following are the names of the subscribers: Rev. M. Kiely, $5; Peter Dalton, $5; Peter Burke, $5; James Burke, $5; James Sullivan, $5; P. J. Kelly, $5; Denis Hurley, $5; Mrs. George Ah, $2; Geo. James O'Neill, $2; Henry Mawrenson, $2; James Kelly, $2; Mrs. Mary Ann Barnes, $2; Patrick Reynolds, $1; Total, $48.

A Member of the Monitor, in attendance at Mass on Sunday last, was informed that one very aged Irish Catholic, concerning the Pumpkin is true, and the most added to make it sufficiently serious to induce the Pumpkin Fund, which seems of public obscurity in this age. The Trappist Monastery, in Kentucky was founded by monks from Mt Melleray in Ireland, in 1848, which may account in a measure for the "dominating" which seems to have admonished the writer of the time on Sunday last. Our Catholic people, as well as other people in our land, are prepared to drink. The contemplative Fathers are the salt of the earth and the staff of the church in the world, and through the prayers, labors and sufferings of these men of God the cause of Ireland will be more effectively advanced than by any other agency. Money is needed, and for this support is made. The Irish National League executive mean to wear a pension of popular belief in the righteousness of Ireland's claim. Every subscriber thereto is requested to place this or her name and address opposite the subscription. The roll of honor will be sent when completed to Ireland, and the name of every person and organization that has subscribed since the Philadelphia Convention will be engraved thereon.

The Monitor will gladly receive school collections and any sums our subscribers may desire to contribute in this critical emergency of Ireland's struggle for freedom, and we hope that a generous response will be given to Father O'Reilly's request.

In this connection we are happy to announce the receipt of $48 from fourteen faithful and generous friends of Ireland in Scott's Ranch, Nevada. The generous gift places Rose Ingham first on Father O'Reilly's Roll of Honor, and we trust their example will be followed by every friend of Ireland on this coast from Alaska to New Mexico.

Rev. Mr. Denis Hurley truly says in his letter accompanying the funds: "The Irish National League is engaged in a life and death struggle with the Tory Government of England, which—other than our gender—landlordism—is centering from the blows it has received from the Plan of Campaign, and it is now a struggle for existence on the floor of the British parliament. The Government is in a rage at being defeated and baffled by its opponents. The present struggle is a decisive one, and—as patriotic Irishmen in this land of freedom should be liberals of a pacific character.

Following are the names of the subscribers: Rev. M. Kiely, $5; Peter Dalton, $5; Peter Burke, $5; James Burke, $5; James Sullivan, $5; P. J. Kelly, $5; Denis Hurley, $5; Mrs. George Ah, $2; Geo. James O'Neill, $2; Henry Mawrenson, $2; James Kelly, $2; Mrs. Mary Ann Barnes, $2; Patrick Reynolds, $1; Total, $48.

VIRGINIA CITY LETTER.

Successful Fair for the Orphans' Benefit.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., Nov. 6th, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

Dear Sir—The orphan's Fair closed last night. Everybody is delighted at the wide-spread interest and the generous response to the good work. The Fair was held in Odd Fellows' Hall. As far as I may venture on the subject, I think the receipts will exceed those from the large entertainments given every evening, which harvest was reaped for the benefit of the Sisters of Charity and St. Mary's.

The "booth" was started in fine style by Gen. Keating, who achieved a splendid success in the oratorical art. He delivered an address introductory to the Fair, which was received by the audience. To Mr. Keating's credit, be it said, that his labors in promoting the interests of the Fair cannot receive in this world their due meed of praise without his knowledge. Your correspondent sends the Monitor the following extract from his address:

Ladies and Gentlemen—We have assembled here this evening in the cause of charity—in particular the helpless and fatherless children of St. Mary's School. It is an asylum that is open to every creed, race and religion. It bears none of the sectarian distinctions of nationality. In an orphan's the only passport required, Many of the children who are in it are the issue of the combats of this House have lost their fathers while the latter were defending the union in the great Comanche fols, in which we are all so proud of. Now, I think that this fair should be well attended by every true-hearted people of the State, and especially of Nevada, which is the great pride of a country. Its action has flourished and has endowed and if immense and has accordingly, and more than first and fourth-round children have been fed, clothed and educated within the state in recent years, without one dollar of State or county aid. In the last two years the State has accomplished by the voluntary contributions of its people, and the voluntary contributions of their liberality.

Nevada's richest days of Virginia's history there has always been a liberal response from the people of this city to every appeal made in behalf of the orphans. The present appeal will not be an exception to the rule.

The cause is one that appeals to every public heart. It is for a worthy cause. The reward of the giver will be ample and in a worldly sense. A corpse takes in this Fair may bring about a great benefit.

The wise man has said that "voluntary charity is a sacrifice." Charity is a sacrifice. Men from the Society day, always repaid by silent and unknown.

The eloquent gentleman who is to address you this evening, is a man of great ability and you should give as earnest support to this worthy cause as you would to a lecture by Ingersoll or any other infidel, who has the art of three little orphans. I hope the will do as well as Ingersoll.

They come here not for fortunes or for wealth. They come here for a little bread, a little charity without thought. I will only remember that the Sisters of Charity are the Sisters of Charity, and that the Sisters of Charity in this State. They are by day and at dead of night, ready to relieve a sister or helpless orphans. They are ready to go to the sick bed of the poor and to comfort the sorrowful of their order as they are ready to go to the sick bed of the rich and to comfort the sorrowful.

Young and beautiful, gentle and dutiful;
Very a sacrifice, tender and mild;
Ever ready to relieve the sorrowful and the sick
Ever and lonely, in manners child.

At the close of the address, the Fair was formally opened by J. H. Hoffner to the admiration of the crowd. The booth was then visited by the Sisters of Charity and a few minutes had passed when the Sisters of Charity had sold over $100 worth of articles. The Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds, and the Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds, and the Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds.

Among the articles sold were a number of Indian curiosities, which were presented by the Indian Chiefs, who have the care of the Indian Reservation, and who have taken a great interest in the Fair. The Indian Chiefs have also contributed a large number of articles, which will be sold at the Fair.

The Indian Chiefs have also contributed a large number of articles, which will be sold at the Fair.

The Indian Chiefs have also contributed a large number of articles, which will be sold at the Fair.

Yours truly, A. STRANGER.

P. S. If Sheridan Edmonds and his compatriots could visit this place they would be astonished at the result.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION.

The solemn ceremony of religious profession took place in the Convent of the Holy Cross, Oakland, on the Feast of the Holy Rosary, Sunday, Oct. 7th, when Miss Mary Ann Ryan, of Sacramento, received the sacred veil of Religious Profession. Amid the solemn Act of Consecration, the Choir sang the Hymn of Thanksgiving, "Laudate Dominum omnes gentes, laudate eum omnes populi," and the Sisters responded with the Psalm, "Laudate Dominum de cœlis, laudate eum in excelsis." The following Sisters have lost their fathers while the latter were defending the union in the great Comanche fols, in which we are all so proud of. Now, I think that this fair should be well attended by every true-hearted people of the State, and especially of Nevada, which is the great pride of a country. Its action has flourished and has endowed and if immense and has accordingly, and more than first and fourth-round children have been fed, clothed and educated within the state in recent years, without one dollar of State or county aid. In the last two years the State has accomplished by the voluntary contributions of its people, and the voluntary contributions of their liberality.

Nevada's richest days of Virginia's history there has always been a liberal response from the people of this city to every appeal made in behalf of the orphans. The present appeal will not be an exception to the rule.

The cause is one that appeals to every public heart. It is for a worthy cause. The reward of the giver will be ample and in a worldly sense. A corpse takes in this Fair may bring about a great benefit.

The wise man has said that "voluntary charity is a sacrifice." Charity is a sacrifice. Men from the Society day, always repaid by silent and unknown.

The eloquent gentleman who is to address you this evening, is a man of great ability and you should give as earnest support to this worthy cause as you would to a lecture by Ingersoll or any other infidel, who has the art of three little orphans. I hope the will do as well as Ingersoll.

They come here not for fortunes or for wealth. They come here for a little bread, a little charity without thought. I will only remember that the Sisters of Charity are the Sisters of Charity, and that the Sisters of Charity in this State. They are by day and at dead of night, ready to relieve a sister or helpless orphans. They are ready to go to the sick bed of the poor and to comfort the sorrowful of their order as they are ready to go to the sick bed of the rich and to comfort the sorrowful.

Young and beautiful, gentle and dutiful;
Very a sacrifice, tender and mild;
Ever ready to relieve the sorrowful and the sick
Ever and lonely, in manners child.

At the close of the address, the Fair was formally opened by J. H. Hoffner to the admiration of the crowd. The booth was then visited by the Sisters of Charity and a few minutes had passed when the Sisters of Charity had sold over $100 worth of articles. The Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds, and the Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds, and the Sisters of Charity are well known in this city for their charitable deeds.

Among the articles sold were a number of Indian curiosities, which were presented by the Indian Chiefs, who have the care of the Indian Reservation, and who have taken a great interest in the Fair. The Indian Chiefs have also contributed a large number of articles, which will be sold at the Fair.

The Indian Chiefs have also contributed a large number of articles, which will be sold at the Fair.

Yours truly, A. STRANGER.

P. S. If Sheridan Edmonds and his compatriots could visit this place they would be astonished at the result.

PARISH PERSONALS.

—Rev. John Hogan, assistant at Star of the Sea, administered the last rites of the Church to Mr. Thomas Ryan.

—Rev. J. E. Coyle has returned from the East.

—Rev. Father Kroeger, Superior of the Convent of the Papal Brief which he lately received from Rome, is expected here.

—Rev. M. McNally, of Alameda, intends to visit the Eastern States next month.

—Rev. P. O'Connor of St. Thomas's church, Oakland, has been visiting his parents in Napa.

—Rev. J. McDonald, of Berkeley, visited friends in this city last Saturday.

—Rev. Father Kroeger, of Oakland, and James Cronin, Professors, and T. Phillipard of Santa Clara, were in the city last week.

—Rev. John McNamey, pastor of Petaluma, is at present in this city. He is accompanied by his parents, who have come from Ireland to visit their son.

—Rev. P. J. Cummins of St. Charles' Boys' school, church, informed our obituaries some years, that the school opened on 19th and the school will be completed in four months.

—Rev. M. Kiley, the pioneer rector of the Immaculate Conception parish, Oakland, is partially paralyzed at the residence of the Sisters of Mercy, which institution he was instrumental in establishing.

—Very Rev. Joseph Adams, V.G., will arrive here in a few days to officate at the Sacred Jubilee celebration.

REQUIEM MASS FOR ST. JOSEPH'S UNION.

The Solemn semi-annual Requiem Mass for the deceased members and friends of the living members of St. Joseph's Union was celebrated in St. Mary's Cathedral on Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock. Rev. Thomas Phillips of Salem officiated as Celebrant, assisted by Rev. M. D. Connolly, Deacon, Rev. J. M. Cronin, Subdeacon, and Rev. P. Dillon, Master of Ceremonies. Rev. W. Walsh of St. Joseph's Church, Oakland, and Rev. Father Kroeger, of Oakland, were present in the sanctuary. The Very Rev. V. J. Cummins, V.G., Rev. Joseph Adams, V.G., Rev. Father Prendergast, Rev. Father Kroeger, Rev. Father Coyle, Rev. Father Hogan, Rev. Father Kroeger, Spiritual Director of the Young Ladies' Sodality.

A BEAUTIFUL BANNER.

Among the many beautiful and costly articles which will be displayed at the Cathedral Bazaar, the many-hued Sodality Banner recently received from Rome in which the Sodality of Young Ladies of this city will be enrolled, will be conspicuously the most attractive. It is a gift offered to every Catholic citizen in the place, as well as an offerent to thousands of our Catholic sisters, who have Mass-way to the Sodalities of Holy Ladies, and to the Mass-way to the Sodalities of Holy Ladies, and to the Mass-way to the Sodalities of Holy Ladies, and to the

Farm and Home.

Why Woollens Should be Worn.

A physician who advocates using woollen underwear in place of cotton or linen goods, gives an array of reasons why it should be done. Wool, he affirms, exercises a stimulating effect upon the skin, unlike linen and cotton, and consequently promotes the proper action of the pores, glands and superficial tissues. It is a non-conductor of heat and preserves the normal temperature of the body. It allows a freer escape of the perspiration, and thus lowers, by evaporation, any abnormal temperature of the body, and facilitates the loss of excessive heat. Also, through its non-conductivity of heat, it preserves the normal measure of warmth. Hence it is a better protection against the extremes of either heat or cold than linen or cotton.

Besides the above, the doctor adds that wool is electrical, while linen and cotton are not. Wool can excite electricity, but does not conduct it. Therefore a body clothed in wool loses less of its animal electricity, while fresh electricity is excited on the surface. The intimate relationship between animal electric, nervous and vital forces renders this peculiarly of the greatest importance to the wearer.

While he does not consider it an infallible cure, of all the physician is certain that woollen underwear is of much benefit, and that its general adoption would produce permanent good.

Points of Politeness.

Bedroom—Never look toward a bedroom.

Never play with your knife, ring or spoon.

Do not take your napkin up in lunch in your hand.

Let ladies pass through a door first, standing aside for them.

Rise when ladies leave the room and stand till they are out.

In the dining room.—Take your seat after ladies and elders.

If all go together the gentleman stand by the door till the ladies pass.

Let a lady pass first always, unless she asks you to precede her.

Look people straight in the face when they are speaking to you.

At the street door.—Hat off the moment you step into a private hall.

Eat as fast or as slowly as others and finish the course when they do.

Do not ask to be seated before others unless the reason is imperative.

In the parlor.—Stand till every lady in the room, also older people are seated.

Special rules for the mouth.—Smacking the lips and all noise should be avoided.

Rise if a lady enters the room after you are seated and stand till she takes a seat.

If obliged to take anything from the mouth cover it with your hand or napkin.

In the street.—Hat lifted when saying "Good bye" or "How do you do?" Also when offering a lady a seat or acknowledging a favor.

Keep step with any one you walk with. Always precede a lady going up stairs, but ask if you shall precede her in going through a crowd or public place.

These rules are imperative. There are many other little things that add to the grace of a gentleman, but to break any of these is almost unpardonable.

Garments Made of Waterproof.

A writer in an English paper says: "By the way, speaking of waterproofs, I think I can give travelers a valuable hint or two. For many years I have worn India-rubber waterproofs, but will say no more, for I have learned that good Scotch tweed can be made entirely impervious to rain; and, moreover, I have learned how to make it so, and the following is the recipe: In a bucket of water put half a pound of sugar of lead and half a pound of powdered alum; stir this at intervals, until it becomes clear; pour it off into another bucket; and put the garment therein, and let it be there for twenty-four hours, and then hang it up to dry, without wringing it. Two of my party, a lady and a gentleman, have worn garments so treated in the wildest storms of wind and rain without getting wet. The rain bangs upon the cloth in globules. In short, they are waterproof. This is a secret worth knowing for cloth, if it can be made to keep out water, is, in every way, better than what we know as waterproof.

A New Idea in Dress Suits.

It is quite probable that during the coming Winter, dress suits made in one piece will be very fashionable in Paris. The waistcoat has no back, the shirt consists of a front, the collars stitched into the coat sleeves, and the whole thing can be fastened with one set of buttons, and without any expenditure of that strong language most ready on tight lacings in when struggling with studs and sleeve links. Enterprising tailors ought to introduce this novelty here, for it is much needed. The vest is much smaller than that of an ordinary dress suit.

Cream as an Aid to Digestion.

Cream is often tolerated by the stomach when other fats would not be. Professor Arnold, of Cornell University, explains the superior digestive qualities over butter and other solid fats. This consists, first, in its being not exactly a liquid form, but in a condition allowing of great mobility between its particles, permitting the gastric juice to mix with it in the most perfect manner, and with whatever else the stomach contains, thereby aiding digestion. Its behavior is quite different in this respect from that of the other substances mentioned. As soon as these become melted they grease over the other contents of the stomach, obstructing, in a measure, the contact of gastric juice, and hindering, rather than hastening, the progress of their digestion.

Longevity of Alfalfa.

Over 200 years ago some Jesuits planted alfalfa on some barren, sandy islands in the South seas, and that alfalfa is growing yet. Near the city of Pueblo alfalfa is still flourishing which was planted in the days of Cortez the invader. In Mexico are numbers of alfalfa fields over 200 years old that have never been planted. Alfalfa, when once rooted, is a never-dying plant.

To Cure a Kicker.

The Californian gives this prescription: Its warmest indorsement: If you have a horse that is in the habit of kicking, put him in a narrow stall that has both sides thickly padded. Suspend a sack filled with hay or straw so that it will strike his heels, and let the horse and sack fight it out. Be sure to have things arranged so that the horse cannot hurt himself. The sack will be victorious every time, and in the end the horse will absolutely refuse to kick the sack or anything else.

OUR AGENT AT LOS ANGELES.

Mr. J. K. Chalmers, dealer in Catholic books, articles of devotion, stationary, school books, etc., 210 South Main street, corner Main and Third streets, Los Angeles, will hereafter have the MONITOR for sale regularly every week. He will also receive the names of new subscribers and furnish the MONITOR at $3.00 per year.

—The worst features about catarrh is its dangerous tendency to consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures catarrh by purifying the blood.

Family Fun.

A Lady of the Old Stock.

A traveller once put up for a night with a simple-minded old couple in a lonely farm house. As he rode up to the door he heard the old lady say, in a tone of deep conviction:

"There! I knewed somebody'd come before night, for I dropped my fork on the floor this morning, and it stuck straight up. Then I dropped the dishcloth at noon—another sure sign of company."

On entering the house the visitor carelessly struck his foot against the step and came near falling.

"Ah," sent the old lady, quickly, "which too (for you) stub, the right or the left?"

"The right," was the reply.

"That's good; it's a sure sign you'go long where you're wanted. Pa, shoo that rooster off the fence. If he crows there it will be rain before morning."

A little boy suddenly ran into the room, crying out: "O grandma, look! Here's a copper I found in the road."

"I'm sot a bit surprised. Don't you remember, Tommy, that you dreamed of finding a nest of hen's eggs last night! I told you then that you'd find money sums time before a week."

A young woman was washing on a porch at the back of the house, and the old lady suddenly cried out:

"There, there, Susan; if you haven't splashed suapsuds all over the front of your dress! And if you don't get a drunken husband for it, I'm wonderfully mistaken. I've known the sign to come true time and often. But you can keep it from coming true by hanging all the clothes on the line wrong side out, and you'd better do it.

So Susan did, as the traveller noticed to his great amusement.

Where to Find His Lordship.

Young Mr. Ps. Ferdinand Pell (to Palace Hotel bartender)—Aw—has Lord Fitz Montague Wyjye Wyjye been in this morning, aw?

Bartender—Yes, sir; you will find his Lordship over at the free lunch table.

The Shakespeare-Bacon Theory.

"This is all nonsense about the Shakespeare-Bacon theory," replied old Mossy-back, looking up from the paper. "The idea of saying that Shakespeare never wrote anything! Why, I've read his plays myself!"

Making Money on the George Racket.

Brown—What are you doing these days, Jenkins?

Jenkins—Well, I am lecturing for the Anti-Poverty Society.

Brown—But you don't believe in it! I thought you said I believe in it! I am making more money with less work than I have since I was an Alderman.

A Shakespearean Inuendo.

"Do you recollect Shakespeare's famous remark that 'All the world's a stage?'

"Yes.

"Did you ever notice that it applies to chickens as well as to people?

"To chickens?"

"Yes, they have their sentrees and their ergoes, don't they?"

Another Coolness at the Castle.

"My!" said her Majesty, impatiently, as she stood out the window at the terrace of water, "What a wet rain this is!"

"Truly your majesty," retorted the Prince. Then her Royal Highness rushed up to the jewel room and got her wine receipts, which showed an expenditure of over £10 per season, and flounced them in the face of her hypocritical heir.

How to Pay a Preacher's Salary.

"You complain of having to pay your preacher's salary," said an old miller. "I will pay it for you and you shall not feel it. At the end of the year he will hand you a receipt in full for the salary from the parsonage, and the idea explained: "I did taking a little toll when you sent your grain to our mill, and I took so little that none of you felt it. You see how easily the preacher can be paid."

Why She Joined the Saffragists.

Female Suffrage Agent—I called to see if I could not induce you to join our suffrage association, Mrs. Politician.

Mrs. Politician—Indeed I will. I was opposed to the whole business until I happened to attend a mass meeting, and now I want a vote just as quick as the law will let me.

Yes, I saw you there with your husband. He seems to be very popular. Not nothing was said about woman suffrage. What changed you so suddenly?

"It just occurred to me that if I had a vote my husband would be polite to me during every campaign."

An Awful Dream.

Husband (at breakfast)—I had an awful dream last night, my dear.

Wife—What was it, John?

Husband—I dreamed that your mother was out riding and the horse ran away. Just as they approached a frightful precipice, with a sheer declivity of five hundred feet.

Wife (pale faced)—Oh, John, that was awful!

Husband—I woke up and found it a dream. It was simply terrible!

Tommy's Hook.

Tommy (bride's little brother, after the ceremony)—Did it hurt—the hook?

Bridegroom (never did like that boy)—"Hurt—the hook! What do you mean, dear?

Tommy—"Cause ma said I'd a fished for yer a long time, but she'd hooked yer at last."

An Easy Convert.

Prohibitionist (to saloon keeper)—I wish I could convince you, my friend, that liquor infects untold misery upon countless thousands; that water, pure and water is what we all should drink; that—

Saloon Keeper (convinced)—You are right, sir, water is a good thing. (To bartender)—Kelly, pour about four more gallons of water into that barrel of whiskey.

Very Much Worn.

Gentlemen (in clothing store)—I find that I have got to go to Montreal to night, and I want a suit of clothes.

Clerk—Yes, sir. You want a cut-a-way coat, I spose.

—Omaha Teacher—Yes, my children, remember there is no more precious jewel to a mother's love.

Little Girl—Wonnus love their children better than their husbands, don't they?

Omaha Teacher—Very often.

Little Girl—Yes, indeed. When we gets the biccogne mamma gets sorry and tries to cure 'em, but when papa gets the biccoughs she gets mad.

—Post-mortem resolutions and notices sent in for publication must be paid for in advance.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

The most fatal disease at infancy.

PREVENTED, CONTROLLED, and CURED by

Lactated Food

It has been successful in hundreds of cases. Worth its weight in gold.

FOR INFANTS

of any age, it agrees well with stomachs so fastidious that no other food can be retained.

FOR INVALIDS.

It is Perfect Nourishment in cases of wasting from whatever cause, whether acute or chronic, and recuperation is always rapid when it is administered. Its demand is the best testimony of its value.

1500 REWARD for refusal for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.

Valuable pamphlets and receipts, sent free.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mothers of our baby from this time on we will sell the celebrated Lactated Food at the "Parental Infant Institute" for half price. Not a baby has died in this country "if it is a healthy baby." It is a healthy baby picture, and within one mother's heart, and it shows the good effects of using Lactated Food in the Infant Institute. Yours, etc., Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

YOU CAN ORDER A WHOLE

IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN

GOVERNMENT BOND.

These bonds are sharing a share, the interest (which is paid out in premium three times yearly, every three months.

Three Drawings Annually.

Each and every bond is delivered with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must draw one of the following premiums, or there is no

NO BLANKS.

Premiums	Florins		Florins
1	100,000	—	100,000
2	50,000	—	100,000
5	10,000	—	50,000
10	5,000	—	50,000
20	2,000	—	40,000
50	1,000	—	50,000
100	500	—	50,000
1,700	200	—	1,500,000
Together	1,800 premiums	amounting to	Florins 1,800,000

Florins. The next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF DECEMBER,

and every bond bought of us on or before the 1st of DECEMBER (with 5 f. a coupon) is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn on that day.

Out of every coupon sent in EXCHANGE LOTTERY, we deduct $1 will secure one of these tickets for the next drawing. Bankers payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

108 Fulton St., corner Dey, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1874.

NB Unless Government Securities are not to be compared with any Lottery whatsoever, as lately decided by the Court of Appeals, and are not conflict with any of the laws of the United States.

NB—In ordering please state that you saw this in The San Francisco Monitor.

Tutt's Pills

After eating, persons of a bilious habit will derive great benefit by taking one of these pills. If you have been DRINKING TOO MUCH, they will promptly relieve the nausea.

SICK HEADACHE

and nervousness, which follows, relieve the patient and restore stomach feelings. Elegantly sugar coated.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 767.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL & Pulp, Paste Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Sawmill Hands, Gardeners, Grooms, and Married Couples for private families and farmers. Also, good reliable Female Help, Waitresses, Cooks, Chambermaids, Nurses, Seamstresses, Housework Girls, etc., etc.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

YOU CAN ORDER A WHOLE

IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN

GOVERNMENT BOND.

These bonds are sharing a share, the interest (which is paid out in premium three times yearly, every three months.

Three Drawings Annually.

Each and every bond is delivered with a larger or smaller premium. Every bond must draw one of the following premiums, or there is no

NO BLANKS.

Premiums	Florins		Florins
1	100,000	—	100,000
2	50,000	—	100,000
5	10,000	—	50,000
10	5,000	—	50,000
20	2,000	—	40,000
50	1,000	—	50,000
100	500	—	50,000
1,700	200	—	1,500,000
Together	1,800 premiums	amounting to	Florins 1,800,000

Florins. The next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF DECEMBER,

and every bond bought of us on or before the 1st of DECEMBER (with 5 f. a coupon) is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn on that day.

Out of every coupon sent in EXCHANGE LOTTERY, we deduct $1 will secure one of these tickets for the next drawing. Bankers payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

108 Fulton St., corner Dey, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1874.

NB Unless Government Securities are not to be compared with any Lottery whatsoever, as lately decided by the Court of Appeals, and are not conflict with any of the laws of the United States.

NB—In ordering please state that you saw this in The San Francisco Monitor.

Tutt's Pills

After eating, persons of a bilious habit will derive great benefit by taking one of these pills. If you have been DRINKING TOO MUCH, they will promptly relieve the nausea.

SICK HEADACHE

and nervousness, which follows, relieve the patient and restore stomach feelings. Elegantly sugar coated.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 767.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL & Pulp, Paste Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Sawmill Hands, Gardeners, Grooms, and Married Couples for private families and farmers. Also, good reliable Female Help, Waitresses, Cooks, Chambermaids, Nurses, Seamstresses, Housework Girls, etc., etc.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAIL-ROAD

THE TRAINS RUN AS GIVEN BELOW:

COMMENCING SUNDAY, APRIL 10, 1887, AND UNTIL NOTICE IS GIVEN, TRAINS WILL RUN DAILY (SUNDAYS EXCEPTED) AS FOLLOWS:

Leave S. F.	Stations	Arrive S. R. P.
8:00 A.M.	Petaluma	10:20 A.M.
4:40 P.M.	Santa Rosa	5:40 P.M.
7:00 A.M.	Santa Rosa (Stage connects at Cloverdale for Ukiah)	11:00 A.M.
3:00 P.M.	Santa Rosa	8:00 P.M.

Leave Cloverdale 8:00 A.M. Arrive Ukiah 11:00 A.M.

Leave Ukiah 3:00 P.M. Arrive Cloverdale 8:00 P.M.

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for Mark West Springs, Calistoga, Aetna Springs, Napa Soda Springs, Napa City, Yountville, Soda Springs, Stewarts Point, Knights Valley, Healdsburg, Geyserville, Cloverdale, Ukiah, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Harbins Springs, Kelseyville, Lower Lake, Upper Lake, Saratoga Springs, Manchester, Mendocino City and the Coast.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Santa Rosa to Mendocino, Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Lake and Sonoma Counties, at reduced rates.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only—Between S. F. and Santa Rosa, $1.50; to Healdsburg $2; to Cloverdale, $3; to Ukiah or Lakeport, $4.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon and San Rafael, Week Days—7:45 A.M., 11:00 A.M., 3:30 P.M., 5:00 P.M.; 6:15 P.M., Sundays 9:00 A.M., 2:30 P.M., 10:45 A.M., 6:00 P.M., 8:00 P.M.

To San Francisco from Point Tiburon—Week Days: 8:30 A.M., 9:50 A.M., 1:20 P.M., 4:45 P.M.; 6:05 P.M. Sundays 10:00 A.M., 4:30 P.M., 9:15 A.M., 8:05 P.M.

To San Francisco from San Rafael—Week Days: 7:00 A.M., 8:20 A.M., 12:00 M., 3:35 P.M., 5:15 P.M. Sundays 8:05 A.M., 12:35 P.M., 7:45 A.M., 6:35 P.M.

Stages connect at Tiburon with Narrow Gauge Trains for Sausalito, Mill Valley, Tamalpais, Cazadero, Bolinas, Point Reyes, Inverness, Olema, Nicasio, Lagunitas, Fairfax, San Anselmo, Sleepy Hollow, Ross, Kentfield, Larkspur, San Quentin, Novato, Petaluma, Cotati, Santa Rosa, Sebastopol, Forestville, Guerneville, Duncans Mills, Tomales, Point Reyes, Cazadero, Bolinas

ST. MARY'S CONVENT.

A Fixed Institution of Mercy Country—Educational and Other Works of the Sisters of Charity—Neat, Clean, Tidy and Airy.

In company with Father Tolman, a reporter of the Virginia City, Nev., Enterprise was shown through every part of St. Mary's Convent and school, which he said was amply surprised to find an institution of such proportions to meet every call that charity may make upon it.

[illegible] BY BRIDE COSTELLO.

The institution is at present conducted by eight Sisters of Charity, who work under Sister Baptista as Sister Superior. That Sister is a lady of high educational attainments, and that she possesses strong force of character is shown in every line of her face. The school work has become so great since Sister Baptista has so thoroughly reorganized this part of the work that a call has been made for five more Sisters, qualified for purposes of teaching, to more effectually perform the work, and they will soon be here.

THE INSIDE WORKINGS.

The buildings and rooms are large, airy and kept scrupulously clean in every particular, but owing to the fact that they were not put up as a whole, but additions put on as occasion inspired, the appearance, when one goes through the different rooms, is more like that of a castle of feudal times than of modern architecture.

The Sisters, with the help of the older girls, do nearly all the work, and when it is considered that the number of orphans under their charge now is 56, many of whom are quite small, ranging from infancy to womanhood, their task will be in part understood, at least by mothers who have four or five little ones at home. There are also two large dormitories, besides small sleeping apartments for the oldest girls. Two Sisters sleep in each dormitory to maintain order and discipline among the children. There are 26 little single beds in one dormitory, and 28 in the other. The beds are made of iron, and there is a spring foundation, with mattress sheets, blankets and cover. They were all made up without hillocks, and were clean.

In the basement of the main building is a large kitchen, dining room, dish washroom, recreation-room, bath rooms, drying rooms, boilers, laundry, etc. The larger girls help to get away with the work in these rooms, and they are taught to do it as all true housewives should.

On the first floor are situated a chapel, recitation room, music hall, sewing room, offices, reception rooms, library and the school rooms. There is also a study room for the children of the convent, who there study their lessons in the evening. The day scholars are not allowed in it.

THE SCHOOL ROOMS.

There are over 300 day scholars on the rolls who attend all the classes, from the primary to the high school classes. A rare feature in teaching in the convent is the practice stress which is laid in imparting the rudiments of elocution, at the sacrifice of flummery. There is a beautiful absence of "ornamental" and that which is taught is thoroughly taught. While the discipline might be called rigid, still it was noticeable that there existed the familiarity of home between the teachers and scholars. The Sisters spoke to their pupils in a familiar tone of voice and the children answered promptly and politely—the latter feature was prominently noticeable in all that was said and done.

In each room visited the scholars were put through their lessons in arithmetic, and in the high school room the scholars would [illegible] classes at Lorenzaugh, in the Fulbeck district, county Armagh, some miles from Newry, are learned to the ground. The bell belongs to Mr. Parker 11 Street, J. P., Newtownhamilton. The sense will was destroyed by fire about this time last year.

Clare.—On Sunday, October 9, a splendid meeting of the inhabitants of Kilrush was held in the chapel yard. The Clare street, to protest against the outrages of the corporation proceeding free speech and the right of public meeting, as well as the attempts made to the Irish Press. Before the meeting commenced, a large force of police, in charge of Mr. J. W. Bourke, R.I., wanted to follow the people, but on demanding to be present were told by Mr. Dr. Hynes as the priests that they did not want to hold a meeting of the Congress, so was it wrong in the police permitting to force themselves in, the gates were closed and locked against them and a most crossing.

Cork.—There is not one who knows Dr. Tanner who will not sympathize with him in the loss of his mother; and there are hundreds—ay thousands—who know him and who do not share his political views who will acknowledge that he is the popular member in such a deplorable domestic calamity. The deceased was a charitably lady in every relation of life and filled the duties of her station in life in a way which endeared her to all classes. The family have had a female place in the city for at least 50 years, and have always been held in that respect which their virtues and attributes merited. Dr. Tanner's father was for many years a member of the Corporation, and in his personal bearings was quite on a par with his great professional accomplishments. Hence he has which fully a new sensation in the minds of Mrs. Tanner is keenly felt by everyone in Cork.

Dublin.—The death is announced, on October 9, at St. Harold's, Castleroy, Strawbane, of the Rev. Father Anselm, O.S.F.C., aged 72 years, after a lingering and painful illness, which he bore with true Christian fortitude. He was well known as Bobby, Clerk and Parishioner, and was ordained priest in the year 1848.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of Dublin, on October 10, opened the new Catholic Boys' Schools, in Kevin street, Dublin.

On October 13, a memorial for the education of Catholics for the priesthood was opened at Ballyfermot, by Monsignor Persico. All the bodies from the Christian Brothers' schools of Dublin were drawn up in front of the edifice, to the number of about 1,000. The Archbishop of Dublin, with Bishop McEvilly, and their clergy, received the Nuncio, who was accompanied by the Bishop of Ferns, and the Nuncio then proceeded to Ireland, and which they, the Catholics in Ireland, could only just tolerate. What they wanted was perfect freedom of religious education. Monsignor Persico said the matter was one to which the Holy Father had a deep and fervent interest. The Lord Mayor was present.

Donegal.—Father Gaughan took place at Gweedore, on Oct. 7th. Mr. Hourke, R.M., and County Inspector Lenox proceeded with fifty police, on foot, from Gweedore to Bloody Foreland. The people gathered on the hillsides and measured the force along the route. Their number, although not so large as formerly, was quite sufficient to give the police a considerable task in the matter of keeping the road. The McFadden's, the Boyle's, the McFadden's, and the Boyle's, were actually accountable for the action of the people. Some of the people, who were thrown into the ditch, and treats read the Riot Act, Father McFadden and the people were forbidden by the police on account taking notes, and upon the sergeant being asked to disperse, the crowd was then seen. On reaching the Bloodyforeland, it was found that the house of which possession was to be demanded, were tenantless and the doors had been nailed up. The bailiff declared his intention of demanding away house in the townland, and Father M. Fadden protested against the action as illegal. The Resident Magistrate thereupon declared the house would not further support the bailiff.

Galway.—At the Dunlo Petty Sessions, on Monday, Oct. 10, a number of cases of assault and battery and malicious injury to property were adjudicated upon, and the cases were dismissed. The Bench, in dismissing the cases, said that it was a considerable number of statements had been made in the estate of the late Michael Davitt, and near which George Robinson, of Ballinahinch, is agent; but only to the unexpected death of the bailiff they have been withdrawn, and all parties, passengers, tailor, on the property to have been satisfied that they are no longer to consider themselves under fire.

Kerry.—At the Dingle Petty Sessions, commencing Oct. 10, and lasting three days, before Messrs. Lord Ross and A. J. McDonnell, R.M.'s, the renewal certificates of the licensed [illegible] Dingle, Ventry, Cloghane, Ballyferriter, and Dingle, which were opposed by the police in the renewal of the certificate in Mr. Lee's case was that he refused selling to the police on the 22nd and 23rd February, the occasion of the Ballyferriter evictions. Mr. McCarthy's case the objection was that in January he refused to supply one Antoine Brown, who was alleged to be boycotted with bread. Mr. Daniel's certificate was the ground that he was summoned to the peace for addressing the people at the shelter's evictions at Ballyferriter in February last, and for having called for three cheers for Davitton, Parnell, Dillon, and O'Brien outside the police barracks at Dingle on the night of the meeting, and for refusing to drink the Queen's health. Mr. Daniel's case was a very little great professional accomplishment. Hence he has which fully a new sensation in the minds of Mrs. Tanner is keenly felt by everyone in Cork.

Dublin.—The death is announced, on October 9, at St. Harold's, Castleroy, Strawbane, of the Rev. Father Anselm, O.S.F.C., aged 72 years, after a lingering and painful illness, which he bore with true Christian fortitude. He was well known as Bobby, Clerk and Parishioner, and was ordained priest in the year 1848.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of Dublin, on October 10, opened the new Catholic Boys' Schools, in Kevin street, Dublin.

On October 13, a memorial for the education of Catholics for the priesthood was opened at Ballyfermot, by Monsignor Persico. All the bodies from the Christian Brothers' schools of Dublin were drawn up in front of the edifice, to the number of about 1,000. The Archbishop of Dublin, with Bishop McEvilly, and their clergy, received the Nuncio, who was accompanied by the Bishop of Ferns, and the Nuncio then proceeded to Ireland, and which they, the Catholics in Ireland, could only just tolerate. What they wanted was perfect freedom of religious education. Monsignor Persico said the matter was one to which the Holy Father had a deep and fervent interest. The Lord Mayor was present.

Donegal.—Father Gaughan took place at Gweedore, on Oct. 7th. Mr. Hourke, R.M., and County Inspector Lenox proceeded with fifty police, on foot, from Gweedore to Bloody Foreland. The people gathered on the hillsides and measured the force along the route. Their number, although not so large as formerly, was quite sufficient to give the police a considerable task in the matter of keeping the road. The McFadden's, the Boyle's, the McFadden's, and the Boyle's, were actually accountable for the action of the people. Some of the people, who were thrown into the ditch, and treats read the Riot Act, Father McFadden and the people were forbidden by the police on account taking notes, and upon the sergeant being asked to disperse, the crowd was then seen. On reaching the Bloodyforeland, it was found that the house of which possession was to be demanded, were tenantless and the doors had been nailed up. The bailiff declared his intention of demanding away house in the townland, and Father M. Fadden protested against the action as illegal. The Resident Magistrate thereupon declared the house would not further support the bailiff.

Galway.—At the Gillin's quarter sessions, on October 11, the number of cases of assault and battery and malicious injury to property adjudicated upon, and the cases were dismissed. The Bench, in dismissing the cases, said that it was a considerable number of statements had been made in the estate of the late Michael Davitt, near which George Robinson, of Ballinahinch, is agent; but only to the unexpected death of the bailiff they have been withdrawn, and all parties, passengers, tailor, on the property to have been satisfied that they are no longer to consider themselves under fire.

Kerry.—At the Dingle Petty Sessions, commencing Oct. 10, and lasting three days, before Messrs. Lord Ross and A. J. McDonnell, R.M.'s, the renewal certificates of the licensed [illegible] Dingle, Ventry, Cloghane, Ballyferriter, and Dingle, which were opposed by the police in the renewal of the certificate in Mr. Lee's case was that he refused selling to the police on the 22nd and 23rd February, the occasion of the Ballyferriter evictions. In Mr. McCarthy's case the objection was that in January he refused to supply one Antoine Brown, who was alleged to be boycotted with bread. Mr. Daniel's certificate was on the ground that he was bound to the peace for addressing the people at the shelter's evictions at Ballyferriter in February last, and for having called for three cheers for Davitton, Parnell, Dillon, and O'Brien outside the police barracks at Dingle on the night of the meeting, and for refusing to drink the Queen's health. Mr. Daniel's case was a very little great professional accomplishment. Hence he has which fully a new sensation in the minds of Mrs. Tanner is keenly felt by everyone in Cork.

Dublin.—The death is announced, on October 9, at St. Harold's, Castleroy, Strawbane, of the Rev. Father Anselm, O.S.F.C., aged 72 years, after a lingering and painful illness, which he bore with true Christian fortitude. He was well known as Bobby, Clerk and Parishioner, and was ordained priest in the year 1848.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of Dublin, on October 10, opened the new Catholic Boys' Schools, in Kevin street, Dublin.

On October 13, a memorial for the education of Catholics for the priesthood was opened at Ballyfermot, by Monsignor Persico. All the bodies from the Christian Brothers' schools of Dublin were drawn up in front of the edifice, to the number of about 1,000. The Archbishop of Dublin, with Bishop McEvilly, and their clergy, received the Nuncio, who was accompanied by the Bishop of Ferns, and the Nuncio then proceeded to Ireland, and which they, the Catholics in Ireland, could only just tolerate. What they wanted was perfect freedom of religious education. Monsignor Persico said the matter was one to which the Holy Father had a deep and fervent interest. The Lord Mayor was present.

THE WEEK'S NEWS
—FROM—
IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Athlone.—On Monday, Oct. 10th, Mr. Isaac Mott, Queen's Counsel, died rather suddenly at Ballinlion, where he had been appointed Parliamentary roll for North Fermanagh.

[illegible]

ROLLS OF HONOR FOR OCTOBER.

[illegible]

SACRED HEART COLLEGE.

Last Thursday afternoon, at Sacred Heart College, Limerick, the prizes and certificates awarded to the students who had distinguished themselves in competition to study during the month of October. A glorious musical and literary programme was rendered on the occasion, such student playing the part assigned to him in a manner deserving of great credit to himself and his instructors.

The following is the roll of honor, giving the relative percentage in both exams, etc., obtained by the students:—

[illegible]

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL, VIRGINIA CITY.

Senior Class—N. Ussa, J. Tracy, K. Hoskins.

Intermediate—K. Nuelan, K. Chiesla, M. Crowe, B. Paymal, M. Henderson.

Intermediate Section, 2—Mary Mahoney, T. Newman, M. Considine, H. McLaughlin, M. Turner, M. McGinty, and Mabel Mitchell, M. Navin, C. Mitchel, K. Dugenan, A. French, M. McGuire, M. Mahoney, M. Ussa.

Elementary—J. Shanahan, K. Kelleher, L. Dwyer, J. Ryan, J. Bennett, M. Cunnahan, J. Sullivan, J. Stanton, M. Wash, M. O'Donnell, M. Rowan, J. Sullivan, M. Hennessy, M. Lawrence, M. Stewart.

Elementary Section—A. Dupuis, M. Jensen, M. Ralfferty, J. Sullivan, G. Nassa, W. Mc. Donald, J. Walsh.

First Division—M. Mahoney, M. Sullivan, M. Kavanagh, A. Kearns, K. McDonald, M. Ussa, M. Sullivan, K. Newman, E. Kane, J. Sullivan.

Second Division—S. Ryan, M. Scannilli, A. McDermott, M. Enoch, M. Hogan, K. Sullivan, T. Murphy, L. Murphy.

Third Division—H. Lassere.

Fourth Division—L. McCormack, F. Nichol, J. Kennedy, L. Garland, S. M. E. Dugenan, M. Hatton, S. O'Donnell, M. McCarthy, F. Foley.

Third Division—L. Gilligan, M. Sullivan, K. Nugent, M. Harrington, D. Landon, L. Pierce, M. Sullivan, M. Mahoney, E. McNamara, A. Pendergast, K. Walsh, N. Dunnigan, A. Sias, V. Farrell, E. Sullivan, M. Sullivan, J. Murphy, D. Sullivan, J. Kavanagh, J. Walsh.

ST PETER'S SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

First Class, First Division—P. D. McKenny 100, J. Hicks 99, J. Hughes 97, J. Kane 95, A. Hackett 93, C. J. Haggerty 93, F. McGinnis 92, J. McLaughlin 91, J. Griffin, and J. Dwyer 90.

Second Division—J. F. Foley 97, E. F. Drew and J. Cook 96, A. Crosby 95.

Second Class, First Division—G. Cleary 99, E. H. Tobin 98, J. Dyker 93, L. J. Clyne 92, J. McGough 91, R. E. Blackwood 90, L. Cronin 89, J. Ryan 88, J. Cronin 87, J. Sullivan 86, J. M. McCrea 85. Second Division—W. J. Doyle 93, J. F. Boley 92, T. D. Smith 91, J. Kenny 90, E. B. Gibson 78, C. Wilson 75.

Third Class, First Division—T. H. Malloy 92, J. Markham 91, W. H. McCarthy 90, G. Pope 89, J. Hennessy 87, J. J. Griffin, and J. J. Strand 17. Lower 55. Second Division—A. L. Fairfield 91, T. H. McKenna 89, J. Needham 78, J. Conway 76, J. Kendrick, J. L. Holtman, J. W. Ryan, each 75.

Fourth Class, First Division—T. U. Mancke 99, J. Dwyer 97, J. Daly 87, Percy Tomasi 86, Esther Wolpe 95, Mary Madden 91, Maggie Ryan 90, Annie Cronin 87, Lettie McKenny 86, Annie Cunnahan 85, Bessie Mahoney 84, Annie Cunnahan 83, Annie Holbrook 80, Maggie Gallagher 79, Mary Hughes 97, Ellen Conway 93, Annie Cronin 92, Annie Cronin 91, Annie Cronin 90, Annie Cronin 89, Ella Cronin 87, Mary Nixon 85, Mollie Quinlan 85, Esther McKenny 84, Mary Gallagher 83, Nellie Flynn 81, Mary Dunham and Mary Mahoney each 80, Mary Hughes and Mary M. Cronin 79, Sarah Ryan and Maggie Shea each 78, Mary McGovern, Annie Harper, Maggie Finn, Mary Foley, Ella Sullivan, Mary McKevin, Annie Cronin, Annie Cronin and Maggie Sullivan each 77.

Fifth Class—Violet Lowe 100, Mary Tully, Maggie Wolpe, Josephine Feilbach and Mary Byrne each 98, Kate McKage and Emma Nolan each 97, Mamie Gallagher and Mary Mahoney each 96, Henrietta Hoagberg and Maggie Shea each 95, Nora Foley and Emma Geary each 94, Annie Cronin, Annie Cronin, Hayes C. Lynch, Bolger, Mary Sullivan, Frances Connolly and Annie Cronin each 93, Annie Shanahan 92, Dorothy and Mollie Gallagher each 91, Maggie Cronin 90, Annie Cronin, Annie Cronin and Lulu Ward each 81, Mary Mahoney, Eva Mahoney, Annie Cronin, Annie Cronin, Annie McCarthy, Mary Walsh and Agnes Lynch each 80.

Models of Honor—Lady-like Department—Lottie Pine, Mary McCarthy, Annie Cronin, Mary Toomey, Kitsie Shiles and Mary Tully.

Gentlemanly Department—Mary Agnes Hilton, Cecilia Murphy, Kevin Collins, Arthur Wilson, Frank Cronin, Frank Cronin, Victor Orsini.

Market Report.

Mercantile Review.

[illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

PERSONAL.

[illegible]

BAD BREATH.

[illegible]

Tired and Dependent.

[illegible]

Endowment Insurance.

THE OCCIDENTAL
Self Endowment Association

[illegible]

A Few Reliable Agents Wanted

Address, GEO. C. JONES, Secty.,
ROOM 28,
Pfeiffer Building, Market Street,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

INFORMATION WANTED.

[illegible]

MARRIED.

[illegible]

DIED.

[illegible]

DECKER BROS.
MASON & HAMLIN
IVERS & POND,
PIANOS
SOLD FOR $10 PER MONTH.
KOHLER & CHASE,
PINGLE BROTHERS,
BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURERS
Now Occupy the Spacious New Store,
1109 MARKET STREET,
Old Fellows Building,
With a Large and Well-Selected Stock of Fine
BOOTS AND SHOES.
CATHOLIC MORTUARY CARDS.
Beautiful Catholic Designed MEMORIAM CARDS,
Both Plain and Illuminated Styles.
Printed in the Neatest and Cheapest Manner by McCORMICK BROS.,
510 Sansome Street.
[illegible]
FURNITURE, CARPETS,
BEDDING, ETC.
Special attention is called to our elegant New Stock of FURNITURE, UPHOLSTERY GOODS, CARPETS, etc.; also SMYRNA CARPETS, RUGS and MATS, LINOLEUM, OILCLOTH, Etc., in Great Variety at Stimson and Pierce,
JOS. FREDERICKS & CO.,
649 & 651 Market Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.
RAOWAY'S READY RELIEF.
RAOWAY'S PILLS.
[illegible]

THE MONITOR.

A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL.

Devoted to the Preservation and Defense of Catholic Principles.

Published by The Monitor Publishing Co., Office 516 Mission St., San Francisco.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

[illegible]

Address all communications, remittances, checks and postal orders to

P. J. McCOLGAN, Editor and Manager.

Monitor Office, Rm 516 P. O. Box 2260, San Francisco, Cal. Entered at the San Francisco Post Office as Second Class Matter.

Fearless to do Its Duty. Ever Ready to Defend the Rights of Its Adopted Country. Strive for Justice for Its Sons and even unto Death Ask for Justice, and God will overthrow its enemies for Thee. [illegible]

VOL. XXXI. SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887. NO. 8.

THE MONITOR

[illegible]

TO CORRESPONDENTS

[illegible]

All communications and remittances, whether on business or otherwise are to be addressed to the Manager.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE COMMERCIAL
IMPORTING
TEA CO.,
857 Market Street,
Have just received a Cargo of the Celebrated
ELECTRIC COFFEE,
30 Cents a Pound.
WE ARE SOLE AGENTS FOR THE PACIFIC COAST.
Country Orders Promptly Attended to.
THE Commercial Importing Tea Company,
957 MARKET STREET,
Bet. Fifth and Ninth
BRANCH 24th and Mission Sts.
COLD, SILVER AND NICKEL PLATING.
— Every Description of —
Church and Altar Ornaments
HOUSEHOLD GOODS
Repaired and Plated
With the above articles we have used exclusively and for the last 20 years
SAN FRANCISCO
Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating Works,
652 and 653 MISSION ST.,
Bet. Fremont and Beale Sts. San Francisco
E. D. DENNISTON, Proprietor.
DR. M. J. DUNN
DENTIST.
HOURS, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. 1 to 5 p.m.
ANESTHETICS.
1228 MARKET STREET,
Opposite J. O'Brien's Dry Goods Store,
San Francisco.
REMOVAL.
FRANKLIN N. CLARK,
DENTIST,
26 Montgomery St., op. Lick House,
SAN FRANCISCO.
[illegible]

O'BRIEN'S PRISON.

Description of Tullamore Jail.

THE MARTYR'S CELL.

O'Brien Likely to Die Within His Walls.

At Partington, between Dublin and York, a little railway leaves the main line and shortly after its own, from Athlone to Clonmacnoise is full, very pretty country, and a most interesting district. The town, which is three miles off, is shingly, ugly and uninteresting, but the Bog of Allen is a great and most prominent thing in the landscape, a stretch of gray stones, which looks like a sea, and which is a sea of bog. The Grand Canal runs through it, and the Government proposed to cut the river Brosna and drain the bog, but the Irish people objected, and it is now left to the Irish people to do it. The Government proposed to cut the river and drain the bog, but the Irish people objected, and it is now left to the Irish people to do it.

Tired and Dependent.

[illegible]

Endowment Insurance.

[illegible]

A Few Reliable Agents Wanted

[illegible]

INFORMATION WANTED.

[illegible]

DIED.

[illegible]

Specially Engraved by Messrs. Oliver & Co. of this City, for our Paper, thus forming A DOUBLE NUMBER OF THE MONITOR, WHICH WILL BE SENT TO
THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR
The Product of the Catholic Genius and Intellect of
THE PACIFIC COAST,
—WE OFFER—
Different Premiums to Successful Writers of Original CHRISTMAS STORIES,
CHRISTMAS POEMS,
And Other Literary Matter: for
THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR
FOR 1887
The Customary Prizes will be Given to Contributors for
THE BEST ORIGINAL CHRISTMAS STORY,
Occupying about Twenty pages of Foolscap, written on one side only.
FOR THE SECOND BEST STORY,
Occupying about Sixteen pages of Foolscap.
FOR THE BEST ORIGINAL CHRISTMAS POEM,
Of about 100 Lines in length.
FOR THE BEST JUBILEE POEM IN HONOR OF LEO XIII,
Of any length agreeable to the author.
PREMIUMS WILL ALSO BE GIVEN
For other Contributions to THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR if Found worthy thereof.
IMPORTANT NOTICE TO CONTRIBUTORS.
ALL MATTER SENT MUST BE ORIGINAL, written on one side of each sheet of foolscap paper, and must be mailed to the Monitor so as to reach this office not later than November 30th, which is the date fixed upon to announce the names of successful contributors in the Monitor of November 26th.
The name and nom de plume of each contributor must be inserted in each manuscript. This Premium are open to contestants resident in any portion of the Pacific Coast. All manuscripts should be forwarded to the office at once, as soon as completed, so as to be carefully and properly considered by the committee.
SEND COPIES TO YOUR EASTERN AND EUROPEAN FRIENDS.
THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR mailed to any address in the United States or Europe on receipt of TEN CENTS in coin or postage-stamps.
DO NOT DELAY
In sending in the Names of all your friends to whom you desire to mail copies of the CHRISTMAS MONITOR, as here-after many subscribers are disappointed to receive copies of the Christmas Edition being entirely exhausted. Send your lists and cash at once, and then your friends will be certain to receive a most welcome CHRISTMAS or NEW YEAR'S GIFT for which THEY WILL LONG FEEL GRATEFUL

The Monitor.

"Fiat Justitia Ruat Coelum."

Let Justice be done though the Heavens Fall.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Two Dollars per annum in advance.

Six Months if not in advance.

Six Months if not in advance.

Three Months if not in advance.

Single copies Five Cents. Back numbers Ten Cents.

Address all communications, remittances, checks and postal orders to

P. J. McCOLGAN, Editor and Manager.

Monitor Office, Rm 516 P. O. Box 2260, San Francisco, Cal. Entered at the San Francisco Post Office as Second Class Matter.

Fearless to do Its Duty. Ever Ready to Defend the Rights of Its Adopted Country. Strive for Justice for Its Sons and even unto Death Ask for Justice, and God will overthrow its enemies for Thee. [illegible]

VOL. XXXI. SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887. NO. 8.

CARDINAL GIBBONS,

Reception in New Orleans.

GOLDEN GIFTS FROM A GRATEFUL PEOPLE.

Affectionate Address of Catholic Fealty.

Last night the Catholic community in this city of Cardinal Gibbons a public reception at Greenwald Hall. In view of the general desire to see him, Cardinal Gibbons kindly consented to meet the hall from 8 until 9 o'clock.

The committee of Catholic gentlemen had the affair in charge, and all the arrangements were admirable. The entrance to the hall was crowded with cardinal hunting. The hall itself was tastefully decorated. In front of the gallery were the national colors. At the far end of the hall was the Cardinal throne, surmounted by a canopy of crimson, and fringed with gold. Above the canopy hung the Papal flag, and on either side were flags with glittering spear heads. On a platform, and with crimson and gold cloth covered, stood a chair for the Cardinal, facing the throne and the seats, which were arranged in a semi-circle. The gallery was filled to the brim of the reception and there were hundreds of people on the floor.

At half-per 6 o'clock the hall was dark, such little Sodality Cardinal Gibbons, accompanied by Father Chapelle, came on stairs and was met at the head of the stairs by a number of gentlemen on the reception committee, who ushered him into the hall. As he entered, the hall became full and fantily illuminated, the crimson of the throne brightened, the flags shone in the light, and a welcome lit up the faces of the spectators. At the same time the orchestra, the chorus, the organ, played the hymn "Adeste Fideles" (O Sanctum). The Cardinal was then seated in the throne, and the Rev. Dr. McGlynn in this campaign." This sentiment, I am sure, will be shared by a number of the defeated candidates, and it is even said that George himself thinks so, although he does not say so.

—A striking instance of the enthusiastic and increasing sympathy which the Irish National cause has taken root in the metropolitan suburbs was exhibited at a meeting held at Camberwell, England, on October 22nd, called to protest against the "Mitchelstown murders." In the audience were to Ireland's Blood Fund, the National Leagues. This announcement was received with great cheers, which were renewed when Mr. Hill exhibited his card of membership. Mr. Hill, who is one of the largest hock manufacturers in the world, dealing with the Jews of Russia and Poland, remarked that though he had extensive commercial dealings with Ireland, he was a bad debt three, while he had frequently such in England and Scotland.

—The exile announces that a complete disorganization of the Gaelic Athletic Association in Ireland, which was inaugurated at Thurles, on Friday, Father Scanlan, and the delegates from Ballyhaunis, Wilkinsy, Wicklow, Wexford and Dublin withdrew from the association, accusing the other members of an intention to oust Father Scanlan from the presidency. Archbishop Croke has also resigned his membership. The Freeman's Journal deprecates the disunion. The Press had been expected some time. The organization founded to revive the ancient Irish sports and field exercises, unfortunately fell under the management of those who became jealous of the power and dangerous malady known as "the swelled head." Archbishop Croke, who was the core of the earliest and most enthusiastic patrons had to get out the case must have been very sad indeed.

The Observatore Romano publishes an interview with Father Tolmen, who succeeded Mr. Persico on his special Papal mission to Ireland. Father Tolmen, in addresses presented to Mgr. Persico in Ireland, expressed the hope and strong confidence in the Holy See. In that country the agitation based on such a long memory of ancient wrongs England has inflicted upon her, but also upon the serious provocation which demand attention. The presence of the Mgr. contributed to keep the country tranquil. Father Tolmen stated that there is every ground for the hope that a solution of the Irish question by means will be found to settle the difference between landlords and tenants, especially as the Irish are very far from desiring separation from England. Catholics and Protestants alike have confidence in the Pope.

—In the release of Miss Mary Anne Lawler from Wexford Jail, on October 25th, Nebraska Gold, Holmestown, made her a valuable presentation, on behalf of the Home National League. Mr. M. J. Tobin, Nebraska Gold, presented a gold watch and chain, Rosary beads and prayer-book, on behalf of the ladies of the Nebraska Leagues, Liverpool. The presentation took place in the historic Bull Ring, where, kneeling before the Cross, the women of Wexford were slaughtered by Cromwell. Miss Lawler was escorted home by a large procession.

—It is stated upon authority, that during the next Consistory, which will be held in the month of December, the Cardinalship will be conferred upon Mgr. Persico, Mgr. Bichard, Archbishop of Paris, and Mgr. Parocco, the present Envoy Extraordinary of the Pope in Ireland.

—The English clergy as a rule begin to feel some alarm over the question of church disestablishment, and are preaching against it very widely. The scheme of Mr. Chamberlain to disestablish the Welsh Church is regarded as a remote attack on their own vested institution—an assault on the outposts of the main citadel of which they are the guardians and defenders.

HELP OLD IRELAND!

Appeal to Wealthy Irishmen.

JOHN FITZGERALD'S CIRCULAR.

Erin's Present Need for Pecuniary Assistance.

IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
OFFICE OF PRESIDENT,
LINCOLN, NEB., Nov. 12, 1887.

To the Wealthy Irishmen and Sons of Irishmen:

Fellow Countrymen—To day the fate of Ireland hangs trembling in the balance. One brief year must decide whether Ireland shall cease to exist or shall, in the glory of renewed youth, take her place in the royal robes of restored independence. The Parliament of Ireland will be called together with their gallant leaders; they have shown that, against overwhelming odds with prudence, Christian forbearance, and heroic fortitude, could do wonders for their condition. The odds are against them. Without assistance from abroad, they must yield to the law of superior force. Left now to their own resources, as far as human aid from our home, Ireland's hope lies in the hands of her children, who, coming from Ireland, in the land of their birth, or to drench the sacred soil with their blood as a last sacrifice, in the sacrifice of liberty, which

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

REPENTANCE.

Deep in the depths of my troubled mind,
I've lingered oft and long;
Heedless to some of a thousand thoughts,
Haunted by scraps of song.
On the troubled waters of high days,
On the battle of silver years,
Of the priceless hours that lily apart,
Have plaited an ocean of tears.
The awful doctrines that fill my soul,
That raised the dismal fabric of sin,
Are thoughts that crowd my harrowing brain
With images vile and grim.
"Why give me back the long gone hours,"
I cried betwixt my tears,
"Give back that dear though misspent time,
That darkened some of years,
When I, in the lap of childhood,
Caroused by her fruitful hand;
I lived upon her winsome smiles,
And followed her feast nominal."
And now were old and passive grown,
I look with a hungered eye,
Upon such terrible sunrises
That solemnly marches by.
The tears flow down my hollowed cheek,
Whenever with a sigh and start,
I think on the awful crimes of youth
That I have dared my hopeful heart.
And thus I sit in the splendor of day
And in the dim silence of night
Uncovered my soul to a kindred tears
To God—the all-great Light.
That His may wash my stained soul
In the waters of heavenly love
And place me amid the saintly host
That live in God's state above.

—JOHN J. FARRY.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

FAME.

Hunter Fame, oh, what art thou,
A mortal being doom'd to die,
Thy recent gifts are only now
To pity with man and pass him by.

Delusive dream, what's in thy gauze
To make poor man thy abject slave,
An adverse blast from Fortune's frown
Sinks emperors beneath thy wave.

Bright Fame, thy odorous wreath of bay
Will late from array monarch's brow,
Thy perfume vanish in decay
When man to his last bourne shall go.

When thy bright ambiance cease to bloom,
Oh, Fame, when Time has made them rust
Man then finds refuge in the tomb,
And honors crumble into dust.

JOHN F. MCDONELL.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

ORRIN IN TULLAMORE

The despots now begin to smile
And peaceful man small
These are gloomy hearts on Erin's isle
For O'Brien is in jail.
Aye! cast into a felon's cell,
From home and loved ones free,
This brave, outspoken martyr lies
In jail at Tullamore.

The good old cause still onward moves,
Hope yet is not to rain,
For noble hearts will ever still work
To break the despot's chain,
Hope on! hope on! O valorous heart,
Success is still in store,
It matters not how well they fill
The jail at Tullamore.

From out their prison cell there come
Echoes of freedom's strains,
Made plaintive by the clanking of
A hero-born in chains.
A martyr to poor Erin's cause,
From home and comfort torn,
Yet from long and dismal months
Had escaped—or the crafty held no
Of true and trusty steel!
Ah! hardened is the despot's heart—
For nearly is lame or nothing was
The punishment O'Brien feels
In jail at Tullamore.

Yet sometimes your hands have sung
Most sad and memorial lays
About poor suffering Erin
In the dark the happy life days,
When the scaffold high was reeking
With many a hero's gore,
Who loved his native land like him
In jail at Tullamore.

Oh! leaders of old Erin's cause—
To him we look and hope,
Your wisdom yet may tell to how
Your sons can break the yoke,
In patience we are waiting now—
When will suspense be's o'er?
And men upbold their hands as four
The jail at Tullamore.

Farwell! Farwell! to thee we look,
Then art our guiding star,
We'll listen to thy words of hope,
Be they for peace or war.
Brave Irishmen have learned to wait
As they have done before,
Despite the threats of those in power
And the jail of Tullamore.

W. G. H.

BLIND BARTIMEUS.

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight."

I would receive my sight; my clouded eyes
Miss the glad radiance of the morning sun,
The changing tints that gladdy the skies
With rosate splendors when the day is done;
The shadows soft and gray, the pearly light
Of summer twilight deep'ning into night.

I cannot see to keep the narrow way,
And so I blindly wander here and there,
Groping amidst the brake, or helpless stray
Through pathless, tangled deserts, blind and bare;
Weeping I seek the way I cannot find—
Open my eyes, dear Lord, for I am blind.

And oft I laugh with some light, thoughtless one,
Now now weighed bliss some fane most dear,
And write my sketch, a mocking pallimpsest—
Ah! human smiles of human pain and fear!
Ah! satyr on the tantalus inherited—
Pity, oh, son of David! I am blind.

I do not see the pale my light words give,
The quivering, quaking heart I cause yet;
So, light of thought, SOME hidden grief I live,
And most the joyous tones with sightless glee;
Open mine eyes, light, blessed ways to God—
Jesus, have mercy on me—I am blind.

My useless eyes are reservoirs of tears,
Doomed for their blind mistakes to overflow;
To weep for thoughtless ways of wandering years,
Because I could not see—I am blind.
Those sightless eyes—than sweetest glance less kind—
Light of the World, have pity: I am blind.

SEND US CATHOLIC NEWS.

We would most respectfully ask the Rev. Clergy, or any of our readers of the entire Pacific Coast, to send us items of general interest. We wish to make the MONITOR a chronicle of all Diocesan happenings relative to the progress of religion, but we cannot do so unless we are aided by those who have the knowledge of the facts in their keeping. Dare facts are all we want. Will our friends please furnish us with them?

Literary Miscellany.

The Young Abbe.

A Story of the French Revolution

Few there are in the present day who, having resorted to either Pau or Biarritz during the winter months in search of either health or pleasure, have not, during the spring acts in, made excursions into the heart of the lovely mountains of the Pyrenees. But at the time the incident narrated will relate, an about to endeavor to relate, lingering in Bigorre, and Be Loudon, Cauterez, and indeed all the now fashionable places, were very different to what they are in the present day, the so-called improvement name had not laid its hand on these lovely scenes, and except a few huts for the mountaineers, all had been left very much as God had made it. For the most part the lives led by the poor peasants were quiet and uninteresting, their occupation being mostly the care of their flocks, and the only black spot in this otherwise innocent life was the immense contraband trade which was carried on with Spain. The Seigneur of the part of the Pyrenees I have allude to was the Marquis de Bajac. The chateau he inhabited and all the surrounding country had belonged to his family from time immemorial. Smuggling was carried on very extensively during the regns of Louis XIV. and XV., and, unfortunately, there were few, if indeed any, of the nobles who held their castles in the fastnesses of the Pyrenees who were not more or less connected with the banks of smugglers infesting the whole range. The Marquis de Bajac merely allowed the use of the hiding places at the back of his chateau, but for this favor he received a large compensation. He died a few years before the unfortunate Louis XVI. ascended the throne of France, and as he left no child he was succeeded in the family estates by his cousin, with whom notwithstanding the immense difference of character between them, it very frequently he ever had been on terms of close friendship.

Jacques de Bajac, who thus inherited the chateau, held in horror the lawless trade that had been countenanced by his cousin, and on taking possession gave the smugglers to once to understand, that for the future they were to expect neither aid nor protection from him. He and his amiable and pious wife devoted all their time and attention in endeavors to help the poor by whom they were surrounded, and in spite of the hatred with which in the first instance they were viewed on account of smuggling having been forbidden, they won by their kindness and charity won the love and esteem of all with whom they came in contact. In all their good works they were aided by their only child, a son to whom both were devoted, but so thoroughly did the Lord of our Blessed Lord enter into all the actions of their lives that they never hesitated for one moment granting him their full consent when he expressed a wish to enter the sacred ministry. They knew that he was more honored by being called to serve God in the altar than if he had been named to the greatest earthly honors.

As soon as Jacques de Bajac succeeded to the family estates, he entrusted the Bishop of the diocese to appoint his son curse of the parish. The request was at once granted, and young Henri de Bajac, entered, held no intercourse with the smugglers who then were the ordinary bearers of tidings from the outer world. Nothing or nothing was therefore known of the breaking out of the Revolution, and the unhappy Louis XVI. and his wounded consort had been consigned for many weeks to the Temple, before the tidings of the horrible event had reached the Pyrenees. But the happy life led by the Bajacs was soon to end. One of the most desperate of the smugglers, enraged at the restrictions that had been put on his dishonest trade, denounced the family as aristocrats, and therefore dangerous to the public safety. One lovely summer evening when the family were sitting on the terrace watching the glorious setting of the sun, they were suddenly surrounded by a band of soldiers belonging to the self-constituted government, and at once hurried off to the prison at Toulouse, which they were only to leave to appear before a mock tribunal, and receive the sentence of death that had in reality been passed on them before they were tried. The mock tribunal was the Marquis and his wife were guillotined in the public square, and the Abbe, though he had entreated to be allowed to die with his parents, had his request refused, and he was sent back to prison. Little did he think that God had still work left for him to do!

In those dreadful days the prison at Toulouse was so crowded that many of the cells had to be divided to admit of more prisoners. During the evening of the day of the execution of his unfortunate parents, the holy priest was pacing the cell in which he was confined, in a state of mind not to be described, when his steps were arrested by hearing what he thought was a groan. He listened. The sound rose again, and he soon ascertained whence it came. He put his mouth to the wooden partition and gently asked the cause of the great grief, and whether he could be of any assistance. "Alas, no!" was the answer he received, "no one can now do anything for me. I am condemned to die. There is no hope for me either in this world or in the next. I have scoffed at religion and at the priests of God's Holy Church, and now they have left me to meet His without a possibility of my being reconciled to Him. I have betrayed the innocent family of Bajac merely through a desire for revenge, and with such a load on my conscience how is it possible I can be other wise than as you find me." The Abbe informed him of his real office, but without telling his name, not wishing to add another drop to the bitter cup the poor wretch had to drain. His ears entreated him not to give way to despair, but to seek pardon of God by making a good confession. At first the wretched man was most unwilling to comply, and only burst out into fresh groans. The Abbe threw himself on his knees and prayed earnestly to God that He would soften the proud, hard heart. His prayers were answered, for soon after the poor man called to the priest to hear his confession, and when he had done so he told him that to give him courage to the last, he would try and obtain permission to be executed at the same time. The smuggler was true to his promise which had hardly been made when the door of the cell was opened, and a man entered. It being the hour for the prisoner's sandy meal, the Abbe scarcely turned his head. What was his astonishment when he did so to see one of his nearest and dearest relations before him! He was on the point of speaking to him by name, but the new-comer put his finger to his lips and said in a whisper

"Speak, speak, my friend, there is no time to lose. Although my companions are sound asleep, I dare not speak aloud. Put on this dress which I have brought, at the same time allowing me to disguise you.

"Impossible replied the Abbe, "I can not be," and he proceeded to relate the circumstances that had brought him to prison, and how he had made to his fellow-prisoner, adding that however terrible death might be it would be nothing compared with the remorse he should ever after feel were he at this moment to abandon a fellow-creature in distress.

The friend knew him but too well to entertain any hopes of his altering this determination, and he left the prison with a heart sad for the fate of the relation he loved so warmly, at the same time full of admiration for his self-sacrifice. The two companions so unfortunate thus again left alone passed most of the night in prayer, conversation and prayer, and when the soldiers the following morning came to conduct them to the fatal spot where they were to suffer, they found them ready and willing to follow.

The smuggler was the first to ascend the scaffold, and as he left the side of the doomed priest he heard the holy words of absolution which the priest pronounced over the prisoners should not be allowed to speak to each other. The Abbe met his fate with the calmness and resignation that one would expect from him, he felt this world but a few minutes after the fatal axe had ended the life of his penitent, and soon both appeared at the judgment seat of God, where we may hope the smuggler had that pardon ratified to him which he had received on Earth from the man whom he had so deeply injured.

How London Bridge was Built.

Once on a time, says the legend, when London Bridge was not, there was but a ferry. The ferryman's name was Hearne, and he had a lovely daughter Mary, whom another was dead, and who had promised her hand to a certain noble knight. Hearne was one of the meanest of men, thrifty even to marring point. He was, in short, a miser, and in his traitor endeavor to keep down his household expenses to a minimum, a strange idea occurred to him. This was to forget himself dead, so that for grief at his demise he remained for one day at least, would entirely refrain from food. And so the old man carefully locked his larder and wine cellars and simulated death. He was "laid out," and measured for his coffin, and he kept himself stiff and still, and chuckled internally at his new device for reducing his expenditure. Also instead of grieving over the loss of their miserly master, the household rejoiced exceedingly. Headed by the cheery apprentice, they broke into the larder, and prepared the only good dinner they had had for months. Fancy the ferryman's dismay as he lay all silent and deserted on stairs supposed to be dead and yet listening to all that passed in the room below. He heard the dinner ordered, and these cases must be feeding at his expense. And he could hear them in full swing, rule and merry. The meat was carved, and the wine

PRACTICAL CATHOLICS.

To Be Catholic Merely in Name is to Glorifiably Insulting.

Bad Catholics are those who do not practise their tongues. They neglect, but cannot deny their faith of the assertion for all that. We call a man bad or good with regard to what he does his work well. We say "he is a good mechanic," or "he is good apostle of his capability, but also of his practice. We go further and say that he is good in spite of it he has the capability and doesn't exercise it in his trade or profession. We assert that a man who can, but will not, is not worthy of consideration. We say he has everything in his work hands. If he fails he fails because he does not exert himself, and is, therefore, unworthy of our pity.

How is it with a Catholic? He has every thing in this world found that whoever commands him to hear the Church, that gives him grace accordingly which will be to practice his faith as a Christian. What can he ask for that he has not ready to his hand? Did God not send his son that he might only bring forth thorns, offences against God, as the fruit of his life? He knows his duty to God, his neighbor and himself, and, therefore, cannot plead ignorance.

The Bishops and pastors of the Church are continually explaining those duties to the faithful. Those who are ignorant must say, I could have known them, but would not." What will God say to them when they are called before His throne of justice? They cannot dare expect the sentence of the just, for they have despised the commandments of God, tells us that the time will come when He will judge, but the destruction of those who put off their conversion from day to day.

We are about to enter a holy season, the time of Advent. We have been stirring our souls with Christ's Church during Sexagesima before the altar of God, begging for peace and the fulfilment of God's promises throughout the whole world, but how can we expect God to hear us unless we make clear our own souls? We should ask our selves how it is with us. Are we improving the time which God has given us to work out our salvation?

The Feast of All Saints is gone by, and the commemoration of all the faithful departed is at hand. We have seen some days of grace and mercy. The first was a day of grace to conversion, the second a day for energy on our part to the poor souls of those gone before us. We must answer for our every talent that God gives to us, and the day of reckoning is near at hand. Life is short and we cannot prove the day of our death or, if we would, had fancy with God when he calls us from life. If we live in order for the poor souls, how may we expect the prayers of the Church for ourselves when we are dead?

Do as you would be done by, was good motto to follow in our actions towards the living and the dead. If you, kind reader, have never rendered a your duty towards the dead on All Souls Day, do not forget it for the rest of this month of November. Join the millions of the Church in praying for the souls departed. Be a child of the Church in deed and in truth, and extend to those who have the charity you will one day need your selves.

Teach your children, parents, to pray for the dead. Tell them of those that are near to them by blood, affinity and friendship, but who are no longer of this world. Remind them of the poor priests who labored for you in times gone by, and who are now, perhaps, of the Church Suffering. Tell them of the fathers known to you when they lived and ask them to pray for them. Tell them of those who have passed away from parents, relatives and friends, and cause them to pray by praying for them in family prayers.

Hold help the unfortunate family in which there are no family night prayers at least. The children of such families often wander from their faith, for the reason that they have been taught to practice it at home. Say the Rosary every night during November for the poor souls and God will bless your family. Amen!

S. S. M.

A Conversion by Means of the Rosary.

A famous preacher of the last century, relates that early one morning to hear the confessions of a man strictly speaking, unknown to the house, he found him in a state of consciousness. The man confessed to the church, and offered for the dying man the votive Mass of the Blessed Virgin. Scarcely had he taken off the vestments, when a servant came to say that his master had regained his speech. Upon returning to the house, he perceived, the priest found him ready to confess, and he made amends for the deepest repentance, and offering his life to God in expiation for his sins. The priest at once heard his confession and administered the last Sacraments.

Not knowing to what this happy death might be attributed, the servant observed that he considered the circumstances somewhat extraordinary.

"Father," replied the dying man, "I can only attribute the great grace I have received to the prayers of my beloved wife, who on her death-bed also called on me to pray, telling me of the dangers to which my poor soul exposed me, she said: 'The only consolation I have, my son, is that I have up to under the protection of the Blessed Virgin. Promise me to say your Rosary every day.' I promised, and for ten years I have been faithful act of religion I have performed."

At these words the confessor recognized the visible protection of the Blessed Virgin, which continued to be manifest until the sufferer drew his last breath.

The Love of Mother.

He was about to die for a cold-blooded murder. Standing beneath the gallows he made a short talk. He spoke of intemperance, of his evil ways, of his disregard of his wife and children, of his neglect of God, of his disobedience to his parents, of his profane and cursing habits, of his Sabbath-breaking, of his gambling, of his dishonesty, of his lying, of his hatred of his fellow-men, of his murderous thoughts, of his murderous deed, and then he said:

"But there is one love I have kept pure and true and with the Engineer Memoulian and the Indian General Mejias, a full blooded Aztec. Mrs. Miramon witnessed all the cruelties of the Imperial Period, and accompanied to the place of execution of her husband. Her recollections of imperial authority are so horrid that memories are related in the tenderness of a woman's style, and it is the more to be regretted, as the expression of sentiment is the most impressive. They abound in details which Gonzales has not included, and the more intimate knowledge I facts disclosed, think other writers have not been in a position to make as prominent in their histories or publications. Following is an illustration of the character of the interesting work, being now published in Mexico, relating to the last days at Queretaro. The Emperor Maximilian. In the Convent of the Capuchin Order, a lonely quadrangular structure of the present architectural kind, I found six chamber, unpretentious cities, prison in a sense, the condemned prisoners were confined, preparatory to the climax scene in the tragedy.

In the first time, I, nothing remarkable occurred. I visited the Emperor, and he received me in a cordial manner, and conversed with me in a cordial manner, and conversed with me in a kind manner. He was in good health and spirits. Mexico, relating to the Emperor Maximilian, and the Empress Carlotta, and the Emperor Maximilian, and the Empress Carlotta, and the Emperor Maximilian, and the Empress Carlotta, and

THE MONITOR.
THIRTY-FIRST YEAR OF PUBLICATION
THE MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1887
THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR.
A Double Issue for a Doubly Great Occasion.

OF the consequence of the forthcoming CHRISTMAS MONITOR containing two illustrated Supplements—a Christmas Supplement and a Jubilee Supplement, making a Double Number of the MONITOR, we are compelled to go to press much earlier than usual, and all contributions (whether in prose or poetry) for the Christmas Monitor, must reach the office of the Monitor on or before Saturday November 26th, inst. Subscribers and all persons who desire to procure extra copies of the Double Number of the Christmas Monitor should send in the names now and ten cents per copy for all copies desired, so as to avoid disappointment by delay. The Christmas Monitor will be printed on the finest of tinted paper with engravings such specially for it by Moses, Oliver & Co., of this city, and it will be the largest and best Catholic Christmas paper ever issued in the United States.

Some copies to send to your friends at home and abroad now, or you may be sorry. If you do not, you may have a great deal to be sorry for, there is a great demand for the Christmas Monitor.

JUBILEE INDULGENCES.

Letters Apostolic, in form of Brief, granting Indulgences to Pilgrims on occasion of the Sacerdotal Jubilee of the Sovereign Pontiff and to those who unite themselves in spirit to such pious pilgrimage.

LEO XIII., POPE.

To all the Faithful who shall read these present Letters, Health and Apostolic Benediction.

As the first day of the New Year approaches, when, with the help of God, We shall celebrate Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, all the nations of the world and all classes of society, with one heart and one mind, rejoice exceedingly, and amid the many trials of the times in which by the Will of God We occupy the august See of St. Peter, they in a most admirable manner solemnly testify to Us their faith, love, veneration, and good wishes. For this We give glory to God, Who consoles Us in Our trials, and We beseech Him to bless this Christian people and to grant it long desired peace and concord.

Touched by these sincere displays of devotion and solid piety, and yielding to the requests made us, that Our children in all parts from their Father's house should participate in the benefits of the dispensation. Wherefore, relying on the mercy of God Almighty and on the authority of the holy Apostles, Peter and Paul, We grant in the Lord a Plenary Indulgence and remission of all sins to all and each of the faithful of either sex who shall come on pilgrimage to Rome, on occasion of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, in order to bear public and manifest witness to the piety and devotion of their ancestors, and to render honor and proper obedience to that supreme authority with which God has clothed Us. In like manner to all Cities or Dioceses of either sex who follow and accompany in mind and heart such pilgrimages to Rome, and also to those who in any way whatever promote the success of such pious journeys, if they make a Novena, reciting daily the third part of the Holy Rosary, before the day of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, that is, before the first day of next January, and if they repeat the same Novena during the time fixed for the audience of these pious pilgrimages, and truly contrite, and having confessed and received Holy Communion, they visit their parish church, or some other church or public oratory, and there offer their pious prayers to God for the concord of Christian princes, for the extirpation of heresies, for the conversion of sinners, and the exaltation of their Holy Mother Church. We grant in the Lord a Plenary Indulgence and remission of all sins on the day of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee as well as on the feast day that shall follow immediately the Novena repeated at the choice of each one at the time above fixed. Moreover to all and each of those who shall exercise heart and soul Novenas, We remit for each day of the Novena, in the usual form prescribed by the Church, three hundred days of penance that they may in any way have incurred, or may be due from them. All and each of these Indulgences, remission of sins, and dispensations from penances, We grant so that they may be applicable to the souls in Purgatory, and We desire that they be granted only for this year. Lastly, We desire, all things to the contrary notwithstanding, that these scriptions or copies, even printed, of these present Letters, signed by a Notary Public and sealed by some constituted ecclesiastical dignitary, shall be accepted, as if these Letters themselves were shown or exhibited.

Given at Rome, near St. Peter's, under the seal of the Fisherman, this first day of October, 1887, in the tenth year of Our Pontificate.

M. CARD. LEDOCHOWSKI.

—"Casting a slur on the women of Canada," is the charge which is wired to this west against Hight Rev. James V. Cleary, Bishop of Kingston, Ontario, by some Orange ruffian who formulated the charge solely in order to gratify his hatred against the Catholic Church. Bishop Cleary never said that Canadian girls were "wild, immodest, uncontrollable and altogether improper," but he was a fanatic foolish enough to believe the vile charge of some slanderous scoundrel.

—A cablegram from Rome announces that the Pope has nominated a commission to examine his project to found an extensive charitable institution for the benefit of the working classes to commemorate the Jubilee. He proposes that the sum of $200,000 be raised to start the institution.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Most Rev. Bernard Finegan, Bishop of Kilmore, Ireland, died at Kilmore, County Westford, on the 11th inst. R. I. P.

—The business establishment of the Catholic Publication Company of New York was destroyed by fire on the 9th inst.

—Cardinal Taschereau admitted himself from the Premier's reception at Quebec because learned that the ladies costumes would be decolleté.

—Signor Zazzar has published a letter in which he says that conciliation with the Vatican will take place in spite of the Masonic seals.

—A dispatch from Vienna, of the 19th inst., says that the Papal Nuncio to Bavaria to attend the Pope's Jubilee, will start for Holy City on Monday, headed by Cardinal Limer. The Hungarian Episcopal committee yesterday handed Monsignor Galimberti, Papal Nuncio, £23,000 for the Pope. Numerous other valuable presents have been sent to His Holiness.

—Every Catholic will be glad to learn that of the 10,000 priests in Prussia where Bismarck's anti-Catholic crusade commenced some dozen years ago, not more than fifty turned traitors to God and His Church. And now that the Church has come out of the conflict triumphant, it is still more gratifying to know that of those fifty there are only two left upon whom the grace of repentance has not as yet fallen.

—The Catholic Columbian is of the opinion that the recent appointment of Edward Fitzgerald, Bishop of Little Rock, to be Administrator of the Archdiocese of New Orleans, taken in connection with the amount of episcopal labor performed by him in the Archdiocese of late, would indicate a strong probability that the Bishop is likely to be made Archbishop of New Orleans.

—John Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National League of America, seems to be precisely "the right man in the right place." He seems an apostle to rich Irishmen in America through our columns this week, and he heads the list of subscriptions himself by a generous donation of one thousand dollars! We anxiously await the receipt of subscriptions from rich Pacific Coast Irishmen, and hope sincerely that they will not desert Ireland now when she needs money to crown her long struggle for liberty with certain victory.

—The wonderful growth of the Church in the Eastern States is well illustrated by the following statistics of the Diocese of Brooklyn which Bishop Loughlin took charge of in 1853, when there were only eight Catholic churches in Brooklyn, and ten others scattered over Long Island, with twenty-three priests. Now there are more than twenty-five hundred priests adjoining the new cathedral in Clermont and DeKalb Avenues is rapidly approaching completion, and early next year it will be occupied by the Bishop.

—The loyalty of the Catholics of St. Stephen's parish, New York, was demonstrated recently in a very gratifying and substantial manner by the liberality with which they responded to the appeal of Archbishop Corrigan for a special Peter's Pence collection for Pope Leo XIII., which was taken up in all the Catholic churches throughout the Archdiocese of New York on Sunday, October 30. It has been officially announced that this collection amounted to $1,247 in St. Stephen's Church, and the members of the congregation were thanked during every service for their liberality on that occasion. Last year St. Stephen's Church gave only $397 24. The collections in the other New York city churches on the occasion were as follows: Cathedral, $7,000; Church of the Transfiguration, $2,943; Paulist church, $1,350; St. Francis Xavier $1,100; St. Ann's, $1,005; St. Michael's, $1,053.

—Some friends in Oregon have sent us marked copies of the Oregon City Enterprise containing a farewell kick at the Church by the Clackamas county curse—Rev. J. C. Taylor, whom we castigated very severely on a recent occasion. We see nothing in this brazen bigot's recent effusion, however, to call for any further notice at our hands. The Monitor's foulmouth seems to have knocked this preacher silly, hence he can only repeat his former twaddle concerning questions upon which we proved him to have falsified scripture, history and fact. Our "attempt" to reply to this ranegade enemy of the Church was made mainly at the request of Oregon Catholics who felt ashamed to have Taylor's slander distributed in their midst whilst the score from which they expected a defence remained as dumb as a dead oyster. Under such circumstances the Monitor will always be glad to "attempt" a defence of the Church and Catholic truth which some of our contemporaries seem either too indolent or too ignorant to make.

—Cardinal Gibbons recently officiated at the religious profession of some Sisters in New Orleans, and in the course of a brief sermon on the consecrated life, he said that the habit did not make the monk nor the nun. If the heart is not also clothed in the robes it is a mockery in the eyes of God. The life of the nun must be similar to that of the Saviour in as many respects as possible. They cannot work miracles as the Lord has wrought. It was consoling to know that the same privileges are address granted by the Lord to mortals for their own benefit. It was done for the benefit of others. If it were so it would not increase our sanctity and hope of blessedness. The same soul and same life is given to all, but they could enlighten the ignorant; they could not make the deaf hear, but they could admonish others of the duties of this life; they could give bread to the hungry, drink to the thirsty, consolation to others, and in these ways be of great service to society. There was no doubt that the religious life was of social service. Its members went out and made others happy. Never did perfection approach nearer to the Lord than when they caused happiness to shine in the hearts of others.

Protestant Pupils in Catholic Schools.

"There are, says the local Methodist organ, "two thousand Protestant girls in convent schools in the Canadian Province of Ontario." The question, therefore, naturally arises: Why, thousands of Protestant parents send their daughters to Catholic schools? The answer is very plain and obvious. Catholic parents, Catholic mothers, under charge of priests, virtuous Sisters trained to teaching, and whose lives are spent in an atmosphere whose morality is absolutely excluded and entirely unknown, young ladies grow up in the grace of God under the guardianship of His consecrated Virgins. Even Protestant preachers themselves have at length discovered that in order to have their daughters trained in virtue and womanly graces, it is necessary to commit them to the charge of Sisters whose every day practice is a living lesson of chaste deportment and ladylike virtue to those committed to their training.

Among the "two thousand Protestant girls" in Catholic schools in Toronto, were the daughters of Rev. Dr. Egerton Ryerson, a distinguished Methodist minister and Literary Superintendent of Education in Ontario. When the Methodist brethren learned this fact they at once raised a howl of indignation at the "outrage" perpetrated by one of their preachers who thus "fraternized with accused of "Popery." The more intolerant and ignorant Methodists commanded Rev. Dr. Ryerson to withdraw his daughters forthwith from the "dangerous" citadel of Popery within the convent walls, but Dr. Ryerson very sensibly told his co-religionists that his children were his own, and as he wanted them to grow up good, virtuous and intelligent young ladies—a credit to themselves and their parents—he proposed to educate them in a school where he knew they would be perfectly safe from the sinful wiles of the world, and where no taint of sins against chastity could sully their virtuous souls.

For daring thus to exercise his parental rights and his inalienable independence, Rev. Dr. Ryerson was hoopoolled by his bitterly bigoted bible brethren; his society was shunned by his Wesleyan co-religionists, and as a crowning blot both his social and religious position became in connection with the brethren who are supposed to dwell in harmony together, that he was at length unjustly deprived of his license to preach the gospel which inculcates peace and goodwill among all Christian people.

Such was the action of Methodist sectarians towards a Methodist preacher who manifested independence even superior to all sectarian bondage, and we cite this case in order to show the relentless rigor of Methodism towards its preachers if they dare not discover one of their co-religionists fastening the bonds of slavery with which Methodism commands its victims when they come within the web of Wesleyanism.

Nearly all the respectable element among our Methodist community of every sect, the reason that they have tried their own schools and found them wanting. Too late, many cases, they found that their daughters had formed acquaintances among visiting gentlemen which were far from being desirable and which in some cases—bright and beautiful as they were—ended in the ruin of the existence of the fairest flower that grew in the parental heart. They also discovered from experience that the natural modesty of the young maiden had been lamentably impaired by association with boisterous graduates. And so notorious have some so called non-Catholic female academies become for the ruin of innocence and morals that public sentiment has been given and the reputation of more respectable educational institutions damaged through such ruinous schools.

We heartily congratulate, therefore, the two thousand Protestant young ladies who have entered the Catholic schools of Ontario. They have wise parents whose daughters will be restored to them without blemish, well grounded in Christian morality and well versed in all those virtues calculated to adorn the female heart and to make her a worthy representative of chastity and worthy to be an heir to the joyed heaven hereafter.

The Week in Ireland.

The cable news from Ireland this week is very meagre. Written still languishes in suffering in Tullamore jail, where it is likely he will die at no very distant day, unless the other Irish patriots have been provided by the new torture inflicted upon them by order of the English power in Ireland.

It is reported that when Mr. Gilhooly, a member of Parliament, came out yesterday from Dublin Castle, after a long interview with Mr. Payne, Member of Parliament, he will return to Castle, defying the attack which is threatened. Mr. Dougthy, the labor delegate from England, who was arrested recently on charges of violating the Coercion Act, has been sentenced to one month's imprisonment at the Ennis Petty Sessions with hard labor.

In consequence of Mr. Parnell's absence at this critical hour in Ireland's destiny having been commented on, he has written a letter to the news agency stating that he does not intend to speak during the Parliamentary recess, as his doctors have advised him to avoid excitement, which would probably bring on chills. He has been warned against undue exertion. Parnell remarks that his health is not yet sufficiently improved. He is now staying at Hastings, where he will remain during the winter, unless the weather he comes severe as to compel him to go to Egypt. Mr. William Redmond, a prominent Nationalist, has been sentenced at Mitchelstown to three months' imprisonment at hard labor for intimidation. His solicitor with drew from court, alleging that the wages treats was prejudiced.

Concerning the quandary in which the British Government finds itself, it is noted that the Tories are in hot water because of the Parnell commission, which was forced upon them by the Liberals. The Liberals are in a state of confusion because of the Coercion Act, and the Parnell party are in a state of uncertainty as to what the Government will do with the Coercion Act when it comes under it. There is a great deal of speculation as to what will happen to the Government if the Liberals should vote against the Coercion Act, and Parnell and his party should vote against it. Some think that the Government would resign, and Bishop Ireland, influence Sir Jos. Jesuson, and to the mind of the country upon the Church as the source of light upon well-equipped schools, colleges and universities. The tide of moral evil is rising, intemperance, dishonesty, wickedness of all kinds is spreading around us the hall of death. We must reach out even into the deep waters of sin, protect the struggling, wave the victim of poison from the jaws of death, strike terror into evil doers, influence for good public legislation. Souls are being lost, agents of Satan surround us, the saloons and gambling dens, our streets run red with poverty and sin, and we, meanwhile, are solemnly in the sanctuary, kneel in our closets, and say our prayers, thank God that we are not as other men, and before our work done, during not who we have prayed are wicked and the sorry stories of sin that are ravaging the world. Are we guilty before God? Have leaders among Catholics and Protestants been guilty of this day? Are they quick to hear every cry of distress, to frown collar or garret, from factory or mine, from prison or alms-house? Have they made the people feel that the Church is their friend and Saviour even as He, of whom it was said, "He went about doing good?" Does the world at this moment turn to the Church as it should, to see in her the refuge and hope? Does it not know the refuge and hope is outside of her bosom? And if not, are we without blame?

In America do we, more than such duties, inculcate the spirit of the age, do we touch with our hands as we ought, the Catholics in Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington

Farm and Home.

AFFECTION FOR FRIENDS.

Some Important Suggestions.

It is curious how many persons consider themselves at perfect liberty to treat their friends with the most cool indifference. I know a lady once who sent an intimate acquaintance a note scribbled on a piece of brown wrapping paper, a thing she would never have dared to do to a stranger. What will you be polite to the world, and insult those you profess to love? For whom should you make your most careful toilet, for whom reserve your sweetest smile, your most charming conversation, if not for your dearest friends? Yet how often is it otherwise. I stood once near a beautiful lady at a fashionable reception. In the course of a short conversation she dropped both her handkerchief and fan. The former was returned to her by a gentleman, to whom she bowed the most polite acknowledgement. The latter was restored to her by another gentleman, to whom she did not even lift her eyes. My curiosity was roused, and I asked a friend in the vicinity of the little pantomime if she could explain the enigma. "Oh, yes," she answered, readily, "the gentleman who handed her the handkerchief is Captain Dunbam; the other is only her husband." Only her husband! What use to waste a courteous expression on him! Only her husband! She will keep her radiant smiles for a stranger's admiration! Only husband! No need to lift the beautiful dark eyes to his familiar face. Their bright glances are reserved for him who is but a passing acquaintance. Only your wife, your daughter, your sister, my anxious mother! Ye gods! You need not raise your hat to these, if no one is looking. You will meet a lady present by whom you can, if it gallantly enough. She is somebody's wife, or daughter, or sister; that is the difference, too. Alas! alas! What is it Emerson says? "Treat your friend as if he were a god. And why not? What have you beside your friend, whether he be husband, or brother, or son, or lover, whether she be wife, or sister, or daughter, or sweetheart, or whether the word signify only the one whom you love most? You can live without the world. The business of life is jests and hollow shams and slows are not essential to your happiness. They will pass away. The fire of ambition will burn out, the zone of success be reached, the goal of earthly fame and wealth and honor be attained, all that you seek by work and toil perhaps, but what then? Can you live without your friend? No, no, a thousand times no. Let her be your constant delight, your never-failing inspiration, your ideal, your refuge, your strength. Let your every act be an exponent of your love for her.

The World's Greatest Clock.

The Waterbury, (Connecticut) Watch Company has almost finished its wonderful clock, which in its mechanism, is said to surpass the famous clock at Strasburg. It will be completed by early autumn, and will then be on exhibition in several of the leading cities of the United States. No one has yet seen it but the builders. The clock is 18 feet high, with a base of 7 feet, the width is 8 feet, and it is 6 1-2 feet deep. Clearly all the choice and expensive varieties of wood enter into its construction, also a considerable variety of metals. The cabinet work throughout is a marvel of beauty. Five long years have been consumed in its construction; sometimes four, at others five men have been engaged at the work. Time is indicated in the usual manner by hours, minutes and seconds; in addition to these, days, months, sidereal and thirty-seconds. The day of the week, month and year may also be taken from the dial. The number of wheels, pairs, pinions, springs, and other parts of the mechanism is legion, all of which contribute to most wonderful and amazing exhibitions of intricate events. The several phases of the moon are indicated. The entire system of the planets and solar systems are shown in perfect form in all the varied revolutions. A perfect system of astronomy may be studied from the ingenious mechanism. Many hundred figures represent distinguished clergymen, lawyers, physicians, orators, poets, musicians, sculptors, artist and actors; also distinguished men of all nations. These figures are said to be carved in wood from correct likenesses, and are most complete representations. The signers of the Declaration of Independence assembled as represented in history, the cabinet of Lincoln when the emancipation proclamation was signed, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, several scenes at the centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, and noted scenes and historical events as represented in the Bible have a prominent place. Shakespeare plays are set out with character true to the representations of the author and the modern setting at the theatre, with dresses and costumes to correspond. Figures and fashions of dress, both ancient and modern, down to the latest period, are among the curiosities. A multitude of amusing scenes will all one the measure of this wonderful clock. It is safe to say that it will surpass any other mechanical structure of the kind ever produced.

A Family's Best Welfare.

A man is anxious for the welfare of his family, and willing to work hard for it; what steps does he take to compass so worthy an end? Thinking in a crude and narrow way that money and happiness are convertible terms, he proceeds to absorb himself body and soul, in the pursuit of money. Now undoubtedly a generous family needs money; but it also needs much also that money can buy; yet of all this he thinks not. He cannot give them the time, his thought, his judgment, his influence, for they are all divided away in his single pursuit. It is perhaps needless to say that a family's best welfare cannot be thus attained. The aim is good, but the method is insufficient. He has missed the road, and cannot reach the goal.

Removing Warts.

In answer to various inquiries, let me say that I have for years cured wart very easily on all animals, no matter where located, by applying bayer of saltpetre with a feather two or three times, at intervals of two or three days. If the warts are dry scaled I scarpe them lightly at first. It simply dries the wart down to a hardness, when it drops off without saving any sense or irritation. The best milking cow which I own I produced out of a drove of bad mils on account of her superiority in having all the excellent milking points, and the discovery that her teats were literally covered with pointed warts, which no doubt was the reason why she had been fattened and sold.

Small Trials.

"I know," says St. Francis de Sales "that little annoyances are more harassing than great ones, because of their number and importunity. Domestic annoyances are more unendurable than those that come from without; but I also know that the victory gained over the former is more acceptable to God than such as attract the attention of the world, and are falsely deemed more meritorious," which means that virtues are to be valued more by the love of God, which inspires them, than by their natural worth.

Family Fun.

Little Laughlets.

—Old Lady (very much shocked). Little boys, what are you playing "shinny" for on the Sabbath day?

Little Boys. We're playin' fer keeps is game.

—Man—As your first baby is a boy, I suppose you have the privilege of naming it.

Young Father—Yes, sirre. I wouldn't allow any one else to name that chunk.

—"Have you thought of a good name for him yet?"

—"Yes; I've got, splendid names, just the thing, but they won't stay of them too."

—"Why not?"

"My wife won't have 'em."

—Smith—You look a little mussed up, Brown.

Brown—I should my so! I've just had a row with my mother-in-law, and I'll be hanged if she didn't put one out of the house. The house belongs to her, you know.

Smith—You told me a day or two ago that your mother-in law was very feeble.

Brown—Yes, I meant feeble for her.

—Smith—Do you know a young man named Tom Barsty?

Jones—I do.

—"Well, he wants a position in my office as cashier. Is he a good business man; is he capable?

"Capable! I should say so. He is capable of anything. He was a private secretary of a New York Alderman for several years. There is nothing he is not capable of doing."

—Consul (to sitters)—Is it possible, Uncle Reuben, that you would swear to what you know is not true for a single paltry dollar?

Uncle Reuben (indignantly)—No, sah! de gummun gyve me $2.

"And now," said the pastor, at the close of his sermon, "I will ask a hymn in the congregation who are outstanding and backsliding, or who desire or expect ever to be numbered among the redeemed, to come before the throne." Immediately a number of men and women rose and walked down the aisle, looking benignantly to the direction of the pulpit as they do so, "seeing ordinarily invited to remain.

—Tommy walked home with the minister last Sunday, and the latter complained of exhaustion.

"Tired out, eh?" said Tommy.

"Yes, and the reverend, "completely worn up, mentally and physically. I actually strained my back getting up this morning's sermon.

"Oh," said Tommy, musingly, "you must be very near the bottom of the barrel."

—Mr. Bumps—I saw you taking a horseback ride this morning. Your own hoss?

Mr. Wumps—No; only a livery hack.

"He looked like a very fine charger."

"No I thought until I paid the bill. Then the owner of the stable cast him all in the shade."

—Little Tommy (who has never been out of the city before)—Oh! Oh! Oh!

Lady—What's the matter, Tommy?

Little Tommy—Why, what a big sky they've got here, mun.

A Double Advance.

In the ante bellum days, a New York State grocer sold the best price of a certain grade of tea "from three shillings" to forty-five cents, and an old farmer who came in with a barrel of cider-vinegar to sell, could hardly credit his senses when told that his favorite brand of tea had advanced several cents per pound.

"What on earth is the reason for this sudden rise?" he inquired.

"Scarcity of tea chests," was the brief answer.

"Well, do you want my vinegar?"

"How much?"

"Eight cents a gallon."

"I only paid you seven for the last."

"Yes, but cider has risen, you see."

"What has brought cider up?" asked the astonished grocer.

"Scarcity of hemp hole plugs," was the quiet but serious reply.

They looked at each other without winking, and then the tea dropped back to thirty-eight and the cider vinegar to seven.

Too Much for the Indian.

A detachment of soldiers being suddenly attacked by the Indians, fired their mountain howitzer without removing it from the back of the mule that was carrying it, the result of which was that the mule and howitzer went rolling down the declivity toward the end of the world, in consternation. One of the Indians being captured, and asked why he ran so, replied: "Me big Injun; not afraid of little gun on big gun, but when white man load up and fire whole jackass, Injun don't know what to do."

The Lime-kiln Club.

"Am Col. Wood-and-De Hoper in de hall dis evenin'," blandly inquired Brother Gardner as the meeting softly opened on the usual degree.

The Colonel was in the hall. He had just taken off his shoes and was about to put down a corn with Washboise Hawkers white handled razor. Where he reached the President's desk the latter continued

"Brodder De Hoper, de report on circumvangiatin' around dat you hav a call to go forth and preach."

"Yo, yah, sah."

"When did de call come?"

"Bout six weeks ago, sah."

"Dat was about de time you was sot out doahs for not payin' yer rent."

"Yes, sah."

"I thought so; and now you feel it yer duty to spread de gospel."

"Yo, sah."

"Well, Brudder De Hoper, I want to make a few observations to you. Of all de members of dis club you an' de most shiftless. You aim low on money, you do less work, you have less to eat and to wear, your clothes are ragged an' your wife discouraged, an' you haven't got neff personal property to fill an old wheelbarrer. You're lazy, shiftless, low, you ought to be easier an' you'd rather hit on preachin'. You want to go out and warn de people to be honest, upright, industrious and sevin—jus what you ain't. You want to talk about de children of Egypt while yours are in rags and dirt. You want to give de Judge Israel a raking down for his thirty pieces of silver, while you'd sell out for fifteen, Brudder De Hoper."

"W—what, sah?"

"If one dog hosts de cause of religion mo' dan another it is in such possons as you gave around de kaintry, claimin' to represent de gospel. Why, sah, de Lord neber chose hand of you an' dose' want to! A man who would portend to git religion to drive preachin' ortser to be sent to jail."

Brother De Hoper's spectacles out his breath, and the bald spot on his head tried to show all the colors of the rainbow.

The way to make money is to save it. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, as it is the only medicine of which one hundred doses can be purchased for one dollar. Do not take any other preparation if you have decided to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIAMOND DYES

COLOR EVERYTHING.

Unequalled for Silk, Wool, Cotton and Mixed Goods. Fast Colors. Brilliant, Durable and Economical. Unprecedented success.

32 COLORS—10 CENTS EACH.

Remember, these are the only Pure, Harmless and Unadulterated Dyes.

Beware of other Dyes, because often Poisonous, Adulterated, Weak and Worthless.

Warranted three Dyes to color more than Dyes for any other purpose, three times as much as any other package, given more brilliant and durable colors. Sample card free.

THE DIAMOND PAINTS, GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE and COPPER

For Gilding Fancy Baskets, Frames, Leaves, Gilt Edging, Gilding Moldings, Gilding Ornaments, Gilding Mottoes, Gilding Signs, Gilding Ornamental Work, Gilding Fancy Articles, Gilding Toys, Gilding Furniture, Gilding Ornaments, Gilding Fancy Boxes, Gilding Fancy Baskets, Gilding Fancy Articles, Gilding Everything. Sold everywhere, many times over, by Druggists everywhere. Send stamp for Diamond Dye Book, Diamond Paint Book, Gilding Book, Fancy Work Book, Sent free. ALEN, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

YOU CAN ORDER A BOOK OF

IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN

GOVERNMENT BOND.

INDEX 1873.

These bonds are always worth the Interest of Ten Dollars Yearly, Every Three years Twenty Dollars is added to the principal.

Three Drawings Annually.

Each and every bond is redeemable at a large or smaller premium. Every bond must drawn a premium. Every bond must drawn.

NO BLANKS.

Premiums	Amount	Total
1	$50,000	$50,000
1	10,000	10,000
2	5,000	10,000
5	1,000	5,000
10	500	5,000
100	100	10,000
1,000	50	50,000
1,150	40	46,000

Together 1,170 premiums, amounting to one million of dollars. The next drawing takes place on the

FIRST OF DECEMBER,

and every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THE 1st of DECEMBER, 1873, is a chance to share in the above premiums that may be years thereon on that day.

Out of town orders will be EXECUTED LETTER, in same way as if on the spot. Time lost by the post drawing. Income payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,

100 Fulton St., cor. EWY, New York City.

ESTABLISHED IN 1871.

The above Government Bonds are not to be confounded with any Lottery whatsoever, as lately conducted by the Gift Enterprise Dodge, and do not conflict with any of the laws of the United States.

P. S.—In writing please state that you saw this in THE MONITOR.

Tutt's Pills

ANTI-BILIOUS MEDICINE.

In malarial districts their virtues are widely recognized, as the most powerful alterative properties in freeing the system from the poison of malaria, they are unrivalled. Sugar coated. Buy small. Price, 25cts.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 767.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Second Hands, Gardeners, Farmers, Farm Hands, Coachmen, Grooms, Boys for Large Families, Pantry Men, Waiters, Chambermaids, Nurses, Seamstresses, Laundresses, Cooks

OUR SCHOOLS.

Parochial Schools no New Idea

PROTESTANT OPPOSITION TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Some Objections Answered.

Now that certain demagogues are trying to make political capital out of the school question, and attempting to arouse the people against the Catholic church by falsely asserting that Catholic priests are plotting the destruction of the public school system, the statement of a few plain facts bearing upon the question of religious education and the Catholic school policy may not be out of place. In the first place, it is well to assert that the policy of the Catholic church in recommending here now the establishment of parochial schools for the education of Catholic children is no new departure. The parochial school has always been regarded by Catholic pastors as an establishment second in necessity only to the church, for every well-ordained parish. In Catholic countries the church and the school-house are always to be found side by side, and even in this country the parochial school has long been an established fact, especially among the German Catholics, who, to their great credit, have always erected a school house as soon as they built a church, and, in some instances, the schoolhouse was given the preference over the church, and made to serve for the latter on Sundays and holidays. All through the western and northwestern States, the Catholic schoolhouse has been in existence for years, and yet no complaint has ever been made that its establishment went warfare upon the public schools. It was reserved for

THE RIGHTS OF NEW ENGLAND

to make that accusation against the Irish-American Catholics, when the latter began to copy the methods of their co-religionists in the west and northwest, and to carry on the educational policy which has always and everywhere characterized the Catholic church. Perhaps the hostility to the parochial school here in New England does not arise so much from the antagonism of the bigots who object to Catholicity, as from their inherent prejudice against Irish Americans, who, heretofore, constitute the majority of the Catholic population. Whatever motives may prompt this hostility, however, the parochial school needs no defence either for existing or for the system of education it follows. As far as the State is concerned, Catholics have a perfect and unimpeachable right to send their children to what ever school they deem best fitted for their education, and, all contrary assertions notwithstanding, Catholic parents are practically unanimous in preferring the parochial to the public school and the educational system of the former to that of the latter. Nor are Catholics the only ones who are dissatisfied with the public school, or who consider the schools ill adapted for the present needs of the country. A few years ago

PRESIDENT ELIOT OF HARVARD COLLEGE,

before meeting of the school teachers of this city, declared that "the great problem is that of combining religious with secular education. This was no problem sixty or seventy years ago, for then our people were homogeneous. Now, the population is heterogeneous. Religious teaching can best be combined with secular teaching and flourish in countries of heterogeneous population, like Germany, Austria, France and Switzerland, where the government pays for the instruction, and the religious teachers belonging to different denominations are admitted to the public schools at fixed times. That is the only way out of the difficulty. I see, growing up on every side parochial schools—that is, Catholic schools—which take large numbers of children out of the public schools of this city. That is a great misfortune, and the remedy is to admit religious instructors to teach those children in the public schools. This is what is done in Europe. And all those who are strongly interested in the successful maintenance of our public school system will urge the adoption of the method I have described for religious education." This is pretty plain language, and the Harvard President is not the only man, by any means, whose dissatisfaction with the present public school system could be quoted. The action of hundreds and

THOUSANDS OF PROTESTANT PARENTS, who refuse to send their children to schools in which no religious or moral lessons are taught, would, of itself, if other things are wanting, be a sufficient complaint against the present system, and an ample justification of the Catholic parochial school. It is undeniably over a year now since the president of the Harvard uttered the words above quoted, and submitted his plans for the remedy of the evils he frankly admitted existed in the public school system. Our educational boards, however, have made no more in the matter of adopting his suggestions, while, if any Catholic should venture to urge the adoption of President Eliot's plan, he would at once be denounced as a plotter against the public school system. The sentimentally secular education, such as given in the public schools, has had a long and a fair trial in this country, and the results are not all satisfactory. One of the most discernible results is a large increase in the number of those individuals who either have lost, or are fast losing, all practical faith in Christianity as a revealed religion, and who are daily becoming—if they have not already become—agnostics, which is the polite name nowadays for infidelism. That was not the kind of an educational system the fathers of this nation, as a Rotbury divine called them recently, conceived of when they started the public school, nor is it the kind that will make the rising generations good and worthy citizens of the country, and, as long as bigotry and ignorance assist in maintaining that system in the public schools, American Catholics have no alternative left them other than to withdraw their children from such schools and voluntarily tax themselves with the maintenance of other institutions wherein learning can be acquired without

DETRIMENT TO THE RELIGION

of the scholars. "But," say the opponents of the parochial schools, "the system of those institutions is un-American." It is nothing of the sort. Is it un-American to believe in Christianity and to avoid educational models which, experience has fully demonstrated, weaken, if they do not destroy, that belief? "It has a tendency to make men less reliable citizens than the public school system." Humbug! Catholics have never yet been found wanting in loyalty to their country, and not long ago Mr. Gladstone declared that the statement that Catholics could not be loyal subjects to the State was "a monstrous assertion." Cardinal Gibbons loyalty to this country has never been called into question, and yet the parochial school has no stauncher advocate than he. Archbishop Hughes proved his devotion to the United States when he went across the Atlantic to serve the Union during the war. Bishop Ireland's warm interest in the welfare of America, and his labors to make American citizens sober and industrious, need no mention, and, nevertheless, the parochial school is to be found everywhere in his diocese, and the assertion that the hierarchy of New England, comprising such men as Archbishop Williams, Bishops McMahon, Harkins, Healy, O'Reilly and Hendricken, are ready to place the parochial schools under the ban of the Church is simply ridiculous. Some time ago, when some of these bodies in Boston and early subsequent to this city, and other dioceses here for years in a ministerial capacity, would either meditate or sanction any system of education calculated to make students disloyal to the country in any way and absolutely the contrary when he learn it made. Yet silly and a word as such an assertion is there any who utter it, and credulous fools who believe it, not a few of both classes doubtless, individuals who pride themselves upon the broad, liberal and intelligent education they imagine they have received in the public schools? Protestant charge against the parochial school is that its system of education is opposed to modern progress and intellectual freedom. Responding to the publication of the Catholic University, announced that accusation very fully in the columns of the New York Herald, in a letter some time ago, which we quote: "If intellectual freedom means the liberty that scientific discovery, the results of which are, of all modern progress means a system of education adverse to Christianity, then we do frankly admit that we are opposed to them. But these suppositions are preposterous, and so is the charge that is based on them. American Catholics have nothing to fear from the attacks bigotry and ignorance are at present making upon them. Their Church and its educational policy Truth always conquers in the long run, and, while it is very unpleasant to be misrepresented and maligned, and to be charged with intentions that are wholly foreign to one's mind there is consolation in the thought that the time is quickly coming when justice will be done. As far as opposition to non-religious education of their children is concerned, American Catholics are fully justified in that by such men as President Eliot of Harvard, a house would be quieted above, and by hundreds of other conscientious Protestants, who hold, with themselves, that a Godless system of education is not only undesirable, but vastly dangerous to those who are subjected to it, and, in the State that upholds it, it is the establishment of the parochial school tends an ample authorization in the number of private and select schools patronized by Protestant parents, who send their children to such institutions in order that they may obtain there that moral and religious training which is as important a factor in the moral character in the formative period, and which the public school system makes a pretense of furnishing. Boston Inquirer.

RIGHTS AND HONORABLE MEN

THE WEEK'S NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Armagh.—On Oct. 20th, the lifeless body of Mr. W. McMurry, of Armagh, was found on the road at Clay Lake, near Keady. The deceased had left Keady late the previous evening with two horses and carts, and proceeded towards Castleblayney. The horses arrived there in the evening without him. When found there were wounds on deceased's head such as would be caused by a blow from a club.

Antrim.—Mr. Townsend Trench, probably stung by remorse of conscience for his deeds in Gweedore, has taken to the pulpit and left the rent office. He has been lately conducting special services in Methodist churches in Belfast. Trench now says that he has played a leading game in Tipperary, and that he and Landlords would be prepared if they got the offer that was made when the "Plan of Campaign" was adopted. The lamentable stand to win; Landowners to lose in the Plan of Campaign, and Trench to regret his share in it.

On Oct. 23d, a new Catholic Church in the Falls district was dedicated by the Most Rev. Dr McAllister, Bishop of Down and Connor. The Mass was sung by the Most Rev. Dr. Dorrian, Bishop of Clogher, and the Most Rev. Dr. McGettrick, Coadjutor Bishop of Down. The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelan, Bishop of Derry. The collection amounted to £1,000.

Carlow.—On October 24, his Eminence Mons. Pentini was in Tullow, where he was received by the Coadjutor Bishop of Kildare, and a number of clergy. A dinner was given in his honor, at which he made impressive and eloquent replies.

Cavan.—On the 20th ult., at Redhills, about two miles distant from Belturbet, an old woman named Mrs. Lunny went out to the cow house early in the morning, and, on her not returning, her son went out to the cow house and found her dead. It appears she had fallen down in a fit, and, when she was found, her face was quite black, and her tongue was protruding. The deceased was in her 70th year, and was in good health and spirits when last seen by her friends.

Clare.—On Oct. 29th, Charles Martin, Curtain Vandeleur's land bailiff, escorted to a large force of police, went to evict, by force, Mr. Patrick Cullinane, of Ballycorick. The evictions were found concealed in a cave, last week, in the wood. After the Sheriff had taken possession and locked the door, Martin was again delayed with a bootstick of loyalty by some woman, until much jeering by some spectators, and as the police had no charge against Mr. Cleary, he ordered them and the bailiff out of his house, and they then adjourned.

Cork.—At the sittings of the Sub-Commissioners, under the Land Act, at Macroom, on October 25th, Mr. Lane, R.M., presiding, reduced the rent of Mr. Cornelius Barnett, of Ballyvolane, and fixed the rent at £1 per Statute acre. The Land Commission have also reduced the rent of Mr. Michael Cotter, of Ballyvolane, and fixed the rent at £1 per Statute acre. The Land Commission have also reduced the rent of Mr. Michael Cotter, of Ballyvolane, and fixed the rent at £1 per Statute acre.

Cork.—At the sittings of the Sub-Commissioners, under the Land Act, at Macroom, on October 25th, Mr. Lane, R.M., presiding, reduced the rent of Mr. Cornelius Barnett

AFTER THE SHOWER.

After the storm is past,
And black, heavy clouds, rumbling o'er the sky,
And sing aloud the joyful lay
The glittering rain drops sparkling
Hung in the air
Where so cloud peals fall

Hung in the air where Along some unfrequented road after,
The brilliant silvery gems
Of hue, by wind made colored now,
And perfect, nature's beauty
On dew bejewelled heath

The glittering rain drops
And another's delight offered the golden rod
Or cooled the hands where drops of wet
Dwelt
Down the fern stem joyful
And handsome flowers
Unscathed by rain or cloud.

But later the sudden storm
Burst forth upon the lone, perched hills and dales,
And cooled and shadowed deep the valleys warm;
And frequent showers and fresh'ning gales
Transformed scene
The sunshiny view.

Or the unprotected sheep
Afresh the pitch pine cheer, and summer sounds
Where the birds warbling sang the lark, and lead
The summer air with downy rounds.
While shadowed
Blow from the eastern deep.

—Clinton Transcript.

THE BURNT CHESTNUT.

"This is the famous Burnt Chestnut runway," said Maj. Silas Haight, known all over the commonwealth as the "Lone Hunter man of Kettle Creek." "This is the fav'rite spot for deer hunters an' it is known for half a mile round as the Burnt Chestnut runway, though th' hain't no more sign of a burnt chestnut here now than there is on that flat rock yonder. Right whan you second growth pine is standin', not an inch to the left nor to the right, is jus whar the ol' burnt chestnut stood an' give this runway its name, years an' years ago, an' it'll be the ol' Burnt Chestnut runway as long as there is a hunter left to come here an' stan' an' take his chances for deer.

"Ol' Burnt Ches'nut! I'd jist like to here some of the ol' times over ag'in th' I've had on this blame nigh played out mountain! When I think of such as I've got humsick all through, an' on lonesome as a wahdered turtle dove. Th' hain't nothin' nor nobody no more, sonny, an' that's a fact. That is, not to speak on. There one or two of the ol' boys left yit, an' wund in a w'ile they manage to strike out here an' I jaw with them a bit, fish, an' play at huntin' deer. But th' was a hull crew of us in the rippin' an' tearin' ol' times, an' we run the township, for its lookin' mighty like in those days was deer an' hu'r an' painters. Some in the ol' boys gittin' kerlose now an' then, an' let a bear git th' upper hand, or give a panther too much rope, an' they gradually got chewed up an' pulled in two. Thar were Pete Muffer, come to think on it. He got mauled one fall an' didn't never show up with the boys no more. He were a fush fiddle sort o' chap, Pete were, an' allus kep' a jawin' 'bout th' w'ile he wasn't nothin' in the woods wuth tackin' any more, an' he got up an' swoon, reg'lar ev'ry fall, th' h'l gives he bear jump his fence, an' he were what he could rassel tigers or sumpsh' o' kind th' hull time he were in the woods, an' were likely to stan' some show with him. So w'en Pete didn't turn up no more, we's pooed, o' course, he had along his coffin on his shoulder an' pulled out for some deer'ntin' or other whar tigers was roustin' about, an' he mebbe jus' kep' on a-coming and gives 'em some lessons in rough an' tumbles. We had pooly nigh forgot all about Pete, so jus' in spring after he'd cut sticks, on ev'n a speed, Jim Barnes slugged a big bar over th' Burnt Chestnut Holler one day. Th' wun'n' wahm' suffer'n' been, jus' a-lazin' in th' sun, an' th' bar, he come a-lumbrin' up th' hill, an' he jus' knocked it at Peter Muffer's, an' th' bar kill'd Pete, an' he kill'd th' bar. The rest o' him had nat'rally disappeared, an' th' bar hit th' trail an' ever stole a pig an' kin digest a tin tobacker box, sure.

"Then there were Cole Barnes, he wa'n't rash, giner'y speakin', but one nice day he jus' a-lazin' in th' sun, an' th' bar come a-lumbrin' up th' hill an' th' bar kill'd Cole Barnes, an' he jus' a-lazin' in th' sun. Then there were Cole Barnes, he wa'n't rash, giner'y speakin', but one nice day he jus' a-lazin' in th' sun, an' th' bar come a-lumbrin' up th' hill an' th' bar kill'd Cole Barnes, an' he jus' a-lazin' in th' sun. Then there were Jim Barnes, he wa'n't rash, giner'y speakin', but one nice day he jus' a-lazin' in th' sun, an' th' bar come a-lumbrin' up th' hill an' th' bar kill'd Jim

THE MONITOR.

TENTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1887.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS.

In consequence of having to issue a DOUBLE NUMBER of the Monitor next week we will not go to press until next Thursday noon, instead of Wednesday morning as usual.

THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR.

Double Issue for a Double Great Occasion.

IN in consequence of the forthcoming CHRISTMAS MONITOR containing two Illustrated Supplements—a Christmas Supplement and a Jubilee Supplement, making a Double Number of the MONITOR, we are compelled to go to press much earlier this week, and all contributions (whether in prose or poetry) for the Christmas Monitor, must reach this office not later than Saturday November 26th, so as to have the names of accepted contributions announced in our issue of the 30th Inst.

To Subscribers and all persons who desire to procure extra copies of the Double Number of the Christmas Monitor should send in the same now and not certain per copy for all copies desired, so as to avoid disappointment by delay. The forthcoming Christmas Monitor will be profusely illustrated and will contain articles specially for it by Messrs. Oliver & Co., whose pen and pencil will be the cheapest and best Catholic Christmas paper ever issued in the United States.

Subscribers who desire to send to a friend or friends at home and abroad now, or you may be sorry if you delay, as there is going to be a great demand for the Christmas Monitor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—A great loss to Catholic France in the death of the Very Rev. Father Pelletier, of the Oratory of Jesus, which he had reconstituted, and in which he had revived the rule of Cardinal Berulle.

—A London Catholic paper has this excellent hit at the sure-cut Lord Mayor of that city. "The city bells rang out on Wednesday as sonorily as in the old days of Whittington; and it is said that, to the Lord Mayor, they seemed to say: "Turn again, Freemason, Lord Mayor of London."

—The Rev. Thomas Esser, O. P., of the German Dominican Province, who at the request of the Irish Bishops has been appointed to fill the chair of scholastic philosophy at Maynooth, stayed at the Dominican Priory, Haverstock Hill, on Sunday, proceeding in the evening to Ireland.

—A recent cablegram from Rome gives the following account of a double death in one family: Lord and Lady Dalhousie are both dead. Lady Dalhousie's mother and Dr. Fogg, an English physician, were present at the time of her death, which occurred suddenly at the Hotel Frasati. Lord Dalhousie died in Rome.

—An English paper learns from Rome that the Bishop-elect of Hexham and Newcastle will be consecrated by Cardinal Howard, in the English College, upon the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. We are also informed that Dr. Gilse, the present Vice-Rector, will probably be appointed Rector of the English College. Dr. Gilse has lived within the walls of the English College for over twenty years.

—Several subscribers have sent us extracts from local and other papers during the past week, for which we are much obliged, but in consequence of having to give much time and attention to the double number of the Christmas Monitor, which will appear next week, we will have to defer criticising some of the extracts sent until after that event; others will be attended to next week.

—A dispatch from Baltimore, which appeared in the local daily press last week, states that Cardinal Gibbons has just sent to the Pope a letter from the Catholic Hierarchy in the United States, congratulating the Holy Father upon the attainment of the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. The letter is in Latin, and represents private prayer for the health of the Pope, and of all the Archbishops and all the Bishops in the country. Its tenor is entirely congratulatory.

—The Holy Father has fixed the month of February as the period, during his Jubilee celebration, at which the corner-stone of the new Basilica of St. Patrick, in Rome, will be solemnly blessed and placed. Prior Olynn hopes to be able to add the name of Archbishop Cary, of Melbourne, representing the Antipodes, to those of Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, and Archbishop Croke, of Cashel, as one of the preachers of the day. St. Patrick's "sons will come from afar" on that great festival.

—At a recent audience granted by the Pope to Bishop Flood of Trinidad, the latter presented a piece of white Irish poplin sent by Mgr. Woodlock, of Ardagh, with the request that His Holiness would wear the material made from it at the celebration of his Jubilee Mass. The Holy Father who has always had a great personal esteem for Bishop Woodlock, whom he himself consecrated in the Sistine Chapel in 1879, willingly promised to comply with the request.

—Charles A. Gillig of the American Exchange, London, is in New York. In conversation with a reporter, Gillig stated that his present visit to the United States was for the purpose of perfecting necessary arrangements for a visit to the United States of Gladstone in April next. One thing that tended to bring this about, was that his physicians long advised him that an ocean voyage would be beneficial to his health, and as he has always cherished a desire to visit this country, now that his dread of the ocean has been conquered, he embraces the opportunity eagerly.

The Solution of the Labor Question.

Frances A. Walker contributed a timely paper entitled "What Shall we Tell the Working Classes" to Scribner's Magazine for November. While we fully disagree with certain statements as to the demoralizing effect of foreign immigration upon a correct solution and arrangement of the labor question—statements too general, and of too indiscriminating a character to carry much weight—yet Mr. Walker urges certain points with perfect justice and remarkable force. He alludes to the disastrous alliance between the working classes and political demagogues thus:

"Whatever we may have to say to the working classes, the spirit is likely to be as important as the matter. It is a thing of course that politicians, having respect to the encouragement of reward, will flatter and fawn upon those who hold so large a mass of political power; but more sense and sincere self-respect might fairly have been expected of many of the persons, themselves altogether disinterested and sincere, who have of late contributed to the literature of the labor question. Some of these writers cannot refer to the general issue between laborers and employers, or even to a specific demand for higher wages and fewer hours, without gushing over the virtues of the working classes; without talking as if there were something peculiarly noble and self-sacrificing in occupying that position; without assuming, in advance of investigation, that any body of laborers must be right in any claim they may choose to make, and cajoling reprobrial glances at every employer who ventures to suggest a doubt regarding his interests or rights. Some of these social philosophers always speak of the position of a day laborer or a factory operative in a tone which intimates regret that the deficiencies of their own early education prevent their sharing in the moral and spiritual advantages of such a lot. Others write as though they felt it a duty to make up to the laboring class in "laity," all that, owing to the hardness of the employers' hearts, they may not be able to secure in broad and liberal.

"Now, this sort of thing is foolish, and, so far as it has any effect at all, is mischievous. If the working classes are not spoiled by the unceasing adulation of which they are the subjects, it is because they have too much rugged sense of their own and too much native insight into character. But there is little reason to doubt that this kind of talk has its effect, in a degree—that many a laborer has been made restive by it, and that it has prepared the way for the elections of the demagogues."

The writer states that the working classes have "a real, a large and a vital part to perform in securing that distribution of the products of industry which shall promote the highest development of the industrial organism, and, at the same time, minister to the health and strength of each part and member." He declares that the self-assertion of the working classes, within due limits and through appropriate agencies, is an important factor in the equitable and beneficial distribution of wealth. The readiness of those the resistance they would be able to offer. A spirit of alertness, activity and cautious aggressiveness should be infused into their ranks. Industrial protection and progress. They should be patient, watchful, resolute, sagacious, self-possessed and hopeful.

The past which laborers are to perform in influencing the distribution of the product of land, labor and capital is not a part in which they are to do whatever is agreeable to themselves, without regard the most scrupulous, to the rights and interests of others, and without responsibility, the most instant and direct for all the effects of injudicious or wrongful action. It is just as fully true that there are no industrial rights without corresponding duties, as there are no political rights without corresponding duties. In the industrial republic, as in the political republic, power comes to the masses accompanied by the graver responsibilities for its exercise. In the one, as in the other, the abuse or wanton use of power inflicts its lowest penalties upon the humblest members of the community.

"Such and such are the responsibilities which attend the efforts of the working classes to improve their condition. They form the beginning of the rapkh century, Ireland outstripped every other country of Europe in miniature painting and the ornamentation of metal and wood." A very pretty as well as true compliment coming from such a distinguished source.

An Authoritative Denial.

Previous to the late election, says the New York Freeman's Journal, a communication appeared in a morning paper to the effect that Cardinal Manella had officially examined and approved the works of Henry George, and had declared that he found nothing in them to be censured.

A letter has just been received from the Cardinal in which he stigmatizes as absolutely false this statement, and denies that he ever made such an examination.

He read the article and expressed himself as perfectly astonished at the boldness of the assertion.

An English contemporary states that "Religious Orders and 'laicisation' seem to make religious education thrive, rather than otherwise, in France. At least, within the same period, 7,500 schools kept by religious congregations, with 500,000 scholars, there are now 10,987 such schools with 1,067,000 children. The "free schools" created during the last ten years have restored to the congregavie schools about as much as the 'laicisation' had pulled them of." This will be news to a certain excommunicate who said a few months ago that there were no parochial Catholic schools in France.

A recent dispatch from Chicago states that the cold weather throughout the Northwest is sending a great many tourists bound to this State by way of New Orleans. To accommodate the travel the Illinois Central Railroad has inaugurated a line of through sleeping cars from Chicago to Los Angeles.

The Difference between Protestantism and Christianity.

"A reader of the Monitor" sends us a copy of the Pasadena Star, in which he has marked an article entitled "Where are Thine Accusers?" The drift of the article is to show that Christianity is not what it professes to be, and the writer bases his opinion solely upon the fact that certain sectarian bodies related a reformed fallen woman to membership in their mutual admiration society.

The repentant sinner had attended the church services for several months. She had proven her respectability during her probation, but the moment she asked to be taken into "full membership," then all the "high toned feminine" flew in fury to the preacher in order to prevent such "a disgrace" from tainting the "respectability" of the religious society.

Although the action of these "better think" women was not Christian, it was thoroughly Protestant, hence the writer who tries to make Christianity responsible for the acts of some sectarian women were wrathful that who, is wrong in his conclusions.

Nearly all Protestant sects pride themselves upon their "respectability." They are composed, in great measure, of wives and women who are in what is known as "comfortable circumstances." The poor they have no use for. No Reformation religion has any place for "ragged" Christians, and as for "Magdalens," why the very name is enough to the nostrils of all "highly respectable" sectarians!

Protestantism, therefore, is not now, never has been, nor can it ever be Christian in any true sense. It is a compound of Christian principles which those with whom it was the word Protestant originated, stole from the Catholic Church that they might corrupt Christianity in its fullness of Divinity, Authority, Unity, Apostolicity and Universality.

No, simple Protestant sect, nor all the sects combined, can ever convince Christians of the Monitor that Christianity is a matter of courtesy and charity, but, in this instance at least, Cora is willing to be convinced. A man may be called a Christian yet he may not believe in Christ. Another man may be known as a Christian who may reject the sacrament of Baptism. Hence from the fact that the word "Christian is applied by the world to Protestant sects, it by no means follows that they are Christians in the sight of God.

The Mormons officially call themselves the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Can some of their sects are disorganically opposed to the divine teaching of Him whose most Holy Name they thus call by the scandalous one they make of it.

The Campbellites call themselves "Disciples of Christ," and they look upon very other kind of religious belief as forming what they term "the Apostacy." And who might we select a dozen Protestant sects in order to show how false is the plea that any of those are really, truly, thoroughly and completely Christian.

Christianity exists in its fullness of divine authority and orthodoxy only in the Catholic Brotherhood of the woman would have been fully in accord with the precepts and practices of the Divine Founder of Christianity.

The repentant female would not have been cast out from the free Church, for the reason that Catholic faith teaches and puts constantly before our minds the great fact that our Blessed Saviour came to bring mercy, and not the just, to repentance. The wolfish priest of the holy Church of God pulsates with pleasure at the conversion even a single sinner. She shares in the rejoicing of joy which fills even heaven itself when a fallen sinner rises from his fallen Prodigal and returns to his Father's House when the cleansing tears of repentance bring rest and refreshment to the wearied soul.

No numerous were the crimes of Mary Magdalen prompt to her early course life that she was designated "the sinner" in order to distinguish her from other and better women. Yet, though her sins were as red as blood and of daily recurrence, the Saviour of God washed them all away! The Church not only took the repentant wanton back to her loving bosom, but, Mary Magdalen, who designed of her race and the disgrace of her sex—was elevated to the eminent dignity of one of the Saints of the Church whose name Mercy of God truly adores and is put into everyday practice.

Such is one of the difference between Protestantism and real, genuine, Universal Christianity—in its practical operations in this world. There is no place for Lazarus or Magdalen in the conventicles of sectarianism. The sects are too anti-religious to "respectable" to permit their meeting houses to be polluted by the presence of poverty or sinners. The peculiating band proclaimed, may occupy a velvet covered front pew; the salesman who daily rolls his employer is welcome to the sifted seat in that sanctuary where good clothes and social standing prevent mere age and worse—sins than ever sullied the soul of Mary Magdalen! The Bigamist may open his branch mouth to eat and drink in full membership in Protestant services, but woe unto the honest man or woman whose "rags" dare to invade the social hall of sectarian Christians.

On the other hand—In the true Church of Christ the poor are always found! The banker and the beggar kneel side by side at the common altar rail and receive the Eucharistic elements from the real priest of the Great Sacrifice! Christianity—like Christ—knows neither rank nor wealth! The world falsely calls "respectability" its ministrations of that Almighty's grace giving and soul saving Sacraments!

There is no soul so defiled as to be incapable of Redemption through true Christianity. But those people who think they have found Christianity when they join some sectarian society of sweet smelling females and broadcloth-scented little sinners—are merely taking their time in following the Shadow at the base of the Substance. The great and good God who established Christianity in the world simply sanctioned all mankind against the folly of believing the deceitful cry which is raised in the Protestant world when the different sects cry out "Lo! Here is Christ!" "Lo! There is Christ!" God is time, the Church is and must be time, and, where, Christ is, there is Christianity pure and undefiled, complete and practical. That Christianity, with all the faculties which the Infinite Founder Himself gave it, ever has been, is now, and ever will be put into practical operation throughout the whole Christian world daily and perpetually, by the one, holy, apostolic, Catholic Church.

Monsignor Persico in Ireland.

We repeat now what we have often said before, that "all addresses published in the daily press, purporting to come from Rome, and relating to Ireland, should be taken cum grano salis. The reason for this remark caution arises from the fact that a cablegram appeared in the daily papers of Friday last, in which Mgr. Persico's probable mission to Ireland is declared to be confined, but it is connected in such an anti-Irish and anti-Catholic style as to exhibit it as the work of an enemy of the Church and of Ireland, rather than the result of personal experience on the part of the Pope's special envoy.

The pretended "report" starts out by this rather mixed up way of putting things, "Persico emphatically asserts that the Irish cause is an immensely real and sacred one, and he recognizes that England for the bad century has resolutely endeavored to make it a sacred one. Persico says that what way, or by what means England has for the last half century "resolutely endeavored to make it sacred" or in

Farm and Home.

Oatmeal.

Oatmeal is one of the best foods for supplying the tooth with nourishment. It makes the dentine, cementine and acetinal strong, fleshlike and able to resist all forms of decay. If you have children, marry allow say white bread upon your table. Graham bread is made of whole wheat ground, not bolted, so that the bran, which contains minute quantities of lime, is preserved. Instead of using white flour in making bread, take two bushels of wheat meal and one bushel of white or bolted flour, and make by the usual process. Nothing is superior to Boston brown bread for bone and tooth building. This is made of rye meal and corn meal. Bake 8 hours, and have a considerable supply of these lime salts, and should be on your table, either hot or cold, at least three times a week. In brushing the teeth, always brush up and down, from the gum, instead of across. Brush away from the gum and on the grinding surfaces at your teeth.—Herald of Health.

A Woman's Laugh.

A woman has no natural grace more bewitching than a sweet laugh. It is like the song of finches in the wintr. It leaps from her heart in a clear sparkling rill; and the heart that hears it feels as if bathed in the cool sanitarating spring. Have you ever pouted? Do women frighten through you, and say her last merry laugh, now been, now there—it lost, now found! We have. And we are pursuing that merry voice to this day. Some times it comes to us in the midst of care, or sorrow, or anxious business; and then we turn away, and listen, and hear it ringing through the room like a silver bell, with music to scare away all the spirits of the land. How much we owe to that sweet laugh! It is the prose. Four fifths of all poetry, it lings showers of sunshine over the darksome wood in which we are traveling; it touches with light even our sad days, which are more the image of death, out gemmed with dreams that are the shadows of immortality.

Work and Think.

There is a greater difference between man and man than that one is rich and another poor, that one is strong another weak, that one is sick another well, or even that one knows a great many things and another few; and that is that one man thinks and another does not. "Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding. Exalt her, and she shall promote thee; she shall bring thee to honor when thou dost embrace her." Whatever you do, whatever the purpose to do in all your common daily work, in all your plans for what you hope to do another day, in all your reading, all your learning, any, in all your amusements, try and think about what you are doing. Put your mind into it. Get into the way of asking yourself the meaning of every thing you see or do. All men have not been in encouraging regrangy. Think, and all men think, and can motivate that amount of thought which is available for their own work in the world, and no man can do any work in the way that it should be done without thinking. It is true of every one of us that if a man will do anything for his own good, or what is more important, for the good of his fellow-men, he must use his mind, and not only his hands, in what he is doing.—Sir E. Strachey.

How he Got Rid of the Crows.

A Chester (Pa.) gentleman tells an inter esting story of the manner in which a Delaware county farmer got rid of crows. He was greatly troubled by the depredations of those birds, and all means to drive them away permanently having failed, he tried an original plan. Taking a half peck or more of corn in soaked it thoroughly in whiskey and then scattered the corn among the fodder of the field shortly visited by the feathered thieves. He soon had a number of crows eating the doctored corn, and as they didn't fly away he was treated to the effect of the dose. He found every crow drunk, some lying over on their backs, others listening around in a maudlin attempt to fly. He could have killed every one but contented to await the outcome of the drunk. Grad ually the birds recovered, and one by one, the unsteadily away. During the rest winter of the season the farmer was not troubled by a single crow.

A Kind Act.

It is said that the life led by a politician bride to make a man worldly and selfish. That it does not always kill sympathy and kindness was shown by a little incident witnessed in Washington not long ago. Two coming out of a store, where had been making some purchases, when I saw a horse moving slowly along in the middle of the street.

It contained a small pine coffin, and was followed on foot by a woman and a child, the last ran at eight years of age.

The woman's face was sad and sore worn, and she wore a shabby, rusty black dress which had evidently seen long service. The child all she wore did not conceal the worn which trickled down her face.

The boy's ground, child-like face was blue with the cold, his shoes were worn and broken, and his clothes were patched to such an extent that it seemed will patching would go no farther.

He held his mother's hand, and evidently shared her grief, for his eyes were inflamed.

While I stood looking at the sad procession, a handsome, strong same rode by the street.

As it reached the hearse, a gentleman, whom I recognized as a well-known politician, looked out of the window. He looked at the hearse, then at the woman and child; there was a moment's hesitation, and then he spoke to the driver. The coupe stopped, and the man left it, and approaching the poor little woman, spoke a few hurried words to her; then, not waiting for her reply, he lifted her into the coupe, motioned to the boy to jump in after her, and with a bried order to the driver, turned away.

Another moment and he had sprung on a passing street car, and was gone.

A grace into the coupe showed the poor little woman sobbing as if her heart would break, and the child, with both arms about her, rather trying to calm her, evidently not understanding why she was moved so deeply.

Endowment Insurance.

In the past, all systems of endowment insurance have made the payment of endowment contingent upon the death of the party insured. It has been reserved for the Occidental Life Endowment Association, organized under the laws of this State, to make a departure, which by actual practical experience during the life of the insured, gives the members the benefit of the insurance at a period when most needed.

The Directory of the Association are known to be great business men, viz: Hon. Hiram Crabtree, Ex-Mayor; Hon. Jas. H. Carthen, J. T. Ralston, Jr. R. T. Smith and George H. Jones. With these men, a safe and economical management can be relied upon, and we expire the highest confidence in its stability and soundness. The plan of the Occidental Life Endowment Association is based upon the principal of mutual assurance. We wish our readers to bear in mind that this excellent institution is now in the seventh year of its existence, has met and paid all liabilities due, in both mutual endowments and death losses with that promptness which should recommend it to the favorable consideration of every person, male or female, who need protection, and all need it. For further information call on or address the Secretary at Room 20, Phelan Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Family Fun.

Little Laughters.

Doctor—Did you give the patient that white powder at 10 o'clock?

Nurse—Yes, sir.

Doctor—And the liquid at 11?

Nurse—No, sir.

Doctor—Didn't You result, you. I want to understand that my orders are to be obeyed. Why did you not give the liquid?

Answer me.

The patient died at 3 o'clock.

One Youngster—We have a nice canopy top to cover our carriage.

Other Youngster—That's nothin', we have a chalmi mortgage in case that will more than cover it, pa says.

Tommy's mother has had a terrible time teaching him to remember always to say "if you please" at the table. His manners are lamentably bad.

The other day this dialogue took place at the table:

Tommy—Mamma, hand me the butter!

Mamma—If what Tummy!

Tommy—If you kin reach it.

"Good joke on me a little while ago," he said as he rubbed his hands and rigged his legs.

"How—what?"

"I was carrying a light of glass along Congress street, and a man asked if I was suffering. I didn't see the point at first, but now—ha! ha!

"Hat I can't see the point.

"Suffering, don't you see—ha! ha!"

"Didn't he say if you were in pain?"

"Oh, yes, that was it, some to think. How stupid I was, to be sure. Really I thought there was a pun somewhere. Excuse me—I think it all back."

"No, Bobby, said his mother, "one piece of pie is quite enough for you."

"It's funny," responded Bobby with an injured air. "You say pie, when you know that I should learn to eat property and yet you won't give me a chance to practice.

Why they speak of a sleeping car as a "sleeper."—A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which the sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper which carries the sleeper which he sleeps runs. Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper, under the sleeper until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps off the sleeper and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper, by striking the sleeper under the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.

The Tramp and the Woman.

"Madam," said a tramp as he called at the back door of a Stone Falls resident, "gimme a bite!"

"No, sir, can't do it."

"Why not, madam?"

"You're able to work, sir—I don't believe in encouraging vagrancy. Why don't you go to work and earn your victuals?"

"All right, madam—don't holler. But I called on the women next door last evening, and she gave me a very different answer, madam."

"She was just fool enough to go and give you something, I suppose!"

"Oh, no, madam, she didn't give me nothin' neither, but she gave a numb differ ent answer. Good-by, madam."

"Hold on just a minute! What did she say?"

"Sh-a-ams to the door oil dressed up in a new pallar dress, so seemed very much a-grief, madam, and when she opens the door I looks in as 'rev-a man in there sittin' in a chair, madam.

"Mercy, has it come to this with her! I wouldn't hardly believe it. Here, don't go away—take this, my good man."

"That's her, madam! Bless Lord! Yes, I gess ally prefer it to hot meals bread, especially where there ain't none too good much. The butter is just a little tainted, madam. Hain't got no jelly to put on it, Ma'am. Oh, you have all right; jill im prove it powfully. No, thanks, I don't ever boot any fruit make—better throw it in the sip-pan, where the children won't get it, madam. Any pie? Ah, yes, our feel, that cream pie is good, but this apple rather lay over is. I'll put this cold chicken in my pocket. Thank'ee, madam, this is best all I can carry."

"But what was it that woman said to you?"

"Why, she seemed heated like, 'af she was goin' some place, an' she says: 'Please go 'way, sir, we hain't got nothing in the house to eat!'

"A pretty excuse to get you away! But that was no excuse."

"He proved to be her husband, madam. He come out and kicked us through the top of a shade tree an' then chased me two blocks! He's prize on tramps, madam! Good-by—just jot's a little more cream in your pie crust an' I'll improve it!"

She Wanted a Pointer.

A middle-aged woman with a column out of countenance, and wearing a black dress, approached Col. Dan. Sheehy, proprietor of the Blue Falls Turf Association, one day this week and said:

"Sir, I understand there is going to be some hoss racing here next week?"

"Wa, expect to be hoss racers, madam."

"So I heard. A lot of gawkies are going to get on the track and the horses will rushes and force rail horses, and lean over and sow on the hoses, and crack the poor beasts with a short whip, and holler and scrow and try to get ahead of each other."

"But why, madam—"

"Then a big crowd of bad-headed old hippopotamus and scratch dudes will stand around and bet on the hosses."

"Why, madam, I suppose there will be some betting."

"Then there will be a lot of old hicks up on the judges' stand, too drunk to tell which hoss does come in ahead."

"But, ma'am—"

"Don't you no' sw. I tell you they will all be drunk! Then a man with a mouth like a new collar will stand up and sell pools for the races, and lie, and cheat, and break the law."

"I know it, ma'am. And the race will be gold by the owners, or some miserable driver will be paid to throw it, so the honest man does not bet on it he'll get beat out of his money."

"Madam, I'm sorry that you appear to be so much opposed to hoss racing."

"Mr.—guess so from your remarks."

"No, sir, no, madam; I just understand it, that's all. What I relied for was to see if you couldn't give me a pointer on which is going to win. I'm sold a heating stove on a window sill, and I've got up pretty a long-legged gray mare, but I don't want to go and get the money on her unless she's going to get there on the hoss stretch. I'm willing to shake up what I got for the stock to anybody that'll put me on to a good sure thing to put the money on."

—Countryman (who has strayed into Dalmonico's with his bride)—Hats you got many raw oysters!

Waiter—Yes, sir. How many will you have?

Countryman—Well, I dunno. (To bride)—Don't you think we kin give a raw, Marie?

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIAMOND DYES

COLOR EVERYTHING.

Ten Cents per Package. Warranted Fast. Fast Colors and Fine Goods. Brilliant, Durable and Economical. Any one can dye with them.

32 COLORS—10 CENTS EACH.

Remember, these are the only Pure, Harmless and Unadulterated Dyes.

Beware of other Dyes, because they are Poisonous, Adulterated, Weak and Worthless.

We warrant these Dyes to color more goods, pound for pound, and give more brilliant and durable colors, than any other dyes ever made, and to give more brilliant and durable colors, than any other dyes ever made.

TRY THE DIAMOND PAINTS, GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE and COPPER

For gilding Picture Sashes, Frames, Lamps, Vases, Brackets, Mouldings, Ornaments, Fancy Articles, Stoves, Repairing, etc. Ask for Diamond Dyes and take no other. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Dealers everywhere. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN

GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUE OF 1861

These bonds are the only ones in the world, which are to be paid out in premiums (two thirty years) (Lots) and bear no interest.

Three Drawings Annually.

Until each and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium, which will have been won on the bond, (no blanks) premiums, as follows:

Premiums.	Florins.	Florins
1	100,000	— 100,000
1	50,000	— 50,000
1	20,000	— 20,000
1	10,000	— 10,000
1	5,000	— 5,000
100	400	— 40,000
100	200	— 20,000
Four thousand, 7,000 premiums, amounting to		1,040,000

Florins. The next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF DECEMBER,

and every bond bought at or ON OR BEFORE THE 1st OF DECEMBER THIS YEAR, is entitled to a premium (which it may be lose) thereon in that date.

Lists of numbers and all information furnished on application. Orders for Bonds (or Lots) with remittance of $5 will receive one of those bonds for the number desired. Balance payable in monthly installments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 126 Fulton St., cor. E'Way, New York City.

Established in 1864.

Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agent.

Daily Express and Emigrant Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East.

Passengers are

New York & New Orleans

with the several Steamer Lines

TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.

PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS

attached to overland Express Trains.

THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS

are attached to Overland Emigrant Trains.

Excursion tickets for Sacramento to Third class Cost.

Tickets sold, Sleeping-car Berths secured, and other information given upon application at the company's Offices, where passenger's may be present on various classes of tickets, etc.

RAILROAD LANDS

For Sale on Reasonable Terms.

Apply to, or address,

W. H. MILES, Land Agent, 1 P. R. R.

JERIOT MADDEN, Land Agent, 2 P. R. R.

A. N. TOWNE, General Manager.

T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agent.

San Francisco.

Dyspepsia is the bane of the human race. Its forms are legion. Its symptoms are Headache, Nausea, Dizziness and Costiveness. Tutt's Pills are a specific for all these ills.

Tutt's Pills

have become so famous. They act upon the liver as a healthy stimulant, giving them tone and vigorous healthfulness. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Sold Everywhere.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

606 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 827.

WANTED TO SEE—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Help, Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Barnyard Hands, Storekeepers, Clerks, Boys, and Market Gardeners, Cooks, Waiters, Chambermaids, Housekeepers, Nurses, Seamstresses, Dishwashers, Laundresses

THE CATHOLIC WORLD.

Latest News from Many Lands.

—At present the number of students in St. Patrick's, Maynooth, Ireland, is 524.

—The priests of the diocese of Alton expect a bishop by the last of this month.

—Cardinal Hohenlohe will be the successor of the Crown Prince's congratulations to the Holy Father on the occasion of his jubilee.

—The German Catholics of Phillipsburg, N.J., are preparing to build themselves a church.

—Bishop Dwenger of Fort Wayne, Ind., dedicated a new church in Wanatah, Ind., on the 6th inst.

—Among recent conversions in Montreal was that of M. Emile Renn, a professor at the Wesleyan College in that city.

—Prince Hatzfeldt made his profession as a Benedictine at the monastery of St. Martin, Beuaen, Germany, on Sunday.

—Dr. Wieland of Wiesbaden has been made bishop of Fulda, to succeed Bishop Kopp, who has been transferred to Breslau.

—At Glen Falls, N.Y., on Wednesday of last week, Bishop McNerny confirmed a class of 700. Of this number 350 were children.

—The new St. Bridget's Church, Jersey City, N.J., of which the Rev. Father Dailey is rector, will seat about 1,000 people, and will cost, when completed, $100,000.

—The Xavier Union, one of the larger Catholic clubs in New York, are preparing to build a new club house to cost over a quarter of a million of dollars.

—Rev. Father Conidi, a distinguished young priest of the Archdiocese of Naples, has been appointed pastor at Kilkint county, diocese of Nangally, W.T.

—Land and a sum of money were lately offered by John A. Wallace of St. Louis to any priest wishing to erect a church in Forest City, one of the suburbs.

—Father Gibson, late of Chatanooga, Tenn., has taken charge of the Nashville cathedral, succeeding Bishop elect Scannell. He is now vicar general of Nashville.

—The Catholic Union of Albany, N.Y., is building a hall which will be the largest in the city with the exception of the Academy of Music.

—The Italian royal family will present a golden chalice to the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee. There is indeed no hinder a reconciliation between the Vatican and the Quirinal.

—Queen Victoria has appointed the Duke of Norfolk special envoy to thank the Pope for sending Mgr. Sulla to London on the occasion of her jubilee. The Duke will start for Rome early in December.

—On Nov. 7, the Sisters of Charity attached to Carney Hospital, South Boston, received the apostolic mission twelve months ago by the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

—Notwithstanding the millions of dollars spent by the various Protestant sects in India, it is satisfactory that their aggregate at most four-fifths of the conversions to Christianity are made by the Catholic Church.

—Bishop Seidenbusch has, in consequence of the unsatisfactory state of his health, deferred his European trip. His medical advisers recommended him to pass the winter in California.

—Great solicitude was manifested by the people of St. Louis recently, when it was announced that the venerable Archbishop Kenrick was ill. The illness was not of a dangerous kind.

—A Roman publisher is reprinting in elegant style a treatise on the virtue of humility, written by Leo XIII. when he was archbishop of Perugia. It was originally intended for ecclesiastics.

—A Belgian nobleman who lived in Bragan, the Baron de Vogts, quitted the world to take the habit of the Trappists in the house of that order at Mont des Cats (France). The new religious is remarkable for his multifarious acquirements.

—The jubilee present of the Empress Eugenie to His Holiness is a portrait of her dead son, framed in a setting of violets of amethyst and gold and surrounded by an enamelled eagle with outspread wings. The late prince imperial was a godson of Pius IX.

—The Rev. J. B. Stardis, pastor of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, St. Paul, Minn., has just enlarged his fine church. What with church, schools, rectory and convent, he has probably the most complete parish in the diocese of St. Paul.

—The Sunday before last was a gala day in Richmond, Va., the occasion being the laying of the corner stone of the Church of the Holy Trinity. There was a large procession of the Catholic societies of the city. Bishop Keane officiated and preached a very impressive sermon.

—There are many signs that Yankton will be the seat of the southern diocese of Dakota. Forty acres in the western part of the city have been presented to Bishop Marty upon which to erect cathedral, episcopal residence and school, the plans for which are now being drawn by a Chicago architect.

—Rev. Henry Cooper, C. SS. R. died at the Redemptorist house of studies, Dubuque, Md., on the 10th inst. He was born on the 11th of June, 1862, and had been a priest twenty years and seven months. For several years he was stationed at the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Boston Highlands.

—Bishop McMahon of Hartford both dedicated and consecrated the new church of St. Francis, in Thomaston, Ct., on Sunday. The church has a seating capacity of 1000, is Gothic in style and cost $64,000, every dollar of which was paid by Rev. P. Dugan, the pastor, as the work of construction advanced.

—The Quebec Provincial Cabinet Ministers have joined together and intend presenting the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee with a massive silver and gold vase worth several hundred dollars. A prominent ecclesiastic, who will leave for Rome shortly, will be the bearer of the present.

—The maximum number of students in the university of Louvain in May, 1887 was 1736. Out of eight travelling scholarships offered this year by the Belgian government for competition among the graduates of all the Belgian universities, no less than five were carried off by the Louvain students—one in arts, one in law, one in natural science and two in medicine.

—In the hall of St. Augustine's parish, Washington, D. C., the colored Knights of St. Augustine recently celebrated the 25th birthday of the organization. The room was handsomely decorated. Pictures of Pius IX., of Pope XIII., of the Rev. Augustine Tolton, the colored priest of Quincy, Ill., and of the late Father Barrotti were conspicuous. About 200 members of the commandery were present.

—Rev. H. D. Atwell, the new pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, New York, belongs to the community known as "Fathers of the Divine Mission." He came from Hastings Sussex county, Eng., where he has been rector of the church of St. Mary Star of the Sea for the past five years. The order directing him to come to New York was sent to him from Rome by the rector general of the community, Rev. Dr. de Bruno. This is Father Atwell's second visit to America.

—It is denied that Baron de Charette and 100 of his former comrades in arms of the brigade of Pontifical Zouaves have gone to Rome to offer the congratulations of the survivors of the brigade to the Holy Father on his jubilee. They intend, however, offering the Pope a handsome yellow and white Papal standard, adorned with the Pontifical arms and figures of the patron saints of the various countries whose sons served in the brigade. New Zealand is represented by St. George, Ireland by St. Patrick and Canada by St. John the Baptist.

—Right Rev. Maurice Francis Burke, recently consecrated as Bishop of Cheyenne, Wy. T., is described as a man of great ability and attainments. His great and unsparing energy, his zeal for souls and his amiable disposition have made him extremely popular among those for whom he has labored so untiringly and with such constant solicitude. He is tall, of a commanding presence, and is about 44 years of age. He is an American by birth, and was educated and ordained at the American College, Rome. Before he was appointed to the charge of St. Mary's, Joliet, he was for some time assistant to the Rev. Dr. Hebre of St. Mary's, Chicago.

LIMERICK EXCITED!

A Brutal Police Attack Upon the People.

DUBLIN, November 27.—Last night Limerick was the scene of much excitement consequent upon the arrival of Dr. John McCloskey of New York, to deliver an address to-day at the unveiling of the memorial bust in St. Lawrence's Cemetery, to Allen, Larkin and O'Brien, the Manchester martyrs. On Dr. McInerney stepping on the platform, which was crowded, there was tumultuous cheering. A body of police was present and very much on the alert. Dr. McInerney was met in a close carriage to his hotel, the people on the platform having been dispersed by force. At the hotel, Dr. McInerney was urged to address the multitude, who were assembled and scattered by the police, many persons being injured. Replying to an address from the Municipal Council, Dr. McInerney urged Irishmen to persevere in their movement. A policeman came on the scene and presented Dr. McInerney with a copy of the proclamation of the day's meeting.

All special trains to Limerick to-day were stopped in consequence of the proclamation, and the Mayor issued placards requesting the people not to assemble on the streets, and at the same time declaring the action of the Executive unwarranted. Poles with crape were exhibited, and the yellow ribbon of one establishment and removed the emblem. A large force of police and military was in the city. While they were stationed outside the town hall a meeting took place inside, with Mayor O'Keefe in the chair. Dr. McInerney, M. P. Fitzgerald and others being present. The Mayor passed his vote against the action of the Government, and that they would postpone unveiling the memorial until another day. The police cleared the street later on, using their batons.

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Edward Flintstick who came to this city about two years ago. His wife desires her sister in Quebec at once, should he see this notice. She has important information to convey to him.

INFORMATION WANTED

Of Jeremiah Murphy, native of Ballyroig, County Cork, Ireland. Thirty years since he came to San Francisco. Address, MONITOR Office.

MARRIED.

MCLAUGHLIN—DURAN—In this city, November 19, 1887, by the Rev. Father Caverly, assisted by the Rev. Father Prendergast, Philadelphia and Sarah J. Duran, both of this city.

HERRERA—MONDAY—In this city, November 23, 1887, by the Rev. Father Clements, Rev. C. Zimmerman to Miss Dolores Monday, both of this city.

WHITE—QUINN—In Santa Rosa, on November 16, by the Rev. Jos Kuss, S. J., William Morris to Kate Quinn.

MONNET—TRAVERSI—At Sacramento, by the Rev. Father Manni, assisted by the Rev. Father Scherer, both of Stockton, Cal., Joseph Monnet to Miss Antoinette Traversi, both of this city.

HUGHES—PURTELL—In this city, November 27, by the Rev. Father Mackin, Thomas Hughes and Ella Purtell, both of this city.

DIED.

O'REILLY—In this city, November 25, John, beloved husband of the late Bridget O'Reilly, and father of Mrs. Mary Ann Cummins, a native of County Clare, Ireland, aged 72 years.

MCFADDEN—In San Leandro, November 25, William McFadden, aged 12 years.

MCCARTHY—In this city, November 26, Joseph, dearly beloved brother of Hanora McCarthy, a native of Mr. Rae's station, parish of Carrick on Shannon, County Leitrim, Ireland, aged 28 years.

MAGLE—In this city, November 26, Michael, the beloved husband of Ellen Magle, a native of Ballyhaise, County Cavan, Ireland, aged 50 years.

DEFFEBACH—In this city, November 26, Hilda, the beloved wife of John Deffebach, and mother of Mrs. Frank Lyons, Mrs. Jos. Lyons, Mrs. Chas. Lyons, Mrs. David McDonald, and Mrs. Geo. Deffebach, a native of Trogtal, County Cork, Ireland, aged 71 years.

DAVEY—In this city, November 26, Mary Davey, a native of Ballyhaise, County Cavan, Ireland, aged 52 years.

CONNORS—In Sacramento, November 24, Jeremiah, a native of the Parish of Drumlease, County Tipperary, aged 74 years.

MCLAUGHLIN—In this city, November 26, William J., the beloved husband of Annie and May Wash, a native of Augusta, Me., aged 37 years and 10 months.

GORMAN—In this city, November 25, Mary, beloved wife of Michael Gorman, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, aged 64 years.

MCCARTHY—In this city, November 26, John Carthy, a native of Ballyvourney, County Cork, aged 65 years.

DERRIGAN—In this city, November 25, Joseph Francis, the beloved husband of Mary Derrigan, a native of Ballinrobe, County Mayo, aged 45 years.

MCGRADY—In this city, November 24, Michael McGrady, a native of Donagh, County Donegal, Ireland, aged 65 years.

MCGRATH—In this city, November 25, Hugh McGrath, a native of Ballymote, County Sligo, Ireland, aged 40 years.

MCCARTHY—In this city, November 26, Ellen, beloved wife of John McCarthy, and mother of Mrs. Mary Ann Cummins, a native of County Clare, Ireland, aged 72 years.

MCFADDEN—In San Leandro, November 25, William McFadden, aged 12 years.

MCCARTHY—In this city, November 26, Joseph, dearly beloved brother of Hanora McCarthy, a native of Mr. Rae's station, parish of Carrick on Shannon, County Leitrim, Ireland, aged 28 years.

MAGLE—In this city, November 26, Michael, the beloved husband of Ellen Magle, a native of Ballyhaise, County Cavan, Ireland, aged 50 years.

DEFFEBACH—In this city, November 26, Hilda, the beloved wife of John Deffebach, and mother of Mrs. Frank Lyons, Mrs. Jos. Lyons, Mrs. Chas. Lyons, Mrs. David McDonald, and Mrs. Geo. Deffebach, a native of Trogtal, County Cork, Ireland, aged 71 years.

DAVEY—In this city, November 26, Mary Davey, a native of Ballyhaise, County Cavan, Ireland, aged 52 years.

CONNORS—In Sacramento, November 24, Jeremiah, a native of the Parish of Drumlease, County Tipperary, aged 74 years.

MCLAUGHLIN—In this city, November 26, William J., the beloved husband of Annie and May Wash, a native of Augusta, Me., aged 37 years and 10 months.

GORMAN—In this city, November 25, Mary, beloved wife of Michael Gorman, a native of County Donegal, Ireland, aged 64 years.

DERRIGAN—In this city, November 25

THE CATHOLIC WORLD.

Latest News from Many Lands.

—At present the number of students in St. Patrick's, Maynooth, Ireland, is 524.

—The priests of the diocese of Alton expect a bishop by the last of this month.

—Cardinal Hohenlohe will be the bearer of the Crown Prince's congratulations to the Holy Father on the occasion of his jubilee.

—The Catholics of Philipsburg, N.J., are preparing to build themselves a church.

—Bishop Dwenger of Fort Wayne, Ind., dedicated a new church in Wanatah, Ind., on the 6th inst.

—Among recent conversions in Montreal was that of M. Emile Bruneau, a professor at the Wesleyan College in that city.

—Prince Ratibzell made his profession as a Benedictine at the monastery of St. Martin, Beuaau, Germany, on Sunday.

—Dr. Wirland of Wimbledon has been made bishop of Fulda, to succeed Bishop Kopp, who has been transferred to Breslaus.

—At Glen Falls, N.Y., on Wednesday of last week, Bishop McNerny conferred a class of 700. Of this number 350 were children.

—The new St. Bridget's Church, Jersey City, N.J., of which the Rev. Father Hindy is rector, will seat about 1,600 people, and will cost, when completed, $100,000.

—The Xavier Union, one of the largest Catholic clubs in New York, are preparing to build a new club house to cost over a quarter of a million of dollars.

—Rev. Father Goudy, a distinguished young priest of the Northwest, has been appointed pastor at Hillsboro, Grand Forks, Nespually, W.T.

—Land and a sum of money were lately offered by John A. Wallace of St. Louis's any priest wishing to erect a church in Forest City, one of the suburbs.

—Father Gleeson, late of Chattanooga, Tenn., has taken charge of the Nashville cathedral, succeeding Bishop elect Scannell. He is now vicar general of Nashville.

—The Catholic Union of Albany, N.Y., is building a hall which will be the largest in the city with the exception of the Academy of Music.

—The Italian royal family will present a golden chalice to the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee. This is held to indicate a desire for a reconciliation between the Vatican and the Quirinal.

—Queen Victoria has appointed the Duke of Norfolk special envoy to thank the Pope for sending Mgr. Sulla to Lincoln on the occasion of her jubilee. The Duke will start for Rome early in December.

—On Nov. 7, the Sisters of Charity attached to Carney Hospital, South Boston, received the appropriation voted them some months ago by the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

—Notwithstanding the millions of dollars spent by the various Protestant sects in India, it is satisfactory that their missionaries at most four-fifths of the conversions to Christianity are made by the Catholic Church.

—Bishop Seghenbusch has, in consequence of the unsatisfactory state of his health, deferred his European trip. His medical advisers recommended him to pass the winter in California.

—Great solicitude was manifested by the people of St. Louis recently, when it was announced that the venerable Archbishop Kenrick was ill. The illness was not of a dangerous kind.

—A Roman publisher is reprinting in elegant style a tractate on the virtue of humility, written by Leo XIII. when he was archbishop of Perugia. It was originally intended for seminarists.

—A Belgian nobleman who lived in Bruges, the Baron de Negri, quitted the world to take the habit of the Trappists in the house of that order at Mont-des-Cats (France). The new religious is remarkable for his multitudinous acquaintance.

—The jubilee present of the Empress Eugenie to His Holiness is a portrait of her dead son, framed in a setting of violets of amethyst and gold and engraved by an enamelled rude with outspread wings. The latter emblem was a golden of Pius IX.

—The Rev. J. B. Stastka, pastor of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, St. Paul, Minn., has been ordained his fine church. What with church, schools, rectory and convent, he has probably the most complete parish in the diocese of St. Paul.

—The Sunday before last was a gala day in Richmond, Va., the occasion being the laying of the corner stone of the church of the Holy Trinity. There was a large procession of the Catholic societies of the city. Bishop Keane officiated and preached a very impressive sermon.

—There are many signs that Vacikton will be the seat of the southern diocese of Dakota. Forty acres in the western part of the city have been presented to Bishop Marty, upon which to erect cathedral episcopal residence and school, the plans for which are now being drawn by a Chicago architect.

—Rev. Henry Cooper, C. SS. R., died at the Redemptorist houses of studies, Hillsdale, Md., on the 19th inst. He was born on the 11th of July, 1842, and had been a priest twenty years and seven months. For several years he was stationed at the Church of our Lady of Perpetual Help, Boston Highlands.

—Bishop McMahon of Hartford built, dedicated and consecrated the new church of St. Frances, in Pawtucket, R.I., on Sunday. The church has a seating capacity of 1000, is Gothic in style and cost $84,000, every dollar of which was paid by Rev. P. Dugan, the pastor, as the work of construction advanced.

—The Quebec Provincial Cabinet Ministers have joined together and intend presenting the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee with a massive silver and gold vase, worth several hundred dollars. A prominent ecclesiastic, who will leave for Rome shortly, will be the bearer of the present.

—The maximum number of students in the university of Louvain in 1866-7 was 1726. Out of eight travelling scholarships offered this year by the Belgian government for competition among the graduates of all the Belgian universities, no less than 5 were carried off by the Louvain students—two in arts, one in law, one in natural science and two in medicine.

—In the hall of St. Augustine's parish, Washington, D. C., the colored Knights of St. Augustine recently celebrated the 25th birthday of the organization. The room was handsomely decorated. Pictures of Pius IX., of Pope XIII., of the Rev. Augustine Tolton, the colored priest of Quincy, Ill., and of the late Father Barrett were conspicuous. About 200 members of the community were present.

—Rev. H. B. Arkell, the new pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, New York, belongs to the community known as "Fathers of the Divine Mission." He came from Hastings, Rosen county, Eng., where he has been rector of the church of St. Mary Star of the Sea for the past five years. The order directing him to come to New York was present to him by the rector-general of the community, the Rev. Dr. de Bonne. This is Father Arkell's second visit to America.

—It is denied that Madame de Charette and 100 of his former comrades-in-arms of the brigade of Pontifical Zouaves have gone to Rome to offer the congratulations of the survivors of the brigade to the Holy Father on his jubilee. They intend, however, offering the Pope a handsome yellow and white Papal standard, adorned with the Pontifical arms and legend of the papal saints of the various countries who are to celebrate jubilee of the Holy See. England is represented by St. George, Ireland by St. Patrick and Canada by St. John the Baptist.

—Right Rev. Maurice Francis Burke, recently consecrated as Bishop of Cheyenne, Wy. T., is descended from a stock of generosity and attainments. His great uncle, Father Burke, the celebrated Dominican preacher, was a man of great and commanding presence, and endowed with the gift of eloquence. His father, Thomas Burke, was a popular man in his day, and was elected and re-elected as the Irish member for Galway. His cousin, Thomas Burke

MOST REV. JOSEPH SADOC ALEMANY, O. P.
First Archbishop of San Francisco.

Born at Vich, in the Province of Catalonia, Spain, in 1814. Ordained at Vitorbo, in the Roman States, in 1837. Consecrated Bishop of Monterey, June 30th, 1850. Translated to the Archdiocese of San Francisco, July 29th, 1853. Resigned in January, 1885.

HIS EMINENCE, JAMES CARDINAL GIBBONS.

Born at Baltimore, Maryland, on July 23, 1829. Ordained in 1861. Consecrated Bishop of Adramyttum, August 16th, 1868. Transferred to Richmond, July 30th, 1872. Appointed Coadjutor to Archbishop of Baltimore in 1877. Succeeded to the See of Baltimore, October 3rd, 1877. Created Cardinal, June 7th, 1886. Received Cardinal's Hat, June 30th, 1886.

MOST REV. PATRICK WILLIAM RIORDAN.
Archbishop of San Francisco.

Born in Chatham, New Brunswick, August 27th, 1841. Educated in the American College, in Paris and Louvain. Ordained in 1865. Consecrated in Oakland, on the 16th of September, 1883, as Coadjutor to Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, O. P., whom he succeeded in the administration of this Archdiocese, December 28th, 1884.

RIGHT REV. LAWRENCE SCANLAN, D. D.
Bishop of Utah.

Born in 1843 at Tipperary, Ireland. Ordained in June, 1868. Consecrated Bishop of Salt Lake, June 29th, 1887.

RIGHT REV. FRANCIS MORA, D. D.
Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles.

Born in Vich, in the Province of Barcelona, Spain, on November 25th, 1827. Ordained March 19th, 1856. Appointed Vicar-General of the Diocese February, 1862. Appointed Coadjutor to Bishop Amat in June, 1873, with the title of Titular Bishop of Mosyopolis. Consecrated Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles, August 3rd, 1873.

RIGHT REV. PATRICK MANOGUE, D. D.
Bishop of Sacramento Diocese.

Born in the County Kilkenny, Ireland, in the year 1831. Ordained in the year, 1861. Appointed Coadjutor to Right Rev. Eugene O'Connell, D. D., January 16th, 1881. Succeeded to the Bishopric in March, 1884.

THE MIDNIGHT MASS.

A Beautiful Comment by the Celebrated Dom Guéranger.

How lively was the faith of olden times! To people who lived unceasingly amidst the mysteries of religion, prayer was a tie which knit them closely together, and made them pass hours in the church without weariness. They understood the value of the prayers and the ceremonies of the liturgy (which compose the tribute of a man's inward worship of his Creator) were not—as now, unfortunately, they seem to many—a dumb show, or, at best, something introduced for effect. What, in our days, is found only in individuals, were then in the mass of the people—faith, and a keen sense of the supernatural.

Thanks be to God! this strong, practical faith is not dead among us, and is each year spreading in the world. How often have not we ourselves been charmed at seeing the traditions of the old Catholic customs still kept up in some families, especially in those favored parts where heresy has not been able to corrupt the simplicity of the people! We have seen—and it is one of the most pleasing recollections of our childhood—one of these families seated together, after a frugal evening collation, round a blazing fireside, waiting for the hour to come when the whole house was to go to the Midnight Mass. A plain but savory supper, which was to be eaten on their return home, and would to the joy of holy Christmas night, was prepared beforehand. A huge piece of wood, called the Yule Log, was burning cheerfully on the hearth; it would last till the Mass was over, and warm the old man and the little children, as they came in chilled by the sharp frost.

Meanwhile, till it was time for Mass, their conversation was upon the mystery of this much loved night. They compassioned the Blessed Mother and the sweet Babe, exposed to the inclemency of the wintry weather, and with no other shelter than a wretched stable. Then, too, there were the Christmas carols, in the practice of which they had spent many a pleasant evening of Advent. Their whole souls were evidently in those dear old melodies, and many a tear would fall as the song went on to tell how the Angel Gabriel visited Mary and declared to her that she was to be the Mother of the Most High God; how Mary and Joseph were worn with fatigue, going from street to street in Bethlehem, trying to find a lodging, and no one would take them in; how they were obliged to take shelter in a stable, and how the Divine Child was born in it; how the loveliness of the Babe in His little Crib was above all the beauty of the angels; how the shepherds went to see Him and took their humble gifts and played their rude music, and adored Him in the faith of their simple hearts.

And thus they spent the happy eve, passing from conversation to song, and from song to another, and all was on Mary or Jesus, Joseph or Bethlehem. Cares of life were forgotten, troubles were gone, melancholy was a name—but it was time to leave, the village clock struck eleven, and of the happy group there was a little one, who had been too young the other years, and this was his first Midnight Mass! There was no brighter face in the procession than his. Could he ever forget that beautiful night

Peace, Fraternity and Good Will.

Christmas is the season of peace on earth, and its spirit is that of perfect fraternity and good will, a season and a spirit which ought to last all the year round, and as the Chinese philosopher in England, seeing that in a Christian land the Christian church was open only on Sunday, asked whether Christianity was suspended during the week, he might also ask whether the spirit of peace and fraternity is in season only at Christmas.

If it be so, the general feeling of satisfaction and of kindliness at that time certainly shows how pleasant it would be if the feeling, and the conduct that springs from it, were habitual and permanent.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE, SAN FRANCISCO.

The building represented in the above engraving was commenced in 1873, and dedicated on Sunday, December 28, 1873. It is under charge of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, who have also charge of St. Mary's College. In all the Brothers have about 2000 pupils in this and our sister city, Oakland. The frontage on Eddy street is 133 feet, 4 inches, and on Larkin street, 131 feet, 5 inches. The architecture is of the Corinthian order. There are commodious stores on the ground floor. The building is four stories in height, and has a fine basement. The cost of the building, including furniture, was $250,000. The Brothers have a fine collection of paintings, and a very valuable library. The College is well attended, and the Brothers are doing a noble work in the education of the young.

CALIFORNIA SCENERY.

It is hardly necessary to state to our readers that California is unequalled in scenery by any other country in the world. We have the largest trees—those of the Calaveras Grove and Fresno; we have the grandest waterfalls—those of Yosemite; we have the most ripped and sublime mountain scenery—that of the Sierras and Santa Cruz Mountains; we have the most beautiful lakes—Tahoe and Donner; we have the richest and greatest valleys—the San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Vacaville, Santa Cruz; added to this we have glacial scenery, innumerable medieval valleys, lofty mountains, unrivalled forest growth, precipitous canyons; and, in fact, we have everything that goes to make up the grandest scenery in the world.

SAN FRANCISCO'S NEW CATHEDRAL.
Situated on the corner of Van Ness Avenue and Fulton streets.

General dimensions—Width at towers in front, 68 feet; width at transepts, 176 feet; length from front towers to end of vestries, 192 feet; two towers at front, each 21 feet square, 172 feet high; main tower, only 15 feet square, 175 feet to top of cross. Seating capacity about 2,500. Material—Ground brick, granite and terra cotta trimmings. Estimated cost, $300,000. Cornerstone laid Sunday May 1st, 1887.

CATHEDRAL OF ST. VIBIANA, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The above engraving presents a faithful appearance of Bishop Mora's beautiful Cathedral, together with the brick residence of the clergy. The handsome exterior presented in the engraving is typical of the beauty of the interior of the edifice. The seating capacity is about 2,000; the acoustic properties are remarkably good, and the ventilation is of that chaste and elegant kind which should always characterize the house of God. It is located on one of the principal streets, and is the finest church in Southern California. It was begun in 1874, and dedicated in 1876.

SACRAMENTO'S NEW CATHEDRAL.
Situated on Eleventh and K streets, Sacramento.

Commenced a year and a half ago. The general form is that of a cross with short arms. The front on Eleventh street is flanked with turrets fourteen feet square, and rising to a height of 123 feet from the sidewalk at each end. Length from front to rear, 224 feet, and 116 feet across the transepts. The general character of the work is modern Italian. Seating capacity, exclusive of galleries, about 1,700. Cornerstone laid Sunday, July 17th, 1887.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, SAN FRANCISCO.

ST. FRANCIS CHURCH, VALLEJO STREET, 1851.
The First Church built in California after the Old Mission.

The plain and unpretentious building represented in the above engraving marks the beginning of a new era in the history of the Church in California. When the Franciscan Missions were secularized, the Indians returned to their nomad life and the Fathers retired to their convents in Mexico and elsewhere, a few only remaining in charge of the Pueblos where there were a sufficient number of resident Christians to require their spiritual services.

On the death of Right Rev. Francis Garcia Diego y Moreno, O. S. F., first Bishop of both California, who passed to his reward in Santa Barbara on the 30th day of April, 1846, Father Jose Jesus, Superior of the Franciscans at Santa Barbara, was appointed by the Holy See administrator of the vacant diocese. San Francisco was then without a Catholic church, save the Franciscan Church at Mission Dolores, which was at least a day's journey over the sand dunes which bounded it on the borders of the bay. But, in 1849 the gold-seeking immigration began to pour in, and as the Diocese Mexican were at that period greatly involved in debt to the Hudson's Bay Company for money advanced to bring out the priests, to build local churches and other expenditures, Bishop Francis Norbert Blanchet and Rev. J. B. Brouillet and Rev. A. Langlois, to San Francisco, in order to collect funds of the church. California, so far to Highlander the heavy indebtedness that rested upon the Oregon City Mission. Father Brouillet, having received several thousand dollars, returned to Oregon where he subsequently became Vicar-General of the diocese of Nesqually, when the Oregon diocese was divided. Father Langlois has lived in this State ever since, and in 1849 he was constituted Vicar-General for the diocese. The old Mission church lasted at that time attended by a native Indian priest, Padre Sensillos, it became necessary to purchase a church for the English-speaking Catholic element much newer than water, where they nearly all resided.

Father Langlois having received the necessary permission from the Archbishop of the Diocese rented a small cottage on Vallejo street, fitted up the lower portion as a chapel, and used the upper portion for domestic purposes. The church was dedicated to St. Francis, and was opened for divine worship on the Feast of St. Vincent de Paul, July 19th, 1849.

About this time there also arrived in this State from Oregon several of the Jesuit Fathers who had started in Oregon that God for their missionary labors which they afterwards developed in California. Among the missionaries were some priests whose names will be ever cherished in memories of long ago in the minds of many Monterey readers. These were Fathers Nobili, Accolti, Huet and Gregory Mengarini—all gone to that heavenly home which a merciful God has prepared for just such faithful servants. To these are laborers in California, Father Langlois assigned the charge of the missions at Santa Ana and Santa Clara, and the success which has crowned their own and their successors' labors is a part of the history of the progress of the State.

On the arrival of Archbishop Alemany, O. P., the Jesuit Fathers received permission to establish Santa Clara College, which has prospered so admirably under their management. In 1850 Father Anthemo, a Dominican, arrived in this State and was assigned to duty in Sacramento, where he made preparations to build St. Rose's Church, but he died of chlora after a few months labor.

In November of the same year, Father James Croke and Father Blaire arrived at the port from France. Father Blaire founded the church in Stockton, and afterwards organized the French church of Notre Dame in this city. As the cholera was then raging, Father Croke remained at St. Francis, being the only English-speaking priest then on duty. Here he labored amidst contagion and death until Archbishop Alemany arrived in 1850.

The pioneer priests who so zealous had charge of St. Francis unpretending church in the earlier days were Father Lonchin from 1849 to April, 1852. Father Llabaria from 1852 to April, 1857. Father Peter Magnanotto to August, 1862, and beautiful brick edifice was erected. He was succeeded by Father James Cassin who was in charge until December, 1863, at which date Father Cotter was appointed and remained pastor for up to July, 1865, when the Dominican Fathers under Father J. Jurdin, O. P., were placed in charge. In November, 1872, the Dominicans retired and were succeeded by Rev. John F. Harrington who has had charge of the parishioners since.

REMINISCENCES OF SAN FRANCISCO IN 1850.

In October of 1850, the cholera for the first time appeared in San Francisco. The epidemic was introduced into the country by the immigrants from the States. During the years 1849 and 1850 it had been prevalent in New York and the other great cities of the East, and many, while crossing the plains, fell victims to it in the beginning of 50. Its ravages in San Francisco, though not the most widespread, we sufficient to cause considerable alarm and sensation in the community. The average number of deaths from its effects during the three months of October, November and December, may be reasonably estimated at between four and five hundred.

As there were then only two priests in the city, Very Rev. James Croke and Very Rev. Father Langlois, the duty was remarkably trying. For days they had to be continually at their post administering the last Sacraments to the sufferers. That some under such circumstances departed this life without the comforts of religion there is every reason to fear, but from the devoted attentions of the missionaries their numbers were probably few. The epidemic also extended its ravages to other parts of the country—Sacramento in particular—where one of the missionaries, Rev. Father Anthemo, fell a victim to its deadly effects.

The increase in the population during the year 1850, must have been from fifty to sixty thousand, of all classes. Thirty-six thousand arrived by sea, and at half this number was probably Catholic, the necessity of an additional number of clergy became more and more urgent. For the moment the whole wants of the people could not be supplied, nor, indeed, it must be admitted, were all in a disposition to attend to the rites of religion. In general, the emigrants had come to the country with only one object in view—the acquisition of wealth, and in the great struggle therefor, many unhappily forgot for the moment their duties to God, or at least became largely indifferent to the claims of religion. Yet this was not a reason why they should be forgotten, on the contrary, it became a still strong er motive why the practice of religion should be placed within their reach.

In 1851 the mission received an addition to its ranks, in the persons of the Rev. Eugene O'Connell and Rev. Father Vincent, then a scholastic of the Dominican Order. The foundation of the Church was now solidly laid; time and hands were alone necessary to raise the superstructure and give it that form and development which it has since received.—History of the Church in California by Rev. W. Gillespie.

OUR CITY CHURCHES.

—The side altars of St. Ignatius's church are exceedingly handsome.

—A beautiful statue of the Blessed Virgin will soon adorn St. John's church.

—St. Patrick's parish is one of the largest in the archdiocese. The church is crowded to the steps on Sunday.

—Rev. J. Mullan's expected great results from the formation of Point Lobos parish. There are many residents in that part of the city, and it is being rapidly settled.

—All Hallows' church, South San Francisco, is attended by quite a large congregation. The parish is an extensive one, and we believe there is quite a future in store for the church in that direction of the city.

—The years of the new Dominican church are now handed. The foundations for the side altars are prepared and they will be erected and finished sometime in December.

—A school will be opened probably sometime next year in St. Paul's church. Collections for that purpose are being made by the energetic rector, Rev. Lawrence Scanlan, and we believe that a lot adjoining the parochial residence has been purchased.

ST. DOMINIC'S NEW CHURCH, SAN FRANCISCO.

Cornerstone laid on Rogation Sunday, 1887. Dedicated, November 13th, 1887. Dimensions—Length of the nave, 132 feet; width, 56 feet. Two towers, each 20 x 20 feet. Channel, 20 x 32. The two towers will each be 172 feet high to the top of the cross. Seating capacity, 2,000. St. Mary's used brick and stone, cost about $250,000.

THE APOSTLE OF UPPER CALIFORNIA.

FATHER JUNIPERO SERRA, the Apostle of Upper California, was born on the Island of Majorca, on November 24th, 1713. He entered the Franciscan Order on September 14, 1730, and was professed on September 15, 1731. He afterwards studied philosophy and theology and received the title of Doctor of Divinity. During the next sixteen years he occupied himself with various missionary work, and at length in 1767, he was named President of the California Missions. A ship was fitted out, and accompanied by some priests, several soldiers and sailors, set sail on January 9th, 1769. Father Serra at the same time set out for the Loreto Mission. From there he went to San Diego, where he arrived in July, 1769. With his band of priests the intrepid Father Serra proceeded up the Coast past Los Angeles, Monterey, Watsonville and Santa Cruz, founding the mission of Monterey on June 3, 1770. Several other missions were established in the next few years. Father Serra returned to Mexico in 1773, to plead the cause of the Indians and to adjust several doubts and differences that had been engendered by the Mexican Government. Having satisfactorily accomplished this end, he sailed for the mission San Carlos, where he arrived in May, 1774. After the mission of San Francisco had been founded, Father Serra visited it in October, 1777. Here he stayed for ten days, preaching and baptizing. He then returned to San Carlos, and organized new missions at Santa Barbara, San Buenaventura, and other places north and south of Monterey. Having received faculties from the Sovereign Pontiff to administer the sacrament of Confirmation, he took every occasion to travel from mission to mission and confer this great mesas of grace on the devout Indians, and in all, he confirmed 5307 men, women and children. Being taken sick in 1784, he bore his sufferings with remarkable patience and constantly manifested the utmost trust in God. He contemplated his approaching dissolution calmly and with plain satisfaction, retaining the full use of his faculties to the last. He died at the age of 70 years, 9 months and 4 days. Nearly 17 years of his life were passed in the world, and nearly 54 in religion. He was buried in his beloved mission church in Monterey. "We piously believed," says his venerable companion, Father Palou, "that he slept in the Lord just before two o'clock on the afternoon of the feast of the Assumption in the year 1784, and that he went to Heaven to receive the reward of his Apostolic labors.

VERY REV. MARIA ANTHONY ANDERLEDY,
Father-General of the Society of Jesus.

THE APOSTLE OF LOWER CALIFORNIA.

FATHER GIOVANNI MARIA SALVATIERRA, S. J., the Apostle of Lower California, was born at Milan, 1644. He entered the Society of Jesus, and so had a burning desire to spend his life in the conversion of the heathen. he was all ready to Proceeds to go to Mexico 1675. He was then ordained priest in 1680 and spent the following seventeen years in arduous missionary work. During this long interval of years of internal and external Father Salvatierra was awaken in California. He had been summoned by the venerable Father Kino, to undertake his conversion of the native of the new land, and renounced his priority to begin the work of evangelizing at once. Father Salvatierra's words, therefore, to the General of the Jesuits for permission to begin this great work, his request was, however, not granted for several years but was flatly refused. A ably was filled out with the necessary provisions, and on the 13th of October, 1697, another was cast in the Bay of San Dionisio. The crew, which consisted of Father Salvatierra, Don Spanish soldiers and three native California converts of Father Kino, had hardly landed when several Indians came running up and well received the strangers. A fitting site for a lowly place was chosen; and in the centre of an enclosure was erected a great cross covered with leaves, and near by a chapel of our Lady of Loretto whom Father Salvatierra had taken for the Patron of California, and after whom he named the his first mission. Afterwards this church was rebuilt and on Christmas Day, 1697, just 210 years ago, the first church built in California was dedicated to God under the patronage of the Blessed Virgin. Numerous other crosses followed it; for the patience and self-sacrificing the missionaries, but through the determination and wonderful religious zeal of Father Salvatierra they were successfully met and vanquished. In 1700 Father Salvatierra was appointed Provincial of Sinaloa and returned to Mexico. In 1717, at his earnest request, he was relieved of the onerous office and came back to his beloved California missions. Here he labored indefatigably for ten years. In 1717, at the advanced age of 74 years, he fell from his horse while on his way to attend a general meeting of the Province in Mexico. His religious is thus beautifully and briefly pronounced by an old historian of Mexico: "He was one of the most celebrated missionaries of new Spain, a true servant of the Blessed Mother of God, and the Apostle of California."

The Father General of the Society of Jesus.

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR BY S. J. M'C.

The very Reverend Maria Anthony Anderledy, the illustrious Father-General of the Society of Jesus, whose portrait appears for the first time in America, in the MONITOR's columns, was born on the 3rd of June, 1819, at Bazinal a small town in the Canton Wallis, Switzerland, about nine miles from Brieg, on the road to the Simplon. His sister still resides on the family homestead, and many travellers speak in terms of enthusiastic praise of the generous hospitality she extends to all visitors. Father Anderledy's brother also still resides in the same Canton, where he is a distinguished physician with a very extensive practice.

Father Anderledy received the higher branches of his education in the College of the Jesuits at Brieg, and on the 5th of October 1838, he joined the Society and became a novice in the Brieg College. After four years spent in that institution he was sent to the famous College of Fribourg, where his taught grammar and was Prefect to the German students. Here he remained until 1844, when he was sent to Rome.

While in Rome Father Anderledy studied philosophy and theology under the tuition of that eminent and erudite scholar, Father Passaglia, his spare hours being spent in teaching Christian doctrine to the numerous prisoners confined in the Castle of St. Angelo. The Father's health, however, suffered from the peculiar climate of the Eternal City, and he was sent back to Fribourg, where he remained as one of the Faculty until 1847, when the enemies of the Church drove the Jesuits from Switzerland, closed all their schools, and exiled the Fathers.

In company with other ecclesiastical students of the persecuted Order of St. Ignatius, Father Anderledy then embarked for this country, where he finished his studies in St. Stanislaus' Novitiate of the Society of Jesus, at Florissant, St. Louis county, Missouri. After his ordination in 1849, Father Anderledy was sent to do missionary duty among the French, German and Irish Catholics of Green Bay, Wisconsin, but his zeal for the salvation of souls, together with the rigors of the climate, so undermined his failing health, that it was found necessary to send him to Europe with the hope that his native air might recuperate his shattered constitution.

The close of the year 1850 found Father Anderledy in the Jesuit seminary of Tronchiennes, near Gand, Belgium, completing what the Jesuit Fathers designate "the third year's probation," previous to taking his solemn vows as a disciple of St. Ignatius. In 1851 he became one of the glorious band of Jesuit missionaries whose headquarters were at the residence of the Fathers at Baden, and who successfully gave missions throughout Germany. In 1852 Father Anderledy was sent to Vanderloom, in Westphalia, where he preached numerous sermons against the evil of intemperance and then rife among the people, and so fruitful were his labors that he revolutionized the morals of every community where he exercised his ministry. In 1853 he was called to occupy the important position of Vice-Rector of the College for theological students which the Jesuits had established in Cologne, and it was in this institution, on March 26th, 1855, that Father Anderledy made his profession of the four vows which are required by the Rules of his Order.

In 1856 Father Anderledy was called to the responsible position of Rector of the College of Paderborn, where he remained for three years, when he was named as Provincial of the Jesuits in the German Province, in which capacity he continued during his residence in Bonn and other places, until he finally established his headquarters at a House of his own formation in Aachen, in Rhenish Prussia.

The circumstances by which Father Anderledy became possessed of this property will tend to illustrate for the readers of the MONITOR the means by which the Church has been robbed in Europe of her churches, abbeys, and other ecclesiastical edifices. The place which Father Anderledy afterwards made the Jesuit House, had originally been a Benedictine Abbey, but the monks had been evicted and their property all stolen from them during the French occupation in the year 1807. It then passed into the hands of the Russian government, who sold it to a Protestant family, from whom it was subsequently purchased by Father Anderledy, after months of difficulty and diplomacy. No bitter was the owner against the Church that he stated in the title deeds that the building should never "be sold to a monk," and we leave our readers to imagine his horror when he found that the Jesuits were going to place the Benedictines in what the owner considered the home of Protestantism! The only consolation he received, however, was the assurance that Jesuits were not "monks," and this atom of comfort was the only balm for his festering bigotry.

The monastery which Father Anderledy thus restored to the church occupies one of the finest positions for its purpose which is devised. The building is located on the borders of the beautiful body of water known as the Lake of Maria-Laach, and is surrounded by hills and woods which present a most pleasing perspective. It has since been occupied as a Novitiate. Father Anderledy having collected therein all students of the Province who previously had to reside in the over-crowded houses located in large cities.

On December 15th 1855 Father Anderledy was relieved of his office as Provincial, and became Professor of Moral Theology at Maria-Laach, and during his continuance in the latter position he published a new edition of the "Moral Principles of Father Reuter, to which he added many notes which demonstrated his deep erudition. In February 1867 Father Anderledy was nominated Rector of the House of Maria-Laach, and, finally, in 1870, he was called to Rome by Very Rev. Father Beckx, the then Father-General of the Society, to be German Assistant for the Provinces of Austria, which comprise Belgium, Galicia, Germany and Holland.

In 1870 Father Beckx was compelled to leave Rome and take up his quarters in Fiesole near Florence, where Father Anderledy followed him, continuing as his assistant until September 28th 1883, when his Order elected him Vicar to the Father-General, whose great age and increasing infirmities obliged him to entrust the business of the Order to younger hands. Father Beckx died on March 6th, of the present year, and, on the demise of his distinguished chief, Father Anderledy, by right of succession, became Father General of the Society of Jesus.

The engraving of this great ecclesiastic which we present to our readers illustrates the character of Father Anderledy without any additional explanation. In his features may be noted the man of great mental acumen, the deep thinker, the ascetic, the far-seeing diplomat and the enthusiastic enthusiast. The great lover and glory of God." In personal appearance Father Anderledy is of medium height, with a large frame, but spare in flesh. His complexion is swarthy, partaking more of the climate of Southern Italy than it does of Switzerland, and his clear blue-gray hair and deep black eyes also give him the appearance of an Italian. Besides a perfect knowledge of its ancient classic tongues, as well as his native German, Father Anderledy is complete master of the Italian, French, Spanish and English languages—an accomplishment which greatly aids him in transacting his extensive business with members of the great Order in every quarter of the globe.

ST. IGNATIUS CHURCH AND COLLEGE, SAN FRANCISCO.

The labors of the Jesuit Fathers in California, properly speaking, are called the apostolic work of Apostle of Lower California, Father Salvatierra, S. J., have been recorded with the happiest results. They have erected theatres not only to missionary works but to the education of youth. Santa Clara College, one of the pioneer institutions of this State, was founded in 1851; the labors of the Jesuit Fathers in California, properly speaking, are called the apostolic work of Apostle of Lower California, Father Salvatierra, S. J., have been recorded with the happiest results. They have erected theatres not only to missionary works but to the education of youth. Santa Clara College, one of the pioneer institutions of this State, was founded in 1851; stored in 1854, 1858, and dedicated in Feb. 1880. For classical proportions, symmetry and grace of outline this triumph of architectural skill stands without a rival on the entire Pacific Coast. We feel the inadequateness of words to properly describe the graceful proportions of the edifice and we commend the attention of our readers to the subjoined engraving.

The Christmas-Eve Cross.

An Episode in the Life of a Missionary in Southern India.

A missionary priest in Southern India recently sent a letter to an Eastern magazine, in which he relates the following remarkable circumstance in connection with a mission Cross which he planted on a prominent eminence in that country on last Christmas Eve.

You know I have planted, on the rary top of my rocky hill, the standard of the Cross in the name of the Sacred Heart. Thanks to the central position of my lofty stronghold, it is in the middle of my parishes. No matter from what side one comes to Calicoolum, he is the Adversary's enemy, he sees from afar the symbol of salvation and the sign of combat.

All this was about twenty years ago. The battle began the very first day. A hasty sketch of this will give you pleasure, and the Heart of Jesus will find its glory in the recital.

It was Christmas eve.

"Tiny mine," I said to three or four shaved pagans, "I am going to night to set up a big cross on the top of the rock! It has to be solid, you understand. Give me you all carry the cross, bring me the fuse and hammer, and—another the water for mixing the mortar. There is no lack of stones up there. You must keep it the greatest secret. So, to work."

The next morning Christians and Pagans alike, from the large village of Calicoolum and the hamlet of Tirumalaiyoorum (village of the holy mountain), saw with astonishment the Cross of our Lord high up on the famous natural pedestal, which had now truly become a holy mountain. It was curious enough that, for many years, the pagans had set up their idols amongst the rocks, at the foot of the rock. But they had never dreamed of taking possession of the summit, which, from time immemorial, had been called the holy mountain. And behold, it had now become sacred for the Christians, since the Cross of our Lord had crowned it and seemed to orbit their demons!

They thought the matter over for a whole day. On the second, the pagans from the surrounding country came up in great crowds on the flat summit of the rock, while I was saying Mass. You can imagine my surprise when I came out of the chapel. If the cross is heathrown, what a shame it will be! If our Christians learn the fatal news, and defend it, what a scandal, and one that will not be altogether spiritual!

While I was praying, after having sent a summon to the pagans to remove the cross, my chief Catechist, without my knowledge, was using a less dangerous weapon than their sticks. They had distributed a sum of money to the leading pagans. The pagans were grouped at the summit but did not dare touch the cross. But three steps away from it they raised up their own altar, and three of the hideous idols were hastily lifted upon it.

Incidentally, this was revelations. Here was the enemy calmly seated in front of my hut, lazy, and I could not dislodge them. I was not what to do. It was much worse when they came to tell me that our rivals were about commencing their half victory by a dance, which is the most famous pagan sacrifice of the surrounding hills and comes and everything was ready. Alas, I was no bravo with fire, iron, a sheep, and a garland of flowers.

Along the side of the hill marched up in files the devotees and the curious, and among the latter were some of our Christians. From the door of my cabin I looked on with some sadness at the different movements of this pagan demonstration.

The group of musicians, who were securing the powers, had arrived in front of the cross. It began gesticulating and brandishing big great cutlass, when all at once a strange tumult began in the midst of the crowd. There were cutting and loud shouts, and then, as if by enchantment, in a general panic all these devil workers took to flight and left forever the place so disagreeable to them.

What has happened? The sacrifice began how ing that he could not sacrifice near the Cross of Christ,—that he was himself on fire.

"Your Guide," he said, "cannot remain in a hut like this" and thereupon, throwing away his cutlass, he took to his heels, and all the rest like a flock of sheep followed him. The Christians who were present at this strange scene, finding themselves master of the ground, overturned the idols on the spot, and dashed them in pieces at the foot of the rock. Nightfall favored their work, and never since that time have the pagans labored this place.

Since that standard has been placed on high, how many battles have been waged here, good father, defensive and offensive. The missionaries who have passed here have seen a thousand adventures. Now, thanks to God, we are no longer in a state of siege. By the contrary, we have broken the enemy's lines, and Christ the Conquer or has made His way into the villages which surround us.

CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO.

Singular Customs and Peculiar Festivities.

The Christmas festival of Nacimiento, as it is termed, lasts usually for two weeks, Christmas Eve is what the Mexicans call The Good Night. During the day which ushers in this memorable night, large processions of men and women, on foot and on foot, march through the streets, dressed in the costume of shepherds, after the ancient Scriptural style. This is what is called the Pastores. When darkness approaches, the Pastores, and in fact people generally, light hundreds of lanterns of all sizes and, of course, in all directions. Anywhere in the Republic of Mexico on Christmas Eve night timesmay be seen hundreds of lanterns, and, in fact, the illumination and his an impressive effect. The procession of Pastores is also attractive. After nightfall the thousand and one lights in the theatre, and there is rendered the tableau of the birth of Christ—Nacimiento, with all its accompanying scenes. In this tableau, which is gotten up with georgeous effect, little girls and boys take part, the Blessed Virgin, angels and the father Joseph. Unknown lights are burned. All the scenes in this drama are rendered with colon felicitous. This performance is kept up until after midnight, presenting all the Scriptural incidents of the occasion. While this is going on in the theatre, people outside are busy in setting off some such large ones as we have in this country, but small ones, such as a stick about a foot long, which is stuck in the ground and a match applied to the taper. The fires on the hillsides have dreaded these meteor rockets in every direction give a weird look to the night, and if you are fortunate enough to get into the Cathedral the Nacimiento, you will be still further impressed with the oriental aspect of the festival.

Formerly on Christmas Day the Host was carried through the street by the clergy, in full relics, but now, under the present laws of the Republic, no religious procession is allowed to take place in the public street.

Dining the feast of Nacimiento the female portion of the community are all engaged in baking which ordinarily they are depressed of. If at this time a lady in the presence of a gentleman should drop or even let fall an egg (down full of silver or gold powder (gentle or act denotes a special preference and in the greatest compliment a lady can bestow upon a gentleman), it would and be covered indeed, while at other times it would cost her her reputation. These eggs filled with gold or silver powder, are called cascarones. They are sometimes filled with flour, and when a lean gets hold of their latter he is made the butt of the evening. The sorcerer fire takes occasion to get out with some one of the sorcerer are who have at some time slighted her, by striking him, unobserved, with a cascaron of flour. The receipts from all public entertainments on Christmas are donated to charitable purposes. The sentimental round of gaiety is kept up for two weeks. The theatre is kept open, operas performed, the Christ has yet his secret, and it is curious how faithfully they keep it.

NEW ST. MARY'S COLLEGE, OAKLAND.

The New St. Mary's College, Oakland, is situated on a beautiful slope fun outside the Battle of Fiskland, bounded by Broadway and Webster streets, and Oakland and Hawthorne avenues, and comprising seven acres of ground. The frontage on Broadway is 196feet. The height is 110 feet and the depth is 180 feet. The style of architecture is the modern Renaissance. It will probably be opened in August under the control of the Brothers of the Christian Schools. The corner-stone was laid on Sunday, October 23rd, 1887. There will be accommodation for 200 students and the estimated cost is $100,000.

CHRISTMAS Supplement to the Monitor.

VOL. XXXI. SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1887. NO. 10.

Poetry.

HAIL! HOLY CHRISTMAS TIDE.

[WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR BY C. ANTHONY JONES.]

As apples bloom in the white May tide—
The russet apples round and brown,—
As roses bloom in the summer tide,
In niches of hoath green mighty bloom;
As lilies bells mutually catch the tints
Of the azure sky on their rounded cheeks;
As violets blush with the soft imperfection
Of Nature's matchless color streaks.
So unto the Earth from sphere to sphere—
Just as the pleasant flowers come—
Cometh the Christmas every year,
And the Rises of Jesus's tomb!

Hail to the holy Christmas tide!
Blessed the Redeemer—Blessed the Bride!
When fond hearts think of the olden tryst,
In the yearly Birth of Jesus Christ!

As the morning sun in the East appears,
When the moon in evening waning and past,
And so through the norms of a million years,
Till the world and time are dead at last!
As birds of passage wing their flight
From wintry cold and heavy rain,
To return with the warmth and honeyed light
Of the single Phœnix, summer days;
So shall with the Christmas in the East
Of the sky of the fateful Earth,
So angels follow the Great High Priest,
And herald the Saviour's Birth.

Hail to the happy Christmas tide!
When the Redeemer—Blessed Bride!
Memento rare of a tiddly tryst
In the yearly Birth of Jesus Christ!

And thus does the Christ child come below
In a cradle of mellow ice and snow—
Much as He came long years ago
In the humble manger here;
Oh! pity His tender suffering Form;
Oh! shelter Him from the cruel storm
Where? Why, Christians, your hearts are warm,
And why not shelter His form?

"How will He come?" perhaps you say;
Listen, and I will tell you the way—
How he will visit your hearts and stay;
So:

"As Hopes that kindle sustaining light
In sorrowing souls once gloomy and sore,
Amongst the Heart with Christ for delight,
And the Haven of Heaven below!
As only a Father of Fathers greets
The strayed of His household home again;
As only a God of Gods can coos
With Divinity's matchless tenin;
So Christ will come at the stroke of eve
Whose soul is free of stain.

As a tittering flicker of crystal snow
Fall and melt on Earth's yielding forest;
So the manna will fall and melt and flow
In the depths of grateful hearts for rest!
So into each heart at Christmas tide
Will come the Redeemer—Blessed Bride!
So now and Maker reveal their tryst
In the yearly birth of Jesus Christ!

As the apples ripened, the roses bloomed,
And the lilies bells borne with the May;
As the gentle violets assumed
Their single shade and fade away!
But this sweet story Holies for,
And, like the rose that stay at least
We sing of "Glory upon a time."

THE NATIVITY OF OUR BLESSED LORD.

CHRISTMAS IN BELGIUM.

Some of the Beautiful Customs Observed in that Country.

There are beautiful Christmas customs observed in Belgium. For three or four months before Christmas the children are busy, and save up their pocket money to buy presents for one another and for their parents. What the present is to be is carefully kept secret, and the girls have a world of sentiment and romance, each a working when they are out on visits and when the others are not with them, getting up in the morning before daylight, and Than, on the evening before Christmas Day, one of the parlors is lighted up by the children, into which the parents must go; a great yew bough is fastened on the table, a little distance from the wall, a multitude of small tapers are fixed to the bough, and colored papers, etc., hang and flutter from the twigs. Under this bough the children lay out in great order the presents they mean for their parents, still remaining in their pockets what they intend for one another. Then the parents are introduced, and each child presents his little gift; then the little ones bring out the remainder, one by one, from their pockets, and present them with kisses and embraces.

Where I once witnessed this scene there were eight or nine children, and the eldest daughter and the youngest son were pale and tenderness, while the tears ran down the face of the father, and he clasped all his children more to his breast as if to offer up such that was rising within it. The shadow of the bough gave a fine effect to the group, and on the ceiling and on the wall was thus a pretty picture.

On the next day (Christmas) the parents lay out on the table in the great parlor the presents for their children, in the form of some sober joy succeeds, as on this day, after an old custom, the mother lays a gift by to each of her daughters, and the father to his sons, what has been observed most praiseworthy and what most truly in keeping the Holy Scriptures, and the children answer the responses in unknown tongues and tongues.

At the prefaces, when the celebrant turned around, he also cut full and bright; every one of his singular penitents displayed; in all his lives nakedness, the fleshless bones of a skeleton. All were on their knees.

At the consecration, as the priest pronounced the sacramental words, a chorus of voices, harmonious as the angels, resounded around him, the skeleton were changed into radiant figures.

When he turned around again for the Ite, missa est, the chapel was empty, but the immense trail flying toward heaven showed him the path to paradise.

It was a troop of suffering souls whom his had delivered from purgatory.

HAMON.—Ville Bon and de Silesie.

THE SUFFERING SOULS.

A Christmas Reflection.

In an old number of the Echo des Pyrenees du Lundes appears the following—

"Christmas night the suffering souls (souvenirs) of Purgatory are and point around the living to implore their prayers. An old legend of the Pyrenees will tell us how this is done.

One Christmas night it was cold. The moon was shining, the stars were all in their places. Nothing was left, for all wanted to assist at the great feast of the Nativity. The north wind was blowing, the weather cold was reaching, the farm dogs were howling around the house. An old cat, seated in the chimney corner, was murmuring prayers while; awaking the midnight hour.

Suddenly a shadow passed before her as had never been heard before, resounded the presbytery door. The priest opened the door, and great was his surprise to see a long procession coming to his dwelling. Long, white winding-sheets covered head to foot, these strange figures appeared, who all carried lighted torches. The old priest trembled, uttered a cry of fear, and, made the sign of the cross. All the ghosts imitated him, but, stange to tell, when they made that sign, none of them showed either hands or face, and that they bestowed to the end to follow them. Astonished by that strange information, he forgot his fear and joined them. The funeral procession moved. The sheter of Heaven was filled with the light. The priest looked, that some dense blood, and the ground was red. They walked long, long time, and stopped before an old, ruined chapel. One of the penitents ascended the steps of the altar and lighted the consecrated vestments to the priest. He put them on and advanced to the altar. There he found an old missal all worn esten, and a broken chalice. He began the Holy Sacrifice, and the priest answered the responses in unknown tones and tongues.

At the prefaces, when the celebrant turned around, he also cut full and bright; every one of his singular penitents displayed; in all his lives nakedness, the fleshless bones of a skeleton. All were on their knees.

At the consecration, as the priest pronounced the sacramental words, a chorus of voices, harmonious as the angels, resounded around him, the skeleton were changed into radiant figures.

When he turned around again for the Ite, missa est, the chapel was empty, but the immense trail flying toward heaven showed him the path to paradise.

It was a troop of suffering souls whom his had delivered from purgatory.

HAMON.—Ville Bon and de Silesie.

OUR LORD'S CRIB.

How it has been Preserved in one of the Great Roman Basilicas.

The cradle of our Saviour—the identical crib in which the Infant Jesus was laid—was for a time preserved in Bethlehem; and it is well known that St. Jerome, St. Paula and others had always entertained the greatest devotion for this sanctuary. Subsequently the crib was carried from the rock from the cave at Bethlehem, were brought to Rome. Some of the wood upon which the Nativity was made is the year 352; but the learned Pope Benedict XIV. proved that it was not until the seventh century, at the time the Saracens had taken possession of Jerusalem, in the year 653. St. Jerome, who was buried in Bethlehem, spoke of three times in a place much there where the Blessed Sacrament repose. On both sides of the altar are two stairways of wood which lead to a recess on the altar. The main part of the crib is preserved in another side chapel, which is a magnificent silver-mounted crystal reliquary, surrounded by a gilt iron railing. Every year, on Christmas night, this relic used to be carried in solemn procession to the main altar of the church, where they remained during these days for public veneration. O d and young, beggars and princes, may be seen during these days, kneeling before the chapel, and kiss the iron railing, or fold in Bethlehem, hastening to Santa Maria Maggiore, to visit the holy crib.

Choice Fruits.

An elderly lady entered a High street fruit store yesterday, and pointing to some ripe tomatoes, said:

"How much is tomatoes a quart?"

"They're forty cents a piece, madam," said the clerk. "I suppose there would be about eight in a quart that would cost—"

"Never mind figuring," said the elderly lady, hastily, "you may keep them. Good morning."

"Merry Christmas," said the clerk.

Grandmother's Christmas "Gloria."

AND HOW SHE HEARD IT.

BY NELLIS F. O'NEILL.

It was Christmas morning, and Grandmother watches, from the window of her little side-room, the people hurrying to the Catholic church at the corner.

"Grandmother," the woman of the house says, "I don't like to leave you alone. I wish you would let Jenny one of us stay with you! I'm afraid you will be lonesome."

"Oh! no, dear," "I would have say of you stay from church on my account, and most of all, on Christmas Day. I'll not be lonesome, never fear, for I can watch the people going and coming."

"I wish you could come, Grandma," says little Minnie. "I wish you could hear the Gloria, for papa says it will be grand!"

She smiles in the child's sunny face. "Don't worry, little one. I can hear very distinctly every Sunday the choir from St. Patrick's at the corner, and to-day there will be a greater number of voices, and I shall hear better than ever. So, dear, Grandma will hear the Gloria."

"I'm so glad, for I know you won't be lonesome now." The child follows her parents, and Grandma watches them until they enter the church.

The people, as they pass, stare curiously at the old face at the window, that seems them not, but is looking far into the distance. Granny is with her loved one the long ago.

The husband, who had taken her girlhood's home to the neat little cottage that he had built with his own hands for his young bride! She hears his voice: "Welcome, my wife, to your own little home; and may it ever be, in this world, your refuge!" Now she holds a tiny baby, their first born, in her arms, who opens his blue eyes for a little while, and, as though discouraged at even this brief glimpse of the world, closes them again. Before she knows what has happened, John has lifted tenderly from her arms and carried him of the room. She feels what pride of sorrow, plaintively: "My baby!" John replies: "Hush, Nanny," he adds, "assumes grieve for him; try and be perfectious, She sees from the mills earnestness also door, and from the window a human funeral train winding its way out of cemetery, the hill, and, at last, the church, she knows her husband, and St. years pass on, John always at his side as a closer her to his side faithful, and comfort her in her grief. Another baby comes—strong and sturdier every day,—as like his father in his looks and ways. She is so proud of him. There never was such a boy, thinking him so beautiful that mother is proud. "Mother's boy," they call him. "Mother's boy" he has to put up with. John says, with pipe: "Take care, Nanny, and don't spoil him!" How time flies! What a little time it seems since he was a baby, when he stands before her a manly form, in a suit of blue, and asks, with a blush, for the hand of her mother. How careful then should you, parents, be in your homes! And I would include even those who serve you. Domestics are looked upon at this day as chance comers and goers. Not so was it in Christian homes at the beginning. They were a part of the household; they were called by the same name as the children of the house; they were watched and cherished, continued in the faith taught so as not to be family. Let this "Christian spirit come back and it will be a blessing to the master of the house.

It was have this high and noble conjugal tenderness Lord and Master, Dearing the light of God's face, the dearest himself to everyone in the room. So that when sickness were reconvenient John says, "Mother, you are tired, and my mother felt happy that I had a companion to go and return with every day.

The superior of the college, Father Francis Cox, advised my parents to keep the boy, as he seemed to be a remarkably grateful and docile child

On the first of May, Jimmy made his first communion, and on Pentecost of that year was confirmed by venerable Cardinal Alexis Billiot. From then on the boy had shown himself piously inclined, but everyone marked the great increase in this inclination, for at the month of his time in the sanctuary.

Jimmy learned rapidly, and at a comparatively early age finished his classes. My parents were proud of their adopted boy, with his bright brown eyes, dark curly hair, and his youngish intelligent face.

Of course I was his bosom friend, and he had no secret from me.

I had spent two years at the Seminary of Chambary, and been allowed to put on the priestly soutane, before returning home for vacation.

Jimmy could not keep his eyes from me. He was with me every moment. He seemed jealous of me in a trace through Switzerland.

One day, he we were seated in a snug Swiss cottage far away in the center of the canton of Valais, he said:

"Dearest friend, I love you all. But I wish to ask another favor from you. Intercede for me with mother. I also wish to be a priest."

My parents did not oppose him, and on the eighteenth of October, I led him to the seminary of Chambary, the venerable John Depouter, now dead long a long time ago. Father John looked at Jimmy a moment, and then turned to me: "This young man will be no ordinary priest."

Two years afterwards, Jimmy was Father James Jimmy.

In the meanwhile, I had been sent as professor to a college, and afterwards had left for the colleges of Lorraine.

Father Boimon could not contain himself; he entered the Society of St. Francis de Sales in Annecy. Soon after he was sent to India, and, less than one year later died of cholera, the victim of his unremitting zeal among those sick of that dread disease.

How well repaid was Jimmy's care of Christ in a little boy, in the name and for the sake of Christ Jesus, on that bitter cold eve of Christmas, of the year 1848.

—Recollections of the past so long kept silent, are freshly exchanged at Christmas and the old, once more carried, as it were, back to the scenes of their youth. Happy hours pass away, but the memory of them still remains in our hearts, and in the future will associate themselves with it.

A Christmas Guest and What Became of Him.

A Pleasing and Instructive Personal Reminiscence.

[WRITTEN FOR THE MONITOR BY REV. J. H. DAFOUR.]

It was many years ago. I was then only a boy.

My home was by a cosy nyle of the Alps. The valley is broad, and at the foot of it runs the Isère river, a large Alpine stream.

I was then a day scholar at the college of St. Pierre d'Entrigue, an old Roman town, nearly destroyed in the eighth century, by the Saracens who had escaped from the sword of Charles Martel, on the plains of Solsonne. Dividing themselves into bands, they penetrated into the heart of the Alps, destroying all in their passage. And then came the Roman city of Montals, to be destroyed by them. But to my story.

The college was over two miles from my home.

One Christmas eve, late in the evening, they were returning alone from the college. They had followed the course of a river the Tarine, meandering through and arched over by snow.

What was my astonishment at LAY THEM one crying in the darkly, recklessly and to approach hearing of their children, [illegible] remember that those little ones have in them the capacity of eternal life and perfect sanctity. And than the sanctity of Christian homes. What can be more holy than a home founded on a sacramental government for the indissoluble unity of the unity of Christ and His Church fers, as an example. As God gave dominion over all His creatures, so God gives parents dominion over their children. He has given the father dominion and authority, but the mother has a sovereignty even more powerful. In all the first years of childhood, it is the mother that reigns over the child and forms and fashions it. The child receives the impress and the shape and the image of his mother. How careful then should you, parents, be in your homes! And I would include even those who serve you. Domestics are looked upon at this day as chance comers and goers. Not so was it in Christian homes at the beginning. They were a part of the household; they were called by the same name as the children of the house; they were watched and cherished, continued in the faith taught so as not to be family. Let this "Christian spirit come back and it will be a blessing to the master of the house.

It was have this high and noble conjugal tenderness Lord and Master, Dearing the light of God's face, the dearest himself to everyone in the room. So that when sickness were reconvenient John says, "Mother, you are tired, and my mother felt happy that I had a companion to go and return with every day.

The superior of the college, Father Francis Cox, advised my parents to keep the boy, as he seemed to be a remarkably grateful and docile child

On the first of May, Jimmy made his first communion, and on Pentecost of that year was confirmed by venerable Cardinal Alexis Billiot. From then on the boy had shown himself piously inclined, but everyone marked the great increase in this inclination, for at the month of his time in the sanctuary.

Jimmy learned rapidly, and at a comparatively early age finished his classes. My parents were proud of their adopted boy, with his bright brown eyes, dark curly hair, and his youngish intelligent face.

Of course I was his bosom friend, and he had no secret from me.

I had spent two years at the Seminary of Chambary, and been allowed to put on the priestly soutane, before returning home for vacation.

Jimmy could not keep his eyes from me. He was with me every moment. He seemed jealous of me in a trace through Switzerland.

One day, he we were seated in a snug Swiss cottage far away in the center of the canton of Valais, he said:

"Dearest friend, I love you all. But I wish to ask another favor from you. Intercede for me with mother. I also wish to be a priest."

My parents did not oppose him, and on the eighteenth of October, I led him to the seminary of Chambary, the venerable John Depouter, now dead long a long time ago. Father John looked at Jimmy a moment, and then turned to me: "This young man will be no ordinary priest."

Two years afterwards, Jimmy was Father James Jimmy.

In the meanwhile, I had been sent as professor to a college, and afterwards had left for the colleges of Lorraine.

Father Boimon could not contain himself; he entered the Society of St. Francis de Sales in Annecy. Soon after he was sent to India, and, less than one year later died of cholera, the victim of his unremitting zeal among those sick of that dread disease.

How well repaid was Jimmy's care of Christ in a little boy, in the name and for the sake of Christ Jesus, on that bitter cold eve of Christmas, of the year 1848.

—Recollections of the past so long kept silent, are freshly exchanged at Christmas and the old, once more carried, as it were, back to the scenes of their youth. Happy hours pass away, but the memory of them still remains in our hearts, and in the future will associate themselves with it.

THE BIRTH OF CHRIST.

Written by Bishop Challoner.

The devotion of this holy time, and of this day in particular, calls us to the Crib of Bethlehem, there to contemplate our Infant Saviour and to entertain our souls with Him. O! what a large field have we here opened to our meditation! Christians place yourselves in spirit near the manger of Our Lord, and let the eyes of your souls upon Him. Reflect who this is whom you see lying before you, as a helpless Infant in the open stall; suffering and weeping, poor and humble, wrapt up in mean swaddling clothes and laid in this crib, between an ox and an ass. O! your faith will inform you that under all these mean appearances lies concealed the Lord of Glory! This infant not yet one day old, is the eternal Son of the eternal God; this weak, helpless Babe is His who by His almighty power made heaven and earth; He who is wrapped up so straightly, and confined to this narrow crib; this heaven and earth with His immense unbounded immensity; this speechless Child is God's own Word Who called all things out of nothing, and Whom all things obey.

O! wonderful mystery which has thus joined together the highest and the lowest, all that is great in heaven, with all that is little and contemptible on earth, in the person of this infant God! But what is the meaning of all this? What has brought this great God down to this stable, to this crib? Why has He thus debased and perfectly annihilated himself? My soul, it is for the love of Thy; it is to redeem thee and deliver thee from sin and hell; it is to give an example of all virtue; it is to draw thy heart to Himself, and engage thee to love Him.

The Little Ones' Stocktings.

The toys and other treasures suspended on the Christmas tree will be, by the little ones, regarded as treasures. A few sweets, or a part of a toy, gift or boy's pocket money, will procure for some other little boy or girl untold delight, for the sake of human joy would turn but dimly were not the oil of human kindness poured into it on this and such like anniversaries.

—The Christmas motto was uttered upon the eventful night of the Nativity: "Glory to God and peace and on earth to men of good will" Its meaning has since continued to inspire the thought and feeling of the occasion. That motto implies Worship, Peace and Charity—greater attributes than which there are not.

THE WITHERED HAND.

The withered hands fall by her side, the old eyes close slowly, and from St. Patrick's church on the corner comes slowly, Gloria in Excelsis Deo!

And so the woman of the house finds her in her return, at home with her loved ones.

"Ah, Granny," she says, "you can never be lonesome now."

Little Minnie dances in joyously: "O Granny! she says, "I've heard the Gloria!"

"Hush, dear!" says her mother, "Grandmother now hears the grandest Gloria that was ever sung!"

THE CHRISTMAS TREES.

Hushed was all the busy household, gone the guests and dark the hall,
And the number midnight sounds bring the silence over all.
The tapers on the Christmas tree Joe had learned out; but now
The late opens tinged with silver, tell that sunrise had begun.
The old clock on the stairway tolled mournfully and low,
Time, thrilled from base to summit, the tree waved to and fro;
And the smiling branches whispered, as through the open door
A weird and ghostly figure moved slowly o'er the floor.
Its brow was crowned with holly, but faded were the leaves,
And its robe was red and white as the lace of one who grieves;
And it spoke, in soft, sweet accents, to the Christmas tree and said:
"Lo! behold in me the phantom of Christmas trees long dead!
In the dusty garret lying, neglected, cast away,
Are the trees which greeted childhood with toys and tapers gay;
And beneath our glittering branches, songs were sung and tales were told,
And the maiden blushed, and listened to the words of lovers bold.
And of those who danced around us, but few, alas, remain;
And their locks are white as silver, and their limbs are bowed with pain.
Sorrow, death, and separation, in the years here scattered wide
All the orchan hearts, once rejoicing in the Hallowed Christmas tide."
The phantom paused; the branches of the tree a rustling made,
Which into speech seemed molded—and thus the words it said:
"Oh, phantom of old Christmas! oh, Spirit of decay!
When I, too, in my turn, shall droop and pass away,
Tell me, if among the many who have had sight were wild with glee,
Who sported, sang, and revaled beneath this Christmas tree,
All will live to laugh together when another year has passed?
Then the spirit's brow, with darker, deeper gloom was overcast.
"Not to me," it said, "is given the mysteries to read—
We believe, we trust, the future, yet hopeless the light we need."
It was silent. Then came streaming from the horizon afar,
Through the casement, gleaming brightly, the luster of the star.
"We are answered," cried the phantom, "as the shepherds were of old.
Who shall care to piece "Hails that those mysteries unfold—
Where the proud and glad shall come—for of the life beyond the cloud,
Rolls from yonder clouds, dissolving doubts, anxieties, and gloom?
Though our branches droop and wither, and our little trees grow gray,
We shall live on and bud together in another spring, hereafter,
If the loving lessons taught us by this sweet old story be Treasured deep in young and old hearts, beneath the Christmas tree."

DANIEL O'CONNELL.

San Francisco.

MY LOST LOVE FOUND.

A SAILOR'S CHRISTMAS STORY BY ROBY MCDOUGALL.

Christmas Eve, and there was not a sailor in more than I, as I walked along Liverpool.

Just a month before from service, and Pulteney in the Mary Jane, bound for Los Angeles, not seen my darlings. Texas, bounding 4, to find the cabin 3,1276. Several strangers with wards, in the next few years. Patrons walks Mexico in 1773, to plant the cause of freedom and to adjust several doubts and difficulties that had been engendered by the Mexican Government. Having satisfactorily accomplished

The Father General of the Society of Jesus.

No. 1

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR.

S. J. M'C.

The very Reverend Maria Anthony Andeviely, the illustrious Father-General of the Society of Jesus, whose portrait appears for the first time in America in the Monitor's columns, was born on the 3rd of June, 1819, at Barinal a small town in the Canton Wallis, Switzerland, about 20 miles from Brieg, on the road to the Simplon. His sister still resides on the family homestead, and many travellers speak in terms of enthusiastic praise of the generous hospitality she extends to all visitors. Father Andeviely's brother also still resides in Wallis Canton, where he is a distinguished scientist, with a very extensive practice.

Father Andeviely received his preliminary branches of his education in one of the Jesuits at Brieg, and said October 1836, he joined the order. He was ordained priest, same as years, explored and carried off by the press gang.

As for the life of me I couldn't help exporting to myself, another standing waiting for me at the gate.

Well, there was a woman standing there just as if she was waiting for me, though, of course, she wasn't, not of her own knowledge. But it wasn't my mother. It was my wife.

I mean that sweet-faced lass that spoke to me like an angel and asked me to come in and rest, and have a look around, and talk with her father about the old neighbors that used to live here but had flitted to better quarters above—what I mean to say is, that afterwards, when we were better acquainted, she became my wife.

I had a little money saved, and I spent it in improving the old home and furnishing a few more acres than belonged to it, and in a couple of years' time there wasn't a prettier little spot as ours for its size in all the country round.

We had been married, and a bit of a garden with well-flowers, and a couple of cows bushes, and I had learnt two or three things worth knowing while I was away about the world, and my Mary had as good brains as ever a girl had under her yellow hair, and as good hands as ever made a bit of butter or threaded a needle. We had two children, one was just able to toddle and prattle about the place, and the other was as new to the world as that Jesus's beast of white roses on the bush that I had sailed well up against the cabin half door, or as the lilies under the elder-bush that hung over the gable.

Just at that time I was happy, happy as happy that one of those summer evenings when I sat at the door with Mary and the children, she telling me what a good prize she had got for the better, I said to myself all of a sudden, "Look out for squalls, my man. This fair weather is too good to last!" And sure enough at the same moment I saw a neighbor who had been off to market in Tralee coming up the field to me with a letter in his hand.

Now a letter was a letter in those days, and when it got to the length of a Kerry mountain it was near about as wonderful as the great Mogul's Charm itself. Mary turned as pale as a ghost when she saw it, thinking something terrible would come of it, and God knows she had bit the truth. But I was as cool as a cucumber, and I bawled "Good news! good news!" and swung little Terry over my head by the gable.

The letter was from the captain I had served with on sea, and who owed me a nice little lump of money that I had never hoped to lay my hands on. He would be in Liverpool docks on a certain day, and if Lorry Nolan would be there to meet him on that day, why Lorry Nolan should be paid the old score to the full on the spot.

"Now Mary, my darling," I said, "we'll have that other cow" and she tied a few things in a handkerchief for me, and off I set for Liverpool on the morrow morning.

I saw the captain and got my money, spent an evening with old friends on board ship, enjoying yarns about old times, but thinking Heaven for the new times that I had come to me with so much fullness of happiness. I promised that I was no wanderer over the world, and that I would adjust several doubts and difficulties that had been engendered by the Mexican Government, and settle down into a steady citizen, and cultivate the cabin under the mountain, and all it contained; and I went ashore again and walked down Lime Street.

I turned away and hurried to the nearest house to make inquiries, with a faint hope that although the nest was deserted the bird might not be far away.

I found the house empty, when they heard my story and e-quainted me, as every their pity, along with the bad news that was bound to go with it. My wife's father died not long paying my disappointment, times had been even harder than usual in the Irish peasant. My Mary had fretted herself under to be left alone for good and pay the rent, though she had not a penny struggle to cling to the cottage home, and at the last she had to give it up, and go from the kingdom put to restraint at the disbelief energy of the leaping waves it were the same, nothing was changed. I trip, where seemed to answer with a strong hand to all sorts of inquiries at subduing that terrible rapidity. Hear after year looks from the mountains as one after another the occupants who had been imprisoned in the inner recesses just as the Christmas Eve dropped forth, sale, or more—it's been a period, but at least it was be proved that all [illegible] ago.

When suddenly figures appeared at our of the highest upper windows: I the black. The slight figure of a woman leaned forward with outstretched arms appealing to the mercy of her fellow creatures below, and two children were clinging to her and by with agonized and terrified shrieks. In a moment the fire escape was placed against the burning wall, a breathless silence fell on the watching crowd, and then a deep bay of horror went up from the throng, as it was seen that the window was too high, that the fire escape was too short, that in that case effort must failure, and that the living creatures up yonder must be left to face one the prey of the tigers of flame. The firemen could suggest no expedient, could offer no hope. The window was so peculiarly placed, the space between it and the "escape" was great. Heavens! it is in my ears, sounds sight, and I'll never, never ask anything again, Amen."

"Not a, matter." I cried, rolling my arm and frame easily to the front. I was a wild and desperate man, my life not worth a pin a purchase to me, and I had not long then a cat from a mouse and fought through fire like a fiend in the wars for nothing. I saw that it was only a long leap from the top of the fire escape, and catch, and hang on by his hands to the windowsill, and keep his grasp, the fire escape being left plant a yard high. I was young and full hot life there by help of strong muscles and determination—I, I, I, my I had seen in a moment that the three creatures up yonder might crawl down on his body and drop safely into the fire escape from their hold—the lad I thought, I knew, was a sailor like myself, who had hung from the rigging with one hand and fought through storms and blows with the other, and had seen, and heard, and even at the peril of his life. But here was the man, and his children, and the woman, and the little. I had dashed up the fire escape left everyone considering me. I had rushed to the window and clambered and clung in the air, as with the claws of a wild cat. Hope! I was hope, and I had found hope and directed the woman, who I could not see, how to assist by only as a father, to stand on the sill of the window, and drop, drop, drop, below. I felt them one after the other, drop her holding and stretching my strength almost beyond, as they hung for a moment with their weight in my nerves, holding their swift foothold below. Yes, that I had put the woman down I felt as one who off with one hand and drop and drop, and swung and swung, and I had [illegible] the last, except that I seemed to have, I thought, a great weight, the weight of a man in my muscles, and that I had [illegible] I felt the strong arms of my shoulder, just as when I left it that morning, eight long years ago. The arms were the same, nothing was changed. I trip, where seemed to answer with a strong hand to all sorts of inquiries at subduing that terrible rapidity. Hear after year looks from the mountains as one after another the occupants who had been imprisoned in the inner recesses just as the Christmas Eve dropped forth, sale, or more—it's been a period, but at least it was be proved that all [illegible] ago.

When suddenly figures appeared at our of the highest upper windows: I the black. The slight figure of a woman leaned forward with outstretched arms appealing to the mercy of her fellow creatures below, and two children were clinging to her and by with agonized and terrified shrieks. In a moment the fire escape was placed against the burning wall, a breathless silence fell on the watching crowd, and then a deep bay of horror went up from the throng, as it was seen that the window was too high, that the fire escape was too short, that in that case effort must failure, and that the living creatures up yonder must be left to face one the prey of the tigers of flame. The firemen could suggest no expedient, could offer no hope. The window was so peculiarly placed, the space between it and the "escape" was great. Heavens! it is in my ears, sounds sight, and I'll never, never ask anything again, Amen."

"Not a, matter." I cried, rolling my arm and frame easily to the front. I was a wild and desperate man, my life not worth a pin a purchase to me, and I had not long then a cat from a mouse and fought through fire like a fiend in the wars for nothing. I saw that it was only a long leap from the top of the fire escape, and catch, and hang on by his hands to the windowsill, and keep his grasp, the fire escape being left plant a yard high. I was young and full hot life there by help of strong muscles and determination—I, I, I, my I had seen in a moment that the three creatures up yonder might crawl down on his body and drop safely into the fire escape from their hold—the lad I thought, I knew, was a sailor like myself, who had hung from the rigging with one hand and fought through storms and blows with the other, and had seen, and heard, and even at the peril of his life. But here was the man, and his children, and the woman, and the little. I had dashed up the fire escape left everyone considering me. I had rushed to the window and clambered and clung in the air, as with the claws of a wild cat. Hope! I was hope, and I had found hope and directed the woman, who I could not see, how to assist by only as a father, to stand on the sill of the window, and drop, drop, drop, below. I felt them one after the other, drop her holding and stretching my strength almost beyond, as they hung for a moment with their weight in my nerves, holding their swift foothold below. Yes, that I had put the woman down I felt as one who off with one hand and drop and drop, and swung and swung, and I had [illegible] the last, except that I seemed to have, I thought, a great weight, the weight of a man in my muscles, and that I had [illegible] I felt the strong arms of my shoulder, just as when I left it that morning, eight long years ago. The arms were the same, nothing was changed. I trip, where seemed to answer with a strong hand to all sorts of inquiries at subduing that terrible rapidity. Hear after year looks from the mountains as one after another the occupants who had been imprisoned in the inner recesses just as the Christmas Eve dropped forth, sale, or more—it's been a period, but at least it was be proved that all [illegible] ago.

A LITTLE CHILD'S PRAYER.

A CHRISTMAS STORY OF A NEW-YORK CHRISTMAS, BY MRS. E. B. KENNEDY.

Special Priced tree, dear children, means the good Christ at work through human hearts and hands. You do not see Him in earning hushes nowadays, nor do you ever [illegible] Christ, dear children, and [illegible] when you have so often read. Our own good thoughts and our own good deeds are the angels which He sends abroad over the world.

But to the little story.

It was a sharply cold Christmas eve. The sun had gone down in a glory of crimson and gold. It was a warm, tender sky to look at from the windows of comfortable, firelighted rooms, but, to those hurrying up and down the streets, it was a cold, hard sky—a sky bitterly, pitilessly bright, like some radiant blue eye, out of which looks a cruel and unloving spirit.

Little Johnny and Katie Morris, hurrying home from gathering their baskets of chips and sticks out of the streets and alleys, did not admire the sky at all. They thought only of their cold nose and their coldness, their aching toes, and the great holes in their mittens, and of what they were going to have for supper when they should reach the poor, shabby little home which they called home.

"Baked potatoes would be so good," said Johnny.

"Hot brick and cold water and some butter on the bread, would be good, too," said Katie, sometimes forgetting her blue lips.

"I'm awful tired of bread and water, isn't you?" asked Johnny.

"Yes, and I'm awful tired of everything. Look up there through those windows! See how the fire blazes! And there—just at a Christmas tree, to night. And look at that girl in her white dress and blue sash! O, dear. Come along."

"Do never had a Christmas tree, did you?" asked Johnny.

"I should think not! It's as much as mother can do to buy our bread and keep us from freezing. Let's hurry up, or we'll freeze anyhow."

The shabby little home was as cold as the darkness, pitiless, and we as shabby they had stopped to look, and as they were soon warm there enough, and at home. But such a Christmas home—just a little warmer than the air outside, that was all. The mother, a pale, sickly woman, sat on a rag by the almost empty stove. She looked at her children, and tried to smile, but got precious little for their pains. Katie ran to her mother, and Johnny stood by the door, as if half expecting to be turned out of it, but exactly "Yes, we're home, mother, and I'm cold and hungry, but we could not speak of it, for we saw how you looked at us. We'll be good, mother, and we'll do everything, if you'll only be well and happy, and get us supper and put us to bed. I'm so tired, mother, and I'm so cold, and I'm so hungry, and I'm so sorry you look so sick. Johnny and I will be good, and we'll do everything, if you'll only be well and happy. Johnny, you stand there, and I'll take the basket, and I'll carry it upstairs."

"Yes, sir," said Johnny.

"Yes, sir," said Katie.

Half an hour afterward, while the poor woman sat on the rag sack, with warm gown and shivering by the dead fire, and the stockings were still hanging broken and empty under the mantelpiece, Johnny and Katie stealthy steps at the door, a sound as of a small regiment grounding arms, a rap at the door, and then a well-disciplined knock.

"Those somebody, rude boys," said Mrs. Morris to herself.

"I have brought you a merry Christmas," said a kind, gentlemanly voice through the key-hole.

Mrs. Morris opened the door with trembling hands. Her rich neighbor looked a pleasant "Good evening," and added, "I will set those things inside the door for you. The baskets can be returned to-morrow."

Mrs. Morris tried to speak, but the words stuck fast in her throat.

Johnny's tongue was easier managed. He watched the baskets and bags. He caught sight of the oranges. He saw the yellow rags of the chickens peking out of the great mouth. He saw the [illegible] and the shoulder and shouted:

"Katie! Katie! wake up, I told her dons it. I told you He would!"

"Is your children?" asked the rich man, glancing from one merry at Johnny's flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes. He fancied his words to be the delirium of a fever.

"No, he is not ill, sir, and I don't know what he means—unless he was just what he says, cried Mrs. Morris, since at delirious himself, over such sudden good and plenty.

"Very well then, thank God, and good night" and the rich man went home, sweetness in heart and notion in it. He thought of the impression of Special Providence.

"It doesn't seem right to pray for things, and then, when your prayer is answered, to be so surprised," he said to himself, as he walked home. "Why, I'm as much a believer in Providence as any body, and I believe that every good thing comes from God."

Johnny's prayer was not the first time that the Wise Men of the East in offering the Lord our most precious gifts. We give Him gold when we present a loving heart and a will pledged to perfect obedience. Frankincense when we pray to Him and meditate upon His goodness, and myrrh when we improve evil inclinations and revive for poetry of body and soul.

Poetry.

LADY SPARKLE'S CHRISTMAS FETE.

A HOLIDAY POEM BY ELEANOR DONNELLY.

In her cell of stillness, in her lonely attic gown,
Her the Sister Isabel, Lady Sparkle sat [illegible]

The Christmas twilight was not deep enough to hide
The rare, rich, and rare that heavy he heaped on every side.
The carpets with an amount more, the curtains relent Up,
The mirrors and the pictures, the statues pure as snow.

Up the north in deeper shadow, in her snow-spun [illegible]
The library lay—upon the east, the stately drawing room.
And west and south with walls of glass and wealth of flowering glass
Alive with birds and fountains, slept the grand conservatory

Then round the Lady Sparkle, white e dainty, silken sown
She felt [illegible] the fire and her soft transparent sink

"They have all been making merry—one a-this, and I? alone was lonely.
Ah! I'm alone no less, I'm lonesome, and it shall relieve them all!

"When I throw three grand apartments, nine-teen guests, and wealth and [illegible]
Lady Sparkle, and I'm alone, where a-lone nobody [illegible]

"When I line my wall with flowers, when the Hall hide my fancy [illegible] among the orange trees,

"What with scent of Eastern perfume, and fiper Lamps [illegible]
Lamps [illegible] Lady Sparkle, where [illegible] and [illegible]

"What with light, and music, and scent, all the [illegible] wealth supplies,
My Christmas Eve will seem to be a dream of Paradise

At the dawn's work, the charming bell [illegible] Lower [illegible] chord
In [illegible] and Lady Sparkle, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

And the second [illegible] [illegible] straightforward [illegible]
Where [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

And the table [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

In the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

To [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

There were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Instead [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

There were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Low music and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

And Lady Sparkle [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[

Poetry.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM.

[WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTMAS MONITOR BY JOHN F. MCDONELL.]

Oh, beauteous Star that shines through sore long
In golden beams from Heaven's bright dwelling,
The signs thy angels hailed with joyful song
Thou glorious orb, lovely "Star of Bethlehem"

Through ages of darkness the faithful came
To watch thy beams, oh, Heavenly Star of Peace,
And hail with joy the Great Messiah's name,
Whose tendings, "peace to men" shall never cease.

Thy glorious praise the poets songs have sung
While the wise shepherds long watched for thy ray;
Thy beams, amidst angelic music clang,
Shone broke where Jesus lay in glory lay.

Oh, sacred Star that shone o'er Mary's Child
In all the glow of Heaven's resplendent fire,
When she the Virgin Mother, pure and mild,
Behold her Son, on equal with the Sire.

Bright Star of peace! Bring forth new rays of Time,
War, hatred, discord vanes from every shore;
The angel sacred tenths chant a'er, 1886 "an.
"Good will to men" re-echo ever more." tre.

Light all the nations that in bondage lie
A hapless prey beneath the devil's reign;
Dissolve their darkness with Thy light on high,
Transform their ways to know the living God, an.

Bright Star of Heaven, shine from the sky
Amid the Angels' song
And pierce man's gloom with pure celestial light;
Thy advent bears great tidings to earth's home,
God's chosen Son dispels our darksome night.

Shine on, oh! Bethlehem Star, in clory shine
Until the Gospel's tenths are known to man
Thy saving Name around see fives antwine,
In all the ti ing grace of Heaven's great plan!
"Virgin" Mary.

Old John White's Christmas.

A Sad Story with a Sadder Ending.

WRITTEN BY EUGENE V. WALLETT.

"I'll forevclose on him, of course I will!" he softly chuckled as he rubbed his hands together. "I lent him the money, and he can pay it back, and why should he lounge in his house and lot! I'll take a walk up that way. They needn't call me an old miser, and say I'm hard-hearted. It's a straight matter of business. I lend money on a mortgage; if the money isn't repaid, I'm entitled to the security. That's straight business the world over."

It was "Old John White," as every man, woman and child in the town called him. When they didn't refer to him by that name it was to speak of him as "Miser John," "Stingy White," or "Mean John." He had tried to recall one kind or liberal act on his part but in vain. Woman had sought to find excuses for his selfishness in behalf of his dead wife, but he had done all he had ever been married—if wife or child had ever shared his lot—so one could remember to. He lived alone—unhelpful, penurious and friendless. No man was ever bored his gate unless in financial distress or willing to put himself in the way of the stark. No child ever halted for a kind word in front of the grim, tumble-down building Miser John called home.

It was about Christmas time. The Winter winds were like the teeth of wolves, and now and then the light snow was caught up and whirled over remnants of a bygone or a spiteful way. The rich shivered as they stepped from their doors; the poor suffered even as they remained within.

Miser John left his cheerless home for a walk of a mile, and as the winds took hold of him he fairly gasped for breath. His garments were old and thin and worn, but he had planned that they must do him for the winter.

"It's cold, very cold," he said to himself, as he hurried along. "All this talk about the poor suffering so much is nonsense. Let more around and keep their blood circulating and they'll be warm enough."

He held a mortgage on the little home of Clark, the mechanic. Death had stolen the man's family—sickness had coused great factory had shut down and left scores of men without work or wages. There was misery and want in plenty, and the very day had come when the law would permit Miser John to commence proceedings of foreclosure. He was not the man to delay an hour. The misfortunes of others were nothing to him. If he owed a debt he had to pay it (of course and he did it would go hard, but he would have the amount.

"I'll just pass the home—notify pass by," he whispered as he came near it. "There ought to be an acre of ground there, and I want every inch of it. And I want Clark to leave the house in good repair, and to be out as soon as possible. I'm not to blame that his boy died, nor for his sickness, nor for the trouble at the factory. People who borrow money must pay it back."

It was lamplight as he passed in front of the house. It was a better building than he had hoped for, and the land seemed to be all there to the last inch. Miser John was notify rubbing his hands when he noticed an object leaning on the fluke's few yards away. It did not seem cold enough for a human being, and yet what could not a shabby in the gloom of the evening in such a place?

"It may be a robber!" he whispered, "no one has ever tried to rob me yet, but the time may have come. Clark thinks he would be glad to see me lose my last shilling. John White would get no sympathy here. Suppose I'd meet him and he declare I'd didn't move then! I'll go home. Clark may burn the house down to spite me, but I'm due I'll send him to State prison if it costs me $500."

As he moved away on the route home the something followed after. He made a run across the darksome commons. It kept its distance. He slowed up as he reached a frequented street. It was no nearer to him—no farther away. Under the gaslight it disappeared entirely, but as he entered upon his own dark street, lo! the something was nearer to him than before. He leaned no footsteps on the walk except his own. There was no word or rustle of garments as they entered side by side and passed to the door. There was no presence beside him and yet there was. He was awed and frightened, but at the door he turned at boy and struck out furiously and shouted

"Hack! Go away! You may believe me old and helpless, but I'll grapple with the strongest man and fight to the death!"

He struck only the empty air. Though the shadow was at his elbow. He took the key from his hands, unlocked the door, and he was forced to enter first. As he stood in the darkness of the room, he heard the key turn in the lock again. The something was locked in with him!

"It's only some trick to scare me!" he whispered, "or else my long wall in the cold has made me nervous and nearsighted. As soon as I strike a light it will be gone."

A candle soon shed its light over the room, and the old man threw some fagots on the fire, which was nearly dead on the hearth.

"There!" he whispered as he looked about him, "it's gone! It was some trick by the boys. They hate me and like to annoy me. Yes, it's gone."

"It is here!" answered a voice, and lo! the shadow stepped into view on the hearthstone.

In his amazement the old man was silent for a moment, and before he had found his voice the Shadow—the Something—said:

"I have been with you for half a century, but never before this night have you seen me."

"And—and why to-night?" asked Miser John in a trembling voice.

"Because your life ends with the year! When the bells ring out the Old and ring in the New, you will be no more on earth John White, what has been placed to your credit on the books of Heaven!"

"Why—why I've obeyed the law haven't I? And I never did nobody my harm. I slept no Christian, but I've tried to live right."

"I have been with you all these long years, John White. You have been a miser. You have let scarce triumph in your heart. Selfishness has chased all pity from your soul. The widow, the orphan, and the poor and unfortunate have appealed to you in vain."

"They want my money," whined the old man.

"Man have learned to hate you, and children shun you," continued the voice. "You have gold hidden away, but you have no friends. If your soul was to pass from earth to-night, there is not one human being in all this world who would volunteer to toll your knell upon the nearest church bell. Point me to one who is your friend. Tell me the name of one you have befriended. If you have ever done one kind act toward humanity, speak it it that I may have it recorded on the books of this angel in heaven."

The old man was silent.

"You have been a miser with the rich—a robber of the poor. Even this night you want forth to glout over the troubles and misfortunes of a fellow-being. Hark to the winter winds! Feel the cold as it creeps in through crack and crevice! Not yet, to add a few dollars to your hoard, you would turn helpless children out of doors."

"There was never a word said to me in pity, trembling man who croued over the dying fire.

"And this is the last week of your life," whispered the voice. "You will die here in your bed, and it may be days and days before men miss you and enter this grim old house to find you dead. Your hoard of gold will buy you a coffin, a shroud and a grave, but there will be no mourner. Children will even rejoice that you are gone."

With head in his hands, and his half-closed eyes looking into the fire, the old miser remained silent for a long time. By-and-by he lifted his head with a sudden start of surprise, and the something was gone. He called out to it, he searched the dark corners, but it had silently disappeared.

It was the day before Christmas. Clark, the mechanic, entered Miser John's house with fear and trembling. He came out sighing the tears from his eyes and his face illumined with the great joy in his heart. Miser John had executed the mortgage. Others came and went with the same feeling. The widowed and the fatherless in the house knew were made glad by presents of food and fuel, and men whispered to each other as they passed: "Isn't it curious Miser John has gone away?"

When the sexton stood in the church to read the requiem of the dying year, and then to peal the deep-toned bell to ring in the new, man came to him and said:

"When that is done, you must toll the death of Miser John. He died an hour ago."

Santa Claus and the Little Ones.

Of the beautiful illusions which brighten the days of childhood, and render their memory delightful, none is so charming as the belief and firm belief of little ones, that a kind and generous-hearted old man, all radiant with tender smiles and glittering with pleasant ice stars, makes each year during the days of Yule-tide, an incursion through chimney-tops into the hearth-stone and fills the apartment stockings with rare gifts, both rich and rare.

It matters little to us how far back in the annals of the race this pleasant fiction runs. Whether it had its birth in the Black Forest of Germany, or was handed down from an ancient civilization—suffice it for us that to-day in every home, and throughout the land this beautiful dream of childhood is still cherished, and that tiny hands are still filled in prayer to the good and open hearted Santa Claus.

With children all faculties are subordinate to the imagination, and we know what pleasant fancies flit through the budding intellect, modelled by the questionings of the intellect.

It matters not to the sincere worshipper of the good old man, that the law of gravitation is violated by those aerial flights of flesh and blood, and that one old gentleman, however well-disposed, is utterly unequal to the task of supplying all the children in the world with gifts and toys in the course of a single night. Such absurd reasons given for their being so Santa Claus would be laughed to scorn by a child, and he would sit down in his own way, and make All-Powerful God, Who is the well-spring of goodness, enable the old gentleman to clear the air with lightning speed to carry out his kindly intentions.

No; questionings are unfit for children, and they accept with implicit faith the beautiful legend of Santa Claus, with its attendant train of dolls and soldiers, flags, sheep and shaggy dogs, drums and trumpets, and whatever else helps to fill up joy and merriment on the morning of our Saviour's birth.

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS DEO"

"Peace on Earth to Man of Good Will.

A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT WRITTEN BY E. L. HEALY.

It was a cold, dark, stormy December night. Outside the wind howled, and the snow came down in sheets and the fierce blast tore along from his hands, unlocked the door, and he was forced to enter first. As he stood in the darkness of the room, he heard the key turn in the lock again. The something was locked in with him!

"It's only some trick to scare me!" he whispered, "or else my long wall in the cold has made me nervous and nearsighted. As soon as I strike a light it will be gone."

A candle soon shed its light over the room, and the old man threw some fagots on the fire, which was nearly dead on the hearth.

"There!" he whispered as he looked about him, "it's gone! It was some trick by the boys. They hate me and like to annoy me. Yes, it's gone."

"It is here!" answered a voice, and lo! the shadow stepped into view on the hearthstone.

In his amazement the old man was silent for a moment, and before he had found his voice the Shadow—the Something—said:

"I have been with you for half a century, but never before this night have you seen me."

"And—and why to-night?" asked Miser John in a trembling voice.

"Because your life ends with the year! When the bells ring out the Old and ring in the New, you will be no more on earth John White, what has been placed to your credit on the books of Heaven!"

"Why—why I've obeyed the law haven't I! And I never did nobody my harm. I slept no Christian, but I've tried to live right."

"I have been with you all these long years, John White. You have been a miser. You have let scarce triumph in your heart. Selfishness has chased all pity from your soul. The widow, the orphan, and the poor and unfortunate have appealed to you in vain."

"They want my money," whined the old man.

"Man have learned to hate you, and children shun you," continued the voice. "You have gold hidden away, but you have no friends. If your soul was to pass from earth to-night, there is not one human being in all this world who would volunteer to toll your knell upon the nearest church bell. Point me to one who is your friend. Tell me the name of one you have befriended. If you have ever done one kind act toward humanity, speak it it that I may have it recorded on the books of this angel in heaven."

The old man was silent.

"You have been a miser with the rich—a robber of the poor. Even this night you went forth to glout over the troubles and misfortunes of a fellow-being. Hark to the winter winds! Feel the cold as it creeps in through crack and crevice! Not yet, to add a few dollars to your hoard, you would turn helpless children out of doors."

"There was never a word said to me in pity, trembling man who croued over the dying fire.

"And this is the last week of your life," whispered the voice. "You will die here in your bed, and it may be days and days before men miss you and enter this grim old house to find you dead. Your hoard of gold will buy you a coffin, a shroud and a grave, but there will be no mourner. Children will even rejoice that you are gone."

With head in his hands, and his half-closed eyes looking into the fire, the old miser remained silent for a long time. By-and-by he lifted his head with a sudden start of surprise, and the something was gone. He called out to it, he searched the dark corners, but it had silently disappeared.

It was the day before Christmas. Clark, the mechanic, entered Miser John's house with fear and trembling. He came out sighing the tears from his eyes and his face illumined with the great joy in his heart. Miser John had executed the mortgage. Others came and went with the same feeling. The widowed and the fatherless in the house knew were made glad by presents of food and fuel, and men whispered to each other as they passed: "Isn't it curious Miser John has gone away?"

When the sexton stood in the church to read the requiem of the dying year, and then to peal the deep-toned bell to ring in the new, man came to him and said:

"When that is done, you must toll the death of Miser John. He died an hour ago."

Santa Claus and the Little Ones.

Of the beautiful illusions which brighten the days of childhood, and render their memory delightful, none is so charming as the fond and firm belief of little ones, that a kind and generous-hearted old man, all radiant with tender smiles and glittering with pleasant ice stars, makes each year during the days of Yule-tide, an incursion through chimney-tops into the hearth-stone and fills the apartment stockings with rare gifts, both rich and rare.

It matters little to us how far back in the annals of the race this pleasant fiction runs. Whether it had its birth in the Black Forest of Germany, or was handed down from an ancient civilization—suffice it for us that to-day in every home, and throughout the land this beautiful dream of childhood is still cherished, and that tiny hands are still lifted in prayer to the good and open hearted Santa Claus.

With children all faculties are subordinate to the imagination, and we know what pleasant fancies flit through the budding intellect, modelled by the questionings of the intellect.

It matters not to the sincere worshipper of the good old man, that the law of gravitation is violated by those aerial flights of flesh and blood, and that one old gentleman, however well-disposed, is utterly unequal to the task of supplying all the children in the world with gifts and toys in the course of a single night. Such absurd reasons given for their being so Santa Claus would be laughed to scorn by a child, and he would sit down in his own way, and make All-Powerful God, Who is the well-spring of goodness, enable the old gentleman to clear the air with lightning speed to carry out his kindly intentions.

No; questionings are unfit for children, and they accept with implicit faith the beautiful legend of Santa Claus, with its attendant train of dolls and soldiers, flags, sheep and shaggy dogs, drums and trumpets, and whatever else helps to fill up joy and merriment on the morning of our Saviour's birth.

"We Miss You at Home."

A Christmas Episode in Montana.

When a man is going somewhere and he thinks of some body to get there he does not usually care to stop and talk about it, but a man from Montana had to wait long enough for yesterday train for he could get a train to Indiana, and a chance acquaintance drew him out.

"This is my first Christmas in more years than I care to count," he said. "I suppose I wouldn't have come this time if it hadn't been for something that happened one year ago.

"What was that?" asked his companion, quintessence his cost and settling himself for a story.

"Well, last Christmas I was in camp on lost River. I'd been there a good many years pegging along trying to get a little dust together. The snow was deep and we were not doing much. I had a wife and three children back here in Indiana when I had not seen in years. I left them on account of a disagreement my way. My wife was a good woman—too good for me, I guess—and one day when I was gay I hit out. I used to write to them and send them money, and I was always promising to go home. I did intend to go, too, but somehow I kept putting it off.

"Last Christmas morning my partner and I was up early preparing for a very than to camp. It was pretty cold, and the snow was badly drifted and unbroken. We got started about nine o'clock, and had gone nomore than two miles when I stopped on something that gave under my weight, and I stopped to examine it. Brushing the snow aside I found a child, a little girl of a year and half, with my partner's help I uncovered at last a good looking girl of eighteen or thereabouts. We picked her right up and started for our cabin with her. Some in the cabin we made some hot whiskey and rubbed her vigorously. There was a little satchel strapped to her shoulder, and opening it I found some photographs and papers which led me to say "'This here girl, pard, is mine, and I know it. She's after me.'

"Then we worked harder than ever. The little color came into her face, but vanished. We gave her more whiskey, and in a minute she seemed to revive a little. At first she would not open her eyes or say anything though I tried my best to get her to, but in the course of time she looked at us and said just as clear and quiet as I'm saying it now

"'Are you my father?'

"I believed I am, said I. 'If your name is Wilton, and if you come from Indiana, and if that there woman whose picture you have in your satchel is your mother, then I'm your father.'

"She never took her eyes off me a minute. They were big and soft and black, just like her mother's were twenty years ago, and my partner, who was getting scared, said, 'She's getting crazy. She is raving.'

"'I hate' says I. Then turning to her I said: 'What brought you here, and how did you come, and you not have been lost?'

"She laughed a little, just as if she didn't understand, and shut her eyes, and said in a dreamy way:

"'This is my daughter.' I yelled to my partner, 'and we must save her. I must know who she came here and where she has been.'

"Then we went to work on her again. We were afraid we were not and will sigh distorted, when she sat up quick and straight, with red spots on both cheeks, and says to me in a voice that fro me my blood.

"'Father, I came here for a Christmas, for the children's sake, for your sake. We miss you at home. Promise me that you will go—that you will go at once. Name it, now.

"I raised my hand, and looking up, promised. The next day we left for home.

Smiling, he greeted me with good wishes and words of cheer. But he was grateful, for to me he was a stranger; and when I would have returned his welcome my lips trembled and were silent.

Then he said: "Four not. I come from the great source of all good, whence come all good gifts.

Trembling, I asked: "New Year, whither wilt thou lead me? Art thou appointed to bring me joy or sorrow, life or death?

Looking with loving eyes into the unfrodden future, he replied: "I know not. Neither doth the angel nearest the throne know; only He who sitteth between. Give me your hand and question not. Enough for thee, that I accompish His will. I promise thee nothing. Follow me and be content. Take, with a prayer for wisdom, thy winged moment. The next may not be granted. Hand in hand we will journey together, forget not that thou art a pilgrim for eternity. Of Life's cup thou hast a cup of joy to be thankful, and be joyful to those who mourn; and let all man be unto thee as brethren. If the dregs of bitterness cleave into thy lips be not too eager to receive relief, but then bitter the weakness of thy faith. God's perfect discipline giveth wisdom. Therefore count those happy who endure. When you behoveth in the east, glad yourself for thy duties with a song of thanksgiving, and when night gathers with her sorrows of stars look over the day just gone and let its failures and blunders cause thee to better things on the morrow, so that when I have no longer my days or nights to give, and the end cometh, then thou wilt bless me as a friend and a helper on the road to heaven."

—In the popular expressions of the holiday feeling of the last generation, we hear the voice of the Christmas sentiment of to-day, and if we look back two centuries and a half, Shakspeare's familiar and beautiful allusion to the season shows how unchanged the feeling is. Santa is made to sympathize with the glad and jovial spirit of the time. The lord of misrule, the night-long, and all is healthful and serene.

—Christmas, that lovely season, brings with it a thousand delights, coming, as it is laden with the memories of nearly two thousand years, and possessing a thousand uses that minister to our better nature. It holds out a respite for the weary in its joy; it summons to the scattered household to gather again under the old roof, and to forget for awhile the sadness and disappointments of the year passing away.

A Singular Christmas.

An Old Man's Reverie.

The following pages are copied from an old book which came into the hands of the present owner through a variety of circumstances, the relations of which would not be specially interesting to the general reader. Suffice it to say that the book was originally the property of a young old gentleman, who was found dead sitting upright in his chair, in the room in which he lodged in an Inferior city. Nothing whatever was known of him, and not a clue left which would lead to his identification. When I say nothing was known of him, I mean nothing of his past history. His quiet, unobtrusive figure was familiar to all on the streets, and he was remembered by many for his little, kindly acts of benevolence. He seemed to have a passion for lonely strolls, and many pages of his book are given up to descriptions of these solitary rambles. Nothing, however, that would throw any light on why he led a life so isolated. Every thing in his room was found arranged in the most orderly manner, and he was always scrupulously careful about his own personal appearance. In fact, he was known by the name of the "Old Gentleman." His note book was found open on the table, and from it the these pages that I have transcribed must have been the last thoughts of the poor, lonely, old man, who had so little to cheer them. These were memorandums, directing what should be done in case of his sudden demise, in a way, as it might be inferred, that he had a fatal form of heart trouble) with his few effects, and directing the manner of his burial.

"And that day is over at last. When has my heart ached as it has today?—and does it not seem sometimes, acknowledge it ever so little, that I am a lonely, lonely old man? Ah, my heart! I know it well, and memories are to me this restless heart, to open its pearly gates. For many a Christmas day have I spent, during my seventy years, that was, in my merry as they wish it, at least quiet. Wonderfully happy, happy for the season that Christ Child who, to smooth our way to eternal happiness, came all weak and trembling into the world to enter into our weary, wicked world. But I was not happy to day, not even contented,—and why? Is the temptation in the desert is that to me to see what and so close to the edge of the dark river? Yes, as close that I can almost see the other bank, hear those sweet voices that have beckoned me so persistently to day. I have a fancy that it is doubting in this great city that causes this unwonted weakness. I am utterly alone. Not a creature in all its length or breadth knows my name—my name, which at one time,—but what does it matter now? Past and gone! Let all things pass with the dying year!

"In my solitary ramble yesterday afternoon, I met a boy staggering under a load of Christmas gems. As he met me his eyes brightened, and half heartily against me. I put my hand out to help him, and as I did so he murmured some phrase expressive of his regret at having pushed against me. Some one had taught him to meet the customary Christmas greeting as if that must certainly take all its cut of my heart. I felt—I felt—I felt—I felt—I felt for him. I did not answer him for an minute, I could not. They hurried man as I got now. Suddenly I was carried back and reminded me as strongly of myself sixty years ago. He looked up, a little surprised at my silence, and I saw in his eyes an look that I was not hurt. I asked him whither he was going, though I could have guessed the direction. He mentioned the church hard by. Turning, I went in with him, and, all second like an old dream. Again, I saw a little boy of ten, with a gentle, sad eyed mother who rarely smiled, yet was full of dreams and love. The Christmas Eve of which I thought so clearly last night was so bright and pleasant, the mother so happy, so intensely odd—the snow crunching under every footfall. And she and I were to trim the Christmas tree, and surprise the boy when——Christmas is a season of beauty. The very bells are rarely full, and their metal is all the brighter in the genuine and hallowed sense. Christmas is a season of joy, and as we gaze back, there are some lasting places on the roadside where sunshine and were bright and pleasant, and are there still. Yes, and we do be joyful, and happiness, and are there still.

—On the sacred Christmas festival, three sentiments clasp hands in community of pleasure and of peace. Three, where, though less fortunate, are not wholly ignorant or indifferent, and each recurring anniversary finds them progressing hopefully in the light. We, to whom it has been given to be enabled in the full rays, looking upon those whose destiny has been less happy, we but pour fruitless wishes, and forget to thank that benign Providence in whose hands we are but clay, and who might be cast where not a gleam should reach us.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

O
the Christmas tree,
O the Christmas tree
we delight
and grant,
Both for young and old alike to be
And the time may dare and sing and shout, sages with the grandeur gain
The little stockings are all hung up, and baby just make fun. Wow! Old Santa be surprised when he finds them in one more! There's an elegant piece of work for the Christmas tree!
and a piece for Mary and for Kate to leave little dolls upon. But for little baby, poor, a brown jacket made of the best of Jacket and find the chest hung up, and baby just turn down this light a little now, so old Santa Claus are. And lady and all wishes joined and be as good as good can be. And to morrow morn get up early after a long night' sleep.

HALL'S PULMONARY
BALSAM.
A sure remedy for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.
Sold by all druggists for 25 cents.
J. R. GATES & CO.
417 Sansome Street. S. F.

THE MONITOR.
A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL.
DEVOTED TO THE PROMOTION AND DEFENSE OF CATHOLIC TRUTHS.
Published by THE MONITOR PUBLISHING CO., Office: 536 Kearny St., San Francisco, California.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:
Time by Mailer (one in advance) $2 00
Six Months (not paid in advance) 2 50
Six Months (not paid in advance) 3 00
Three Months (not paid in advance) 1 50
Single Copy (not paid in advance) 10 cts.
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces in addition $1.00 extra postage.

All letters on all communications, subscriptions, business, or other matters, should be addressed to the Publisher.

Money in a letter, Bills, Bills P. O. or San Francisco, Cal. Money Orders payable at the Office of Publication.

Advertisements and Business Notices will be inserted at the following rates:
First insertion, per line, per month, $1 00
Subsequent insertions, per line, per month, 50 cts.
Special Notices, per line, per month, $1 50
Business Cards, per month, $5 00
Contracts for Advertisements, Business Notices, Business Cards, etc., will be made on the following terms:
One Column, per month, $100 00
Half Column, per month, 60 00
Quarter Column, per month, 35 00
Eighth Column, per month, 20 00
Sixteenth Column, per month, 10 00
Transient Advertisements

Poetry.

THE TOY OF THE GIANT CHILD.

(From the German of Uhland Adelbert von Chamisso. Translated for the Monitor by H. E. Watts.)

In Alsace, Nideck castle
Is known in legend lore.
The mountain hides it grace
In happy days of yore,
Now all is dust and ashes,
Where once was joy and mirth,
You ask about the giants,
Long since they passed from earth.

Out of her house the young child
Of the giant came one day,
Without her nurse she wandered
In sobbing cheerless way,
Then down the steps descending,
Into the valley fair
She gaily tripped all smiling
To know what might be there.

With quick step on she hurried,
Passing the wood and fire
She came to Hassleck cottage
And saw the land of man;
A strange world lay before her,
For over the far plain
Were villages and homesteads,
And fields of fruit and grain.

And now the giant demon
As she looked down espied,
Tilling the fields a farmer
Walking his plough beside,
He crawled about, that being,
To her a curious sight,
While in the sunshine glistened
The plough so smooth and bright.

"This pretty little plaything
I will take home," she said,
Then, kneeling down, her kerchief
Upon the ground she spread,
And gathering together
All living things were there,
She placed them in her kerchief
And folded it with care.

Then tripped she gaily homward,
You know a child's glad ways,
She sought her father's presence
And thus to him she says:
"I found a creeping plaything
Where I this morn have been
Oh, such a pretty wonder
Up on the meadow was one!"

The old man sat at table,
Drinking the cool Rhine wine,
And looking at her gladly
He asked her: "Daughter mine
Why do you laugh so lonely,
What sort of creeping thing
Is it that up from Hassleck
The land of man, you bring?"

Then spreading on the lowboard
With care the giant mail
The peasant, plough and horses,
Upon the table laid,
Then clapping hands together
She shouted with delight,
While proud in solemn silence
The father at his sight.

He paused in solemn silence,
Then sadly shook his head:
"What have you done my daughter?
No plaything this!" he said
"The peasant is no plaything
Therefore never give him leave
Unto the plane you found him,
My child have you no sense?"

"Sonnichtway and without morsure
De child so I command,
For bread you would pray vainly
Did noon and eve thy hand,
From humble peasant morrow
Spring forth the plant sun,
The peasants are no playthings—
Thanks be to God for them."

In Alsace, Nideck castle
Is known in legend lore,
Where once was joy and mirth
You ask about the place,
Long since they passed from earth.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE HOLY ROSARY.

Wondrous tales of song and story
Float down the surging Time,
Crowned with wreaths of matchless glory,
In splendor pure, sublime;
Brightly shines the fame of heroes,
Warring on the battle plains,
Fired by great undying verses—
Home's soul-inspiring strains.
Legends old and quaint and weird,
Of Greece's magic days,
Vision fair of Egypt's glory,
Hold yet a potent sway;
But brighter, fairer, glorious the tale
That tells of greater deeds,
Achieved on mountain, plain and dale,
By Mary's mystic beads.
Far in such happy reeling land,
Upon such bounding waves,
She stretches forth her gentle hand,
The swing over to save.
She bids the sinking heart arise
From out its troubled care,
To wing its flight beyond the skies,
To God's bright home and fair.
Then all who love the Virgin fair,
In this black month of snow
Prepare to years a rosary rare,
With heartfelt prayers adieu;
So when we meet grim, ghastly death,
In festitude we'll be,
And pealing with our parting breath,
The heaven-born Rosary.

JOHN J. PARRY.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

IN SORROW SUPPLIANT.

My cross is heavy, Lord,
I call on Thee!
My path a rocky thorn is strewn—
Lord succor me.

My pain is great, dear Lord—
Greater was thine;
Pardon my moans and sighs—
Thine are healing.

Not in complaint, dear Lord,
Doth my voice rise;
Only to pray for aid
Bent from the skies.

Pray (? Thy Will be done;
Lord hear my prayer;
Thy nature shrink from pain,
My soul on bear.

CHAT ANON.

REAL PRAYER.

I often say my prayer,
But do I ever pray?
Or do the wishes of my heart
Agree with what I say?

The cadence is implore,
Unless I feel I need!
Unless 'tis from a sense of want
That all my prayers proceed.

I may as well kneel down
And worship gods of stone,
As offer to the Living God
A prayer of words alone.

For words without the heart
The Lord will never hear;
Nor will He use that child regard
Whose prayers are insincere.

Lord, teach me what I want,
And teach me how to pray;
Not let me for implore Thy grace,
Not feeling what I say.

Herbert Walton's Christmas Gift.

WRITTEN BY J. SMITHSON.

Herbert Walton was too kind hearted to be a woman hater, yet he certainly shrinked to be dubbed "a ladies man." He had never been remarkable for timidity, and had now passed an age at which bachelorhood would have been unbecoming, not to say ridiculous, and yet he had been vainly longing, for more than a year, to speak his mind to a woman. "None but the brave deserve the fair," was a maxim to be quoted on occasions, and Herbert felt confident that he was brave, and with his self conceit he was faithful, when he ventured into the fire so unchingly as it it held a state secret. Her thoughts kept recurring to that ridiculous remark of Miss Wilkins.

"His Christmas present—and this is Jody," she said to herself, and her brow knitted thoughtfully. "Shall I, or shall I not?" There was a smile, half mischievous, half distant, on her lips as she turned over the honey in her bag, picked up the stockings which belonged to her little nephews, and set to work to fill them with toys and candies. When they were ready, she hung them in their appointed places at the fireside.

After a minute's pause she took up Mr. Walton's socks, surveyed them critically for a moment, and looked questioningly at the time. It was dazing up merrily, and seemed to encourage her. She glanced half nervously around the room, then stooped and slowly drew on the socks over her slippers. Then she tucked her feet under her chair, and, leaning back comfortably, began to discuss an important matter with herself. Dining the past few years she had seen and heard a great deal of Mr. Herbert Walton, at that time, when she asked her thoughts whether they had taken a wonder and interest him only, they had taken a wonder and interest him ultimately, the answer was emphatically affirmative. The next question put to her imaginary audience, whether she thought Herbert was fond of, or read of a man so worthy of her friendship, to be the object of her affections, and consequently, the recipient of her Christmas gift, was a longer one, and the answer was a little ambiguous. The result of this mental investigation, or more plainer, at least, should be granted them. Their conclusions, if they were not, should be granted, should establish not to neither others in the pursuit of knowledge. Their humble laws will not be the worse for it, and the knowledge of virtue and use, as departing glamour the pleasant smooth path of truth.

Polish Catholics in Prussia.

Hitherto the Polish Prussian Poles suffered from the religious point of view a treatment disheartening to see be fairly the heavy hand of oppression in the ears of the clergy. Fifteen thousand of them were thrown into prison. Seventy-two priests were fined, and thirty-two imprisoned, and in Prussia, as a whole, there are reckoned to be 2,000 priests in ministry, of the spiritual wants of 2,000,000 Catholics, an average of one priest to 1,000 souls, which is the whole case of Germany. Also, the Polish Prussian Catholics are in a state of great excitement, owing to the unfavorable and unsatisfactory reply, as stated by members of the law established Church towards their Catholic countrymen. There was no concession, no recognition, no outage however enormous, nor persuasion, nor remonstrance, that the Protestants did not employ against the Catholics, the same that they employ against the ancient faith might be forever rooted from Ireland.

THE RIGID AND TIME-HONORED TRADITIONS which the people of Erin held in the greatest veneration, and to which they were most tenaciously attached, were assessed at and ridiculed in the most cruel manner. Catholics were accused of the most wicked crimes and tainted as a nation of idolaters, who rendered divine adoration to images of wood and stone. Even the august assertion of the Mass was pronounced blasphemy, and the doctrine of Purgatory, a lamentable infringement on the prerogatives of Heaven. Seeing their abominable and reformed authorities are challenged, they rapidly cast a bribe in their endeavors on Catholicism. But the warm-hearted of Father Maguire could suffer no more, when he saw his cherished Mother, the Church, subjected to such terrible abuse. Nobly battled with the armour of justice, and sweet Christianity he labored faith from such foul aspersions, he boldly entered the polemical arena in personal combat with the ablest, most shameless and most dissentient representative of blasted bigotry—the Rev. Mr. Piper, a Minister of the Anglican fold.

THE CHARACTER-STORIES OF CONVERSIONS which lasted one week in the Irish capital, created intense excitement in every house hold in Ireland at the time, and even to this day it is often made the subject of conversation between father and son during the long evenings of Winter, when the family are assembled around the cheerful fire, safe from the dismal howling of the north wind. But in this place it is not necessary to dwell on the splendid victory gained by the champion of Catholicity over the learned and sophistical Mr Piper; it is enough that allusion to "Father Tom's" masterly arguments, discussions and dissertations, whereby he certainly done instead and proved that the teachings and doctrines of the Church are the only true and sure guide in their religious and authority, but are neither or repugnant to most of harmony with right reason and true science. In conclusion, he has unique success in defending Catholicism against the Catholic hand, from the curious attacks of Protestant bigotry and from the remarkable manner in which he showed up the hollow pretence of the Anglicans catalogue to be the Church founded by Christ, he was adjudged by a unanimous verdict by secret and sensitively numerous, who seem would so fain to convert a Catholic into a Protestant, to be the victor in the battle. In the Protestant fashion, "Father Tom" was presented with a purse of gold, and with the sum of 100 pounds, which was soon to be transmitted on December 2nd, 1847, under express instructions that such money should be applied to the purchase of a large organ, which was to be placed in the Pro-Cathedral, Marlborough-street, Dublin, "Father Tom" will be recorded when Ireland takes her place among the Christian nations.

THE PRO-CATHEDRAL, MARLBOROUGH-STREET, Dublin, is the most intense habitual frequented by the most numerous and overcrowded congregation in Dublin. It is the Catholic church, which by false reasoning, misrepresentations and numbers assertions, the Protestant Ascendancy Party, in their Times and Sacraments, this noble hearted and eloquent Father Tom, so well right to the millions of Ireland, and which, in fact, took up the arms of high which he so strenuously wielded in defense of the Church in Ireland.

Descended from noble ancestors, a scion of a Celtic clan, that gave many brave heroes to the cause of Faith and Fatherland, Father Tom was born in the year of Christ, 1805. The humble vestage of his birth is preserved as a national relic by a Protestant family, who gave to the Holy Ireland, the famous Venerable. He first was the light in the Sanctuary of Kilmacow, County Limerick, in the year of our Lord, 1826. Arrived at an age when the mind is susceptible to new ideas and new impressions, he was sent to a grand seminary conducted by a lodge school master, where the youth of the surrounding country assembled and a very precious course of studies. Not at a very early age Father Tom was made great by his talents and associates, to enter the famous national College of Maynooth, where his extraordinary talents were

THE MONITOR.

PAPER PAST TRADE OF CALIFORNIA

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

— The success of the Catholic Ministry in Belgium has been striking in many ways but in none more than from the temporal point of view. Herein the annals in a nutshell, as compiled by the new Budget for 1888 : Liberal Administration, 1878-84 — total deficit, 38,728,416 francs; Catholic Administration, 1885-87 — total surplus 10,825,000 francs.

— The Bishop of Salford has written an encouraging letter to Father Slattery, who, under the auspices of St. Joseph's Foreign Missionary Society, is founding in Baltimore, a College for the training of ecclesiastics destined for the negro missions of the United States. The new Institution will, the Bishop says, be American in character, and the work for which it will be established will be carried on under the American Bishops.

— A number of Jesuit Fathers have just left England for foreign missions. Father Piemonte, an Italian member of the Society; Father Barrasate, a Spaniard, and Brother Resinda, an Italian, left Liverpool for New York last week en route to Honduras. Father Turner, Mount St. Mary's, Chesterfield, and formerly of St. Helens, Lancashire, and Father Chandler, formerly Prefect of Studies at St. Ignatius' College, Malta, have left for Jamaica.

— A few weeks since the Bishop of Fontanels in Brazil summoned a meeting of the leading men of all parties and all trades and of the press, and begged their aid in carrying out the plan already taken up and recommended by several Brazilian Bishops of marking the Jubilee of Leo XIII. by setting all slaves free on December 31st. A committee was formed for the purpose. The action of the Bishops has given new life to the emancipation movement which is becoming daily more irresistible.

— Leadville, Colorado, supports eleven hundred saloons and yet the public schools had to be closed recently for want of funds! It used to be said that "cotton" was king, but "whiskey" seems to have become monarch in many cities in the United States during the last decade. The worst of the evil is that it is growing every year, and there seems to be no organization powerful enough to stay its disastrous ravages upon the bodies and souls of those who permit this Satanic power to lure them into the sin of intoxication.

— The steadily-growing indignation with which the treatment of the Irish political prisoners, is exemplified especially in the persecution of Mr. William O'Brien, is regarded in England, is not unlikely to powerfully influence the course of public opinion. The Times's comment is apropos. We fancy it will prove so, though it quits an opposite sense to that intended by the Tory Times. Englishmen are getting profoundly moved by a story which, for fully animated by cruelty, has no equal in our time.

— The death is announced of Rev. Father (Said) Mgr. Persico's secretary during his recent official tour through Ireland. When Father Dudd returned to Rome he was suffering greatly with heart disease, which resulted fatally on the 22nd ult. News also comes from Ireland that Mgr. Persico is at present very ill at the convent of the Franciscan Fathers at Roebestown, Cork Co., In accordance with the directions of his medical attendants Mgr. Persico receives no visitors nor does he answer correspondents.

— A cablegram from Glasgow reports that the Delegates of the Scotch Home Rule Union who have been making a tour of Ireland have returned and report that the Irish people are eager for peace, that their demands are moderate and that the National League is the chief agency for maintenance of law and order. They say that they are convinced that the Irish are home rulers and not separatists. No one in Ireland fears religious persecution. The Delegates assert that the measures taken by the present English Government are ineffective and irritate the mass of the Irish nation. This is important evidence in favor of Ireland from impartial witnesses.

— Among the many objects of value in the shape of jubilee presents to the Pope, which are daily pouring into the Vatican, one recently presented by Monsignor Leon, Bishop of Dijon, has a singular history. It is a picture by Annibale Carucci of the "Ecce Homo" which was stolen from the Vatican by a French soldier at the time of the departure of Pius VII. The picture passed through various hands in France, and finally came into the possession of a priest in Burgundy. Upon the representations of Monsignor Leon, the picture was given up to be consigned to the Pope on the occasion of his Jubilee, and the Bishop had the pleasure of presenting it personally to his Holiness, together with a large sum as Peter's Pence collected in his Diocese.

— Most Rev. Daniel McGettigan, D. D., Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, whose death we announced last week, was born in 1814, and was ordained a priest in 1839. He was the hero of a suit that is famous in the annals of the Irish priesthood. He advised a man to marry some stolen goods. The trigger magistrate got wind of it and summoned him to name the guilty person. He refused, and was sent to the county jail on the charge of compounding a felony. Daniel O'Connell took up the case, and, discovering a flaw in the warrant of committal, had the priest acquitted. Father McGettigan was made Assistant Bishop of Raphoe in 1857, and Archbishop of Armagh in 1860. He was a man of imposing presence, being over six feet in height and broad in proportion.

The Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

It was a most edifying sight, and one that must have infused greater love for God in the hearts of every Catholic who beheld it, to witness the very large number of communicants in the different city churches on the feast of the Immaculate Conception. This gratifying evidence of devotion to the Mother of God, goes far to establish the great fact that the 8th of December has come to be one of the greatest holydays of the Church of God all over the Christian world. From remote Borneo to Catholic Belgium, from the deep recesses of the Australian woods, where the lowly chapel has its converted Aborigines worshipping, to the Cathedral in Cork, Ireland, where every Catholic can proudly point back to a heritage of Catholic faith throughout nearly fifteen Christian centuries; in every portion of the world, on the feast of the Immaculate Conception, Catholics of every clime, race and color, gather in their millions to offer up their grateful thanks to Almighty God for having vouchsafed to give them such a beautiful Mother who shines more resplendent even than the sun in all the virtues which can make a mortal worthy of the exalted title of Queen of the Heavenly Host.

Had the Catholic Church no other magnet whereby to attract the souls of non-towards her sanctuary than the veneration and love which her children are taught to constantly practice towards the Mother of God, she would still prove herself to be the distinctively true Church of Christ.

Although the dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin was not defined as an Article of Faith until December 8th, in the year 1854, yet the belief in the immaculate purity of the Mother of God has always been current in the Church, even from the earliest ages. To exhibit this important fact briefly and partially is all that can be accomplished in a newspaper article, hence we merely introduce a few witnesses to the truth of this assertion out of the long array of immortable Saints and Fathers of the Church whose names are on record as attesting to the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

In the library of Bologna there exists a very ancient manuscript known as "the Epistle of the Priests of Athaia," in which is narrated the martyrdom of the Apostle St. Andrew, the disciple of St. John the Baptist, and wherein it is set forth that in making his declaration of Christian Faith just prior to his crucifixion, he made this declaration concerning the Blessed Virgin "And because the first man had been created of an immaculate earth, it was necessary that the Perfect Man should be born of an immaculate virgin, in order that the Son of God Who had previously formed man, should restore the eternal life which they had lost by Adam."

St. Dionysius of Alexandria, who flourished in the second age of the Church, also makes bold and explicit reference to the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin, calling her "the only Daughter of Life, who is by nature free from all sin." Eusebius, the Father of Church History, has recorded by the power of the Most High: preserved without corruption and blessed from head to foot." St. Ephrem calls the Blessed Virgin "Immaculate, all pure, exempt from all stain," and adds that she is holier than the Seraphim, and more glorious far than all the choirs of the heavenly host.

St. Peter Damian, who lived over eight hundred years ago, proclaims the dogma of the Immaculate Conception plainly when he says: "The flesh of the Virgin assumed from Adam bore none of Adam's stains." St. Bonaventure, St. Bernard and hundreds of other great Saints speak in the same strain, and thus carry down to the present day the existence of a belief in the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin, down to the time when the Church in her wisdom deemed it necessary to proclaim that dogma so as to confirm the Faith on the doubting, and to confound that acceptious, arrogant heresiarchs who contested the Faith of the whole Church.

But it is not alone by the Saints and Fathers of Church Church that the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God is proclaimed in every Christian age. Monumental also bears testimony to this fact, and even that arch-enemy of God's Church, Martin Luther, could not conceal from the world the fact that he firmly believed in this doctrine of the true Church which he tried to discover by religious discord.

In a sermon which Luther preached upon the festival of the Conception, Luther said that the Blessed Virgin was "sanctified in the maternal womb and received without concupiscence." Again, it is just and meet that that person should be preserved from original sin, from which Christ received the fault by which He overcame all sin." Since Luther's day thousands of other Protestant ecclesiastics and laymen have redundantly adopted the teaching of the Church in regard to the Blessed Virgin, and the more intelligent among those people who are separated from the Church by sectarianism, have at length arrived at that, enlightened mental condition whereby they quietly accept as true the dogma of a Church which alone has given to the Mother of God that love, honor and veneration to which she is entitled for her supereminent sanctity on earth and her high place in heaven.

— The Belgian Liberal press is alarmed at the rapid strides of Catholic education in the capital. The Liberal Journal de Charleroi gives the cry of alarm: "Brussels, a Liberal city, possesses three Colleges—the Athénée, the Institut St. Louis, and the Jesuit College. Hitherto, while St. Louis has received every year over 1,000 pupils, the Athénée has never reached 700. Well, all to the thousand students of the Episcopal College (St. Louis), three of St. Michel (the Jesuit), we shall arrive at a total alarming, and we shall understand how rapidly the rapid and incontestable progress accomplished by the Catholic party in the capital." And yet there are people even in progressive California who try to persuade Protestants that the Catholic Church is opposed to education!

Archbishop Croke on "a Mean and Merciless Government."

The brave and beloved patriotic Prelate who occupies the Archiepiscopal Chair of Cashel is ever the first confessorate in Ireland to raise his voice against British tyranny whenever that Dragon of destruction assumes a new attitude in its efforts to tear out the life-blood of Irish manhood.

Every true Catholic champion of Irish rights—Michael O'Brien—was arrested, Archbishop Croke sent a letter to the secretary of the great demonstration which was immediately convened in Dublin, regretting that he could not be present, and addressing these national sentiments

"Expressions of sympathy will soothe, no doubt, the gentle but irritated spirit of the persecuted patriot, and it is well, therefore, that such should be passed through the country, but if we desire, moreover, to fill his heart with joy and his dreary cell with light unconquerable, we should at the same time publicly pledge ourselves never to make peace with the so-called government that is maltreating him, nor to enter into any treaty with the exterminating and anti-Irish faction, by which that mean and merciless Government is supported."

These words of the wise ecclesiastical guide of the Irish people should sink deep into the heart of every lover of Irish liberty throughout the length and breadth of the whole civilized world. "No peace for Ireland's enemy" should be the watchword of every Celt no matter what clime may cover him or what clime may be his habitation. The Government so justly characterized by Archbishop Croke as "mean and merciless" must be made to feel that Ireland's friends throughout the world, not Ireland alone, but that its every section of the globe, and under every form of government, they are united in a sympathy and sanctity in their resolve to redeem the poor Ireland from that hideous power which O'Connell justly denominated as "the base, bloody and brutal British Government."

That the present Tory party which is at present terrorizing Ireland, in the terrorizing time of Cromwell, which "mean and merciless" is a substantial fact to all persons who are familiar with the arbitrary conduct of English officials in Ireland from such a week. The stealing of O'Brien's clothes by his jailers was an act of "meanness" which is without a parallel in the annals of history, whilst the "merciless" character of Balfour's bloodhounds has been already demonstrated by the Mitchelstown massacre and many other instances where the military and police have been hounded on inoffensive and law-abiding Irish people like a pack of hungry wolves assaulting a flock of lambs.

The British Government, therefore, must ever continue to deserve the united scorn of the whole Irish race until it restores from bleeding Erin the blood-stained shackles of serfdom which an alien power has placed upon the personal liberties of a race of people that have ever patriotically placed themselves in the vanguard of those valiant armies of freemen who have raised the flag of Liberty upon many a foreign shore.

How to Have a Happy Christmas

To Catholics the holiness of the Christmas tide and exclaiming that God delights, beyond the worthy reception of the Sacrament of Penance by every contrite heart. Every Catholic man and woman in America should approach Holy Communion at Christmas. Every Catholic father and mother, every Catholic child who has arrived at the age of reason, should also receive the Holy and Blessed of our Blessed Lord on the last commemoration of His Birthday. Every practical Catholic one his or her influence to induce Catholics to join the Banquet of our Blessed Lord on the holy Christmas Festival, and Almighty God will grant them additional blessings therefore.

No man or woman who has a single spark of Catholic faith within them, will refuse to go to Confession at Christmas if asked to do so in that spirit of charity which leads men to grace by claims of love. Let all practical Catholics, therefore, be unanimous during this holy season and make it their special duty to see that all their relatives, friends and acquaintances check the Church by a worthy reception of the Sacraments on Christmas morning. If you have a father or a mother, a sister or a brother, a relative or acquaintance—who may not have approached the Communion rails during this year, then make it your special duty to approach them and bring home to them a sense of their religious duty, so that you can offer each of them as no many Christmas gifts to Almighty God. Then, indeed, will the Christmas festival be a happy one for all concerned! Happy for those by ministering to them bearing up laggard Catholics to the fount of God's love, to drink of the waters of everlasting life, and happy, too, for those who have gone to the Crib to adore the Infant Saviour, and thus to become sharers in that "peace on earth, which God has promised to all "men of good will."

English Catholics Enlisting for Ireland.

A cablegram just received from England at the hour of going to press, brings the gratifying intelligence that an address, signed by many English Catholics, will be presented to Mgr. Persico, who was charged by the Pope to make personal investigation of affairs in Ireland, assuring him of their devotion to the Holy See, and expressing the hope that his mission will result in enabling the Pope to assist in obtaining for Ireland the fulfillment of her national aspirations. The address will reproduce the action of those English Catholics who have adopted a course of letter and encouraging healthy toward Ireland. The address has already been signed by the Marquis of Ripon, Lord Ashburnham, Lord Oxford and other prominent gentlemen, and is now being circulated for signatures among the Catholics of England.

This is the right spirit, and we are proud to know that all the English Catholics are not in unison with the anti-Irish form of the London Times.

We learn from our Stockton correspondent that Mary Ward's new drama, "The Old Man's Wife," Stockton, died recently, this season was attended by the whole city and by many of the students of St. Mary's College (Union School) to the one record. R. F. C.

Iniquities of the Italian Government.

A correspondent in Rome writing to request to the usurpation of the Papal States by the Italian Government, says, with great truth, that there is no a Catholic in Europe—yes, in the world—who does not condemn the iniquitous spoliation of the Holy States, and the Catholics have the sympathy of many non-Catholics who have preserved their respect for justice and generosity towards the vanquished. The spirit of this revolutionary usurpation has been denounced in the Parliaments of Madrid and Buda Pesth, and in the Austrian Parliament Dr. Lueger affirm Mgr Hatzarcith raised his voice against it a few days ago in a remarkable speech. It was a strange sight—the spectacle of a Protestant Prince of Europe that the Pope should be asserted an independent power. A speech which has caused quite a sensation in Rome was that delivered by Mgr. Schlaudi, Bishop of Grosswardein, at a session of the Hungarian Delegation. The Bishop speaking to a motion for the approval of the report of a committee relative to the Italian Alliance, said: "In approving of this report, I cannot allow it to be understood that I also approve of what has been done during the past twenty years all that by which the Head of the Church of which I am a member, has been profoundly afflicted and stricken. I earnestly desire, and I trust I may be allowed to express the hope, that this question will find a solution which will not only consolidate the alliance with Italy, but will cause it to be more heartily approved of, and which will, in a great measure, strengthen it. Dante, the immortal poet of Italy, says, by prophetic intuition, in the strength of the Lord, that Italy would see the future unity and greatness of Italy, but how the unity and the solid grandeur of the two powers of the Church and Italy and the Empire. And Italy of the present, like Italy of the past, cannot explode from its calculation the glorious and powerful influence of the Church and power of the universe, that power whose representatives, enjoying full independence and freedom, would be as a secure and a magnet factor in the future greatness of Italy. He would be its most splendid ornament, its strongest guarantee, and its most reliable support of peace. The weight of this mighty power would confer real greatness, and the Italian nation would definitely arrive at the conviction that its greatness and power would receive an unspeakable increase of strength if it united itself intimately with that cosmopolitan authority, which, despite the existing situation, is flesh of its flesh and blood of its blood. These sentiments would, I feel, be a lively response on those who heard them, and the reporters assured the distinguished Prelate that they had all listened to the address with satisfaction.

Good News from Ireland!

Irish intellect is coming to the front in grand style in all that constitutes its excellence. Education is well under way. Irish American readers enjoy the glorious festival of Christmas with greater zest, and, in a more above detail, lavished in elegant set forth the grand fact that Irish Catholic children are now the most intelligent pupils in Great Britain! A London paper says: "Return has been published showing, among other things, the results of the examination of elementary schools in England and Wales for the year ending August 31, 1887. The general result of all the examinations shows that the total percentage of passes compared by such denomination of schools to which the Government makes an annual grant was as follows: Schools connected with the National Society, or the Church of England, 84.69; British undenominational and other schools, 85.55; Wesleyan Schools, 86.24; School Board Schools, 87.82; Catholic schools, 88.06. The Catholic schools are distinctly attended by children of Irish parents or children of Irish blood, who thus proved themselves to be the most intelligent of all the children attending the elementary schools of the kingdom." Merry Christmas to the Catholic Irish children!

Archbishop Seghers's Murderer.

A correspondent at Nitka sends information of the trial of Fuller, the murderer of the noble martyred Archbishop Seghers. The case was on during the last session of the Court and lasted several days. Finally that question will find a solution which will not only consolidate the alliance with Italy, but will cause it to be more heartily approved of, and which will, in a great measure, strengthen it. Dante, the immortal poet of Italy, says, by prophetic intuition, in the strength of the Lord, that Italy would see the future unity and greatness of Italy, but how the unity and the solid grandeur of the two powers of the Church and Italy and the Empire. And Italy of the present, like Italy of the past, cannot explode from its calculation the glorious and powerful influence of the Church and power of the universe, that power whose representatives, enjoying full independence and freedom, would be as a secure and a magnet factor in the future greatness of Italy. He would be its most splendid ornament, its strongest guarantee, and its most reliable support of peace. The weight of this mighty power would confer real greatness, and the Italian nation would definitely arrive at the conviction that its greatness and power would receive an unspeakable increase of strength if it united itself intimately with that cosmopolitan authority, which, despite the existing situation, is flesh of its flesh and blood of its blood. These sentiments would, I feel, be a lively response on those who heard them, and the reporters assured the distinguished Prelate that they had all listened to the address with satisfaction.

Good News from Ireland!

Irish intellect is coming to the front in grand style in all that constitutes its excellence. Education is well under way. Irish American readers enjoy the glorious festival of Christmas with greater zest, and, in a more above detail, lavished in elegant set forth the grand fact that Irish Catholic children are now the most intelligent pupils in Great Britain! A London paper says: "Return has been published showing, among other things, the results of the examination of elementary schools in England and Wales for the year ending August 31, 1887. The general result of all the examinations shows that the total percentage of passes compared by such denomination of schools to which the Government makes an annual grant was as follows: Schools connected with the National Society, or the Church of England, 84.69; British undenominational and other schools, 85.55; Wesleyan Schools, 86.24; School Board Schools, 87.82; Catholic schools, 88.06. The Catholic schools are distinctly attended by children of Irish parents or children of Irish blood, who thus proved themselves to be the most intelligent of all the children attending the elementary schools of the kingdom." Merry Christmas to the Catholic Irish children!

Archbishop Seghers's Murderer.

A correspondent at Nitka sends information of the trial of Fuller, the murderer of the noble martyred Archbishop Seghers. The case was on during the last session of the Court and lasted several days. Finally it was given to the jury, who, after forty-eight hours consideration, could not come to any conclusion, eleven of the jurymen being of the opinion that the verdict should be murder in the first degree, whilst one jurymen obstinately asserted his idea that manslaughter was the crime committed.

Thus the matter stood when the mail steamer sailed from Nitka, and now we will have to wait several months for further communication in again established with the Home North era we can ascertain the fate of a man who was guilty of the foul deed, a man who ever perpetrated upon an innocent victim.

An Eminent Irish Priest Dead.

Yesterday we received five of Irish papers containing the sad news of the death of Very Rev. Canon Flick J. Hurley, on the 22nd ult. at Castlehaven, where he had been staying for medical treatment which could not be procured at his house in Clarenmorris, Ballyhaunis, Co. Mayo. Deceased was one of the most learned and zealous priests of the national cause of Ireland, Canon Hurley will be greatly missed by all who speak the Gaelic language of Ireland, as he was one of the few standard authorities on that language then existing. An account of his life, labors and funeral will appear next week, and in the meantime we ask the prayers of our readers for the happy repose of his soul.

This is a good time for Catholics to prepare for their visit to the Babe of Bethlehem at Christmas. To the Crib we go, let every one, like the faithful Shepherds—let every Catholic follow the Star of Faith to the Sanctuary of God and there fall down in humble adoration at the Divine Presence which is typified in the Body and Blood of our Blessed Redeemer as received in the soul saving Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. To do this is to have a happy and a holy Christmas.

— Rev. P. O'Connor has presented the $200 painting of the Sacred Heart to St. Vincent's Church, Vallejo street.

Another Eminent Convert.

A recent cablegram from Paris announces the conversion to the Catholic Church of one of the most prominent Protestants, and one of the foremost men in the ranks of the English aristocracy, who died shortly after his conversion. This distinguished convert was the present city through Northern California will, I doubt not, be interesting to our readers, at the close of this year of grace. As is customary on all my trips up the Sacramento valley, I first and was made to Sacramento. The year just closing, I am informed, has been one of general prosperity to the people of this county, the year's production of fruit and grain being fairly good and yielding paying returns to the producer. Result—well-grounded confidence all round, and general business buoyant. Backing up this happy state of affairs was the fact that the extensive workshops of the General Pacific R. R. Company have been running at full blast all the year round, giving employment to a larger number of mechanics and laborers than ever before, and thereby distributing large sums of money among the people and so stimulating trade to a very great extent. In fact the pressure of business just at the march, I learn, that the company think of running their shops night and day in order to meet the demands of the awakening interest of freight and passenger traffic over their route between here and the States. To crown all, the glorious rains of the year have rolled away the clouds of adversity and ushered in a bright and hopeful season, which promises to be a very great one for the farmers, fruit growers, stockmen and all other producers. Hence the church goes forward in this city with a good heart, and has erected into the present appearance which it now presents to the eye of the passer-by, and which is the beauty and ornament to this Sacramento. In this work the Rev. Father McKinnon—who by the way, is one of the most popular men in the city—has been ably assisted by the Sacramento Catholics, who have shown a very creditable degree of liberality in the matter of subscriptions. Hence the church is now free of debt, and, as I said before, presents to the eye of the passer-by a very creditable appearance with its Gothic architecture and its beautiful spire. Father McKinnon is a young man, full of the spirit of his work, and is, I believe, the only Catholic clergyman in the city who has a horse and buggy at his disposal, and he makes good use of it in the discharge of his duties. He is also a good preacher, and, I believe, is the only one who can be heard in the church in the rear of the church, which, by the way, is a very large one, and which, when the church was first opened, used to be filled with people who could not hear a word of the sermon. Father Scanlan, who was the first pastor of the church, is now in charge of the Catholic church at Placerville, and is, I hear, doing good work there. Father Wadhams, who was the first pastor of the church at Sacramento, is now in charge of the Catholic church at Oakland, and is, I hear, doing good work there. Father Wadhams is a very good man, and is, I believe, the only Catholic clergyman who has ever been in charge of a church in Sacramento who has been able to speak the language of the people of this place

Farm and Home.

Little Things That Kill.

At various times the newspapers have warned the public against swallowing the small pieces of bone in chicken, for the danger of such substances getting into a small intestinal bag, or caecum, as called by the doctors the appendix vermiformis. This is a little receptacle formed at the junction of the large and small intestines, but its use or object no physician knows. It has been thought to be a rudimentary or incomplete formation — or possibly some meaningless survival of a lost animal organ. At any rate, its existence, while presenting no apparent "reason for being," as the French say, is, on the other hand, a positive and constant source of danger, because of the liability of its becoming the receptacle of some undigested seed or other indigestible substance. In that case it produces a state of inflammation which in nearly all cases proves fatal.

Fortunately but few seeds, among the great number we herd daily swallow, seem to get into this little death-trap — although any one seems likely to lodge there. Perhaps more cases of inflamation of the bowels than the doctors suspect may be in reality due to this obscure and disregarded cause. One sad case, which to-day produces a feeling of deep regret among thousands, and which plunges a family into overwhelming grief, occurred in this city on Saturday evening, in the lamented death of J. Robert Dwyer, the much-esteemed adjutant of the Governor's Foot Guards — a man whose place it will be hard to fill with well make good. His case so baffled the physicians that an autopsy was had, and that revealed a piece of peanut shell in the appendix vermiformis. — Hartford Times.

Drinking Before Meals.

In the morning the stomach contains a considerable quantity of mucus spread over and adherent to its walls. It is full of odors at this time, the tenacious mucus will interfere, to some extent, with the direct contact between the food and the stomach necessary to provoke the secretion of gastric juice. A glass of water, taken before breakfast, passes through the stomach into the small intestine in a continuous and uninterrupted flow. It partly cleanses the stomach, stretching, and to some extent, obliterating to rugae; it thins and washes out more of the tenacious mucus; it increases the fulness of the capillaries of the stomach, directly if the water is warm, and indirectly if a reactionary way if the water is cold; it is a comparatively suitable of the alimentary tract; wakes it up (so to speak), and gives it a warning, exercise and washing. Care must be taken not to give cold water when the circulation, either local or general, is feable so as to make reaction impossible. We should restrict it to advanced age, nor in the bath, whether old or young. But should it be given in local troubles, like chronic gastric catarrh. In these cases it is best to give warm or hot water. The addition of salt is very beneficial. Such a time-honored custom of drinking soap at the beginning of a meal could only have been persistently adhered to because of it having been found by experience to be the most appropriate time. It does not only what warm or hot water, with the addition of salt, does, and more, in that it is nutritive and excites the flow of gastric juice.

Cure for Rheumatism.

[illegible] the English expression know the following remedy consistently with her feet, with painful by taking her of her stone. The following mended recently and the speaking pain in stone, and she can now lie a couple of days action her boots, and or crutch on one tread into which she sinks ankles curls and wrap. of with the whey mixture one means time keep the curds hot, and after bathing put them on a poultice, wrap in flannel, and—go to sleep (you can). Three applications should be a perfect cure, even in aggravated cases.

A Practical Land Theory.

In France "all the land for the people" does are pretty numerous and are known as Socialists who wish to rob the rich, do away with priests and churches, and have a new deal generally. One of these was not some months ago in that country by a way, who was on his way, like the peasant, to Bordeaux. He thus addressed our Socialist peasant:

"What are you doing here? They are about to divide all the land of the rich; you had better go to the mayor and put down your name for your share."

The peasant set of at full gallop, and on arriving at the mayor's, said:

"Monsieur le Maire, as there is to be a division of the land, I wish to have the window of ——, which adjoins my garden. Put down my name at the head of the list."

The mayor turned over some papers, and then said:

"You are not the first. I have an applicant who demands the window, and also your garden with it."

"My garden! my garden" said the peasant in a fury, "I will go and get my musket! and he set to watching his garden day and night.

There is a host of persons like this peasant they wish to share the property of others and keep their own.

Moral Courage in Daily Life.

Have the courage to tell a man why you refuse to credit him.

Have the courage to tell a man why you refuse to lend him your money.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to discharge a debt when you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to own that you are poor, and thus discount poverty of its sting.

Have the courage, in providing an entertainment for your friends, not to exceed your means.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may crave it.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance, rather than to seek knowledge under false pretences.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a seedy coat, even though you are in company with a rich friend, and richly attired.

Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary that you should do so, and to hold your tongue when it is prudent for you to do so.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty in what ever guise it appears, and your contempt for dishonesty and deceit, by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to act the most agreeable station you have when you are true to the high principle, a friend in a friend's indemnities, but [illegible]

[illegible] cures of eczema or [illegible] accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

Family Fun.

Had Been There.

A Sacramento man visiting this city was being shown around by a city man, who said: "Now, let's go and see the Widows' Home."

The Sacramento man put his finger to the side of his nose and winked, and then said:

"Not much; I've been there before! I saw a widow home once, and she sued me for breach of promise and proved it on me, and it cost me $16,000. No, sir, need the widows home in a hack."

A Matter of Small Importance.

Oakland Man (to father)—Papa, did Mr.—Mr.—can think of his name—anyway, did a tall young man with blue eyes and side whiskers call on you to day?

Father—I don't think he did. Why do you ask?

Oakland Man—Nothing, only I promised to marry him, but I didn't know he had asked for me. Let me see, Ryman, Rymall—isn't it strange I can't remember the name! But I am almost sure it begins with an R, and, papa, he's the nicest little man you ever saw. I just know you'll like him.

Father—Wouldn't be surprised. When you get acquainted with him, introduce me.

A Truly Wonderful Man.

Feathery—I don't think much of your friend, Mr. Humbug, Jumbug.

Humbug—What's the matter with him? Feathery—I read him an original poem last night of twenty-four verses, and he walked off without saying a word.

Humbug—He is certainly a wonderful man!

Feathery—How wonderful?

Humbug—In being able to walk off. If he was not a wonderful man he would have to be carried off.

No Use For "Used To Be's" and "Going Talk's."

Old Dan Rice was an odd character and given to terse sayings. He once addressed for a double menagerie performer, and there were fifty applicants. One man said he "used to" do the act but was out of practice. Another said he believed he would soon "get there." And so on. When they had all made their excuses, claims and promises, old Dan, with deep disgust, said:

"Twenty five used to's, and twenty-five 'going to be's, and not a thunderin' 'now' in the whole lot. I want no 'is' or 'was' in mine."

The Request of a Bank President.

Bank President—Mr. Hollins, I regret to state that I have discovered a shortage in the cashier's accounts.

President—I have also ascertained that I am going to marry my housekeeper. Now I have one request to make.

Cashier—Name it, sir.

President—Don't go until to-morrow. Give me one day's start.

Cleaned Out.

"I have just returned from a little [illegible] where with your daughter, and I have all to the parlor," said the young man briskly, "and—and—may I say a word to you, sir?"

"Certainly, certainly," responded the old man, [illegible]

Suggestive Smiles.

Farmer—Ain't what is your brother Frank doing now?

City Visitor—He's paying a good deal of attention to his clothing.

Farmer—I see. What is he taking for it?

"I regard the use of beer as the true temperance principle. When I work all day and am exhausted nothing helps me like a glass of beer. It assists nature, you understand," said Hermann to Hansen.

"It makes a fool of me," Hansen replied "Just so," exclaimed Hermann. "That's what I say; it assists nature."

A Cook's Credentials.

A young woman presented herself at a newspaper and asked for the position of cook.

"What can you do?" asked the proprietor.

"I can make seventy sandwiches with only a quarter of a pound of butter.

Washington Quips.

Care of Rev. Father Hume, Hyde Park, Ill.

WHO WROTE SHAKESPEARE?

How the Element of "Doubt" Leads to Grand Achievements.

The world is agitated again over the question of who was the author of Shakespeare's plays.

The world is full of doubting Thomases.

The man who has been successful in instilling the present momentary interest in the subject is like most successful agitators, an Irishman. He claims to have discovered a cipher running through the Shakespearian plays which proves them to have been written by Lord Bacon. It is also claimed that there is a cipher in the epitaph on the monument to Bacon's memory, which, properly interpreted, leads to the same conclusion.

This age shows a decided inclination to pry into mysteries.

It can make no difference to Shakespeare now whether the world believes he wrote the plays that bear his name or not.

The plays are immortal.

Ignatius Donnelly claimed pride on all those grand works, even though he should succeed in robbing Shakespeare of his glory.

Were it not for doubting Thomases many of man's great accomplishments would never have been brought to successful issue.

Men have been stricken down without warning. Death put in motion the investigation which unearthed the cause. After the discovery of the cause, the world was ignorant of any remedy with which to stay the mysterious slaughter of humanity, and medical science said it was impossible. Death led the way by the light, and Warner's safe cure solved the wonderfully inscrutable problem. Its friends tell us with conclusive proof that the symptomatic kidney disease, which the Shoshani causes most of our diseases! Kidney disease is the least was looked upon as the most important organ in the body. Not only did its further importance which developed the fact that the kidneys are the real blood purifiers, and that all the disease organs now attract the first attention of the cause practitioner. It is now a recognized fact that if they are put in a healthy state by the use of the remedy possessing such wonderful curative and cleansing powers most of the prevailing diseases of the system will be speedily overcome, since their cause will be removed.

How indispensable, in comparison with such profusion, is the present discovery to the authorship of Shakespeare!

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIAMOND DYES

COLOR EVERYTHING.

Unequalled for Silk, Wool, Cotton and all Fabrics and Fancy Articles. Strongest, Durable and Economical. Any one can use them.

32 COLORS—10 CENTS EACH.

Remember, these are the only Pure, Harmless and Unadulterated Dyes.

Beware of other Dyes, because often Poisonous, Adulterated, Weak and Worthless.

We warrant these Dyes to color more goods of more value, for less money, and give more brilliant and durable colors. Sample Card free.

THE DIAMOND PAINTS, GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE and COPPER

Very grateful Family Paints, Ready to use, Brush attached to each cork. Gilding Gilt edge, Ornamenting Fancy Articles, Repairing Furniture, Frames, Toys, Tinsels, Ornaments, Gilding Picture Frames, Gilding Signs, Ornamenting Fairs, Gilding Carriages, Ornamenting Fairs, Gilding Carriages, Ornamenting Fairs, Gilding Carriages

THE CALAMITY.

Almost Will Result in a Narrow Escape at at Sea!

...was dark last Sunday evening a fire was seen between the two buildings on First ...This still, just above Harlem street, occupied as a school by the Sisters of Mercy attached to St. Mary's Hospital. The alarm ...who turned in the alarm, assisted by the chapel and broke the door in to get at the fire. The ...Hallpike, by the time he had arrived, had ...the fire extinguished by them, and they were ...effectually attempting to quench the flames ...three means when the department engines ...

When it was sought to play upon the blaze, however, the alarming discovery was made that the water would not reach the roof of the chapel ...of this school, and, as the fire was in full progress ...the apparently flying in every direction, ...buckets were again called into requisition, and at length, by means of buckets and the water from the bucket, the fire was somewhat subdued. At this point the pumping forces on the ...were brought into play, and a stream was made to play on the roof. The result was at once manifest in the putting out of the fire. The water was then turned on the sides of the chapel and school, when the flames again broke out on the roof. At length, however, the fire was extinguished entirely.

Inside the chapel, however, in the choir gallery and around the new organ, the fire was still blazing, and, had it not been for the strenuous efforts of a number of volunteers who carried water in buckets, the damage would have been ten-fold more than it was. The Sisters were remarkably fortunate in having the services of one of the Mother Superior, who, of inestimable aid in removing statues, flowers and ornaments and many other articles which it would otherwise have been impossible to save.

The Mother Superior's whole care was for the hospital, and as soon as she learned that that institution was in no danger, she was greatly relieved. She expressed the utmost solicitude for the patients and for the inmates of the Old People's Home, which is situated just north of the school, and, when it became apparent that the hospital was secure, she at once took measures for the removal of the inmates of the latter place. Carriages were ordered by the Mother Superior and conveyances rushed to the assistance of the Sisters of Mercy as the fire drew near, and aged women aided in reliving the Sisters of as much work as possible, for which the Sisters of Mercy tender their heartfelt thanks.

The loss which is entirely fire-insured by insurance, will amount to about $800 for that which was fire-insured, but will be as much property ruined by smoke and water which can never be removed, and the further work of which amounted to $10,000 at a low estimate. The cemetery from hallway to hallway is ruined as completely as if it had been burned, and the chapel is ruined entirely. The rare and religious ornaments

Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

LAMENT FOR THE DYING YEAR.

The midnight bells a solemn requiem sing
O'er the grave of the sigh-laden year;
And telling out in accents clear,
They hail the New with deep and joyous ring.

The skies above to sable darkness cast
A deep gloom over all earth adrift,
In unison with sadness's earth
That mourns deeply for the year now past.

My heart seems strongly bound in Sorrow's chords,
And feels a strange and piercing pain,
A wailed, measured and heavy strain,
Untold by sought in meagre human words.

The past year crowned me with its pleasures great,
And now when past—forever gone,
My heart is sunk in sadness strong,
And painted touch its overbrimming weight.

Old year, to me you've been a constant friend,
With pomes you filled my slumbers life,
And sought to screen or at state,
Ere marred the sweetness of the joys you sent.

And now when silent in that mystic sod,
Where hoary Past forever dwells,
Your death a solemn tenor tells—
How earthly goods fly on with rapid feet.

How frail and fleeting are our fondest prayers!
How death with its searing dart
Doth pierce alike each throbbing heart,
And the touch hide all deepest cares.

Then place our hopes and thoughts beyond the tomb,
And glance with nerve falling love,
To God, who reigns supreme above—
The Light which our untutored hearts illume.

Old year, farewell! the thought of thee
Shall linger long within my soul;
And when the hours shall onward roll,
On Memory's wings you'll oft return to me.

And when dread Futurn's book shall open lie,
Be judged worthy to occupy a fair,
Your image shall, like a sweet dream's view,
Relieve my wakeful misery.

S. M. C.

San Francisco, December 16, 1867.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

THE FUTURE OF IRELAND.

There is an Isle, a fair Green Isle,
The cone of Neptune's sea,
And all her land at God's command,
Shall one day yet be free.

Her children long in heroic song
Proclaimed their homestands free,
But England's laws for subject cause,
Denies them liberty.

Yet fleeting Time o'er Erin's clime
May bring the glorious day,
When valor's sons through every glen
Shall open Freedom's way.

The tyrant's chain has left a stain
For some on the land;
Yet soon to day in earnest my
Those fetters shall not stand.

Heaven blest the land by Nature's hand
With choicest fruits of earth,
His arms on his breast, and walked gloomily to the window which overlooked the street. It was a gloomy day, threatening snow. He stood silent for a few moments, and then with a gesture of despair he cried aloud:

"I would give all I have—all I am—to make it a success!"

As he spoke he stood upright, and the tone of Fanchette's voice was changed when she replied:

"Why, well, be keeps it up," cried one. "You are a born artist," said another. "Why, you should take to the stage, they that would mean giving up Fanchon von Angel."

"Gentlemen," said Fanchette, rather sniffy, "it pleases you to be witty. I assure you I have not been near Herr von Angel's house this week."

Her was answered only by another burst of merriment, though not so loud a one as before.

"Very good wonderful control of fun-loving and mischievous of the young man," said one of the group, taking a fresh cigar.

In the midst of the laughter Herr Fan Anspel had turned as pale as a sheet.

"What is the matter, Ludwig? Are you ill?" they asked in turn.

"No," he answered, as a horrible dread shot through his soul, "only a little weakness. Give me some brandy."

He drank the brandy and sat silent for a few minutes. Then under the pretence of wishing to speak about some orders he quietly drew one of them aside.

"Max," said the artist, "I have not been well lately. No, do not smile; I am quite serious. I have been working too hard, and it has injured me. My memory plays strange tricks sometimes. I forget what happened only a few hours ago. Now, when we were at Herr von Angel's this afternoon, did I do anything eccentric or rude? Did I look as I usually do?"

"Certainly you did; and you seemed full of spirits," answered Max Baumgarten. "I must say, I didn't know you were such a clever fellow. Both Herr von Angel and his daughter were enchanted with your wit, and I heard you say that you had been deceiving us or too shy all this time."

"But, Max, I must have appeared preposterous—frivolous—"

"Not at all, I assure you, my dear fellow. Your manners were perfect. But what is the matter? You are trembling all over."

"It is nothing. Don't speak of it, my dear friend. I shall be well again in a minute or two."

Ludwig Fanachi sat down, drank a little more brandy, and then rose to go home, the clerks were under pay on hour, but he was in no mood now for acts of mercy. Her timorous appeal fell upon deaf ears, her attempt to follow was to pay to his heart.

"Out of my way, he cried roughly, as he pushed her to one side.

On reaching his home, Fanachi with trembling fingers lighted a lamp and opened the door of his studio. The colors left by the Italian were lying here and there, as if they had been recently used. He went forward to the picture and held up the light. And a shudder ran through his frame as he saw that now, indeed, the work was begun. The face of the old man was almost finished, the drawing, too, was altered, and some of the alterations had been made to change their position; but the artist's eye could see that it was the hand of a master that had done it. The new coloring was wonderfully brilliant—doubtless the colors brought by the Italian stranger had been used.

As Fanachi turned to leave the room he saw a letter addressed to him on the desk. "Ah! Herr Fanachi, said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"How well he keeps it up" cried one. "You are a born artist," said another. "Why, you should take to the stage, they that would mean giving up Fanchon von Angel."

"Gentlemen," said Fanachi, rather sniffy, "it pleases you to be witty. I assure you I have not been near Herr von Angel's house this week."

He was answered only by another burst of merriment, though not so loud a one as before.

"Very good wonderful control of fun-loving and mischievous of the young man," said one of the group, taking a fresh cigar.

In the midst of the laughter Herr Fan Anspel had turned as pale as a sheet.

"What is the matter, Ludwig? Are you ill?" they asked in turn.

"No," he answered, as a horrible dread shot through his soul, "only a little weakness. Give me some brandy."

He drank the brandy and sat silent for a few minutes. Then under the pretence of wishing to speak about some orders he quietly drew one of them aside.

"Max," said the artist, "I have not been well lately. No, do not smile; I am quite serious. I have been working too hard, and it has injured me. My memory plays strange tricks sometimes. I forget what happened only a few hours ago. Now, when we were at Herr von Angel's this afternoon, did I do anything eccentric or rude? Did I look as I usually do?"

"Certainly you did; and you seemed full of spirits," answered Max Baumgarten. "I must say, I didn't know you were such a clever fellow. Both Herr von Angel and his daughter were enchanted with your wit, and I heard you say that you had been deceiving us or too shy all this time."

"But, Max, I must have appeared preposterous—frivolous—"

"Not at all, I assure you, my dear fellow. Your manners were perfect. But what is the matter? You are trembling all over."

"It is nothing. Don't speak of it, my dear friend. I shall be well again in a minute or two."

Ludwig Fanachi sat down, drank a little more brandy, and then rose to go home, the clerks were under pay on hour, but he was in no mood now for acts of mercy. Her timorous appeal fell upon deaf ears, her attempt to follow was to pay to his heart.

"Out of my way, he cried roughly, as he pushed her to one side.

On reaching his home, Fanachi with trembling fingers lighted a lamp and opened the door of his studio. The colors left by the Italian were lying here and there, as if they had been recently used. He went forward to the picture and held up the light. And a shudder ran through his frame as he saw that now, indeed, the work was begun. The face of the old man was almost finished, the drawing, too, was altered, and some of the alterations had been made to change their position; but the artist's eye could see that it was the hand of a master that had done it. The new coloring was wonderfully brilliant—doubtless the colors brought by the Italian stranger had been used.

As Fanachi turned to leave the room he saw a letter addressed to him on the desk.

"Ah! Herr Fanachi, said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

Leagued with the Evil One.

CHAPTER I

THE TRIPS

Ludwig Fanachi was sitting in his studio one winter afternoon in a state of deep dejection. His elbows rested on his knees, his head in his hands, and he was gazing with a look of despair on an unfinished picture on his easel. The subject was a martyr-lion. A young man in the full flush of health and strength was about to suffer. In the foreground lay a cross, with hammer and nails—two enormous iron steel nailing by the right was a statue of Jupiter, with an altar before it, on which the fire was already kindled, whilst the priest stood before it with an incense box, to offer the doomed man his last chance of life by consenting to throw a few grains of incense on the altar fire. Around the pontiff many clerics and his friends—his father with his gray hair disheveled—his mother with her face hid in her robe—and standing nearest to him a young woman of great beauty, his wife or his betrothed, holding out her arms with a look of imploring agony. But the young man was not looking at her. He kept his eyes fixed on the cross at his feet, and his ear bent to the lips of a monk, who, with sharen crown, and coarse traveled stained raiment, was evidently encouraging him to win a martyr's crown. As the picture was sketched, the young man was in the act of waving aside the beathen priest with one hand, and touching one of the executioners with the other, as if inviting him to begin his awful task. But the picture was not what it ought to have been. The composition was striking and effective, but not harmonious. The colors, good in themselves, did not go well with each other, and, worst of all, there was neither strength nor emotion in the face of the principal figure.

The artist groaned aloud, and then, rising, stamped with rage. He seized a large brush full of paint, and held it over his work as if he would destroy it with one stroke.

There was some reason for his exasperation. The good burghers of Munich had offered 5,000 thalers for a picture which should be judged worthy to occupy the place of honor in their new council chamber, and the fame which would attach to the winner of the prize would bring wealth in its train. Not was this all. For the last two twelve months Fanachi had been madly in love with Hoan von Angel, the only daughter of the wealthiest citizen of Munich. People said she was heartless and a flirt, but Ludwig cared nothing for them. Her beauty had overpowered him, and her rank, unknown to himself, enhanced her worth to him. The haughty air with which she treated him on the few occasions when he ventured to contact the Von Angel mansion only added to his passion. Now Fanachi was not only a poor man, but one of humble birth. For him to have aspired to a daughter of the "noble" class would have been utter madness, but for his art. Already he had won marked success; it was like age when a great painter was held in highest esteem by prince as well as burghers; if he could really rise to the eminence that his art could place within his reach, he would not be an unworthy husband for even Hoan von Anpel. And now this picture, on which he had spent the toil of months, which was to be the test of his power and the foundation of his fortune, and the winning of his bride was a failure.

Fanachi threw down the brush, crossed his arms on his breast, and walked gloomily to the window which overlooked the street. It was a gloomy day, threatening snow. He stood silent for a few moments, and then with a gesture of despair he cried aloud:

"I would give all I have—all I am—to make it a success!"

As he spoke he stood upright, and the tone of Fanchette's voice was changed when she replied:

"Why, well, he keeps it up," cried one. "You are a born artist," said another. "Why, you should take to the stage, they that would mean giving up Fanchon von Angel."

"Gentlemen," said Fanachi, rather sniffy, "it pleases you to be witty. I assure you I have not been near Herr von Angel's house this week."

He was answered only by another burst of merriment, though not so loud a one as before.

"Very good wonderful control of fun-loving and mischievous of the young man," said one of the group, taking a fresh cigar.

In the midst of the laughter Herr Fan Anspel had turned as pale as a sheet.

"What is the matter, Ludwig? Are you ill?" they asked in turn.

"No," he answered, as a horrible dread shot through his soul, "only a little weakness. Give me some brandy."

He drank the brandy and sat silent for a few minutes. Then under the pretence of wishing to speak about some orders he quietly drew one of them aside.

"Max," said the artist, "I have not been well lately. No, do not smile; I am quite serious. I have been working too hard, and it has injured me. My memory plays strange tricks sometimes. I forget what happened only a few hours ago. Now, when we were at Herr von Angel's this afternoon, did I do anything eccentric or rude? Did I look as I usually do?"

"Certainly you did; and you seemed full of spirits," answered Max Baumgarten. "I must say, I didn't know you were such a clever fellow. Both Herr von Angel and his daughter were enchanted with your wit, and I heard you say that you had been deceiving us or too shy all this time."

"But, Max, I must have appeared preposterous—frivolous—"

"Not at all, I assure you, my dear fellow. Your manners were perfect. But what is the matter? You are trembling all over."

"It is nothing. Don't speak of it, my dear friend. I shall be well again in a minute or two."

Ludwig Fanachi sat down, drank a little more brandy, and then rose to go home, the clerks were under pay on hour, but he was in no mood now for acts of mercy. Her timorous appeal fell upon deaf ears, her attempt to follow was to pay to his heart.

"Out of my way, he cried roughly, as he pushed her to one side.

On reaching his home, Fanachi with trembling fingers lighted a lamp and opened the door of his studio. The colors left by the Italian were lying here and there, as if they had been recently used. He went forward to the picture and held up the light. And a shudder ran through his frame as he saw that now, indeed, the work was begun. The face of the old man was almost finished, the drawing, too, was altered, and some of the alterations had been made to change their position; but the artist's eye could see that it was the hand of a master that had done it. The new coloring was wonderfully brilliant—doubtless the colors brought by the Italian stranger had been used.

As Fanachi turned to leave the room he saw a letter addressed to him on the desk.

"Ah! Herr Fanachi, said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

"Ah! Fanachi," said she, "you should take more care of your health. Your light in your window all the evening. You will make your eyes ache."

SAINTS OF JANUARY.

Our Daily Patrons for the Coming Month

FIRST. ST. FELICITIUS.—Born at Tebipe, Province of Byzacena, A. D. 450. In early life he was distinguished for great piety and erudition. Entered the priesthood at the age of twenty-two. Was consecrated Bishop in 508. He died at the age of 55 years on January 1st, 505.

SECOND. ST. MACARIUS.—Was born in the early part of the third century at Alexandria. Lived the life of a recluse in the celebrated desert during 60 years, and died, A. D. 394.

THIRD. ST. PETER BALSAM.—This Saint suffered martyrdom at Antioch at the hands of Sevorina, A. D. 311.

FOURTH. ST. TITUS.—This Saint was a disciple of St. Paul, and preached in the Island of Crete, in Dalmatia and Crete.

FIFTH. ST. SIMEON STYLITES.—Born in Syria at the beginning of the fourth century. Passed a very self-sacrificing and sacred life in a hermitage, and died A. D. 459.

SIXTH. ST. MELANIO.—He was a native of Brescia, Lombardy, and died a very holy death in 409.

SEVENTH. ST. LUCIAN.—Born at Samosata, in Syria. Was martyred for his Christian faith in 312.

EIGHTH. ST. APOLLINARIUS.—Lived in the first age of the Church. Was Bishop of Hierapolis, in Egypt. Died in D. 175.

NINTH. ST. JULIAN AND BASILISSA.—Were married and lived a life of purity, in the reign of Maximian II., in 313, in the isle of Antioch.

TENTH. ST. AGATHO, Pope.—Born at Sicily, succeeded Dionisius as Pope in 678 and presided with equal ability for the period of 2 years, 5 months and 8 days.

ELEVENTH. ST. HYGINUS.—He was elected Pope in the pontificate in 139. Lived a life of purity, and died in 142 in the 4th year of his pontificate.

TWELFTH. ST. TELESPHORUS.—Succeeded Hygin in 142. Lived a life of purity, and died a martyr in 154.

THIRTEENTH. ST. VERONICA.—Born near Milan in 1445. Entered the Convent of St. Martha, where she lived a life of purity, and died in 1497 at the age of 52 years.

FOURTEENTH. ST. HILARY.—He was born at Poitiers, in Gaul, in the third century. Entered the service of the Church and was made Bishop of Poitiers A. D. 353. Died January 14th, 368.

FIFTEENTH. ST. PAUL.—He was born at Lower Thebais, Egypt. Retired to a hermitage at the age of twenty-five. He called the Saint the father of hermits. Died at the age of 113 years, in A. D. 342.

SIXTEENTH. ST. MARCELLUS.—Succeeded Marcellinus as Pope in 308. Died in exile, after a pontificate of one year, seven months and 20 days.

SEVENTEENTH. ST. ANTHONY, ABBOT.—Born at Coma, Upper Egypt, in 251. Passed a monastery in 305. Died peacefully on January 17th, 356, at the age of 105 years.

EIGHTEENTH. ST. PRISCA.—Was a native of Ireland about the time of St. Columbanus. Founded the Abbey of Laine, Brittany, and died in 588.

NINETEENTH. ST. CANUTE, KING, AND MARTYR.—Was King of Denmark in the 11th century. Murdered by assassins, while in his Parish by rebels on July 10th, 1090.

TWENTIETH. ST. FABIAN.—Was elected Pope in 236. Suffered martyrdom in the persecution in 250. Was martyred in the pontificate of Decius. Fabian was a man of great piety and virtue.

TWENTY-FIRST. ST. AGNES.—Was a native of Rome. Was a virgin of great beauty and virtue, and for the religious belief of her parents, in 1222, was caused to Antioch, in Syria, where she died at the tender age of 13 years.

TWENTY-SECOND. ST. VINCENT.—Was a disciple of St. Paul. He died was made bishop of Spiltoon, was martyred in the year A. D. 304.

TWENTY-THIRD. ST. CONSTANTIUS.—St. Paul, the Hermit, was a native of Thebais, and died in the year 341. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304.

TWENTY-FOURTH. ST. TIMOTHY.—Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304.

TWENTY-FIFTH. ST. PAUL.—Was born in the early part of the third century at Alexandria. Lived the life of a recluse in the celebrated desert during 60 years, and died, A. D. 394.

THIRD. ST. PETER BALSAM.—This Saint suffered martyrdom at Antioch at the hands of Sevorina, A. D. 311.

FOURTH. ST. TITUS.—This Saint was a disciple of St. Paul, and preached in the Island of Crete, in Dalmatia and Crete.

FIFTH. ST. SIMEON STYLITES.—Born in Syria at the beginning of the fourth century. Passed a very self-sacrificing and sacred life in a hermitage, and died A. D. 459.

SIXTH. ST. MELANIO.—He was a native of Brescia, Lombardy, and died a very holy death in 409.

SEVENTH. ST. LUCIAN.—Born at Samosata, in Syria. Was martyred for his Christian faith in 312.

EIGHTH. ST. APOLLINARIUS.—Lived in the first age of the Church. Was Bishop of Hierapolis, in Egypt. Died in D. 175.

NINTH. ST. JULIAN AND BASILISSA.—Were married and lived a life of purity, in the reign of Maximian II., in 313, in the isle of Antioch.

TENTH. ST. AGATHO, Pope.—Born at Sicily, succeeded Dionisius as Pope in 678 and presided with equal ability for the period of 2 years, 5 months and 8 days.

ELEVENTH. ST. HYGINUS.—He was elected Pope in the pontificate in 139. Lived a life of purity, and died in 142 in the 4th year of his pontificate.

TWELFTH. ST. TELESPHORUS.—Succeeded Hygin in 142. Lived a life of purity, and died a martyr in 154.

THIRTEENTH. ST. VERONICA.—Born near Milan in 1445. Entered the Convent of St. Martha, where she lived a life of purity, and died in 1497 at the age of 52 years.

FOURTEENTH. ST. HILARY.—He was born at Poitiers, in Gaul, in the third century. Entered the service of the Church and was made Bishop of Poitiers A. D. 353. Died January 14th, 368.

FIFTEENTH. ST. PAUL.—He was born at Lower Thebais, Egypt. Retired to a hermitage at the age of twenty-five. He called the Saint the father of hermits. Died at the age of 113 years, in A. D. 342.

SIXTEENTH. ST. MARCELLUS.—Succeeded Marcellinus as Pope in 308. Died in exile, after a pontificate of one year, seven months and 20 days.

SEVENTEENTH. ST. ANTHONY, ABBOT.—Born at Coma, Upper Egypt, in 251. Passed a monastery in 305. Died peacefully on January 17th, 356, at the age of 105 years.

EIGHTEENTH. ST. PRISCA.—Was a native of Ireland about the time of St. Columbanus. Founded the Abbey of Laine, Brittany, and died in 588.

NINETEENTH. ST. CANUTE, KING, AND MARTYR.—Was King of Denmark in the 11th century. Murdered by assassins, while in his Parish by rebels on July 10th, 1090.

TWENTIETH. ST. FABIAN.—Was elected Pope in 236. Suffered martyrdom in the persecution in 250. Was martyred in the pontificate of Decius. Fabian was a man of great piety and virtue.

TWENTY-FIRST. ST. AGNES.—Was a native of Rome. Was a virgin of great beauty and virtue, and for the religious belief of her parents, in 1222, was caused to Antioch, in Syria, where she died at the tender age of 13 years.

TWENTY-SECOND. ST. VINCENT.—Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year 304. Was a native of Rome, and died in the year

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—It is stated that during his recent visit to Rome the Duke of Norfolk made a personal jubilee offering of $50,000 to his Holiness Pope Leo XIII.

—If Balfour keeps on imprisoning Irish Members of Parliament, there will soon be more brains in Tullamore Jail than in the Houses of both Lords and Commons combined!

—As soon as the election of the French President became known, special instructions were forwarded from the Vatican to the Nuncio in Paris to make an early visit of congratulation to M. Carnot.

—The widow of Baron von Mallinkrodt, the celebrated orator and champion of the Catholic cause in Germany, has entered the novitiate of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart at Conflans, near Paris.

—It is stated that the Catholic members of the Canadian Government have decided to offer to his Holiness, on the occasion of his Sacerdotal Jubilee, a missal, with enamels, clasps and corners of massive silver.

—A dispatch from Rome announces that the Rev. Thomas McGovern rector of St. Joseph's Church, Danville, Pa., has been appointed to the See of Harrisburg to succeed the late Bishop Shanahan.

—The Catholic Review very pingently remarks that the George-McGlynn miscalled "Cross of the New Crusade," has not found much favor with sober-minded people. The Cross of the Old Crusade was good enough for all Christians.

—The Prince-Archbishop of Salzburg, Mgr. Eder, has placed before the flock of that city a proposition inviting the permanent commission of the Diet to send to Leo XIII. an address of congratulation on the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination.

—Over 1,000 people were received into the League of the Sacred Heart at the Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston, on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, Dec. 8. The rector, Rev. Theodore A. Metcalf, officiated, and the ceremonies were most impressive.

—The Hon. Frank Smith, a member of the Dominion Cabinet, and a Senator, has resigned his position as representative of the Catholics, in consequence of a Protestant having been raised to the Bench when a Catholic Q. C. had a higher claim to promotion.

—Our readers will regret to learn that one of Ireland's best English friends—Mr. John Morley, M. P., is seriously ill. We hope he may be spared to share in the efforts which his Home Rule sympathies will win next year.

—John Dillon will return to Ireland after Mr. O'Brien has been released, and Mr. O'Brien will then make a tour of England where he will pay back with interest the indignities heaped upon him by brutal Balfour and his unmanerly minions.

—The latest site selected for building a Catholic Church is on the rock of Gibraltar, the English government having conceded ground valued at $40,000 for that purpose. The church will be dedicated to the Sacred Heart, a devotion that is spreading day by day in every land whereon the sun shines.

—We thank our esteemed contemporary, the Colorado Catholic, for the following notice of the Christmas MONITOR: "We congratulate the San Francisco Monitor on its splendid Christmas issue. This edition of the Monitor deserves unstinted praise, and many readers."

—Rev. Hugh Dyke told his London congregation recently that no man has a right to call himself an English gentleman who would shake hands with John L. Sullivan. This shot was meant for the Prince of Wales. Rev. Hugh evidently values himself at a "High" price!

—The will of the late Marquise de Tourinc nominates Mgr. Bourrel, Bishop of Rodez, as its sole legatee. The Prelate has given all the property possessed in the town of Milan by the regretted lady for the purpose of establishing in that town free schools to be conducted by the Frères du Patronage.

—The Queen Regent of Spain in the course of the speech from the throne at the opening of the new session of the Cortes, on the 1st inst., referred in affectionate language to the Holy Father. His Holiness, she said, gave her every new proof of his esteem which helped to maintain good relations between Church and State to their common advantage.

—Every Catholic will be delighted to learn that our glorious Pontiff was never better health than at present. The immense enthusiasm surrounding his Sacerdotal Jubilee seems to have given his Holiness a new lease of life! God save the Pope, and may 1888 see the supremacy of the Sovereign Pontiff established in all things Temporal as it is in all things Spiritual!

—Rev. Hugh J. Kelly, of St. Teresa's Church, New York, has been appointed Catholic Chaplain for the United States Navy. Father Kelly was born in New York about thirty-three years ago. He was educated at St. Joseph's Provincial Seminary, Troy, and was ordained in 1879. He has been in delicate health for several years and his quiet but winter in Europe.

—The Catholic World for January has an article on the Seminary for the Colored Missions, "one of the most important works of the Church in this country, from the pen of its newly-appointed rector, Rev. R. Slattery. The aim of the Seminary is to train priests who shall devote themselves exclusively, as missionaries to the Afro-American race.

—In reply to a correspondent we have to say that two of Archbishop Croke's sisters are Sisters of Mercy; one, the Mother Superior of the Convent at Charleville, County Cork, Ireland; the other, is one of the Australian contingent of her wide-spread Order. The Rev. James Croke, of Ballinfadd, is a brother of the great patriotic Archbishop, and is himself a strong Irish patriot.

—The new Diocese of Concordia, Kansas, over which the Right Rev. Bishop Seanell will preside, has 58 missions and 28 priests. The Mayor and Council of Concordia resolved by acclamation that the arrival of Bishop Scannell in his episcopal See at Concordia, should be greeted with a public demonstration of welcome, and that every ceremonial of respect should surround his entrance to their city.

—The ladies of Belfast have initiated a rival of the Primrose League. It is called the Daisy League, and has as its motto "Faith, Hope and Charity." The object of the society is for the promotion of women's rights and Home Rule for Ireland. God bless the Irish "Daisies," and may they become as numerous in Erin as the sweet little flower which covers many a patriot's grave in the Green Isle!

—We feel very grateful indeed to our afflicted friend Bro. McGrary for saying in last week's Advocate: "The Christmas number of the MONITOR is a sixteen-page paper profusely illustrated. It is really a creditable substitute of enterprise." We always said there was a Catholic sun in one of the heart-strings of our heretical friend; whose soul-cause it is to be a Methodist! May he never die until he finds the light of true faith illuminating his soul.

—Our "ancient but ever new" contemporary Aurora, the Catholic journal of the New South, published at Memphis, Tennessee, pays the Generous Morrow this kind compliment for which we feel very grateful: "The Christmas number of that excellent Catholic journal, the San Francisco MONITOR is at hand, and reflects great credit on its editor and publisher. It has, in connection with its regular issue, two supplements replete with interesting original matter and handsomely illustrated."

—A Philadelphia preacher has resigned because at a church festival the ladies filled a bottle with beans and offering a prize to the person guessing nearest to the number, the object being to raise funds for the church. The preacher opposed the scheme on the ground that it was a species of gambling and his course led to a difference. Poor man! He ought, however, to make a good living been raised to the Bench when a Catholic Q. C., had a higher claim to promotion.

—We learn from an exchange that the "Rev." Hunter Justin D. Fulton is back in Maine hoaxing against Catholics, by romances of the Protestant preachers of Biddeford and Saco. Recently the Methodist clergyman of Biddeford, from the pulpit, accused Mayor Parsons not only only of refusing a promise of protection to Mr. Fulton's meetings, but of saying that personally had like to hire a man to kick the Brooklyn parson out of town. The mayor of Biddeford has a heap of horse sense.

—It is gratifying to know that even in Germany the Catholic Church is gaining converts every day. In the kingdom of Wurtemburg seventy-five per cent. of the population were Protestants in 1841 and only twenty-five per cent. were Catholics. Since then, and especially during the last ten years, there has been a large increase in the Catholic population. According to recent statistics, for every thirty-five Catholics who became Protestants there are sixty Protestants who have become Catholics.

—The concession of the use of the language of the Slavs in the liturgy of the Church, which was granted some time ago by Leo XIII. to the Catholics of the Russian Rite in Montenegro, at the request of the Prince of that territory, has induced the Slavs of Austria-Hungary to get up an agitation for the introduction of the Slavonic language in their liturgy. Mgr. Galimberti, the Nuncio at Vienna, has written to the Bishops of Austria-Hungary explaining the nature of the concession made to the Catholics of Montenegro, and stating that a similar favor cannot possibly be extended to the Slavs of Austria-Hungary.

—A recent colloquium from London brings this remarkably gratifying admission from a cockney source: "That House Rule is gaining ground to an important extent indeed, and it is tacitly admitted in nearly every Unionist gathering. Unless something unexpected happens, the Government will have to abandon the land bill, which, it was represented, would settle Irish demands. The result will be very little business and a session wasted in hopeless discussions. The Government majority is dwindling. Since the secession of Grove from the Unionist party two more Liberals have declared against the Government. Both stood at the last election in the Unionist interest." This information will add additional happiness to the New Year of every MONITOR reader!

—The St. Louis Western Watchman states an irrefutable truth when it says "the so called verse de la verse of our Catholic people do not read religious papers. Their wives and daughters subscribe for the devotional periodicals and feed their piety with edifying dropsings from the pulpit and sanctuary." But this sort of Catholicity is of the same character as Situalism, and may be traced to the same mental and physiological causes. It is piety without intelligence. Catholicity, as inculcated by the Catholic paper, demands interest in current events, comprehension of Catholic principles and their application. It may be true that the lower ranks of Catholic society never read a Catholic paper, and the upper ten of our people are just as shy of the religious weekly. A good Catholic home without a Catholic paper is rare and exceptional.

Death of Father John J. Riordan.

We were both pained and astonished to read in the New York Sun of the 14th inst., an account of the death of our dear friend Father Joan J. Riordan, the guardian, guide and friend of every Irish emigrant who landed in Castle Garden, New York, during the past four years. Father John was one of those large-hearted merry hearted Irish priests who unselfishly lavish and spend themselves and their like a ray of sunshine darting out of the gloom of everyday life. We met him in New York a couple of years ago and he looked the embodiment of health and happiness—a jolly, whole-souled Superb Jesuit struggling hard to establish a mission under the patronage of Our Lady of the Rosary, to whom he was deeply devoted.

Father Riordan died in St. Vincent's Hospital, where he had been staying for some time suffering from an attack of bronchitis, to which he was subject, and which culminated in a heart disease which carried him off. He was a native of New York, where he was born of Irish parents thirty-seven years ago. He was educated in the old parochial school of the pro-cathedral Mulberry street, from whence he was sent to the De La Salle Academy under the Christian Brothers, finishing his higher studies in the College of St. Francis Xavier, under the supervision of the Jesuit Fathers. He was ordained in 1874, and was selected for the Castle Garden Mission by Archbishop Corrigan in order that the Irish emigrants might be saved from the "sharks" and "sharpers" who had hitherto regularly robbed them upon their arrival in this country.

We had the pleasure of spending a day with "Father John," witnessing the disembarkation of thousands of emigrants from every country in Europe, and the facility with which they were received, registered, forwarded to other destinations and settled in freedom in the city, was very gratifying indeed. When a ship-load of Irish emigrants arrived—Father John was there, there and everywhere. Every emigrant wanted to see "the priest," and the questions they put to him concerning the whereabouts of their friends and relatives on this country were often very perplexing. "Father John" was supposed to know the name, age, birthplace and date of the last and mentioned of every "gossoon and colleen" that landed in America during the previous three months, and great indeed was the astonishment of many a parent when they learned from "Father John" that he could not tell them what state in the Union was the dwelling place of their sons and daughters who came over to America eight or ten years previously.

The saddening fate and the pertly facetious "Father John" when next seen by emigrants approaching the landing at Castle Garden, always brought a gleam of joyous hope into their faces. He was the cynosure of all eyes, as the emigrants saw in him their best friend and protector. Thousands of them go to the

Farm and Home.

Hints to Farmers.

You will save your horses the pain of a sore mouth if you will always dip the bit in a bucket of cold water before putting it in his mouth. This "takes the frost out" of the bit. If you want to know what will happen if you did not do this, put your tongue against the bit after it has been hanging all night in a zero temperature. You will not take it away as easily as you put it there, and when you do get loose you will leave a piece of the skin behind. If the bit be put in cold water first, this will not happen.

Horses and cattle are quite as subject to kidney complaint as any living creatures. Constant use of ice-water for drinking will in time bring on kidney disorders in the human subject. Watering your cows with cold weather, from an ice-cold well will often cause the same difficulty in the course of time. Put the big wash-boiler, filled with water on the kitchen stove before you go to bed. When you are ready to water your cattle in the morning you will have warm water on hand to take the chill off the wall water. If you do this your horses will live longer, be healthier and do better work for you than if you do not take this little trouble for them, and your cows will give more and better milk than under the ice-cold treatment.

Do not forget to blanket the horse when he is in the stable, as well as when he is standing in the shafts waiting for you at the store or post-office. It will save feed to do so, besides adding to the good appearance of the coat of the horse and keeping him in good health. Something might happen to college you to sell him unexpectedly, and you would get more that the coat of a blanket extra for him if you had used one, than if you cannot buy a blanket, as it is never of some kind ap-home.

Any domestic animal understands and appreciates kind treatment. It is as true in any thing as "only dumb brutes." It is true they cannot talk; but the good or ill-treated man, their intelligence in other respects is doubled. You can make friends of all your animals if you take the trouble to do so, and if you ever feel lonely you can banish this feeling by going among your beasts.

Honest Work.

The Christian workingman is more than faithful to his employer, for he takes as his models St. Joseph and the Saviour. We are all of us workers in one way or another; but how many of us are possessed of an earnest desire that the work which we put from our hands shall be a thoroughly honest, faithful performance that shall fulfil its purpose, and withstand the ravages of time? The great difference in labor is not in what is done—not in the kind of work which we perform—but in the spirit with which we put into it. From the cleaning of a room to the ordination of a government, from the sweeping of a forest to the shinning of a statue, from the washing of a dish to the making of the noblest work of the heart and brain, it is the determination to make it of the best possible quality that places it in the front rank. The work that is performed only for the sake of what it will bring, not for what it will carry forth, is like cloth of shoddy, which may please the eye, but will not wear. It is cheap, flimsy stuff woven with no nobler purpose than to hold together long enough to be bought and paid for.

A Useful Suggestion.

Every one knows how soon the butcher's knife and chopping block often daily exposed to the blows of a mallet or hammer. A remedy suggested by a Brooklyn man consists simply of sawing or cutting off the bottom of a gravestone, from the block, so as to make it flat, one standing by a few nails on the top of it two pieces of sole leather are placed and becomes similar to the end of the heel of a boot. The two thicknesses of leather will prevent all further splitting, and if, in the course of time, they expand and crack, lap the wood of the handle, they are simply trimmed off all round.

Household Hints.

As a general rule the best meat is that which is moderately fat.

Never allow fresh meat to remain in paper; it absorbs the juice.

Pickles, will mold, are better when two years old than at the end of six months.

In making any sauce put the flour and butter in together, and your sauce will never be lumpy.

A few drops of lemon juice spread on cold boiled ham gives it a greater zest and improves it vastly.

To keep lemons: Cover with cold water, changing every week; this makes them more juicy.

Frozen beef tea will often be taken by invalids when they would not be induced to take it warm.

(Good flour is not tested by its color) White flour may not be the best. The test of good flour is by the amount of water it absorbs.

To make hard sauce, take one-half pound butter and three-quarters pound sugar. Stir it up to a light, stiff, white cream, then add one grated nutmeg, two tablespoonfuls brandy. Set in a pan and keep on ice.

Control Your Anger.

We should avoid both speech and action while the feeling of anger is hot within us. If we cannot suddenly subdue it, we can at least restrain its outpouring; we can wait in quiet until time has cooled the lever and made reason possible. Bitter words spoken under the impulse have severed friends, destroyed affections, injured reputations, poisoned the very taste of happiness—words which a few hours later the speaker would have given worlds to unsay. Acts have been done under this influence which have broken up families, destroyed business, inflicted life-long injuries; and blasted the characters of the doers—acts they would have shrunk from in horror had they but waited till their anger was spent. Perhaps the thought that it is not to be wholly attinguished, but simply restrained, may make its restraint more possible.

A Danger To Youth.

One of the gravest dangers to which the youth of this or any other age can be exposed, is that which comes through the reading of books of a pernicious character that "the taste of sensality are not to be conquered by pondering on their lessons and by reading, but by ignoring, their existence, by occupying the mind with other subjects, and turning a deaf ear to their seduction. This is the only safe course to follow.

Remember.

Remember—That grand temples are built of small stones, and great lives are made up of trifling events. That it is not enough to keep the poor in mind; give them something to keep you in mind. That men often preach from housetops while the devil is creeping in at the basement door. That little vexatious burdens and harasses are those who bear their own burdens bravely, and give a helping hand to them around them. That hasty words often rankle in the wound which injury gives, and that soft words assuage it, forgiving cures, and forgetting takes away the sear.

Family Fun.

Misdirected Philantrophy.

"No, sir, I'll not give you a cent; you are a useless tramp, and I was so badly deceived yesterday that I'll never give money to a beggar again," roared old Hickam the banker, when a poor fellow approached him for a dime.

"What, you deceived? asked an astonished friend, who had just seen a man give one cold foot."

"But I was fooled, sir, and I don't fe get it. A miserable bummer stuck me yesterday for ten cents to get a cool lager with. I gave it to him, sir, for I always encourage those beggars to drink themselves to death; and what do you think, sir, I caught the third two minutes later in a coffee saloon eating mutton stew, sir, and on my money, sir. Ugh! I'll not be fooled again that way."

Struck the Right Man.

Clerical Gent (to fellow passenger)—Have you ever thought that in the midst of life we are in death?

Fellow Passenger—Often.

Clerical Gent—Have you reflected that any moment we may be buried into eternity, and that we ought to be prepared for that event?

Fellow Passenger—I've said so a million times.

Clerical Gent—Is it possible that I am speaking to a brother clergyman? I judged from yr cr dress—

Fellow Passenger—I'm a life insurance agent. Just let me show you a few figures of insurance at cost.

A Fatal Defect.

First American Financier—Well, we have a right to feel proud. The Empire of China has sent a representative to the country to study up our system of American banking.

Second American Financier—It will be lowe's labor lost. Our system won't work in China.

F. A. F.—Why, why?

S. A. F.—Too far from Canada.

Dick at the Resaurie.

Mamma (to Dickey who has been at the show)—What struck you most at the menagerie, my son?

Dickey—The elephant, ma. He knocked em down with his biggest tail.

Her Impressions of Camp Life.

"Have you ever been camping, Miss De Vere?" asked Agustus Popsnpy.

"Oh, yes" replied his companion; "that is was so long ago that I only remember two things."

"What were they?" asked Agustus.

"That we had a 'gone feeling in the morning and washed dishes all day."

Suggestive Smiles.

Granger—I bought a pack o' clams of you last time I was down.

Dealer—Yes, I remember you.

Granger—well here they be. My woman ast 'em under a Shanghai hen four weeks ago and not a darned one would hatch.

Patient—Doctor, what makes dose brain fevars hang on so long? Dat am da second time I'ave been on dis bed.

Doctor (musingly)—Switching for da brain, Mr. Wabash; am what takes up the time ob dose slow fevers.

"Now, Mary Ann," said the teacher, addressing the former of the two sophomores, "who was it that supported the world on his shoulders?"

"It was Atlas ma'am."

"And who supported Atlas?"

"The book don't say, but I guess his wife supported him."

(Old Party—I've got a sura tip on the first race. You can have it for a V.

Young Party—Why don't you play it yourself, instead of a-ling it?

Old Party—Wall, you see, young fellar, I've got a tur rible thirst on me, and the race ain't to be run for two hours yet.

SAM SMALL'S BROTHER.

Why he Did Not Make as Much Audience as Two Women's Experiences.

"Sam Small, Evangelist!"

This proverbial philosophy of "Old Sl," the venerable plantation darkey, who gave in the world through the medium of Small's pen maxims of worldly wisdom, sickled in a vertiage of irresistible humor, has found a permanent place in humorous literature.

Great surprise was shown when it was announced that by having been converted under the ministrations of "Sam Jones," would become an evangelist.

At first though, a honorable by the pulpit seems incongruous. Is it really so?

No doubt the mere buffoon attempting to turn men's hearts to solemn truths would meet with only contempt. But truth is not hidden in gloom. Genuine humor frequently illumines and fastens in the mind bits of wisdom that would otherwise quite unlooked.

In his eulogy of Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Dr. Parker says: "Whenever he came among men, he brought June sunshine and music, and made even disappointing and early man feel as a cool and warmer summer, 'the Kingdom of Heaven,' itself was at hand." That is special christianity.

Mr. Small belongs to a witty family. He has a brother connected with Armey Knox's and "Pat Confriniter's" Texas Siftings, a paper which has had phenomenal success in the field of humorous literature. Mr. Frank S. Small is the present representative of that popular paper in England, and, like his distinguished brother, he takes a deep interest in the welfare of other people.

Under date of 46 Porlen Road, Kensington W. London, Eng., Sept. 27, 1887, he writes: "I am at Tabling in Kent yesterday, and my wife, Mrs. Frank Head Maxwell, of the Curates Endowed school. In the course of conversation about Angostura Bitters, she was remarked that Warner's safe cure had been of great benefit to his wife, who had been much troubled with a disordered liver. Warner's safe cure is an Angostura preparation; was all she had taken, and she had experienced none of her old trouble for some months past.

Mr. Austin Bidwell, editor of New York Dress, and a very popular woman in the fashionable world says in her own magazine for October: "Warner's safe cure is the best medicine I ever take or recommend. In every instance it gives new energy and vitality to all my powers." This distinguished woman also says that Warner's safe cure "is peculiarly effective."

Sam Small is likely to succeed as a moral teacher. When we remember how we huddle together in human nature the fountains of laughter and of tears, the deep effect his humorous pictures on the manners and morals of the people, judging everything by merit, not by prejudice.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIAMOND DYES

COLOR EVERYTHING.

Unequalled for Silk, Wool, Cotton and all Fabrics and Fancy Goods. Brilliant, Durable and Economical. Any one can use them.

32 COLORS—10 CENTS EACH.

Remember, these are the only Pure, Harmless and Unadulterated Dyes.

Beware of other Dyes, because often Poisonous, Adulterated, Weak and Worthless.

We warrant these Dyes to color more goods, more quickly, better, than any other Dyes, or your money back. Send 10c. for a package of any color, and be pleased. Sample Card free.

THE DIAMOND PAINTS, GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE and COPPER.

For coloring Fancy Articles, Gilding Moldings, Ornaments, Picture Frames, Mottoes, Crosses, Lettering Signs, Name Plates, &c. &c. Any one can use them. Gilding Powder, all colors, 10c. per package. Sold by Druggists and Dealers, or sent by mail for 10c. per package. Send for coloring Photos, Coloring Book, Illustrated Catalogue, &c.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS YOU CAN BUY A WORLD

Imperial Austrian Vienna City GOVERNMENT BOND.

THREE BONDS are shares in a loan, the interest of which is paid out in premiums three times yearly. Every Premium must win.

Four Drawings Annually,

Cost only Four Dollars or redeemed with a large or smaller premium. Every bond must win one of the following premiums, as there are

NO BLANKS.

Premium.		Florins.	Florins.
1		50,000	50,000
1	"	20,000	20,000
1	"	5,000	5,000
2	"	2,000	4,000
5	"	1,000	5,000
8,190	"	100	819,000
Together 8,200 premiums, amounting to			1,903,000

Next drawing will take place on the

THIRD OF JANUARY.

Our agents receive orders for or ON OR BEFORE THE 3rd OF JANUARY is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn thereon on that date.

Out of lower orders sent in Uncertain Lottery, in chance, 22 will secure one of these bonds for the next drawing. Balance payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address,

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 18 Pelham St., cor. Wall, New York City.

Established in 1870.

The above Government Bonds are not to be compared with any Lottery whatsoever, or lately doubled up Bonds, Bankers Bonds, &c., but are another wide out of the lottery the United States.

N. B.—In writing please state that you saw this in THE SAN FRANCISCO MONITOR.

Tutt's Pills

To whom could it come the sweetest news on earth? To the dyspeptic, to the liver-torpid, to the man or woman with a sluggish system. To the pale, nervous, dyspeptic, bilious, constipated, miserable, low-spirited invalid, Tonic, Alterative and Cathartic Properties, Speedily Restore these invaluable results to health, or essential to regularity. Sold Everywhere.

WARD & CO.'S Male and Female EMPLOYMENT OFFICE. 608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F. Telephone No. 747.

I WAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Bedding Facy Sheets, Blankets, Counterpanes, Bassell Hands, Shortsheets, Cushions, and Marble Compass by Hotels, Steamboats, Restaurants, Boarding Houses, Private Families, without any charge, in emergency. Extraordinary rates for hotels or 500 Clay street.

INFORMATION WANTED.

The heart broken sister of Daniel Quinn wants to find her brother. When she last saw him he was in Stockbridge, Berkshire, Eng. He was a stone mason by trade, and must be now about 60 years of age; and any reader of the MONITOR knowing anything concerning him will confer the property of a broken-hearted sister by addressing Care of Rev. Father Horan, Hyde Park, Ill.

DOZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.

D. MENCARINI, 911 Mission St., San Francisco, - - - Cal. Manufacturer and Importer of RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC. Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc. THE ONLY COMPLETE COLLECTION ON THE PACIFIC COAST. Catalogue sent free on application.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS. His Own Make and Design. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 315 Kearny St.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

"THE DESERT SAND QUEEN ROUTE."

COMMENCING SUNDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1887, AND until further notice, Boats and Trains will leave from and arrive at San Francisco Passenger Depot, Market Street, foot of Mission.

Leave S. F. | DESTINATION | Arrive S. F.

WEEK DAYS: 7:45 a m, 3:30 p m, 5:30 p m | Petaluma | 10:40 a m, 6:25 p m, 8:25 p m

SUNDAYS ONLY: 7:45 a m, 8:00 a m, 3:30 p m | Cloverdale, Windsor, Healdsburg, Geyserville | 10:40 a m, 6:25 p m, 8:25 p m

7:45 a m, 3:30 p m | Cloverdale | 8:25 a m, 6:25 p m

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for Sulphur Springs, Sarsaparilla and Mark West Springs. At Cloverdale for Geyser Springs, Skaggs Springs, Stewarts Point Springs, Highland Springs, Kelseyville, Soda Springs, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Upper Lake, Ukiah, Vichy Springs, Saratoga Springs, Monticello City and the Geysers.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Saturdays to Monday, inclusive, at reduced rates. Train leaves foot of Mission Dock, at 9 a m Saturday.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only—to Petaluma, $1 50; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg, $3; to Cloverdale, $3; to Geyserville, $3 50.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon and San Rafael, at 7 a m, 9:10 a m, 11:30 a m, 2:30 p m, 4:30 p m, 6:15 p m. Sundays: 9:00 a m, 3:30 a m, 11:00 a m, 1:30 p m, 4:00 p m, 6:15 p m.

To San Francisco from San Rafael at 6:40 a m, 8:00 a m, 9:50 a m, 2:15 p m, 4:15 p m. Sundays: 8:00 a m, 10:30 a m, 1:00 p m, 3:00 p m, 5:00 p m.

To San Francisco from Point Tiburon—Week Days: 6:30 a m, 8:05 a m, 9:45 a m, 1:15 p m, 3:15 p m, 5:15 p m. Sundays: 8:05 a m, 10:35 a m, 12:05 p m, 2:05 p m, 4:05 p m, 5:45 p m.

H. C. WHITING, Superintendent. PETER J. MCGUIRE, Ticket Agent, 222 Montgomery Street and No. 1 Ferry Building.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD

STEAMER JAMES M. DONALDUE LEAVES SAN Francisco foot of Mission Dock, at 10 a m, connecting with train at Sonoma, as follows:

4.00 Daily (except Sundays) from Washington street Dock, foot of Mission Dock, at 10 a m.

$1.15 Sundays only, from Washington street Dock, foot of Mission Dock, at 10 a m.

Returning, arrive in San Francisco at 3 p m. Round Trip Tickets to Sonoma, $1 00; to Glen Ellen, $1 50.

H. C. WHITING, Superintendent. PETER J. MCGUIRE, Ticket Agent, Pier 1, Ferry Building, Foot Mission St.

QUICK TIME AND COMFORTABLE TO Eastern and European Cities

Via the Ocean Transcontinental AIR Line Route

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

(Pacific System.)

Daily Express and Emigrant Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway Lines in the East.

Leave Oakland at

New York & New Orleans

with the several Steamer Lines

TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.

PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS

attached to Overland Express Trains.

THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS

are run daily with Overland Emigrant Trains.

Additional sleepers for Berths in Third-class Cars, Tourist Sleeping Cars, Sleeping car Berths secured, and other information given upon application at the Company's office, or from passengers or baggage in charge on trains, or any agent of the company.

MCCORMICK BROS., Book and Job Printers, 410 Sansome St., 410

THE DR. ZEILE Turkish, Electric, Russian Bath, And every kind of medicated water, steam or hot air BATH. THE ONLY PLACE IN THE CITY WHERE LADIES are treated by a lady. Ladies' Hours, 9 to 1 daily. Gentlemen, 1 to 10 p m. Ladies and gent. separate. 202 to 208 Powell Street, bet. Sacramento and Bushey.

BLAKE, MOFFITT & TOWNE, Importers and Dealers in BOOK, NEWS, WRITING AND WRAPPING PAPERS, Card Stock, Straw and Binders' Board, Etc. MANUFACTURERS OF Patent Machine-Made Paper Bags. 512 to 516 Sacramento and 519 Commercial Sts., S. F.

CATHOLIC MORTUARY CARDS. Beautiful Catholic Designed MEMORIAM CARDS, Both Plain and Illuminated Styles. Printed in the Finest and Cheapest Manner by McCORMICK BROS., 410 Sansome Street.

WESTERN HOTEL, 212-14 Broadway Street, JOHN HIGGINS, : : Proprietor (Late Broadway Hotel.)

ARCHITECTS.

JOHN J. CLARK, ARCHITECT Room 70, St. Ann's Building, Cor. Market & Powell Sts., San Francisco

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PIANOS

AWARDED THE PREMIUM for general excellence of construction over all competitors at World's Exposition for perfect and unequaled power of its vibrations of sound, and its adaptability to the climate of the United States, combined with elegant and durable construction, the Vose Piano has received the highest encomiums from the most eminent musicians and critics, instead of being inferior to the pianos of other manufacturers, as some have claimed, it is the greatest of all pianos, and is the only one that will stand in tune and retain its qualities for any length of time. It is the only piano that will not crack or become shaky in a dry climate or shed its ivories in a damp one. Its wonderful power, sweetness of tone, immense volume, and its adaptability to any climate, commend it to the greatest of all musicians as the only piano which is good enough for them to use

OUR CATHOLIC SOCIETIES.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY.

A Great Catholic Charity.

In nearly every large city of the world a magnificent organization for dispensing charity—the St. Vincent de Paul Society—is established. Founded by one whose great fellow-feeling was the least striking of his many virtues, it continues to enlist the services of influential and wealthy people, who, are, by the help thereof, made their less fortunate fellows in works of charity and mercy.

In this Archdiocese there are several very active Conferences, that together do a most wonderful good in relieving distress and want. In the discharge of their duty, the members of the Society visit the poor at their homes, bring the Gospel to them, with a spirit of humane equality. None who with a tale of woe to tell is refused a hearing; and the fruitfulness of our Blessed Redeemer, "Feed the hungry and give drink to the thirsty," is almost the watchword of Ozanam's magnificent band of charity-workers. In this city alone last year the Conferences dispensed a yearly sum of over $100,000. The following are the officers of the Conferences organized in this city:

OFFICERS OF THE PARTICULAR COUNCIL.

Very Rev. J. J. Prendergast, V. G., Spiritual Director; John M. Burnett, President; Patrick Shirley, Vice President; Roger O'Donnell, Treasurer; Thomas Ryan, Secretary; C. J. Devlin, Assistant Secretary.

ST. MARY'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. E. Cuttle, Spiritual Director; S. J. McCormick, President; P. Riordan, Vice President; M. J. Hyde, Treasurer; F. F. McCormick, Secretary.

ST. FRANCIS' CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. F. Harrington, Spiritual Director; Roger O'Donnell, President; James Devlin, Treasurer; C. F. Devlin, Secretary.

ST. PATRICK'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. T. Lonhin, Spiritual Director; C. J. Riordan, President; J. G. Morrissey, Treasurer; F. Shirley, Secretary.

MISSION DOLORES CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. F. Brennan, Spiritual Director; ——, President; C. M. McCrystle, Treasurer; M. V. Hedier, Secretary.

ST. JOSEPH'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. P. Coyle, Spiritual Director; James Fitzgerald, President; ——, Treasurer; M. F. Tracey, Secretary.

ST. BRIDGET'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. P. Bermingham, Spiritual Director; J. M. Burnett, President; F. J. Thomas, Treasurer; W. McMann, Secretary; M. F. Killey, Secretary (pro tem)

ST. JOHN'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. D. Nugent, Spiritual Director; T. B. Hasty, President; J. P. Coulan, Treasurer; W. F. Stafford, Secretary.

ST. PETER'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. P. S. Casey, Spiritual Director; A. Quill, President; J. K. Gallagher, Treasurer; C. D. Douglas, Secretary.

ST. BRENDAN'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. F. Nugent, Spiritual Director; D. McSweeney, President; N. Sweeney, Treasurer; T. J. Wimbrit, Secretary.

ST. PATRICK'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. L. Beulin, Spiritual Director; J. E. O'Donnell, President; ——, Treasurer; F. McCrohle, Secretary.

IRELAND TO THE POPE.

Jubilee Gifts of Irish Manufacture.

Jubilee presents from the Bishop, priests, and people of the Diocese of Down and Connor, were sent to his Holiness, the Pope, and have arrived in Rome. The gifts are very numerous and costly, and embrace many specimens of Irish art. Among others are five magnificent sets of vestments (of the various ecclesiastical colors) five large webs of Irish poplin, mitres, breviaries, silver-ware, plate, and additional articles of church furniture. The mitres in question are of rich poplin manufactured by the ladies of the Convent of Mercy, Newry, and embroidered by Messrs. Morris Ward & Co., Regal Ulster Works, Belfast. This is from the Rev. —— and clergy of Down and Connor. The presents will be placed in the Vatican Pilgrimage. Messrs. Morris Ward & Co., also sent a splendid album containing photographic views of the various churches and other ecclesiastical buildings of the diocese.

Cuban Patriots—an Unprecedented Letter.

Lawrence, December 24.—The imprisonment of Father Ryan, the free priest arrested under the Spanish flag in Cuban waters, has caused a rumor that the Duke of Norfolk's mission to Rome is a political one to secure the Pope's help for the Salisbury government of Ireland, that trade theories are heretical. It is officially known that Norfolk's mission was merely to congratulate the Pope on the occasion of his jubilee. Anybody conversant with the history of the relations of the Catholic Church to Ireland can have a reason otherwise.

Intelligence from Mission Dolores.

The following was the result of the evening lotto at Carson recently, for the purpose of establishing three more St. Vincents—Ladies' Fancy Work, Gentlemen's Fancy Work, Fancy Cake—Mrs. Cullen, President; Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Vice President; Mrs. Ryan, Treasurer; Miss Ryan, Secretary; Mrs. Ryan, Assistant Secretary.

ST. MARY'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. E. Cuttle, Spiritual Director; S. J. McCormick, President; P. Riordan, Vice President; M. J. Hyde, Treasurer; F. F. McCormick, Secretary.

ST. FRANCIS' CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. F. Harrington, Spiritual Director; Roger O'Donnell, President; James Devlin, Treasurer; C. F. Devlin, Secretary.

ST. PATRICK'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. T. Lonhin, Spiritual Director; C. J. Riordan, President; J. G. Morrissey, Treasurer; F. Shirley, Secretary.

MISSION DOLORES CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. F. Brennan, Spiritual Director; ——, President; C. M. McCrystle, Treasurer; M. V. Hedier, Secretary.

ST. JOSEPH'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. P. Coyle, Spiritual Director; James Fitzgerald, President; ——, Treasurer; M. F. Tracey, Secretary.

ST. BRIDGET'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. P. Bermingham, Spiritual Director; J. M. Burnett, President; F. J. Thomas, Treasurer; W. McMann, Secretary; M. F. Killey, Secretary (pro tem)

ST. JOHN'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. D. Nugent, Spiritual Director; T. B. Hasty, President; J. P. Coulan, Treasurer; W. F. Stafford, Secretary.

ST. PETER'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. P. S. Casey, Spiritual Director; A. Quill, President; J. K. Gallagher, Treasurer; C. D. Douglas, Secretary.

ST. BRENDAN'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. F. Nugent, Spiritual Director; D. McSweeney, President; N. Sweeney, Treasurer; T. J. Wimbrit, Secretary.

ST. PATRICK'S CONFERENCE.

Rev. L. Beulin, Spiritual Director; J. E. O'Donnell, President; ——, Treasurer; F. McCrohle, Secretary.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND.

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Antrim.—On November 29th, the first meeting of the newly elected Corporation of Belfast was held in the Council Chamber, for the purpose of electing a Mayor for the remainder of the current year and for 1887. There were a few unexpected things wanted, and it was generally felt that the present Mayor, Sir James H. Haslett, deserved a second term of office, though it was not so well settled that they should be polite.

Armagh.—Mr. Thomas Gray has resigned the editorship of the Lurgan Gas Works were opening the ground on William street to extension the gas pipes, a rush of sewerage gas knocked down both workmen. Medical aid having been procured they were restored to consciousness, but one of them, Jacob Hoskins, remains in a critical condition.

Carlow.—The Carlow Nationalist gives the following details of an extraordinary Union occurring recently at the Carlow Lunatic Camp. A regular tribunal was formed for the purpose of dealing with contraband letters, persons workmen having any connection with the Camp. If any letter throughout into the slight expression of sympathy with the National movement. Several decisions have been taken the court lately, and at least one has had the highest penalty inflicted on him, viz., his banishment out of the Camp by the Present Marshal Lord Wimborne, under pain of arrest, if he attempts the irrelevant. The Nationalist proceeds to give particulars of one case in which a Mr. Michael Clare, of Newtownlow, who had large dealings with the camp, was banished. Mr. Clare died recently for manifest honors in the town and was elected by the people.

Clare.—It is stated that there is now every likelihood of an active campaign on Official Ossifrage's side against Parliament. The tenants are to be served with notice to quit Summer, and who immediately took possession of the farms, have not a few days more to remain undisturbed under the Redemption Clause of Mr. Balfour's Act, which gives him a month after course to do so. They are disposed not to meet with the landlord except on terms already refused by Colonel O'Callaghan's Agents, and it is reported that the period for redemption expiring the consequence of the estate will again exist the tenantry.

Cork.—On November 28th, a landlord named Cramer was returned for trial at Ballyvourney Petty Sessions on the charge of presenting an ejectment at a tenant named Murphy, and threatening to have him put in jail. Informations were at first refused by the Magistrates, on the ground that the letter complained of was not proved; but they afterwards had to grant them, as an aggravated assault was clearly proved where been committed by the landlord.

At a meeting of the Cork Corporation on Nov. 29th, the present Mayor, Alderman O'Brien, was elected to fill the position of Mayor for 1886 for regular meeting. The Corporation was held on November 1. The Tory members did not attend the meeting, and the Mayor was usual quietly endorsed. In returning thanks, the Mayor referred to the treatment of William O'Brien, and alluding to the imprisonment of Sir Wm. Hennessy, said that if necessary he was himself prepared to act as an agent for the National Press. The following resolutions were sent forward to the Lord Lieutenant for the Sheriffalty of Cork City—J. Crawford Leslie, J. P. E. A. Atkins, and Martin Flavin.

The Duke of Devonshire has given thirty per cent. abatement to his tenants in Cork and Waterford. "His Grace" has surrendered to the Land Commission, after repeatedly refusing through his agents, to concede to the moderate demand of twenty-five per cent., which was what the tenants first asked.

Donegal.—The method of village technical teaching described in the paper read before the Society of Arts, in May last, by Mrs. Ernest Clark, having been approved by the Government, and a small grant of £1,000 having been made for the extension of technical teaching by the Donegal Industrial Fund, in the art of weaving, Mr. Ernest Clark, Secretary to the Society of Arts, Ardinglass of Donegal, Lady Leitrim, the Catholic Archbishop of Armagh, Mr. Marcus Ward, Mr. Woodhall, M. P., Mr. Hogg, Mr. Clements, Mr. and Mr. Mrs. Hamilton are acting as a committee to administer the fund. Mrs. Hart has been invited to form one teaching centre at Rosdrum, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Wilson.

Derry.—On Dec. 1st, Sir William Miller (Conservative) was elected Mayor of Derry for the ensuing year. A Liberal Unionist, Mr. Aaron Hadden, was first put in nomination against Alderman Bell, and received a majority of two. The question was raised whether Mr. Hadden would accept the position, and if he did the salary of £300 paid by the Irish Government, the expense of your hospitality. Mr. Hadden said he would do so if the predecessor would refund their contribution. Sir Wm. Miller said if elected he would not ask a salary, and Mr. Hadden then withdrew, Sir William was declared the successful candidate.

Dublin.—The Dublin Corporation have established the following three exchequers for the year—Sir Thomas Myles, Alderman Gray, Alderman Nagle, and Alderman O'Connor. As under the present Lord Mayoralty Dublin, Cork, and other Corporations have Dublin, the Lord Lieutenant is obliged to appoint one of the members of the Lord appointed one of the office of High Sheriff (instead of the usual way of taking the senior of "the going Judge of Assize," who was, always, a Crown official). Lord Londonderry will have to make a very long while in commissions, in either of the foregoing named gentlemen, as all counts of the National Press, which the Tory party be represents is now so actively prosecuting.

Galway.—Mount St. Mary's destined to become a household word among the people of Ireland, the choicest of Galway, Kilmacduagh and Kilfenora, for such is the title by which the Catholic Bishop and residence of the Bishop of the diocese is, in future, to be known. The late Thomas M. Power, Esq., recently returned from a tour in America, became a naturalized citizen of the United States, and, on his return to his native Galway, he called it Mount St. Mary's, in honor of Father William Plassnelly, P.P., Castlegrove, Co. Roscommon, and Mr. Cymelgan, the Irish Press, contained in the Times Cabinet. He was only after Mr. Plassnelly in the year 1850 discovered the ruins of the oldest relate in the Annals of which he spent in the parishes of Oran, Ballaghaderreen. He was born in July, 1812.

Kerry.—On the 27th of November, at the Presentation Convent, Listowel, Mr. Timothy Kelly, son of Mr. Michael Kelly, T.C., Church street, was ordained priest by the Bishop. The rev. gentleman received his primary education at St. Michael's College, Listowel, and took a place in the Seminary, at Killarney, where he was last two years when he passed with distinction an examination, and also took a post graduate which reduced his term in the Irish College, Paris, from six to five years. Three students from Paris at the age of 23 years.

Longford.—The death is announced of Rev. John Dawson, of St. Aidan's street, Liverpool, from typhoid fever, caught in the discharge of his duties in ministering to the sick poor. The good priest was a native of the Longford diocese, having been born near Ballymahon, and educated at St. Mel's, Longford. In September, 1875, he was ordained by the Bishop of Liverpool, and three years after, Cardinal Wiseman, who also conferred the dignity course with considerable success.

On the 27th of November, at Cordrow, Dublin, Mr. Mary Vesey, died at the advanced age of 100 years.

King's County.—On November 27th, at Birr, a woman named Mrs. Carroll was killed in place called Clahan. Mrs. Carroll, who was known to her neighbours as a quiet, inoffensive and sober woman, had left her home on the morning to do her marketing in Birr, when, on a quarter to four in the evening, she was found lying on the side of the road, near her home, in an unconscious state by two young men, who brought her to her own home. Having recovered sufficiently to speak, she told the following story. She had been returning home and had reached a point about a mile and a half from Birr, when she suddenly felt a blow on the side of the head. The car took the middle of the road. The blow came from the other side of the road. The car driver had left the car and was walking on the other side of the road. The car driver, though she asked for help, was unknown to driver, who had driven off, and she remained behind to move. The car driver, Patrick Ryan, of Ballyfin, a tenant of Lord Castlemaine, and a married man, was sent for the car driver, Ryan, who was driving the car, was found at Mr. Carroll's door. The police have arrested a man named Thomas Kenny, of Tullamore, on suspicion of being the driver of the car.

Kilkenny.—On the 1st, inst., at a special meeting of the Kilkenny Corporation, it was unanimously adopted that P. M. Fagan, the present Mayor of the city, hold the same office for the ensuing year. Mr. John Cockle, T.C., was, at the same time, unanimously selected High Sheriff for 1886.

Kildare.—On Nov. 29th, a sad scene was witnessed in Athy. Fifty tall men marched to the Union to seek work from the Guardians. They had a lamentable story to tell. Some of them had no work for the previous four or eight weeks, and, in their desperate condition had left behind independence. It was work, not charity they sought, and they were willing to work for any wages. The condition of these men is inexpressible. Some of them, which most but a burden on it, the Union Board, at their meeting, refused to accept, and, of course, the Irish country round. These men would be Limerick.—On the 29th of November, on his return from Limerick, where he had been on a visit to his sister, the Mancheste Martyrs demonstration, Mr. Creagh, D. L., was served with a copy of the writ issued at the suit of Mr. Dunn (? Brian against him, out of the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice.

On November 29th, Thomas M. Roe, a policeman, was released from the county Limerick jail on the expiration of his sentence. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labor, for having in his charge a Mr. Michael Cline, of Ballyhoura, Mrs. Hanson Cline, on the 11th of last month, he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and bailed for a bond received him to Rathbeltain. He was loudly cheered along the route, and looked none the worse for the imprisonment.

Meath.—Mr. J. T. Hinde, solicitor, died Nov. 26th, at Professor's, Blackrock, County Dublin. Mr. Hinde had an extensive practice in Dublin and Meath.

The annual visits to the hunting field in the county of last November in full swing, with a full contingent of hounds and members, the Meath Hounds, recently, which his illustrious patron, Cardinal Darlington, and his fellow-colleagues, Cranbrook, were stocking in the outskirts of Dublin, the hounds was the rendezvous of great wealth, the farmers of Meath. Yet, the Meath Hounds, it is stated, that it will be allowed to do much longer; for the Navan National League Branch has passed a resolution that they will allow no more hunting over their lands. What a pity that the Land Act does not contain a clause making such disloyal conduct as this high treason pure and simple.

Mayo.—For reasons which have not been divulged, the proceedings at the election, held about two months ago, of successor to Mr. Fitzgerald, as coach to Bishop of Achonry, have been set aside, and a fresh one ordered by the Holy See. Consequently a fresh election took place at Ballaghaderreen, on Sunday last, and the final selection of a fine and patriotic coadjutor of Saint Nathy, a prelate whose learning and practical experience qualifies him to be one of the most reliable leader and guide in the trying ordeal, will make the Catholic subject for congratulation to the people of Achonry and of Ireland.

Monaghan.—On Sunday, Nov. 28th, the beautiful new high altar in St. Joseph's church, Castleblayney, was solemnly consecrated by the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clonfert. The Most Rev. Dr. Kelly, Coadjutor Archbishop of Armagh, officiated at a most elegant and powerful discourse. Very Rev. Canon Bellingham, the respected and popular P. P. of Castleblayney, also spoke with his accustomed eloquence and pathos. The altar is composed of Irish and foreign marbles, and over the tabernacle is a gilded tabernacle of exquisite workmanship, presented by the Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Clonfert

THE MONITOR,
A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL.
DEVOTED TO THE PROPAGATION AND DEFENSE OF CATHOLIC PRINCIPLES
Published by the MONITOR PUBLISHING CO. Office: 536 Kearny St., San Francisco, California.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:
Year by Mail (if not in advance) $2 00
Year by Mail (if not paid in advance) 2 50
Six Months (if paid in advance) 1 75
Six Months (if not paid in advance) 2 00
Three Months (if paid in advance) 1 00
Three Months (if not paid in advance) 1 50
Two Months (if not paid in advance) 1 00
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces (in advance) $4.00, (not in advance) $ 5 00

☞ Address all communications, remittances, checks, and postal notes to
E. J. MCGRATH, Editorial Manager.
MONITOR Office, Box 1883 P. O., San Francisco, Cal. Entered at the San Francisco Post Office as Second Class Matter.

The Monitor.

THE MONITOR

is sent to the (Most) first year of publication, and the unanimous testimony is that each and every Catholic family engaged, has found it to be a sure conclusion and an influence which makes THE MONITOR a welcome visitor.

Advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

Communications, to secure insertion, should be handed in or addressed to the Editor not later than Tuesday each week.

No communications will be inserted unless accompanied by the author's real name. This is required as a private guarantee of good faith.

Communications will be gladly received from all interested in this cause actuated by this Journal. Correspondents should be as brief as possible, and should write lightly, and on one side of the paper only. We cannot undertake to return the MSS. of unused articles.

All contributions and communications, whether on business or otherwise are to be addressed to the Editor.

For thy Soul be not ashamed to say the Truth..... Strive for Justice for thy Soul; and even unto Death fight for Justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for Thee. [Ecclesiastes IV. 32

VOL. XXXI. SAN FRANCISCO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1888. NO. 14.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GREAT HOLIDAY PRESENTS
GIVEN AWAY
—AT—
THE COMMERCIAL
IMPORTING THA CO.,
957 MARKET STREET,
Bet. Fifth and Sixth

BRANCH 24th and Mission Sts.
GOLD, SILVER AND NICKEL PLATING.
— Every Description of —
Church and Altar Ornaments
— ALSO —
HOUSEHOLD GOODS
Repaired and Plated
By the above method is the most beautiful and durable method in use.
SAN FRANCISCO
Gold, Silver and Nickel Plating Works,
653 and 655 MISSION ST.,
Bet. Montgomery and Third Sts., San Francisco.
E. O. DENNISTON, Proprietor.

DR. M. J. DUNN
DENTIST.
HOURS—9 a. m. to 12 m. 1 to 5 p. m.
ANESTHETICS ADMINISTERED.
1228 MARKET STREET,
(Adjoining J. J. O'Brien's 10c. Goods Store)
San Francisco, Cal.

REMOVAL.
FRANKLIN N. CLARK,
DENTIST,
Montgomery St., op. Lick House,
SAN FRANCISCO.

Formerly of Montgomery Street, over Elder's Jewelry.

THE DREAD RESPIRATOR CORSET.
The Physic-Corset for Ladies.
Cures Constipation, Liver and Kidney Ailments, Piles, Fainting, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Headache, Backache, Dragging Pains, Female Weakness, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dull Pain in the Side, Nervous Prostration, and most women, taken sick at their corsets. Send for Circular.
Corsets Under Plan sale, only each made to order. Sent free to any address, United States, Canada or Mexico.
Also Corset Supporters, Shoulder Braces, Bust Supporters, Abdominal Supporters, Bust Developers, Suspenders, Belts, Etc.
Ladies can safely order from this advertisement. Be careful to give waist measure, bust measure, length of waist from neck to floor, and if for corset, also hip measure.
Address, THE DREAD RESPIRATOR CO., 841 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Mention this paper.

MRS. H. OBER,
Boston Dress Reform Rooms.
Established 1879. 209 Sutter St., near Dupont, S. F., Cal.

MOORE & MURPHY'S FINE
CALF SHOES
Reduced to $3 50
Sold elsewhere at the $5 store

$5 50 CALF SHOE, Warranted.
MOORE & MURPHY,
138 Sixth Street.
COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED

DRS. SYLVESTER & SUBLETT,
DENTISTS.
Painless Extraction
With Vitalized Air.
42 SIXTH ST., COR. MISSION,
Hours, 9 to 4 and 6. P.

HALL'S PULMONARY
BALSAM,
A sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and all Throat and Lung Affections.
Sold by all Druggists, for 50 Cents.
J. B. HALL & CO.
417 Sansome St., S. F.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

Cablegrams from all Countries

EVENTS IN ERIN.

Affairs in Europe.

ETC., ETC.

THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

Its Grandest Victory over Irish Landlords.

LONDON, December 29.—The Daily News commenting on the reduction of judicial rents in Ireland, says by one stroke the Government has offended all the Land-leagues and close its ears to conciliate the tenants.

The Dublin Express condemns the measure as worse than anything that could be accomplished under the "plan of campaign." The Nationalist papers complain of the reduction as totally inadequate.

John Dillon, member of Parliament, speaking at Newcross, said the reduction of judicial rents completely undermines the policy of the Nationalists and the "plan of campaign."

The Morning Post says the reduction will have the effect of transferring property in Ireland practically unsalable. Those tenants who have refused to buy their holdings under Mr. Parnell's advice to wait for better terms, are fully justified. Hopeless the present action will be followed by a further reduction.

The Daily Chronicle, without disapproving the reduction, thinks than the landlords ought to be compensated by the State.

Modern English Brutality.

Men rub their eyes with amazement at the report of the scenes enacted in the cell of the brave John Mandeville. Are these things done in the 19th century, and with the sanction and approval of the English Government? Torture is not abolished at all. Fifty stripes of the lash, a few turns of the rack, and then rest would be infinitely preferable to the loathsome and continued persecution to which Mr. John Mandeville is persecuted for the crime of having a brave man's heart in his bosom. It was a cruel act that imprisoned Mr. Mandeville in the first place. He suffered Mr. Mandeville to wear the prison clothes. At midnight, when the worn out prisoner slept on his plank bed, a gang of Irish offender Thugs burst into his cell and carried off his garments. That was not the worst. All the next day, a bitterly cold day even for November, Mr. Mandeville was left standing with naked feet on the chilling stone floor of his cell with only a quilt between him and the cold, warmth or decency. But even his courage never faltered. But the worst had not been even reached. That cruelty had been clothed with form of law by brute force, and only a bowl left to cover his nakedness, for the final threat that even this would not be left, decency compelled him to submit to the degradation of the prison garb.

Sad Death of a Galway Man.

On November 27th, Roger Connolly, of Farrytocla, Barna, went to Galway to purchase a coffin for his wife who died the day before. At about six o'clock in the evening he was found lying quite dead in a field called Weeks, which skirts the village of Barna, and is generally used as a pass by residents living close to the seashore. Sick men had been prevalent in the poor mans house for months, and this with hunger and misery, evidently crushed the creature's life out. Wife and husband were home together the one grave. The poor man's family were wretchedly poor and miserable.

Lord Lansdowne's Tenantry.

It is stated that Lord Lansdowne has offered the non-evicted tenants on his Luggacurran estate a reduction of 55 per cent. This is an excess of what was sought under the "Plan of Campaign," the refusal of which constituted Mr. O'Brien's christmas visit to Canada. The untented tenantry then only asked 50 per cent. on the non judicial, and 20 per cent on the judicial rents, so that the offer now made is in excess of that demanded under "the Plan," but it will of course rendered unacceptable by the association of the evicted tenants from the renewal. It is, however, a decided "Yan-ke" on the part of the landlords, and once more the moderation of the "Plan of Campaign" is vindicated.

Coercion in Ireland.

DUBLIN, December 30.—At Newmarket, County Cork, to-day five persons were sentenced to three months' imprisonment, each with hard labor, for attending a meeting of a suppressed branch of the Irish National League.

Items from Ireland.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Parnell will resume the active leadership of the Irish party this month. He will summon a meeting of his colleagues soon.

DUBLIN, Jan. 1.—Sexton is now reported better.

Special police protection has been accorded to Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland. The Prince of Wales has cabled that Father Matthew Healy, who is in prison under the Crimes Act, be permitted to wear his own clothes and underwear.

A Jubilee Address.

WORCESTER (Mass.), Dec. 30.—The Jubilee address from the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America was forwarded to Rome from this city by Rev. T. J. Conaty, President of the Union, yesterday. The envoy was made of white silk, bearing the Papal insignia. The address is imprinted on white satin paper in blue and gold. The names of the general officers, provincial Vice-Presidents and officers of subordinate State unions are signed to the address.

Valuable Paintings Burned.

QUEBEC, January 1.—A fire this morning destroyed the seminary chapel, together with about $200,000 worth of original oil paintings immense. The chapel was erected in 1725.

GLADSTONE INTERVIEWED.

His Opinions on the Irish Question.

PARIS, December 30.—The Soleil prints a brief interview with Gladstone. He says "Nothing now in my 79th year, I would retire but for the fight for Irish liberty, which I shall not, perhaps, see the end, but I shall have the consolation of knowing that I have done my utmost."

"What do you think about the prospect for war?"

"War will not break out now. It is too cold. But Spring is not very far off. Nobody can know what will happen. I hope that diplomacy will avert a European war, which will be terrible above all forgave."

"What would be, in your mind, the attitude of England?"

"We have no great interests at stake, but Government will be certain to regard passively this terrible struggle and watch strictly our interests of the country."

The Temps to-day published an interview with Gladstone, in which the ex-Premier described the Irish Commissioner's recent reduction decree as a "Tremendous decisive," and said he was thoroughly at the mercy. He also said that the Tory cabinet, having alienated the tenants, would now alienate the landlords.

PEACE AND GOOD WILL.

Editying Scene in an Italian Church.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The Rome correspondent of the Mail and Express describes the recent popular revival in a conclave in the village of Santi Sarcuse. The description contains a few features that were not stated in the dispatches received a few days ago, and are of interest, even if in stating them a part of the best story is repeated. The conclave began some years ago with the murder of an aged woman, named Italia. The was retaliated by cutting the throat of the eldest member of the murderer's family happened to meet. Thereafter every member of both families went armed, and hostile encounters were common. Recently the Church and authorities interfered and persuaded the families to peace. One day the women of both clans entered the church and swore to keep the peace, and embraced and kissed each other. The next day it was the women's turn. Dressed in their finest they also swore peace and forgetfulness. Two weeks ago peace was celebrated at a Mass, and 600 persons kissed the crucifix held out by the Bishop and promised to forgive and forget. After this a general banquet was spread for all the surrounding country, at which had seven hundred bushels of macaroni, ten cows, seventy pigs, 600 pounds of bread, 1,000 pounds of fruit and twenty barrels of wine.

THE LONDON "TIMES."

Michael Davitt Discusses its Base Motives.

Michael Davitt exposes the true motive of the Times in publishing its wild story of a dynamite fund at this time. There are two reasons, he says, at present in jail in London awaiting trial for complicity in an alleged dynamite plot. The object of the Times, and of those who are used unwittingly, as to create a prejudice against these men, whether they are innocent or guilty. With a freely "dynamite scare" under full headway, the chance of their obtaining a fair trial is as slight as it well could be. Being American citizens, they might have some hope of intervention on the part of the Government at Washington, but the representatives of that Government, to which they might otherwise look for aid, are Mr. Bayard in the State Department, and Mr. Phelps at the American Ministry in London, neither of whom would dream of incumbering dear Mother England by such intervention. Mr. Davitt further says that the Times has never hinted at his organization, but he forgets that it did hint most unmistakably at the association of Mr. Parnell, a year or two ago, when it said that the leaders of the Irish party would be held responsible for any indignant people of certain dynamite outrages, which were never contemplated, took place. The Times is absolutely unscrupulous. If it dared, it would gladly connect the murder of every Irish patriot. From the assassination of character to that of men is but a short step. Libellers who commit not only slurs, but of the other, because that is the easier rather than give the slander an ownership.

Condemning Balfour's Brutality.

At the annual Synod of the Diocese of Ross, held in Roscarbery, Most Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald presiding, the following resolution was unanimously adopted by all present: "Resolved, That we, the Bishops and clergy of the Diocese of Ross, in Synod assembled, cannot separate without publicly recording our strongest feeling of sympathy with Mr. William O'Brien in his imprisonment, and our emphatic condemnation of the cruel treatment to which he is subjected—as also of the Coercion Act under which he has been convicted, as well as of the shocking outrage on the administration of justice which marked his so-called trial; and that we most emphatically condemn the policy of the present Government in Irish affairs as being nothing else than flagrant tory-government and odious tyranny, under which no people can be contented, prosperous or loyal."

Section in Stead for West Belfast.

The following letter has been addressed by the Most Rev. Dr. McAlister, Bishop of Raphoe and Connor to Mr. Healy, hon. sec. of the Registration Association of West Belfast: "In reply to your communication, it would, in my opinion, be a great calamity if the valuable services of Mr. Sexton were lost to the popular cause in Belfast. His efficient and able advocacy of the claims of the Catholics of Belfast in the House of Commons, during the past sessions of Parliament, is worthy of the highest common thanks. It is, therefore, very gratifying to know that every effort has been made to put the voters of West Belfast in a position, should an occasion arise during the coming year, to exercise the electoral rights conferred on them by the Legislature. I beg to enclose a cheque for £50 towards the registration expenses, and trust the funds necessary to obtain so deserving a name will not be wanting.

Cleveland Thanked.

BIRMINGHAM (Ala.), December 30.—The Catholics of Birmingham last night held a mass meeting in celebration of the Pope's jubilee. A resolution was adopted thanking Cleveland for the honor which he paid the Holy Father on the occasion of his golden jubilee.

POPE LEO XIII. IN HIS PONTIFICAL ROBES.

THE POPE'S JUBILEE.

By Cablegram from Rome.

MAKING GREAT PREPARATIONS.

The Imposing Ceremonies Commenced.

ROME, December 30.—The city is crowded in anticipation of the jubilee ceremonies. To-morrow will be the anniversary of the Pope's fiftieth year in the priesthood. All the papers are filled with elaborate sketches of his career and personal gossip. From the lighter sketches I summarize some features that give a personal idea outside of a formal biography of the man to whom all Europe is looking and seeking to pay honor.

Audiences Granted to Kingly Representatives.

The Portuguese Minister, together with the Baron San Pedro, Chief of the Cabinet, were today received by his Holiness, to whom they presented an autograph letter from the King of Portugal and a beautiful gold chalice. Later on the Pope received a special envoy from Emperor William with an autograph letter from his majesty, a special envoy from the King of Saxony and special envoy of the King of Holland, with autograph letter.

ROME, December 30.—The Pope has conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of Pius IX. upon all special envoys sent to congratulate his Holiness upon his Jubilee.

The French Government has conferred the decoration of the Legion of Honor upon Cardinal Rampolla, the Papal Secretary of State.

HAVANA, December 30.—Herr Wolffhert has demanded the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope in a speech here concerning the Papal Jubilee.

The Pope's Daily Life.

At six he rises, at seven celebrates Mass, after having spent some time in contemplation. After Mass follows a period of prayer and repose. At eight the decisions of his Congregations and his other correspondence are attended to, and at eleven the public audiences are held. The Pope receives the Ministers and Ambassadors, the pilgrims of all classes and countries. Then at 12:30 he takes a walk in the gardens of the Vatican, generally accompanied by a Prelate and two aids of the Bonnanaise, adorned by the armorial bearings of the Pope of the stamp. A gold pen and a paper-cutter accompanies the desk. The pen holder is gold and is adorned by the coat of arms in diamonds, stones and topaz. The handle of the paper-cutter is formed by rare, large Oriental pearls in the shape of a cornucopia. It is surmounted by a helmet in gold enamel.

The King of Portugal's Present.

A chalice in solid gold studded with precious stones, was presented to the Pope by the King of Portugal. The United States of Colombia have offered a cross and chain of diamonds; the centre of the cross is an enormous brilliant, and thirteen more very large diamonds are studded into the arms of the cross, each end of which is formed by a diamond of larger dimensions. The chain is also studded with precious stones, and the double chain to which the cross is attached is interlaced by diamonds and small stars in brilliants. The whole is enclosed in an elegant case of white satin.

CANONIZATION OF SAINTS.

On the 15th inst., will take place the authorized canonization of several new saints, among them the seven founders of the Order of Servants of Mary and the Blessed John Berchmans, Peter Claver and Alphonse Rodriguez of the Society of Jesus. The ceremony will take place above the periphery of St. Peter's, in the great hall, originally devoid of all ornamentation, but to-day one of the most important of the Vatican, both for its dimensions and precious marble and paintings. Over $200,000 has been spent by Leo XIII. in decorating this hall in which it was his original intention to celebrate his Jubilee Mass, but the original idea was finally abandoned. The preliminaries for the canonization of the new saints commenced on the 23rd ult., with a public Consistory held with great pomp by the Pope and his Court and attended by all the extraordinary Ambassadors present in Rome.

More Gifts from Emperor Hearst.

The Duke d'Annale has sent two beautiful chandeliers in gilt bronze. A Sedan chair, in the shape of a boat, with a sail as canopy, has been offered by the city of Naples. A rich laid lower of Her Grace, Spain, offers a crucifix in solid gold, of special historical worth, as it was the property of one of the most famous Spanish knights who fought with the Crusaders. Sadagura, the celebrated rabbi of Vienna, surnamed the Pope of the Jews, has forwarded an ancient Bible, commented by precious stones. Finally, the Holy Father will receive from a Chapter of the Basilica of St. Peter's a most unique reliquary, artistically wrought in gold, to be used in preserving the relics of the head of St. John the Baptist.

Presents from Potentates and Princes.

Numerous pilgrims from Spain, Belgium, France, Hungary and elsewhere have arrived to take part in the ceremonies. The following personages also arrived with the same object: Marquis De la Vega de Armijo, Extraordinary Ambassador of the Queen Regent of Spain, who will be received by the Pope with royal honors. He is the bearer of an autograph letter of the Queen and the presents of the royal family of Spain. The Baron of Spaetes, bearer of a gold pen and of an autograph letter from the King of Portugal to the Holy Father. Monsignor Marinos, Latin Archbishop of Athens, bearer of an autograph letter of the King of Greece; the Prince De Lucanstein, chief of the German committee for the Jubilee; the Duke of Ursel, with presents and the autograph letter of the King of Belgium, and a host of Church dignitaries.

The Sovereign Pontiff's Appearance.

At half-past 9 the distinguished and specially invited officials came into the chamber by a private entrance. During the last hour the Pope himself entered the basilica. The appearance of the handsome old man, attired in the white robes of his high office, was the signal for the most tremendous applause. This unusual feature was continued for five minutes, and the great arched roof resounded again and again with the roars and salvos of 30,000 throats. The Pope was borne in the chair used for such occasions, preceded by a magnificent section of his Pontifical guards, followed by a very one of the Cardinals present in Rome. After them came every member of his immediate court, in official robes. The Pope appeared very much overcome by the tremendous demonstration from the audience. He smiled continuously and occasionally bowed gravely.

Jubilee Presents for the Pope.

ROME, Dec. 30.—The first present of note came from the Sultan in the shape of an antique pastoral ring set with precious stones, valued at $50,000. The Queen Regent of Spain has sent another ring, valued at $15,000, which is valued at $15,000. The Emperor of Germany has sent a mitre worked in gold and encrusted with rubies, emeralds, sapphires, and brilliants. It cost 20,000 francs. The empress accompanies the gift with a Mass vestments that cost 30,000 francs. The clergy and laity of the Archdiocese of Cologne subscribed 120,000 francs for a tiara. It is made in a foundation of blue cloth and is broidered in fine pearls. The triple crown is of gold, studded with an immense number of rubies, emeralds, and sapphires; a large diamond sets the cross on the top. The Empress of Austria also sends a gold tiara that cost 150,000 florins. The Emperor of Austria joined with the ladies of the capital in sending a pectoral cross that cost 100,000 florins. The Duc de Nemours has also sent a pectoral cross studded with diamonds and emeralds. The Syrian Catholics sent a cross and chain that cost 70,000 rupees. About fifteen pounds of gold are contained in the present. Princess Clotilde, Benaparte, sister of King Humbert, has made a magnificent cope of white satin, embroidered with flowers. It is valued at 100,000 francs. The ladies of Seville, Spain, sent a cope chased of gold, set with 561 precious stones, mostly diamonds and emeralds. The Queen of Saxony gives a holy water stoup worth 50,000 francs.

THE POPE IN ST. PETER'S

20,000 People in the Building.

ROME, January 1.—The Pope's Golden Jubilee was celebrated here to-day with appropriate services in all the Catholic churches of the archdiocese.

The most interesting service was held in the old cathedral. Cardinal Gibbons conducted the services, the grandeur of which was fully in keeping with the pomp of the Roman ritual. The scene within the church at the Mass was impressive. Elaborate preparations had been made.

Cardinal Gibbons wore his red berretta and magna cappa, the train of which was carried by six altar boys. When he reached the sanctuary, he went to the archiepiscopal throne, which had been raised for the occasion. Its set upon the throne throughout the Mass, which was celebrated by Rev. A. Magnan, Chaplain of the Sacrum Consistory.

Just after the first Gospel, the Cardinal changed his magna cappa for a trimphe robe, and preached a sermon on the Papacy, making special reference to the life and influence of Leo XIII., and to the honors recently paid to him by all nations, irrespective of religious belief.

[CONCLUDED ON FOURTH PAGE.]

His attenuated figure is lost by study and the weight of years; but in every movement he is astonishingly quick and energetic. His head is a most remarkable one, once seen never to be forgotten, with its every feature and of strict proportion, yet with the harmony of the whole. The small, bright, myopic eyes, so close together, denote "the man who is ever on the search;" the largely developed cerebellum, a capacity for domination. The mouth, when under a pleasing influence, forms into an exceedingly wide, sweet smile, its benevolent expression brightening the whole face, and supplying the beauty which is less observable in the eyes. The ears, like the hands and feet, are exceptionally large and long. The skin is so fine and glowing with health, and much admired by Italians, as a sign of high breeding—that a perfectly network of blue veins (the "blue blood") is visible on some of the aesthetic face. His Holiness is young with the fire and impulse of youth without impairing physical strength, and feels lovely the disabilities of age. When he saw my portrait for the last time he thoughtfully remarked its look of youth, and advised me to remember when painting another Pope, (!) that "Popes are of no age." I thoroughly appreciated the finesse of the phrase, and only regretted that a painter could hardly give it practical effect. During long functions the Holy Father's muscular nervous effort he will raise himself from time to time straight as an arrow.

Great Rejoicings in Rome.

ROME, January 1.—Rome presented a beautiful appearance this morning. Although the day was rainy and cold, it was clear. Flags waved from nearly every house and every public and private building. Rome was crowded with visitors. All hotels and available quarters were last night filled to their utmost capacity. There was the greatest eagerness on the part of everyone to witness the splendid ceremonies of the Jubilee Mass, which took place this morning within the dark picturesque interior of the mighty St. Peter's Cathedral. The reception data at the Vatican and exercises by the Pontiff in attending, all of them have told on his physique, and his Holiness looks fatigued and careworn. During the week he received the homages of the Noble Guards commanded by Prince Alliere, and the Swiss Guards under the Count De Courten, who presented to their name a beautiful Roman missal.

The Papal Guard's Present.

General Kanzler, Commander of the Papal Guards, accompanied by the commanding officers of the various corps, had a private audience with the Pope. The General remitted a large sum of money collected among the rank and file of the small army, and a present of a gold writing desk, in the style of the Renaissance, adorned by the armorial bearings of the Pope in enamel. A gold pen and a paper-cutter accompanies the desk. The pen holder is gold and is adorned by the coat of arms in diamonds, stones and topaz. The handle of the paper-cutter is formed by rare, large Oriental pearls in the shape of a cornucopia. It is surmounted by a helmet in gold enamel.

The King of Portugal's Present.

A chalice in solid gold studded with precious stones, was presented to the Pope by the King of Portugal. The United States of Colombia have offered a cross and chain of diamonds; the centre of the cross is an enormous brilliant, and thirteen more very large diamonds are studded into the arms of the cross, each end of which is formed by a diamond of larger dimensions. The chain is also studded with precious stones, and the double chain to which the cross is attached is interlaced by diamonds and small stars in brilliants. The whole is enclosed in an elegant case of white satin.

CANONIZATION OF SAINTS.

On the 15th inst., will take place the authorized canonization of several new saints, among them the seven founders of the Order of Servants of Mary and the Blessed John Berchmans, Peter Claver and Alphonse Rodriguez of the Society of Jesus. The ceremony will take place above the periphery of St. Peter's, in the great hall, originally devoid of all ornamentation, but to-day one of the most important of the Vatican, both for its dimensions and precious marble and paintings. Over $200,000 has been spent by Leo XIII. in decorating this hall in which it was his original intention to celebrate his Jubilee Mass, but the original idea was finally abandoned. The preliminaries for the canonization of the new saints commenced on the 23rd ult., with a public Consistory held with great pomp by the Pope and his Court and attended by all the extraordinary Ambassadors present in Rome.

Emperor William's Precious Present.

The Mass, which was begun as soon as the applause had subsided, continued for twenty-five minutes. The effect of the music was strikingly beautiful. The chanting of an exquisitely trained choir resounded in such a way under the dome that the music came back again and again, producing effects absolutely startling. Many provincial pilgrims shed tears during the services. The Pope knelt in front of the altar after Mass and recited an Ave Maria. The high church officials who were in attendance upon the Pope during the ceremonial, then laid aloft in full view of the audience the mitres and tiars worn by the Pope during the service. This was the Emperor William's mitre. The tiara was a splendid one presented by the city of Paris.

The Day in England.

LONDON, January 1.—The letter of the Pope to Queen Victoria, which has been sent through the Duke of Norfolk, offers the thanks of his Holiness to her Majesty for having sent the Duke as their representative to her congratulations. The Pope addressed to her Catholic Majesty the Queen for the kindness shown to subjects, diplomatic relations will be speedily resumed.

Special Masses in honor of the Pope's Jubilee were celebrated to-day in the cathedrals and other churches throughout Great Brittain. The ceremonies were largely attended, and fervent enthusiasm was manifest.

Good Health of the Holy Father.

ROME, January 2.—At the conclusion of the jubilee services yesterday the Pope retired to his private apartments and rested for two hours. His Holiness was not feeling ill, however, from the effects of his exertions during the Mass at St. Peter's in the morning, and to-day is in his usual health. Yesterday he received 2600 congratulatory telegrams. His Holiness has informed all the special foreign envoys that he will grant them an audience by their leave taking whenever they desire.

The Pope Addresses the Vast Congregation

A Te Deum was now sung, and after this the Pope turned towards the great crowd, and in a few words, so clearly and distinctly spoken, that they could be heard quite a distance from the altar, thanked those present for their manifestations of kindness and sympathy. Before he was permitted to pronounce the Apostolic Benediction he was again made the recipient of another tremendous outbreak of applause. The enthusiasm which followed his last words of his address was greater even than upon his first appearance. The Pope's face flushed. Cheers, shouts and vivas were heard in every part of the great assemblage. All united in one voice hailing him saying "Viva Pontefice!" "Viva Papa!" and again, "Viva Leone XIII!" "Long shouted "Viva il Papa." The noise of acclaiment and enthusiasm was heightened by the waving of handkerchiefs in every hand. Leo XIII looked very much moved, and as he faced this tremendous demonstration his face brightened. Indeed, at no time during last week has his face worn such a look of unclouded happiness as at the close of today's ceremony in St. Peter's. He was brought to the church in a sedan chair presented him by the city of Naples. The pedestal antiquated any possible demonstration of anti-clericals. There was not a single sense of disturbance or disorder anywhere.

The Pope's Dinner.

The Pope's appearance in the Basilica of St. Peter's was the first appearance of the Pope there since Victor Emmanuel entered Rome in 1870 with troops to overpaly the temporal authority. The Pope was assisted in the low Mass by Monsignor Lenti and Monsignor Sanminiatelli, Cardinal Mertel held the basin in which the Pope washed his hands, and Cardinal Hergenrother changed the Pope's robe which was given to him by the Roman nobility. The pastoral ring was a present from the Austrian Archduke. The chalice was a gift from the King of Portugal. The mitre was from the Emperor of Germany. The tiara, covered with a shower of pearls, was presented by the clergy of Paris, and the plate used during the Mass was given by the Queen of England. The city was brilliantly illuminated to-night.

The Day in Spain.

MADRID, Jan. 1.—The Queen Regent, accompanied by members of her court and Cabinet Ministers, attended the Jubilee Mass in the Madrid Cathedral to-day. All the Government offices were decorated and at night brilliantly lighted in honor of the Pope.

JUBILEE SERVICES.

How the Day was Celebrated in Eastern Cities.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 1.—The Pope's Golden Jubilee was celebrated here to-day with appropriate services in all the Catholic churches of the archdiocese.

The most interesting service was held in the old cathedral. Cardinal Gibbons conducted the services, the grandeur of which was fully in keeping with the pomp of the Roman ritual. The scene within the church at the Mass was impressive. Elaborate preparations had been made.

Cardinal Gibbons wore his red berretta and magna cappa, the train of which was carried by six altar boys. When he reached the sanctuary, he went to the archiepiscopal throne, which had been raised for the occasion. Its set upon the throne throughout the Mass, which was celebrated by Rev. A. Magnan, Chaplain of the Sacrum Consistory.

Just after the first Gospel, the Cardinal changed his magna cappa for a trimphe robe, and preached a sermon on the Papacy, making special reference to the life and influence of Leo XIII., and to the honors recently paid to him by all nations, irrespective of religious belief.

[CONCLUDED ON FOURTH PAGE.]

Poetry.

(For the Monitor.)

A PLEA FOR THE NEW YEAR.

While my mother chamber here I sit
This festive New Year's twilight on the air
Outside the jubilant bells from swaying towers
Toll out the glad year's exoplosion. And oh! God,
While speechless fain is everything around me along
The dark and narrow halls of endless Time,
In spite do I pause and pray to Thee
With arms outstretched in supplicant, and will Pray:
Tearful with hope and humb ulcerity.
Oh! through the wall-ribs of Thy white throne
Since ages past, like the star-platoons on
Of ocean's waves warping upon the rocks,
Let my dear plea—like unto far-reaching wave—
Rise up to Thee.

Oh! Great me, gracious Lord,
That this year may be one of simple peace,
Of gentle happiness, of hopes made good,
Of fields detected, and of promises
In faith fulfilled.

Oh! Great as that I may
Throw off the shackles of fertilious Sin—
Once more to be true image of Thyself,
And sweet partaker of Thy saving grace!

C. ARMONT DUTR.

San Francisco, January 1, 1890.

(For the Monitor.)

A GLANCE INTO FUTURITY.

I dreamt, last night, a pleasant dream,
And dreamt it o'er and o'er,
Of people's bright continuous stream
Came rolling towards my door,
With a splendor and a softness
I had never seen before.

Midnight! I saw a beauteous maid
Descending with and tears,
Her helpless friends in misery Said,
Cast down by myriad fears,
Which English cunning hath devised
Since hundreds have passed years.

And as I gazed a smile awoke
From out her lambent eyes,
Which said to plain as if she spoke—
"Soon, soon, they will arise
And fling their tear-stained banner
To the breezes of the sky.

From deep affliction will they spring—
From slavery and woe;
And stars defiance will they fling
To England—hated foe.
When bright upon the emerald isle
Will the star of Freedom glow.

Shall Jubbies, with face all fair,
And joys usually English hand,
Of Nick's nobody land
When emancipated reveal Liberty
And her attendant band."

My heated blood began to boil,
And surged with rapid glow,
To think that on the dark green land soil,
The flag of Liberty
Should wave as in the storied time,
O'er verdant land and sea.

But now the morning's cruddy light
Came drowsily through the dose,
With gentle sway waftures the night,
And bids him unwind over
Those who are sometimes had a happy
The good God to adore.

The Peace of God.

Maurice Francis Egan in the "Catholic Home Almanac."

As Mary Desmoulin turned into Bleecker Street about the hour of six on a midsummer night, she heard a series of pathetic steps following her. Miss Desmoulin had of late led a lonely life, and a lonely life produces one of two fancies. In those footsteps sounded in Broadway and then came around the corner, she turned to look.

A young man of the type that always is beginning to be a man of books—or rather a stream of heads which is moving to an unknown sea. But Miss Desmoulin had left the great stores of Montagy & Co. a little earlier than usual, and at this time, just a few minutes later these tiny footsteps she had heard would have been lost in a throng of hurrying steps of people homeward bound,—there was a lull; and so she heard them.

Mary Desmoulin's mind was full of bitter thoughts. She had been rich, she was poor. She had been free; she felt that she was almost a slave; she had had many friends; she was alone. She had watched the rain and the snow fall and heard the moaning wind howl, and it had only meant to her warmer fires, an easy chair, and more comfort than usual. Now snow and rain and wild weather had a new meaning to her. She must earn her living. If she ceased to work she must starve. Death had taken father and mother, brother and sister from her side, and when a fair maiden of sixteen had left her penniless, she disappeared from her old, pleasant world, and found a place in one of those large emporiums where many young women are employed. She was affronted—sometimes reprimanded,—as Miss Desmoulin." She said to herself that she might have been a slave for all anybody cared for her. She earned the people who rode in carriages and whose fine toilettes brought out the shabbiness of her old frock, as she wearily unrolled silk and velvet for their inspection. She almost hated them. She believed that the best thing in the world was money. It had given her all she wanted.

She had knelt, with propriety in a Protestant church, in which the appointments had been after the most approved ritualistic manner. She had listened to eloquent sermons the necessity of symbolism and ceremonies and the superiority of the Roman Catholic Church in matters of this kind. But the preacher had been so earnestly, almost impassioned, that he had forgotten to teach any laughable doctrine and, in fact, had always expressed horror at the "iron clad and unchanging dogmatism of that Church." In this way, Mary had never acquired any positive help from religion, as it was taught. She had associated it with new gowns at Easter, comfortable pews, plenty of wax candles, and artistic stained glass. It was part of the routine of a young woman in society to attend church; but all the churches were good enough for the poor in them. And yet, she had never felt poor and lonely. She had never imagined that religion was a thing to put on Sundays, and take off again when the owner left church. It was very much a costly robe.

When the clouds had rolled over she was twenty years of age. She was twenty-three, fresh, frugal living and hard work made her look older; there was a wrinkle in her forehead and a set look about her mouth which told of suffering and impatience. But her blue eyes sometimes had a lonesome and kind expression in them, and her smoothly-rolled brown hair and her black dress, sympathetic souls, her good-humoured walk, and trained voice, proclaimed the lady.

The worst of her condition was not that she had worked for two dollars a week after three years of industry and thrift, but that she had learned how to go to an almshouse, but that her poverty had brought such doubt, such discouragement, such hopelessness, such bitterness, such despair and such cry of them.

She lived in a house in Bleecker Street, and, as she turned into it, she heard steps beginning to be a man of books—or rather a stream of heads which is moving to an unknown sea. But Miss Desmoulin had left the great store

THE MONITOR.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK ON SATURDAY.

The MONITOR has the largest Circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1888

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—It is now hinted that Detroit will be made an Archiepiscopal See, and that Bishop Marty of Dakota will be its first Archbishop.

The Rome correspondent of the London Daily News says the rumors of the establishment of diplomatic relations between England and the Holy See are unfounded. Just what the MONITOR said three weeks ago.

—Archbishop Ryan arrived safely at Queenstown last week, and proceeded at once to the county Tipperary where he intended spending a week in his boyhood's home and among his relatives.

—The next Consistory will be held in March. It is rumored from Rome that the Archbishops of Paris and Cologne will be made Cardinals during this month, that the Archbishoprc of Milwaukee will be divided and that a Coadjutor will shortly be given Archbishop Kenrick of St. Louis.

—Statistics published by the daily press show that the horrible crime of suicide is on the increase in San Francisco. Here is the monthly record of the 82 cases which occurred during the past year. In January there were 7, February 5, March 2, April 9, May 5, June 12, July 5, August 7, September 13, October 5, November 3 and December 9.

—The Holy Father has been pleased to approve the Decrees of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda nominating the Rev. Thomas McGovern, parish priest of Dunville, Pennsylvania, Bishop of the See of Harrisburg, and appointing the Right Rev. P. Hall, O. S. B., Abbot of St. Marybels Abbey, Vicar Apostolic, episcopal character, of the Vicariate of North Carolina.

—The English papers are spreading alarming reports concerning the increase of leprosy throughout Europe. The horrible disease has been traced to the Chinese either by direct importation, when or to exist, occurring among whites who have been exposed to contagion from the Chinese—a particularly noticeable among soldiers, sailors, merchants, missionaries, and others whose vocations bring them into contact with the Orient. Following the Crusades leprosy prevailed throughout Europe to a frightful extent. The swarming of the Chinese in California, and close relations with that country, open the way to a similar visitation here.

—The Paris correspondent of an English paper thus sketches the new President of the French Republic: "I have often met M. Carnot at the houses of friends without raising anything in him foreshadowing an exceptional elevation. He is quiet, well-bred, sufficiently affable, preferring to reply by monosyllables, and afraid of putting himself forward. He does not seek the society of men, though he shows no uneasiness in it; he has seems a little awkward in the society of ladies, and his conversation with them rarely goes beyond an exchange of commonplaces. His influence are few, and his home life is simple, but comfortable."

—Balfour's bailiffs in Ireland still keep the jail doors open for the reception of victims. He has now about 200 under lock and key. He has selected the approach of the season of peace and good will to put a priest in prison, and we may hear that at any moment in the United States. The new Vicar-Apostolic was educated in St. Vincent's Abbey College, and took the usual pledge of his order September 17, 1862, and the solemn vows October 5, 1872. He was ordained priest December 21, 1872, and was assigned to educational works in the College until his election as Abbot of St. Mary's in the spring of 1885. He was the first Abbot of St. Mary's Abbey, which was founded at that time. The Abbatial Benediction was conferred on Abbot Hand by Bishop Northrop in Charleston. He will probably retain that office in commendam, with his new dignity. The Bishop-elect is endowed with practical administrative abilities, and with fluency and force as a speaker.

—Connected with the consecration of Bishop Heaney—says the Milwaukee Citizen—was one of those divine little episodes almost too sacred to touch upon, and yet so full of sweetness that it were a pity to withhold its tender grace. The school sisters had passed from the sanctuary, the last throng from the church, the nuns were hushed, the lights extinguished, but still there lingered near the chancel a group of worshippers, the central figure of which was a venerable and lovely lady. Into the newly-made Prelate came forth in his purple robes. He said "Mother." She knelt before him and he laid his hand upon her head and blessed her. Tears sprang to eyes that witnessed this holy scene. What must have been the emotions of the mother and child hearts? The Bishop told his mother how he had looked for her in the congregation—meaning at the time he imparted the solemn benediction at the conclusion of the Mass—as he wished that she should be the first to receive his blessing.

—It is only sixty-five years since the first Catholic church was erected in New Hampshire. The building was the renowned Father Virgil Horace Barber, who was at one time a Protestant Episcopal preacher, but who, by the grace of God, was converted to the true faith, with his wife, son and daughters. Mr. Barber became a priest, his wife and daughters entering the Ursuline and Visitation Orders. We mention these facts merely to show the small grain of mustard seed from which the Church has grown in New Hampshire as we read in a secular paper recently that in the city of Manchester just that State there are now sixteen children in the Catholic schools than in the public schools. Evidently Puritanism does not prosper even in the soil of New England where it first germinated in America.

Help Where Help is Needed.

We regret to learn that the damage caused by the late fire at St. Mary's Hospital is much greater than has been supposed. The statements formally made by some of the daily papers that the losses were covered by insurance are wholly incorrect. The school furniture was uninsured except one piano, and the buildings themselves had only an insurance of two thousand dollars on them, while the loss from the fire in buildings and furniture exceeds twelve thousand dollars. This is estimated of the injury done to the stock which is more than double the whole amount of insurance on it. The whole loss to the Sisters will not fall short of fifteen thousand dollars and will probably exceed that amount. As the community is burdened with a very heavy debt, largely incurred in the support of the old Ladies' Home and the other numerous charities supported by the Sisters of Mercy, this loss is a very severe one and we have no doubt but assistance will be freely offered by the public to enable them to rebuild their schools where the facts are known.

It is impossible for the Sisters to restore the school buildings at present unless help is given them. They have provided as almost wholly gratuitous education for over four hundred children in the schools just destroyed and it is to be hoped that the charity of the public will provide them with the means for continuing the good work as soon as far as restoring the buildings as speedily as possible. Subscriptions can be sent to the Superiores at St. Mary's Hospital, or to the Monitor office, 536 Kearny street, the acknowledgement of which will be given in our columns.

To Favors from a Brutal Government.

We learn from our Irish exchanges that when the patriotic Prelate of Cashel heard of the brutal treatment of Mr. Maud still in Tullamore jail by Balfour's bailiffs, Archbishop Croke indignantly declined to have any further correspondence with Dublin Castle as to permission to visit William O Brien in his present cell. His Grace repeatedly made an application to the "Irish Prisons Board" to be allowed to see Mr. O'Brien, observing at the same time that he had obtained similar permission some years ago from the Home Secretary, Sir William Harcourt, to visit Michael Davitt in Portland Prison. The Archbishop's application was answered to the effect that the Prison Board had no power to grant his request but that the matter would be referred to the Government for decision. Meanwhile information of the refusal of the clothes off Mr. Mandeville by prison officials under the direction of the prison Governor was made public, whereupon Archbishop Croke wrote to the authorities that he "would not accept even a nominal favor from a tyrannical government for Mr. Mandeville's barbarities practiced on Mr. Maudeville. The entire Irish race will applaud the spirited action of the Prelate of Cashel. He has voiced the sentiment of an overwhelming majority of his countrymen.

A Benedictine Honored.

A dispatch from Rome to Cardinal Gibbons announces the appointment of Right Rev. Leo Haid, O. S. B., as Vicar-Apostolic of North Carolina. He is now Abbot of St. Mary's Abbey, Gaston county, N. C. A native of Pennsylvania, he was born near St. Vincent's Abbey, in Westmoreland county, in that State, July 15, 1849. St. Vincent's Abbey is the Mother Abbey of the Benedictines in the United States. The new Vicar-Apostolic was educated in St. Vincent's Abbey College, and took the usual pledge of his order September 17, 1867, and the solemn vows October 5, 1872. He was ordained priest December 21, 1872, and was assigned to educational works in the College until his election as Abbot of St. Mary's in the spring of 1885. He was the first Abbot of St. Mary's Abbey, which was founded at that time. The Abbatial Benediction was conferred on Abbot Hand by Bishop Northrop in Charleston. He will probably retain that office in commendam, with his new dignity. The Bishop-elect is endowed with practical administrative abilities, and with fluency and force as a speaker.

How Sectarians Spread Immorality.

Protestantism had its foundation in Infidelity and its continuance in lust. It can be anything else than impious in its influence upon the human family. Here is a description, taken from the Boston Transcript, of Fifty Fulton's lecture to that city which plainly demonstrates the disastrous influence which Protestant preachers like Fulton exercise upon every community where moral purity is blasted by their blighting presence. "Let us try," says the Transcript, "to see into the scene. It has been announced far and wide for days previously that the subject to be—"The Priest's Substitute for Marriage." At the appointed hour the hall is already thronged. A dozen or more boys, ranging in the age from ten to eigh teen years, are seen running to gain an entrance. As they rush through the swinging doors they find not only that all the seats within reach are occupied by people young and old but that girls in their teens are standing, for want of seats, in groups just inside the doors. However, presently a fleecy of girls is led to chairs on the platform and some of the boys perch on the floor of the platform with their legs dangling down in front. When all are made as comfortable as possible the services begin. A testimonial and the sermon proceeds. Large portions of the sermon consist of details concerning alleged acts of immorality committed by priests and nuns. And from beginning to end, at intervals of not more than a few minutes, frequently several in one minute, shouts of laughter, uproarious applause and other such demonstrations of approval and enjoyment greeted the speaker. More than twenty times there was loud laughter at one time. Every time it was in response to something said manifestly to gratify or please the boys, and nearly each time it was in response to a remark which pandered to the sensual appetites of the young.

This is the way Protestant preachers help to Christianize and elevate our youth, and on the more readily become victims of the worst forms of vice. When the earn of youth are corrupted and Sabbath Schools are barrier between virtue and vice has been broken down and every young man and young woman leaves the hall where such Satanical "services" were performed, prepared to adopt any vice that may present itself to their perverted imaginations. For this sectarianism is solely responsible, and as the sower of the seeds of sinfulness throughout the world it may be said to be a most diabolical success.

Protestant Repudiating Protestant Missionaries.

The rather strange fact—says the New Zealand Tablet—that the Protestant authorities of the republic of Liberia in Africa have applied to Rome for Catholic evangelists and Religious to manage their schools and hospitals, has been accounted for by the reports relating to missionary enterprise on the continent in question given by the late Dr. Lenz the Austrian, and Baron von Barth, the German African travellers. The accounts given by Dr. Lenz were contradicted by an African missionary in a letter to the Times, and, as they were libel on a sacred order, the contradiction was the more readily accepted. Baron von Schwerin, however, who goes still further than Dr. Lenz in the contempt he expresses for Protestant missions, and in his admiration for those conducted by Catholic missionaries, is a staunch Lutheran, and accounts by his being so for the failure of what he had witnessed among the Protestant missions to convert him. The Baron does not attribute the failure of the missionaries of the Protestant sects to any fault in the religious systems they follow but rather to the character of the men themselves, whom he stigmatizes as almost total failures. Rather, he says, "can an unclean greasers or cockbirders preach a faith they do not understand?" "They are, he adds, a disgrace to civilization." But it is a hopeful sign that the people of Liberia have been able to draw a contrast, and that they prove themselves to be more sensible of their participation in applying as they have done, to Rome for the religious assistance they require.

—A London correspondent says that Michael Davitt passed through the English metropolis recently on his way to address meetings in the big English manufacturing towns called to congratulate with Home Rule movements. Davitt's lean and sallow face looked very much worn. The strain is beginning to tell on him. He was pale and nervous, for very north in earnest, as usual. The strong physical endurance, he said, so astonished throughout England in the meetings called to protest against the brutality and savagery of the present coercion government in Ireland. It is not confined to any particular country, but is found in all quarters of Great Britain. "The clergy," he said, "are endeavoring so with the utmost cordiality, the Congregational ministers manifesting the keenest and most independent spirit. This is one of the most cheering of the many encouraging features of my visit. It should not be a happy New Year for the Tories when they consider their brutal work in Ireland. Not for many years has there been such misery as exists today all over our country. People are relied with a hatred that knows no mercy, and at this time, when the hearts of Englishmen are tendered to Ireland's grief, the Tory foes are lamentably friendless with unprecedented severity."

—The Church of the Immaculate Conception, East Fourteenth street, New York, Rev. John Edwards, rector, was consecrated last week, being free from debt, by Archbishop Corrigan, assisted by a number of Prelates and priests. Bishop Loughlin of Curious celebrated the Mass, and Bishop Mertsand of Rochester delivered the sermon.

The latest news from Alaska states that Frank Fuller, the murderer of Archbishop Seghers has been found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to ten years imprisonment on McNeil's Island and to pay a fine of $1,000. Some of the jury were of the opinion that Fuller was crazy when he committed the inhuman crime, hence his escape from the gallows.

American Jubilee Offerings to Ireland Vindicated by English the Holy Father.

The congratulatory letter of the whole Hierarchy of the United States to the Sovereign Pontiff, which we print this week was presented to the Pope personally by the Right Rev. Rector of the North American College. It was written in Latin and engrossed in a beautiful and artistic manner by three of the Christian Brothers at St. Joseph's Academy, Baltimore. The title, "Illustrissimo Pontifice," was in Gothic, with ornamentation in illuminated colors, at the top of the cover, was a magnificent representation of the tiara. To the left of the title was a pontifical cross; and to the right was the Pope's triple cross, all of which, including the title itself, raised from the surface and united to seem to resemble gold stamp. The body of the letter was in American round hand, after the Spencerian style. The whole was surrounded by a figurative framework also raised from the surface of the paper, consisting of a harmonious combination of flowers, the colors so delicately blended as to give the most exquisite effect. The dimensions of the engrossed letter were thirteen by eighteen inches. The name of the several members of the American hierarchy were on a printed page, accompanying the Address proper.

Mgr. O'Connell likewise presented an address of the Cardinal Archbishop, clergy, and faithful of the Diocese of Baltimore, together with 31,364 Irish Jubilee offerings from that Sees; the offerings of the Diocese of Sacramento, California, a Jubilee offering from the Sisters of the Joseph of Cluny, consisting of a purse, an address, in their own tongue, but in Latin characters, with an English translation, from the Diocese of Dunedin of the Diocese of Nelson, the number some 3,000 Lira part of an amount and formerly presented to Leo XIII., who had never to have shed the blood of a man." The address is from the children of Joseph, the mission of the Holy Redeemer, taught by the Christian Brothers, with three Sisters of Mercy, and founded in 1883, the members some 150 baptized Indians, who expressed in the address their fellowship to those of the Holy Faith, and entreat the "Christ Spirit" to shower on them divine blessings. The "Irish Club," under whose Protectorate they have learned the truths of the faith which will lead them to that celestial country where the "Pale Faces and the Red Skins will form but one family, and termination in employing the Holy Father to bless the Neophytes of Mississippi."

The Pope was much interested in this address, strive to pronounce the word "Choctaw," and desired Mgr. O'Connell to see that a French translation be made, to enable him to read the sentiments of filial devotion of his Indian children, to whom he sent a heartfelt Apostolic Benediction. His Holiness further charged the Rector to convey to the American Episcopacy the story of faithful of Baltimore and of Sacramento, his thanks and blessing, as also to the other dioceses who have contributed, since the special Benediction for the enterprise of Right Rev. P. Manogue, Bishop of the New Island, succeeded in the Holy See, the rejoicing Pontiff. The Tabernacle Society of Notre Dame, Philadelphia, affiliated to the Congregation of Notre Dame, sent a jubilee offering—$[illegible]—to the Holy Father, and the Sisters of Charity, Philadelphia, sent a purse, to be afterwards presented to such remote parts of the Pope may select. The Tabernacle Society of New York, likewise duly affiliated to the centre in Rome, sent a similar offering in money, and the Confraternity of the Holy Family, economically erected in the city of New York, sent a similar offering of communions, prayers, good works, &c., in honor of the Papal Jubilee.

Ireland's Present Attitude.

In a letter written a couple of weeks ago Monsignor Bonomelli (Bishop) thus sums up the present attitude of Ireland in the Tory question—the question of the Tory power—that wronged and injured land:

It is not, says Mgr. Bonomelli, a question of patient endurance, as against a ferocious dragon armed with a scaly Corsican act, backed by a judiciary and a gaoler, and a spy, the docile instruments of the Executive, and supported in every contingent measure by the British army and the Royal Irish Constabulary.

It is hard, in the light of more human wisdom, to see Ireland's Christian, but also in the pitiless reactionaries of the Salisbury and Balfour Ministry, can escape political sin. Such is the terrible struggle for mere existence which is going on in my poor native land, as I am preparing to leave it for ever, and for him, my dear friend, I write. My hope is in the unconquerable spirit of the people, which prompts to a quiet but resolute and hopefulness as such act in the drama of the national resistance displays new depths of suffering and deeper and what affords the hope is ground so firm as that the heart of this small island is a Christian heart, rich in the purest virtues of a nature made beautiful by God and had loved by the fidelity of centuries.

I trust also to the awakened public opinion of the civilized world. Freedom, to the three kingdoms, was by the sword of William and his Norman, is pulling forth its last supreme effort to struggle in Ireland the enthusiasm of Celtic nationality. It is well that in this last battle all the wrong done, the injustice, the cruelty, the level of by should be on the side of the foulest land of Christendom, governed by Salisbury and his worthy nephew. Were these men and their Unionists, who is the personification of blind, merciless landlord greed, to succeed in uprooting and crushing out all resistance, and in exterminating from the face of Ireland the very last remnant of her Celtic population, their victory would be more most terrible defeat, the final downfall of that feudal system which has been the bane of the social freedom implanted and nurtured by Europe by Christianity.

But Salisbury and Balfour can gather from the brave manifestations of popular opinion which daily swell louder and more angry around Dunning street and Bucking ham Palace that the hour is nearly at hand against them in London and all over England. This means the victory of Irish nationality.

Twenty years, as they linger finally in this dear land of my forefathers, there is, then, a light which breaks vividly over the eastern hills, and which gives the echo of the closer horse soil.

Bonomelli Cortese tend to remark that the history of civilization is the history of Christianity, and the history of Christianity is the history of the Catholic Church, and the history of the Catholic Church is the history of the Pontiffs, the greatest benefactors and rulers of the Christian world.

THE AMERICAN PRELATES

Congratulatory Letter to the Holy Father.

The letter of the Bishops of the United States to the Holy Father breathes a spirit of loyal and loyalty worthy of the last age of the faith, which cannot fail to be acceptable to Pius IX. It was presented to Leo XIII. on Friday last. The following is a literal translation of this important document:

Most Holy Father—As the devotion of a Christian people, the dignity of your office and the importance of the deeds done by you certainly demand, the whole world now congratulates you on the fifteenth joyful and glorious anniversary of that day whereon you received the Christian priesthood. Nor have your years been shipped since you shed robed yourself wholly in God, and wholly devoted yourself to service in performing the sacred rites in the temple and in fortifying Divine worship.

Nor have you ever been found wanting in the fulfillment of your duty or your promise. All are aware how carefully were you educated to the service of the altar when you became a boy, and how, in your early years, you grew virtuous. Then, when you were ordained priest, you shone more, nothing was nearer your heart than the glory of God and the salvation of souls, and nothing so tried and filled you with joy as to be employed in the sacred ministry. Thus shortly the prudent mind of your Holiness, ripened by the ripe years, and by the profound knowledge of the Holy Scriptures and of the Sacred Canons, was soon called to the Episcopal dignity, and was so well and happily exercise your office, that you seemed to be born for the Episcopacy. Nor, indeed, your humility deterred you from the Episcopal dignity, your zeal and your learning, which you had so well and happily exercised in the Episcopal office, you were called to the Sacred College, and by the Pontiff Pius IX. of blessed memory, you were made the right hand of the Pontiff, and the counsellor, and the teacher of the Church, and the defender of the Holy Faith, and the guardian

Farm and Home.

It Pays to Think.

A striking instance of the extent to which labor saving machinery is carried nowadays, says the Industrial Journal, is shown in the tin-can industry. Everybody knows that the cans are manufactured by machinery. One of the machines used in the process solders the longitudinal seams of the can at the rate of fifty a minute, the cans rushing along in a continuous stream. You, of course, a drop or two of solder is left on the can. The drop on the outside can be easily cleaned away, but it is not so easy to scrape the drop left on the inside. It wouldn't do, of course, to retard the speed of the wheel—better waste the drop, it is only a little, sapphow, and to 99 men in 100 it would not seem worth a minute's attention. The hundredth man worked for a firm using one of these machines, and he set about devising an ingenious arrangement for spinning inside of the can, thereby saving that drop of solder and leaving none to come in contact with the contents of the can. He was encouraged by his employer to patent his invention, did so, and has already received several thousand dollars in royalties for its use. As the machine solders 20,000 cans a day, the solder saved by his invention amounted to $15 a day. It pays to think as you work.

Drink to Make You Work.

"Oh, I only 'drink to make me work,' said a young man. To which an old man replied: "That's right; drink just to make you work! Listen to me a moment, and I'll tell you something that may do you good."

"I was once a prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife and two as fine lads as ever the sun shone on. We had a comfortable home and lived happily together. Those two lads I have laid in drunkards' graves. My wife died broken-hearted and she now lies by her two sons. I am nearly two years of age. Had it not been for drink I might now have been an independent gentleman; but I need to drink to make me work, and mark, it makes me work now. At twenty years of age I am obliged to work for my daily bread. Yes; drink! and it will make you work."

It is Well to Remember.

That shader, like mud, dries and falls off.

That he who gathers roses must not fear thorns.

That to wait and be patient soothes many a pang.

That all are not princes who ride with the emperor.

That correction is good when administered in season.

That it takes a great deal of grass to be able to bear praise.

That you will never have a friend if you must have one without failings.

That to have what we want is riches, but to be able to do without it is power.

That there is no limit to the use of a thick, a sour map not make a foot of himself.

That the cross of pleasure seldom lasts long enough to adorn the brow of those who pluck them.

That a man who cannot mind his own business is not to be trusted with the business of others.

The Bond of Union.

A man unfamiliar with the blacksmith's art spent several hours in vainly trying to unite two bars of iron by hammering them on an anvil. At last he did what he should have done at first: he placed them in the fire until they were glowing with white heat. Then a few blows united them, and that so firmly that they could not be parted. And so it is with a family. Let its members be without love for one another, and they will be only so many isolated units, cold and careless of one another's welfare and happiness. But let the fire of love be laid upon them, and they will soon discover that they are of one mind and of one heart.

A Ten-acre Orchard.

Last week we had an item about an eight-acre orchard which united the crame $6,500. C. B. King, of San Leandro, has ten acres planted to plums, cherries, prunes and one acre of pears that has for three years paid netted him $900 an acre, or just $2000 net each year. King paid for the plum in three years, besides making a living on it. The higher-priced pears netted was the year before Mr. King purchased it, when it cleared just $2,700. Let San Benito or any other county give us another walnut to smoke.—Haywards Journal.

Heroism of the Country Doctor.

There is no finer and nobler work to which a man who has the requisite qualification of intense human sympathy can devote himself, that the work of a physician in general practice.

Curtyle said he honored but two men, but I should place before either of the two whom he names the country doctor, ready and willing to be called up at the dead of a stormy morning, to harness, perhaps, with his own hands, the old gray—who, forsooth, lately for him, knows those dark roads and unsaveys better than he does—that he may drive across the country a dozen miles for the relief of some old woman who has not a penny to pay him any recompense.

I am one of those people who believe that this sort of thing came in with the Christian religion and is a visible expression of what the Christian religion is for; and there are no houses which I think the great for the man who is willing to enlist in that duty.—Dr. Hale, in the Forum.

Things Worth Knowing.

To clean zinc use strong vinegar.

Popcorn is good for nausea and cranberry for malaria.

Eating onions and horseradish is claimed to relieve dyspeptic swellings.

The addition of a few drops of oil of almonds will keep ink from becoming moldy.

A paste of plaster of paris and water will fasten the brass cover to an ink stand.

For neuralgia try a flannel strung out of hot water and sprinkled thickly with black pepper.

A cloth wrung out of cold water and wound around the neck is said to be good for a sore throat.

The common hard, red pimples on the face may be cured by frequent bathing of the face in salt water.

Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold water; it will give relief almost instantly.

Lime water is good for chilblains. Use strong and hot. A saturated solution of alum in water, is also a remedy.

The white of an egg beaten and rubbed into the head three or four times a week is claimed will prevent the hair from falling out.

For ingrowing toenails one equal parts of mutton tallow, castile soap and lime sugar made into a salve. Apply until the swelling is down, then trim the nail in the center.

Family Fun.

Short Smiles.

Charley Smith, a New Yorker, visits a Boston restaurant with a friend.

Friend—It is the habit here, dear boy, to name some dish on the bill of fare after the great. I told the chef you were coming in dine. Waiter, the mous.

Waiter (to mouse, and friend peruses it. C. Smith—Well, have they got my name right?

Friend—Yes. Calf's brain poulette a la Charley Smith.

—

"Say, doctor, can'you bleach this nose of mine in some way?" asked old Bibbler.

"It is possible," replied the doctor, "but I think you will find it better to let nature take her course."

"But I'd be left sure if I do," returned old Bibbler. "You see I'm just received the nomination on the Prohibition ticket."

—

Young Lady (on the beach)—How lovely the sea foam is, Count Spaghetti!

Italian Count (forgetting himself)—Very tasty. It ees six par excellence for dandruff.

—

"How is Brown getting on, doctor, any better?"

"Oh, Brown has been up and about for two weeks."

"Then you don't go to see him any more?"

"Don't I! I want to his office three times yesterday, to see him and I'm on my way there now."

—

"My young friend," he said gravely, "do you know what prohibition means?"

"Yes, sir," replied the friend, who seem ed to be a person of intelligence; "it means that a man drinks far more as much as he ought to use drink."

—

Wife (to late husband)—What time is it, John?

Husband (consulting his watch unnatural ly)—One o'clock, Benedict's time.

Wife (repeatedly)—No it was, John. That's bachelor time. Benedict's time is not later than nine o'clock.

—

"Conductor," said a passenger on a Southern railroad, "my hat has blown out of the window."

"How long ago."

"About ten minutes."

"Well," said the conductor, pulling the rope, "I'll back up for it, but it's lucky for you you spoke in time."

—

"Come up to the house, Dumley," said Robinson, "and take dinner with me."

"Will Mrs. Robinson expect me?"

"No, that's just the beauty of it. Her mother is paying us a long visit, and I want to make the old lady mad."

—

Gilbody—Sad affair over at Jones'.

Gus De Smith—What's the matter?

G.—One of the twins has died.

Gus De S.—That is an affliction.

G.—Yes, and the worst of it is the people don't know which is dead, they look so much alike.

—

The keeper gave the lion a large piece of meat.

Poet—Does he get that often?

Keeper—He gets it regularly twice a day.

Poet (with clasped hands)—What a boon it would be if I could only get a position as lion here.

Pleasant Dreams.

"It isn't my body I'd put to sleep in this room," said old Mr. Jenkins to the landlord and extremely nervous young relative who was spending his first night in B——, at her house.

"This here room is full of sacred associations to me, sir," he went on. "My first husband died on that bed with his head on them ere pillers, and poor Mr. Jenkins died setin' right in that very chair there in the corner. Sometimes when I come into the room in the dark I think I see him setin' there still.

"My own father died layin' right on that lounge under that winder. Poor pa! He was a Spiritualist, and he allus said he'd appear in this room again after he died; and sometimes I'm foolish enough to look for him. If you should see anything of him tonight, you'd better not tell me, for it'd be a sign to me that thers was something in Spiritualism, and I'd hate to think it is.

"My son by my first man fell dead of heart disease right where you stand. He was a doctor, and there's two whole skeletons in the closet that belonged to him and half a dozen skulls in that lower drawer."

"Well, good-night, and pleasant dreams."

An Arrectic Customer.

"Stranger, I want to leave my dog in this an office till the boat starts. I'm afraid somebody will steal him."

"You can't do it," cried the clerk; "take him out."

"Well, stranger, this is cruel; but you're both dispositioned alike, and he is kinder company for you."

"Take him out," roared the clerk.

"Well, stranger, I don't think you're honest, and you want watching; here, Hero, go," he said to the dog, "sit down here and watch that fellow sharp," and turning on his heel, he said, "If he kim out stranger, if his resolutioners." The dog lay there till the boat started, watching and growling at every movement of the clerk, who gave him the better half of his office.

A New Method With the Sick.

"Doctor, do you think I shall recover?"

"I don't think anything about it; I know it."

And pulling a paper out of his pocket he hands it to his patient.

"Here are the statistics relative to your case. You see that one out of every hundred is cured.

"Well!" asks the sick man nearly frightened to death at this announcement.

"Well, your's the hundredth! Fortunately, the other ninety-nine I lost.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, painful eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and over a year had to running sores on my neck. Took five bottles Hood's Sarsaparilla, and cured." C. F. LOWELL, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

is one of the most disagreeable diseases caused by impure blood. It is positively cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier.

William Sipes, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by healing injuries. At times his limbs would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without any. Finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the soles of his feet. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. Hutchinson, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIAMOND DYES

COLOR EVERYTHING.

Unequalled for Silk, Wool, Cotton and all Fabrics and Fancywoods. Brilliant, Durable and Economical. Any one can use them.

32 COLORS—10 CENTS EACH.

Remember, these are the only Pure, Harmless and Unadulterated Dyes.

Beware of other Dyes, because often Poisonous, Adulterated, Weak and Worthless.

We warrant their Dyes to color more goods, more quickly, more perfectly, and more durably than any other Dyes. Sample dyed free.

THE DIAMOND PAINTS, GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE and COPPER for gilding Picture Frames, Mouldings, Lamps, Chandeliers, and for all kinds of ornamental work. Gold Paint, Gold Size, Gold Leaf, and Gilders' Tools. Sample of Paint, with a copy of our Gilders' Guide and Decorator's Assistant, sent on receipt of 25 cents. Address DIAMOND DYE CO., Burlington, Vt.

5% INTEREST.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

IN THE SECURITIES OF

5-IMP. AUST. 100-FLORIN GOVERNMENT BOND.

ISSUED OF 1867,

Wednesday, the 1st of FEBRUARY

These bonds are shares in an Austrian Government loan, and are secured by the Imperial Treasury and redeemed at one right and hold bond is redeemed at the rate of 100 florins ($47.00) for each share, or 5% on the whole sum by drawings to be repeated in future ranging from 120 florins to 50,000 florins among the holders of the shares redeemed at each drawing. The bonds also bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable each semi-annually. Every bond is entitled to

Two Drawings Annually,

Until such and every bond is redeemed with a larger or smaller premium, according to the number of the following premium scale, as follows:

NO BLANKS.
Premiums.		Florins.	Florins.
1	"	100,000	100,000
1	"	50,000	50,000
1	"	20,000	20,000
2	"	8,000	16,000
20	"	1,000	20,000
100	"	200	20,000
1,000	"	100	100,000
Together, 1,025 premiums, amounting to			776,000 florins

Are the next redemption takes place on the

FIRST OF FEBRUARY,

And every bond bought of us ON OR BEFORE THE 1ST OF FEBRUARY, UNTIL 9 O'CLOCK P. M., is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn on that day, and will be in the interest that the bond bears.

One dollar enters each in Reservation Lottery, in consideration of which we will secure one of these bonds for the lowest price. Bonds payable in monthly instalments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 160 Fulton St., cor. B'way, New York City.

Established in 1864.

N. B.—In writing to advertisers please mention MONITOR.

Tutt's Pills

This popular remedy never fails to cure Dyspepsia, Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness

And all diseases arising from a Torpid Liver and Bad Digestion.

The natural result is good appetite and solid flesh. Dose small; elegantly sugar coated and easy to swallow.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 747.

ALWAYS TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL Bills of Fare, Bands, Tumblers, Decanters, Bowls, Claret, Clarendons, and Martini Goblets for private families and hotels. Also, good reliable Pure Malt Whiskey, not to charge to employers. Submit trifling sample for sales at 608 Clay street.

INFORMATION WANTED.

The heart-broken sister of Daniel Quinn wants to find her brother, who is supposed to be in the State or in Oregon. When she last saw him he was in Bradford, Yorkshire, Eng. He was a stone mason by trade, and must be now about 50 years of age; and our record of his Montreal residence anything about him, will receive the prayers of a broken-hearted sister by addressing

WISHFUL QUINN,

Care of Rev. Father Hurest, Hyde Park, Ill.

DOZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION

Imparts a fascinating loveliness to the face. Removes Pimples, Freckles, Tan, Sunburn and Roughness, and renders the skin soft and smooth. Recommended for all the purposes for which it is used. Ladies who have once used it will use no other. Sold by all Druggists throughout the United States and Canada.

POWDER.

D. ENCARINI, 911 Mission St., San Francisco, Cal.

Manufacturer and Importer of

RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC.

Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc.

THE ONLY COMPLETE COLLECTION ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Catalogues sent free on application.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF PRICE'S Famous California-Made CARVERS.

Six Cow Horn and Bone Handles, Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

Bone Handles, Per Set, per pair, $1.00
Cow Horn Handles, Per Set, per pair, 1.50
Finest Silver Plated, Per Set, per pair, 2.00
Ivory Handles, Per Set, per pair, 2.50
Ivory Handles, Silver Mounted, Per Set, per pair, 3.00

Ask your Jeweler for them, and if he does not keep them, send to us, and we will send them, charges paid, on receipt of price.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 313 Kearny St.

RAILROADS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC RAILROAD

"THE OCEAN'S SHORE ROUTE"

COMMENCING SUNDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1889, Trains will leave Tiburon (Connecting with Trains leaving Sansome and Tiburon Ferries foot of Market Street, Wharf, as follows:

Leave S. F.	Arrive	Stations	Arrive S. F.
8:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.	Petaluma and Santa Rosa.	6:10 P. M.
3:30 P. M.	6:05 P. M.		10:40 A. M.
4:00 P. M.	8:35 P. M.	Fulton, Windsor, Healdsburg, Lytton, Geyserville, Cloverdale.	8:10 A. M.
8:00 A. M.	10:35 A. M.	Cloverdale.	6:10 P. M.

Stages connect at Santa Rosa for White Sulphur Springs, Mark West Springs, Fulton, Furlong's, Lytton Springs, Geyserville, Soda Springs, Lakeport, Bartlett Springs, Harbison Springs, Blue Lakes, Ukiah, Vichy Springs, Navarro River, Mendocino City and the Geysers.

EXCURSION TICKETS from Saturdays to Monday, to Petaluma, $1.75; to Santa Rosa, $2; to Healdsburg $3; to Cloverdale, $4.

EXCURSION TICKETS good for Sundays only, to Petaluma, $1.50; to Santa Rosa $2; to Healdsburg $3; to Cloverdale, $4; to Geyserville $3.50.

From San Francisco to Point Tiburon and San Rafael, Week Days—7:00 A.M., 8:00 A.M., 11:00 A.M., 3:00 P.M., 4:15 P.M.; Sundays, 9:00 A.M., 9:30 A.M., 11:00 A.M., 3:00 P.M., 5:00 P.M.

To San Francisco from San Rafael—Week Days: 6:05 A.M., 7:40 A.M., 10:15 A.M., 2:45 P.M., 4:20 P.M., 5:50 P.M.; Sundays, 8:40 A.M., 9:10 A.M., 10:40 A.M., 2:40 P.M., 4:40 P.M., 5:40 P.M.

H. C. WHITING, General Superintendent. PETER J. MCGLYNN, Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agt.

Ticket Office at Ferry, 121 Montgomery street, cor. Market, San Francisco.

SONOMA VALLEY RAILROAD

CUTTING'S JAMES R. DOHANEY'S LEAVES San Francisco and connects with trains at Sonoma Station as follows:

4.00 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) from Washington street, Oakland, foot of Broadway, at 3 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) from Market street wharf, at 3 P. M. Arrives in San Francisco at 9 A. M.

SUNDAY EXCURSIONS.

8.15 A. M. Sundays only, from Washington street, Oakland, foot of Broadway. Leave Sonoma Station and wharf points. Returning, arrives in San Francisco at 8 P. M. Fare for the round trip, $1 for all points.

H. C. WHITING, General Superintendent. PETER J. MCGLYNN, Gen. Pass. & Ticket Agt.

Tickets at Ferry, 121 Montgomery street, and N. P. Office Montgomery street.

QUICK TIME AND LOW RATES

To Eastern and European Cities

via the Great Trans-continental All-rail Route

OF THE—

SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY.

[Pacific System.

Daily Express and Baggage Trains make prompt connections with the several Railway lines in the East, connecting at

New York & New Orleans

with the several Steamer Lines

TO ALL EUROPEAN PORTS.

PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS attached to Overland Express Trains.

THIRD-CLASS SLEEPING CARS are run daily with Overland Express Trains.

No additional charge for Berths in Third class Cars.

Emigrants should see that their tickets read over Southern Pacific Railroad, and take no other.

For rates, time-tables, and any other information, address

A. N. TOWNE, General Manager. T. H. GOODMAN, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Agt.

No. 1 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

M'CORMICK BROS.,

Book and Job Printers,

410 Sansome St., 410

WESTERN HOTEL,

212-14 Broadway Street.

JOHN HIGGINS, : : Proprietor

(Late Broadway Hotel.)

ARCHITECTS.

JOHN J. CLARK, ARCHITECT

Room 70, St. Ann's Building,

Cor. Market & Powell Sts., San Francisco

SIGN INSTRUMENTS.

PIANOS

GAINED 1st PREMIUM for greatest variety of the best instruments at the Mechanics' Institute Fair, 1869, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, for superior excellence, elegance of design, and superb finish, combined with the best and most reliable instruments. Warerooms, 308 Post street, San Francisco. Large illustrated catalogue mailed free. Illustrated catalogue mailed free. Throughout the Pacific Coast there are hundreds of these pianos now in use, and they are the favorite instrument wherever they are known. Their superiority is acknowledged by all who have purchased them, and they are recognized as the leading piano of the Pacific Coast. In consequence of our extensive manufacturing facilities we are enabled to offer our pianos at lower prices than any other first-class piano manufactory in the United States. Our pianos are warranted for five years, and we allow the full value of the instrument rented to be applied to the purchase-money if the instrument rented is purchased at any time within the period of three months from the date of the commencement of the rent. Our pianos are fitted with our patent improved metallic bridge, which is the most important improvement in pianos for the last 50 years

THE POPE'S JUBILEE.

How the Day was Celebrated in Eastern Cities

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.)

St. Paul's (Minn.) Jan. 1.—The Cathedral was packed to the doors, to-day, the occasion being the celebration of the Pope's jubilee.

A solemn Mass, with orchestral accompaniment, was celebrated by the pastor, the Rev. John Stanley. Bishop Ireland delivered a eulogy of Leo XIII, which was attentively listened to.

There were special sermons and eulogies of the Pope in all the other churches of the diocese to-day, by order of the Bishop.

Philadelphia, Jan. 1.—The golden Jubilee of Pope Leo XIII was celebrated with elaborate ceremonies in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul in this city to-day.

Indianapolis, January 1.—The Catholics of this (Archdiocese) diocese celebrated the golden Jubilee of Pope Leo XIII here to-day. Several addresses were made. Among the speakers was Bishop Chatard, who has just returned from a visit to Rome.

His remarks were confined almost entirely to the present temporal condition of the Pope, who, he said, was practically a prisoner of the Italian Government. The attitude of that Government is such toward the Holy See that even the Vatican is not free from its spies who report every word and act of Pontiff.

New York, January 1.—The Jubilee of Pope Leo XIII was celebrated in all the churches of this city with characteristic and imposing ceremonies.

Chief among the churches notable for the splendor of the ceremonies was St. Patrick's Cathedral, on Fifth avenue. The finest music was heard and several thousands knelt praising God for His gifts to the Supreme Pontiff.

THE A. O. H.

Their Beautiful Gift to Pope Leo XIII.

The offering of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to Pope Leo XIII, for his Golden Jubilee consists of a large framed silver plaque with an etched inscription and symbols of ancient Irish history. Following is the inscription beneath the Papal cross and crown:—

"Our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, 1877 1887, fifty years a priest. Golden Jubilee Leo. Offering of your devoted children of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of America. The children of St. Patrick will always be found loyal and devoted to the See of Peter. This offering but feebly expresses the love and veneration of the A. O. H., organized under the patronage of St. Patrick, for the present venerable occupant of that illustrious chair. May God prolong your days.

"M. F. Whilbere, National Delegate; T. H. McNalls, National Secretary; Patrick H. Byrne, National Treasurer."

Around the inscription and symbols are wreaths of shamrock. At the top are the American flag with the legend "E Pluribus Unum," and the Irish flag with "Erin Go Bragh." The plaque is fringed with green plush, and is in an elaborately carved frame of frame oak, three and a half feet square. The carving on the top includes representations of a harp and ancient Irish weapons, and on the bottom figures of two well fashioned men-at-arms, representing Ireland, including the Papal taxes, the keys of St. Peter and the other ecclesiastical emblems, and on the other side representations suggestive of Irish antiquity.

THE IRISH LAND WAR.

Glorious Victory for the Tenantry of Gweedore.

Gweedore was the biggest triumph the "Plan of Campaign" has yet achieved—a glorious victory for the tenantry. A little while ago we was so resolute as Captain Smith in the enforcement of Lord Salisbury's famous policy of pay or quit. His exactions reached to the magnitude of a campaign. For weeks the police and sabbiny marched and countermarched in that wild and desolate region, and scenes of misery were witnessed, and acts of brutality committed that recall the worst days exactly parallel. The English power was prostituted. Imperial treasure lavished like water in the effort to drive a hundred and thirty starving families from their homes. A tithe of the same spent on their extermination would have sufficed to bring comfort to the poverty stricken district. Behold the end of it all. The exterminator himself, in whose aid so much was invoked, under the strong pressure of the "Plan of Campaign," has gone on his knees, confessed the impotent handcuffs and implored the forgiveness and forbearance of his persecuted tenantry.

Captain Hill has been compelled to give, in the end, far more liberal concessions than were demanded in the beginning. Every one of the hundred odd tenants came back into his home. An all-round reduction of sixty per cent. is granted out of the rents, and Captain Hill has to pay the legal piper to the tune of £900 for his eviction diversion. It strikes us that the Irish and western Government looks remarkably foolish in the face of this outcome. The vast sums of public money might have just as well been thrown into the deep sea. The costly service of military and police for which the public pays might have been just as usefully and far more innocently employed upon the troubled. Of course, we will have the usual sneering assertion that the right of property (meaning the landlord's rack rents) must be preserved. Quite the contrary. The rack rester is far worse off at the end of the struggle than before. The public have a natural objection to pay the costs of these futile battles of Cretinism against the Plan of Campaign. Tenants and landlords—especially landlords—would have been better off if they had been permitted to settle their little difference between themselves.

The New President of France.

By far the youngest of the four Presidents that the French Republic has had during the sixteen years of its existence, is M. Carnot. The first President, Thiers, was 74 years of age when elected in 1871, and in his 77th year when he resigned his office. McMahon was over 65 when he became President in 1873, and nearly seventy when his Presidency ended. Grévy was 64 when elected President in 1877, and 74 when he resigned a fortnight ago. But Carnot was born as late as 1837, and consequently only 50 years old when elected to the office of President. M. Carnot is one of the three comparatively young men among the rulers of the powers of Europe. Queen Victoria is in the sixty-ninth year of her age, the Kaiser William is in his ninety first year, Francis Joseph is in his fifty-eighth year, Christian IX. is in the verge of seventy, and Leopold II is close to fifty-three. The two younger rulers besides M. Carnot are Alexander III., who is forty-two, and Humbert IV., who is forty-three. Thus President Carnot of the French Republic is the youngest of the chief rulers of Europe, and is also younger by a half year than President Cleveland.

—P. J. Hogan, the Indefatigable agent for the Guardian Fire and Life Insurance Co. of London, England, spares no effort to keep his company at the front of the list of fire and life companies; he is well known, here and everywhere through the civil and social world. The Company's annual statement appears in another column.

POLITICAL PARSONS.

Pastoral Politics Preached from Protestant Pulpits.

Now that the political contest in Boston is over, it may be pertinent to ask what did the Republican party gain by introducing the race and religious question into municipal politics?

That they did so deliberately and with malice, aforethought do intelligent persons can doubt. More than half a year ago some citizen pamphlets were scattered broadcast calling upon the "Anglo-Saxon Protestants" to remember and unite for the overthrow of the "Papists." The Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks, prominent in Jesus was made the pretext for carrying out that programme. Later a Republican politician, prominent as a political "worker," though sufficiently imaginative every other way, succeeded in committing the Charitable Mechanic Association to a contemptible piece of prevarication against Mayor O'Brien, avowedly because the latter was a Catholic and an Irishman. The perpetrator of this cowardly insult was never rebuked or repudiated by his party.

For weeks before the election many of the Protestant pulpits of the city rang with the denunciations of the Mayor and his party and skilful appeals to the spirit of sectarian hate. A blackguard broadsheet was circulated by the thousand among the voters of the city, and a blackguard parson was imported from New York and engaged to pour forth obscene libels against the Catholics. Sunday after Sunday Democratic candidates were weighed, not by their ability or their honesty, but by their race and creed. We know of a case in which a gentleman, whose name had been proposed for the Common Council was secretly denounced as "a Jesuit priest in disguise," and this by his own neighbors who knew him to be a worthy citizen, native-born, as was his father before him, a resident of Boston from his birth, and as a husband and father most likely to be taken by any but the most sordid temptation, or equally, a priest. Yet, not one thousand knelt praising God for His gifts to the Supreme Pontiff.

THE A. O. H.

Their Beautiful Gift to Pope Leo XIII.

The offering of the Ancient Order of Hibernians to Pope Leo XIII, for his Golden Jubilee consists of a large framed silver plaque with an etched inscription and symbols of ancient Irish history. Following is the inscription beneath the Papal cross and crown:—

"Our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, 1877 1887, fifty years a priest. Golden Jubilee Leo. Offering of your devoted children of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of America. The children of St. Patrick will always be found loyal and devoted to the See of Peter. This offering but feebly expresses the love and veneration of the A. O. H., organized under the patronage of St. Patrick, for the present venerable occupant of that illustrious chair. May God prolong your days.

"M. F. Whilbere, National Delegate; T. H. McNalls, National Secretary; Patrick H. Byrne, National Treasurer."

Around the inscription and symbols are wreaths of shamrock. At the top are the American flag with the legend "E Pluribus Unum," and the Irish flag with "Erin Go Bragh." The plaque is fringed with green plush, and is in an elaborately carved frame of frame oak, three and a half feet square. The carving on the top includes representations of a harp and ancient Irish weapons, and on the bottom figures of two well fashioned men-at-arms, representing Ireland, including the Papal taxes, the keys of St. Peter and the other ecclesiastical emblems, and on the other side representations suggestive of Irish antiquity.

THE IRISH LAND WAR.

Glorious Victory for the Tenantry of Gweedore.

Gweedore was the biggest triumph the "Plan of Campaign" has yet achieved—a glorious victory for the tenantry. A little while ago we was so resolute as Captain Smith in the enforcement of Lord Salisbury's famous policy of pay or quit. His exactions reached to the magnitude of a campaign. For weeks the police and sabbiny marched and countermarched in that wild and desolate region, and scenes of misery were witnessed, and acts of brutality committed that recall the worst days exactly parallel. The English power was prostituted. Imperial treasure lavished like water in the effort to drive a hundred and thirty starving families from their homes. A tithe of the same spent on their extermination would have sufficed to bring comfort to the poverty stricken district. Behold the end of it all. The exterminator himself, in whose aid so much was invoked, under the strong pressure of the "Plan of Campaign," has gone on his knees, confessed the impotent handcuffs and implored the forgiveness and forbearance of his persecuted tenantry.

Captain Hill has been compelled to give, in the end, far more liberal concessions than were demanded in the beginning. Every one of the hundred odd tenants came back into his home. An all-round reduction of sixty per cent. is granted out of the rents, and Captain Hill has to pay the legal piper to the tune of £900 for his eviction diversion. It strikes us that the Irish and western Government looks remarkably foolish in the face of this outcome. The vast sums of public money might have just as well been thrown into the deep sea. The costly service of military and police for which the public pays might have been just as usefully and far more innocently employed upon the troubled. Of course, we will have the usual sneering assertion that the right of property (meaning the landlord's rack rents) must be preserved. Quite the contrary. The rack rester is far worse off at the end of the struggle than before. The public have a natural objection to pay the costs of these futile battles of Cretinism against the Plan of Campaign. Tenants and landlords—especially landlords—would have been better off if they had been permitted to settle their little difference between themselves.

The New President of France.

By far the youngest of the four Presidents that the French Republic has had during the sixteen years of its existence, is M. Carnot. The first President, Thiers, was 74 years of age when elected in 1871, and in his 77th year when he resigned his office. McMahon was over 65 when he became President in 1873, and nearly seventy when his Presidency ended. Grévy was 64 when elected President in 1877, and 74 when he resigned a fortnight ago. But Carnot was born as late as 1837, and consequently only 50 years old when elected to the office of President. M. Carnot is one of the three comparatively young men among the rulers of the powers of Europe. Queen Victoria is in the sixty-ninth year of her age, the Kaiser William is in his ninety first year, Francis Joseph is in his fifty-eighth year, Christian IX. is in the verge of seventy, and Leopold II is close to fifty-three. The two younger rulers besides M. Carnot are Alexander III., who is forty-two, and Humbert IV., who is forty-three. Thus President Carnot of the French Republic is the youngest of the chief rulers of Europe, and is also younger by a half year than President Cleveland.

—P. J. Hogan, the Indefatigable agent for the Guardian Fire and Life Insurance Co. of London, England, spares no effort to keep his company at the front of the list of fire and life companies; he is well known, here and everywhere through the civil and social world. The Company's annual statement appears in another column.

THE WEEK'S NEWS —FROM— IRELAND

IRISH NEWS BY MAIL.

Armagh. A very successful meeting on the sequence of the Armagh Catholic Literary Association, was held recently. Mr. Shields presided, and a number of elocutionary selections were given through by the well known elocutionist, Mr. Bean Campbell. Mr. H. T. Hanlon, secretary, read the annual report of the Association for the year. It showed that the sums were laid out on the external which adorns the Cathedral at Armagh. The obsequies of the deceased were celebrated with great impressiveness, no less than nine Bishops and a great number of priests from all parts of the country taking part in the solemn rites. The high return to which the last Archbishop was held by all classes was shown in a striking manner in his interment by the same in of the Protestant Bishop of Armagh, Dr Knox, and a number of Protestant and Presbyterian clergymen. Among the pastors of the Protestant Church who were present at the Catholic ceremony was laid to rest in the external which adorns the Cathedral at Armagh. The obsequies of the deceased were celebrated with great impressiveness, no less than nine Bishops and a great number of priests from all parts of the country taking part in the solemn rites. The high return to which the last Archbishop was held by all classes was shown in a striking manner in his interment by the same in of the Protestant Bishop of Armagh, Dr Knox, and a number of Protestant and Presbyterian clergymen. Among the pastors of the Protestant Church who were present at the Catholic ceremony

Belfast. At a very large meeting held in this city, the sum of £1,000 was collected for the Mission Fund, a number of eloquent speeches were made, among the speakers were Bishop Dorrian, Father Kane, Father Lynch, Father Lynch, Father Lynch

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE YEARS OF LONG AGO.

BY AN OLD HAND IN HOBART.

I.

Oh! the old years, the fair years!
The years of the long ago!
When our steps were light,
And our hearts were bright,
With never a care or a thought!
When joy was so short
Without a thought
Of a future rude awaking.

When our hopes shone sung over the hills,
(Ah! they were greater than now they are!)
When we slily searched for the hunter's nest
In the pow-wow's quiling brush;
When we loitered the ditch and will by-grove,
And "followed my leader" straight!
When we laughingly gathered the ripe fruit trees,
In some gloomy orchard's aisle!
They were good days the old days!
When, we will our children sat,
That the years of the present were never so fair
As the years of the long ago!

II.

Ah! the old years! the dear years!
The years of the long ago!
When a mother's smiles
Like a lulu's silve,
Threw into our hearts a magic spell;
When we lingered about
Till school was out,
Or Noah's Ark or Nell!

And, oh! the flowers we used to pick
For our bright eyed yellow girl;
How we wished we could take a look from our hands,
And peal out their hearts in her hair,
Sure, love was love in the time of Adam,
And hearts were honest then;
For all wicked villainous arts we should
Of loving and wedding again.
In the old days, the young days!
(Now, children, don't laugh at),
For the years of the present were never so dear
As the years of the long ago!

III.

Oh! the old years! the dear years!
No longer for us they shine,
And I see only tears
In a waking dream,
As we speak to our children here
Of the dear old days.
And the far off years.
Or the days of some fair New Year,
And they mar ed much as they accite round
Our chair in the cozy firelight,
Why, our voices tremble as we speak,
And the tears roll down our face,
But they do not know that is true to come,
When they are aged and grey,
Like us they will gather their children round
On some New Year's eve, and say:
They were good days—the old days,
(Oh, children, hearts like ye!)
The present years can never be fair
As the years of the long ago!

C. ANTHONY DUFIL.

San Francisco, 1888.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

LOOK DOWN, MY DEAREST MOTHER, LOOK.

Look down, my dearest Mother, look!
Upon thy wandering child;
And bless it to be holy, pure,
O Maiden Mother mild.

I know another year is past,
To bring me nearer home;
But, oh! how sad my heart shall be—
No mother where I roam;

However street the flowery paths,
Or soft the azure skies,
Or mild the fragrant, starry nights,
Or rich Aurora's dyes,

If there dost not look sweetly down,
From thy bright heaven above,
And cheer this sorrow heart of mine
With thy sweet smile and love.

Oh! I know, as St. Bernard has said,
In years long, long ago,
That thou will listen "to the prayers
Of children here below."

O Mother, cheered by kindest hopes,
Before thee do I weep,
To think how thou hast led me on
Through slippery ways and steep.

O Mother, I feel gladdened now,
To trust the stormy calm—
To pass great seas—smiling day,
My past sins to bewail.

Oh! then I'll say naught is so sweet
As Virtue's lovely ways,
While through such passing month is prayer,
My soul to thee I raise.

And then, within thy tender care,
I'll rest the heavenly place,
And there beneath God's radiant throne,
Will live forever more.

JOO J. FAHEY.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE NEW YEAR OF 1888.

O hail, first morning of the year,
Thy enchanted course has a new begun;
Say, wilt thou bring me joy or pain,
Or bear on or the return?

We've seen fair years like thee entwined,
In bright review before us fade,
And all our dreams of heart and mind
Sink down beneath Time's cruel shade.

We count thee now, late opening day,
With gladness heart and claims song,
And trust through all thy varied away
That Right may triumph over Wrong.

A few months, oh, let us make,
As thy bright golden days we hail,
That man's dissensions may not wake,
To mar our lives on Earth's dark vale.

On life's resistless fry train,
With heavy let us wage the strife,
And trust that no step may be vain
Over the thorny paths of life.

Enchantment beneath her hopeful sigh—
Around thy new propitious ray,
That human toil may have stand by
With due reward for every day.

But, oh, how brief one passing year,
Yet each day marks a notch in life,
One may bring hope, the other fear,
Alternate rendering joy or strife.

May friendship's fry, bought New Year, strive
Around the bosom of our care,
And all thy days in radiance shine
Upon the Earth with God's last grace.

Pass on to the eternal year
Fair year; may you be still thy dower,
May Truth, immortal as the soul,
Around above all Falsehood's power.

Then hail to thee, new ushered year;
May all thy days be ever bright,
May none be marred by sigh or tear,
And all dark clouds be silent sight.

JOHN F. MCDONALD.

Virginia City, Nev., January 1, 1888.

A Home Across the Ocean.

Rose Rubilliard in the "Catholic Home Almanac."

The autumn tints were coloring the lofty sides of Shiloh, slowly but surely creeping up the peaks of Sorry mountain. The weather was in a robust crimson, the grey mists were blue, about the tops of the mountains, and the flaming streamers and curled in the mornings of the river at sunset, and even the tragic crows and dens of the raven flying to and walls were in gaudiness harmony with the landscape.

The people still passing in and out among their thresholds, and sharing in their shelter. The little children and their old women, and the young mothers, and girls just blossoming into womanhood, barefooted, scantily but pretty clad as they might be, in the "Sol" the lot of a home to belongs, the rosy cheeks, the fourth-also matured by the tint fire only that her. Flower that had not yet made its appearance in the Bazaar shown Ellen.

In another week, however, all this was to be changed, for every soul in the valley had received notice to quit. Times were hard, and rents which had been gradually rising were hopeless to pay, these circumstances gave the landlord an excellent opportunity for clearing the land of the "tenants," as he so-called them, that exceedingly well.

Dark Dunnell Reilly, a tenant much at his wanting, and the rent was paid, was gazing towards the golden ruin of the sun which was rising from behind the ridge of the opposite hills, and lit the opposite side all the beauty of the velvety brown and purpled the landscape, the shadow of Ellen's cottage, its crimson and carlet creeper streaming down the gable to look from the downside facing upon a cupboard here, and the right of his long straight, and the long and fine hair in the fine and long, the shadow of Dunnell, and the shadow of the sun, the sun, the sun,

THE MONITOR.

TWICE-A-WEEK EDITION.

The MONITOR has the largest circulation of any Religious Paper published on the Pacific Coast.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 11 1885

THANKS FROM ARCHBISHOP BIRORAN.

I beg leave through the MONITOR to express my thanks to the Tablet and Guardian of the purchaser of the site for the Society and other interest in the Cathedral Bazaar. The result will undoubtedly and those who have charge of the building to bring it to a speedy completion.

✠ P. W. BIORAN,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

— The English pilgrims were received by the Pope yesterday.

— Three remarkably good original poems will be found on the second page, and three very interesting original prose articles on the third page of this issue of the MONITOR.

— Mr. Gladstone will stay about for five weeks, spending the time between Naples, Sorrento, and Amalfi. He will return home two days before the meeting of Parliament.

— The Holy Father Sympozes to send twelve million francs (about $2,270,000) to various charitable institutions scattered all over the Christian world.

— The Irish pilgrims to Rome will be received in audience by the Holy Father between the 5th and 10th of next month. It is expected that fully a thousand persons will join in the pilgrimage.

— The N. Y. Freeman's Journal makes a good point in a late issue, which might be profitably studied by the same class on the coast. It says: "Young men who cheerfully pay a dollar or two for seats at the theatre ought to reflect when the plate approaches them how little the Church costs them in comparison with their amusements."

— Our esteemed contemporary, the Monitor of San Francisco, Cal., commemorates in one splendid double-leaded, number the Feast of Christmas and the Golden Jubilee of Leo XIII. Success to the Monitor, which is doing noble work for religion and education and the success of the Irish national movement. Thus speaks our remarkable and vigorous contemporary, the Boston Pilot, whose position is foremost among the Catholic press of this country.

— The Church News, published in Washington, D. C., is not only a good Catholic paper but it is also spicy. Here is a sample of the following editorial note: "The Beauvoisin Christmas Supplements we have seen are those issued by the San Francisco Monitor and the Catholic Columbian. The publishers of those journals deserve much praise for their taste and enterprise." Thanks, co-laborer, on behalf of ourselves and our highly-esteemed contemporary of Columbus, Ohio.

— The large sums of money, reported by cable as having been given at Jubilee offerings to the Holy Father are all turned over to the Treasury of the Church and used to open up new missions in pagan lands, to assist needy missions all over the world, to help distressed Communities, and to relieve Indian missionaries. But the rent is reserved for the Holy Father's personal use, as he has no need for Cesar's tribute save to dispense it in charity and in promoting good works.

— It is estimated that the value of the gifts to Pope Leo XIII., will amount to $15,000,000. This will include 20,000 chasubles, 12,000 chalices, 8,000 crucifixes and an immense number of costuments, mitres, lamps, etc. All these are now on exhibition and the pilgrims and visitors have an opportunity of seeing something from every nation in the world. The space originally intended for the display of the presents had to be greatly extended, such was the desire of the people to honor the Vicar of Christ.

— The number of divorces applied for through the courts of this city during the past year, aggregated 542. Of these 413 have already been granted, as against 417 in the year 1886 and 291 in the year 1885, and 333 in the year 1880. From these figures it will be seen that "divorce" like all other baneful influences, is progressing too rapidly to be healthy for the moral condition of society. Divorce is one of the many baleful things introduced into the world by Protestantism.

— Last year the Monitor published a very interesting biographical sketch of the venerable Rev. Louis J. Neyron, who has for some years been residing at Notre Dame University, where he died last Sunday in the 96th year of his age. Father Neyron was a valiant Frenchman who fought under Napoleon all through the Russian campaign and also at Waterloo. He subsequently resigned his position, studied for the priesthood, received Holy Orders, and served 35 years as a missionary, but when he became supernatural he retired to Notre Dame and was professor of physiology up to within a month ago. R. I. P.

— Such of our readers as have the happiness of being infused with the beautiful devotion of the Sacred Heart, will appreciate great joy in reading Father Delcourt's contribution "The Miracle of Cangas," on the third page. Every Catholic home should have an image or a picture of the Sacred Heart for personal and family devotion, and the home where such objects of devotion are not found, can never be so perfectly happy as those wherein both the temporal and spiritual blessings promised by our Sacred Redeemer to Blessed Margaret Mary are daily and hourly procured for all the household, through devotion to the Sacred Heart.

A Public School Superintendent's Mistaken Ideas.

At the recent Convention of the California School Teachers held in this city, addresses on various subjects were delivered by the members, and, among others, Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, undertook the difficult task of enlightening the educational world on "What to Do and How to Do It." According to a city daily Mr. Hoitt commenced by saying

"The rule and end order of the various schools in this State should be the development of the faculties of the children, and the education of the mind or soul. Does anyone dare to gainsay this?"

It is hardly necessary to say to Catholic readers, or, in fact, readers of any Christian denomination, that Hon. Ira G. Hoitt's declaration is wholly at variance with truth. Religion is the main dependence upon which rests the purity of the people, the morality of society and the safety of the State. That system of unscaled education to which Mr. Hoitt attributes such potency is far better qualified to make the men of the future destructive Anarchists than true Americans. George Washington, properly styled "the Father of his country," never spoke truer words than when he said "Whatever may be essential to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles."

Such are the words of Washington, and they have successfully stood the test of critics and scoffers during the past century, for when the unusual declaration of Mr. Hoitt in any way weaken them, it is simply an example at which George Washington is, and always will be right, and he Hoitt is wrong. Hoitt is now and ever will be wrong.

The Anarchists of Chicago were all educated much, yet we fail to find any appreciable influence exerted upon them through their school-hall advantages. Men may be educated in the shops of Sparta, yet like the Spartans they may be the worst slaves of passion. The knowledge of God is the beginning of wisdom, and a knowledge of God free from God it is like a branch torn from the mother tree trunk: a fragile limb which only encumbers the ground upon which it has fallen.

Every jail, prison and penitentiary in the land is filled with educated convicts. Canada is the chosen paradise of the back Prysthonia and other humiliating frauds. Guiteau, all of whom graduated from the highest schools in America, but that system of education which our State Superintendent says is opposition to George Washington—is a panacea for all public calamities. It is hardly necessary, therefore, to say that Mr. Hoitt's expressions upon this point are absurd and actually criminal.

Let us now follow the State Superintendent through other sections of his speech:

"Every child," said the speaker, "has a right to an education at the general expense of the public. Education must be universal, as free as the child of the laborer as to the scion of Nob Hill; all have a right to it at the expense of all. We have no more right to make a man a slave than we have to make him an ignorant man. Education must be free, and the State must be based by universal suffrage. But the State must provide that its children not only intellectually, physically, morally and industrially, but also in patriotism."

"The State," says the Superintendent, "should train its children not only intellectually, physically, morally and industrially, but also in patriotism. These sentiments are second-hand thoughts which our State Superintendent has pushed from some equally illogical predecessor.

In the first place, the State has no children. Mr. Hoitt would have us believe that every child born in California comes under the direct control of the State Superintendent of Education for its literary, moral, physical and industrial acquirements. But, thank God! the American people have not yet advanced that far on the road towards adopting the State slavery established under the pagan code of Sparta.

Published statistics will bear us out in the declaration that in every country where education has been divorced from religion, crimes of the worst character have increased. It is so in Germany, in Saxony and in our own country, as evinced by the records of divorces, the private speculations of school officials, the corrupt literature which floods the land, the obscene pictures which are spread broadcast for the corruption of youth, and the filth which pollutes the pulpits of every town, city and State in the Union.

Did Hon. Ira G. Hoitt reflect when he said "the State should educate its children" that he was advocating Communism? If, as Herbert Spencer asks, "the material wants of the rising generation ought to be satisfied by the State, why not their physical ones?" The reasoning, therefore, which is held to establish the right of children to intellectual food will equally as well establish their right to material food and all the accompaniments that appertain to their existence, and when such a scheme is perfected it will annul all parental rights and make each infant a mere chattel of the State.

Does the Hon. Ira G. Hoitt know anything of the existence of an Omnipotent Being whom Christians call God? or does this State Superintendent imagine that the human can supplant God in spiritual supremacy? His language would lead us to suppose that in his view at least the State is the very highest authority. California Christians should recognize Hon. Ira G. Hoitt's Heaven, there is a higher one even than that recognized by Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, and that is the authority of God over every Christian child, there comes in the parental right to educate children through pecuniary disinterested and inalienable right given to every father and mother by the code of the Divine Creator.

Hon. Ira G. Hoitt would expunge both Almighty God and parental authority from State education, and make all children grow up in a similar groove without the slightest necessity to save their morals. That attempt to teach morality without religion would be as great a failure as to attempt to wash man to wash straight when blindfolded. The eyes of every child must be open to see God in his works and thus learn to love Him and to hope through faith to see Him hereafter. It is for this great and that every human being is born, and the education which does not lead youth under the unstilled and saving shadow of God's commandments is false in its conception and dangerous to society and the State in its results.

Christians have always and everywhere made the best citizens under every form of government. It was so under the Pagan emperors and it is so under modern systems of government. Christianity is the mother of civilization, and when State Superintendents like Hon. Ira G. Hoitt propose to banish Christianity from our schools, the attempt is impossible and will inevitably be crucified in disgraceful failure.

At the Session of the Third Plenary Council have well said, the three great educational agencies are the Home, the Church and the School. They should unite and shape society, and any education which ignores parental rights, excludes religion, and place itself upon the quicksand foundation recommended by Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, will inevitably lead to the destruction of any nation that follows it out to its legitimate results.

So apparent is the danger which Christians realize from State education based upon Hon. Ira G. Hoitt's theory, that Protestants of every denomination are crying aloud for the establishment of schools which will save Christianity in the souls of their children. The State cannot teach religion, hence it is folly to expect that morality can exist among a people educated without a knowledge of God and their obligation to Divine Providence upon Him, and the sooner the Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, the better. Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, the better, will it be for the future of the children of California who are to be educated under a system that violates the same Divine Law, which, if we do not, we shall be guilty of criminal neglect.

The Anarchists of Chicago were all educated much, yet we fail to find any appreciable influence exerted upon them through their school-hall advantages. Men may be educated in the shops of Sparta, yet like the Spartans they may be the worst slaves of passion. The knowledge of God is the beginning of wisdom, and a knowledge of God free from God it is like a branch torn from the mother tree trunk: a fragile limb which only encumbers the ground upon which it has fallen.

Every jail, prison and penitentiary in the land is filled with educated convicts. Canada is the chosen paradise of the back Prysthonia and other humiliating frauds. Guiteau, all of whom graduated from the highest schools in America, but that system of education which our State Superintendent says is opposition to George Washington—is a panacea for all public calamities. It is hardly necessary, therefore, to say that Mr. Hoitt's expressions upon this point are absurd and actually criminal.

Let us now follow the State Superintendent through other sections of his speech:

"Every child," said the speaker, "has a right to an education at the general expense of the public. Education must be universal, as free as the child of the laborer as to the scion of Nob Hill; all have a right to it at the expense of all. We have no more right to make a man a slave as we have to make him an ignorant man. Education must be free, and the State must be based by universal suffrage. But the State must provide that its children not only intellectually, physically, morally and industrially, but also in patriotism."

"The State," says the Superintendent, "should train its children not only intellectually, physically, morally and industrially, but also in patriotism. These sentiments are second-hand thoughts which our State Superintendent has pushed from some equally illogical predecessor.

In the first place, the State has no children. Mr. Hoitt would have us believe that every child born in California comes under the direct control of the State Superintendent of Education for its literary, moral, physical and industrial acquirements. But, thank God! the American people have not yet advanced that far on the road towards adopting the State slavery established under the pagan code of Sparta.

Published statistics will bear us out in the declaration that in every country where education has been divorced from religion, crimes of the worst character have increased. It is so in Germany, in Saxony and in our own country, as evinced by the records of divorces, the private speculations of school officials, the corrupt literature which floods the land, the obscene pictures which are spread broadcast for the corruption of youth, and the filth which pollutes the pulpits of every town, city and State in the Union.

Did Hon. Ira G. Hoitt reflect when he said "the State should educate its children" that he was advocating Communism? If, as Herbert Spencer asks, "the material wants of the rising generation ought to be satisfied by the State, why not their physical ones?" The reasoning, therefore, which is held to establish the right of children to intellectual food will equally as well establish their right to material food and all the accompaniments that appertain to their existence, and when such a scheme is perfected it will annul all parental rights and make each infant a mere chattel of the State.

Does the Hon. Ira G. Hoitt know anything of the existence of an Omnipotent Being whom Christians call God? or does this State Superintendent imagine that the human can supplant God in spiritual supremacy? His language would lead us to suppose that in his view at least the State is the very highest authority. California Christians should recognize Hon. Ira G. Hoitt's Heaven, there is a higher one even than that recognized by Hon. Ira G. Hoitt, and that is the authority of God over every Christian child, there comes in the parental right to educate children through pecuniary disinterested and inalienable right given to every father and mother by the code of the Divine Creator.

Hon. Ira G. Hoitt would expunge both Almighty God and parental authority from State education, and make all children grow up in a similar groove without the slightest necessity to save their morals. That attempt to teach morality without religion would be as great a failure as to attempt to wash man to wash straight when blindfolded. The eyes of every child must be open to see God in his works and thus learn to love Him and to hope through faith to see Him hereafter. It is for this great and that every human being is born,

December 15, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

My Dear Sir—I have great pleasure in forwarding you the enclosed cheque of one pound—my yearly subscription for your admirable and well conducted journal, the MONITOR. I read a number of newspapers published both in this country and America, and none of them with as much profit and pleasure as the MONITOR. I have only to wish "Prosper, prosper Monitor."

—A colleague of Friday last says that Mgr Cataldo is engaged in an attempt to induce the Tories to compel the Bishops and priests of Ireland to surrender their House Rule principles. It is nearly worth while to deny such malignant lies of a malicious enemy as old as Ireland is to assignmain in Ireland. Even so far back as the London Daily News said of the canard when it was first mentioned "The supposition that even the present Monarch, feeble as they are, have been trying to prose Monsignor Persico into their service passes our powers of credulity. It is hardly out of put about that Monsignor Persico can work upon the Irish priesthood—through anti-Nationalist recommendations like Dr. Higgins, Bishop of Kerry, and Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick, but these schemes, though valuable as showing the fainthearted fiction of the paper Unionists, are more ridiculous." "More ridiculous" and the rottenest kind of "rubbish" at that!

—Last year when the Monitor first mentioned the grand Union Banner in aid of the new Cathedral as said that "even more than $50,000 can be raised by the proposed union of parish interests, if the laity will only put their hands to the plough and not look back." We are delighted to know that—notwithstanding the adverse proposition—the result of many if not all parishes—the Monitor was rather below than above the sum realized, which was $52,282 75 over all expenses. This is a very gratifying result indeed, and it proves that when the Catholic laity of San Francisco do put their hands to the plough there is certainly that prelate who will refuse them their united zeal, labor and enterprise. God bless all who helped this grand object for God's glory.

—A batch of political parsons in Ballarat are growling at President Cleveland for having sent a copy of the American Constitution to the Holy Father as a Jubilee gift. Nobody, however, minds such noodles now-a-days. If the Pope were to build a rail-road to Heaven and offer free passes to political parsons they would refuse to accept them through their bigoted blindness. In fact they would prefer to travel by Beelzebub's underground palace cars to Pandemonium rather than go to Heaven through "Papish influences."

—The blighting influence of Parliamentarism is still felt in New England. Just at present an interesting discussion is progressing among the citizens of New Hampshire as to whether the destruction of timber in Northern New England is not largely contributable to the growth on deserted homesteads. The number of such farms that have gone to seedy well nigh irretrievable to one who has not actually seen them. It is not unusual to find whole hamlets which, half a century ago, were inhabited by prosperous Puritan yeomanry, almost entirely deserted and the houses falling into decay.

—Next Monday, the 16th inst., will be the 25th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Maingonne of Sarrebourg. We trust the Monitor sends warmest wishes of all sorts of welfare unto, and trusts that he will long be spared to minister to the wants of his prosperous diocese.

A Tribute our Readers will Appreciate.

The following tribute to the Monitor's worth comes from one of Ireland's most distinguished scholarships, whose name stands foremost in the ranks of her holy and patriotic priesthood. We know that all Monitor readers will experience joyful pride in the sentiments expressed by our learned priest and they will also rejoice to know the high appreciation accorded the MONITOR when placed in contrast with its numerous contemporaries.

December 13, 1887.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR:

My dear Sir—I have great pleasure in forwarding you the enclosed cheque of one pound—my yearly subscription for your admirable and well conducted journal, the MONITOR. I read a number of newspapers published both in this country and America, and none of them with as much profit and pleasure as the MONITOR. I have only to wish "Prosper, prosper Monitor."

—A colleague of Friday last says that Mgr Cataldo is engaged in an attempt to induce the Tories to compel the Bishops and priests of Ireland to surrender their House Rule principles. It is nearly worth while to deny such malignant lies of a malicious enemy as old as Ireland is to assignmain in Ireland. Even so far back as the London Daily News said of the canard when it was first mentioned "The supposition that even the present Monarch, feeble as they are, have been trying to prose Monsignor Persico into their service passes our powers of credulity. It is hardly out of put about that Monsignor Persico can work upon the Irish priesthood—through anti-Nationalist recommendations like Dr. Higgins, Bishop of Kerry, and Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick, but these schemes, though valuable as showing the fainthearted fiction of the paper Unionists, are more ridiculous." "More ridiculous" and the rottenest kind of "rubbish" at that!

—Last year when the Monitor first mentioned the grand Union Banner in aid of the new Cathedral as said that "even more than $50,000 can be raised by the proposed union of parish interests, if the laity will only put their hands to the plough and not look back." We are delighted to know that—notwithstanding the adverse proposition—the result of many if not all parishes—the Monitor was rather below than above the sum realized, which was $52,282 75 over all expenses. This is a very gratifying result indeed, and it proves that when the Catholic laity of San Francisco do put their hands to the plough there is certainly that prelate who will refuse them their united zeal, labor and enterprise. God bless all who helped this grand object for God's glory.

—A batch of political parsons in Ballarat are growling at President Cleveland for having sent a copy of the American Constitution to the Holy Father as a Jubilee gift. Nobody, however, minds such noodles now-a-days. If the Pope were to build a rail-road to Heaven and offer free passes to political parsons they would refuse to accept them through their bigoted blindness. In fact they would prefer to travel by Beelzebub's underground palace cars to Pandemonium rather than go to Heaven through "Papish influences."

—The blighting influence of Parliamentarism is still felt in New England. Just at present an interesting discussion is progressing among the citizens of New Hampshire as to whether the destruction of timber in Northern New England is not largely contributable to the growth on deserted homesteads. The number of such farms that have gone to seedy well nigh irretrievable to one who has not actually seen them. It is not unusual to find whole hamlets which, half a century ago, were inhabited by prosperous Puritan yeomanry, almost entirely deserted and the houses falling into decay.

—Next Monday, the 16th inst., will be the 25th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Maingonne of Sarrebourg. We trust the Monitor sends warmest wishes of all sorts of welfare unto, and trusts that he will long be spared to minister to the wants of his prosperous diocese.

Sham Sectarian Missionaries.

Large numbers of Protestants are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the so-called "foreign missions" maintained by the different sects are nothing more than humbugs for enriching a few well-paid professors, and that they may live in luxury and idleness in foreign lands. So apparent is the fact that a writer in the New York Independent, a prominent Protestant paper, freely admits that Protestant missionaries are just as nasty friends and failures. Here is what he says concerning the difference between true and false missionaries:

"Surely," he says, "the picture of a Roman Catholic priest going alone to a distant island of the Pacific Ocean, the inhabitants of which are all lepers, and giving up his life for the conversion of the loathsome wretches, ought to electrify the Christian world. His also to those miserable people for whom Christ died, instead of being pieces of gold or silver, are dropping fingers, legs, noses and certain death. The work of this lone man has by accident become known to the world. If we know the full and complete story of what Romanism is attempting to do for duty in the heathen world we should know of many more such cases. The work of Protestant missionaries is almost absent in every popular field, almost nothing is known of the Propaganda at Rome. The writer concludes his article thus: "In the long future, when the 'science of missions' comes to be written, we shall see that our enemies have a thing or two to teach us. After making a wide margin for all the exaggerated accounts of Roman Catholic missions, we must surely be able to see that the Papacy is today, as never before, winning the millions over to its empire."

The writer of the above article seems to forget that Sectarianism is propagated only by means of salvage stolen from the Catholic faith is spread throughout Pagan nations by priests who trust absolutely to Almighty God for their reward and who make voluntary sacrifices of themselves so that they may save the souls of those entrusted to their care. Sectarianism is a sham faith.

The Protestant preacher looks at his so-called "mission" altogether from a money standpoint. How many dollars a year? What are the emoluments? Then he asks whether the climate is such as will agree with his educated children? If it is not any English speaking "society where he intends to locate? And a dozen other questions concerning the comforts of life accustomed with his present pleasing surroundings. If he discovers that "there is money in it," he goes off to his "mission" station with a great flourish of trumpets, and after a few years sojourn he returns home to live upon his accumulated coin.

On the other hand, the Catholic missionary goes forth gladly to his field's work. He takes no money with him, and he leaves behind him his relatives, friends and comforts of his native home, and he goes to the ends of the earth, and he dies there, and his remains are left in the wilds of the Pagan world. "Lord, I goes all and lose. There I goes!"

How lone Catholics are really guided by the Holy Ghost that is in them. The persons, men and women, who are so full of Christian love, winning people to Christ, are those who are willing to go anywhere in the world to do the work of God. Catholics are willing to be laid at the feet of the Divine Master. Mr. Mission which has proved successful is to have the money and the means to carry on the work. Protestant missionaries are sent out in the name of some organization, and the whole world knows that they are there for money. Catholic missionaries go forth in the name of God, and the world knows that they are there for God. Protestant missionaries are sent out by the hundreds, and they are paid for their services. Catholic missionaries go forth by the tens, and they are paid by God

Farm and Home.

A HOUSEHOLD PEST.

Interesting Anatomical Facts About Fleas.

Fleas love dirt, and in it they flourish and multiply most abundantly. But in spite of their sanguinous and their unclean haunts, they are interesting little fellows. Let us put one under the microscope. It seems to be clothed in a suit of armor formed of brown overlapping plates that are so exceedingly tough as to be almost indestructible. The head is small and very fine, and it has a single eye on each side. This eye is black, and the rays of light annihilate within it like sparks of fire. Fagot managed to look through one of these eyes, and he found that it diminished objects in size, while it magnified them in number—a man appearing like an army of fairies, and the flesh of a needle becoming a thousand tiny stars. From the shape of its head, and for other reasons, the flea is supposed to see only one eye at a time. The off-more wagon of the flea is composed of two pulpi, or feelers, two pincers, and a tongue. When it feeds it stands erect, thrusting this anchor into the flesh, and it will eat without intermission until distributed, for it voids as fast as it swallows its food. It is interesting to put several in a glass, and giving them a piece of raw meat, see them all standing on their hind legs to suck up its juices.

Their manner of breeding is still undetermined, but it is thought most probable that they receive air into their bodies through small holes at the ends of the pulpi.

The legs of the flea are wonders of strength and elasticity. They are joined to the body by long tendons that act as wire springs. In making its leap, which, it is said, can cover two hundred times its own length, the flea draws the leg up close to the body, and then throws out with great force, on the impetus proceeds from the first joint alone, the others only increasing it by their stretch while the leap is being made.

Fleas are possessed of great strength. Moulin tells of a merchant who made a gold chain, as long as his finger, that a flea dragged after him, and a golden chariot which he drew. Hooke writes of a watchmaker in the Strand who had made very fine wheels of chaise, with a cinchbug on its box drawn by a flea. The same man afterwards made a carriage with six horses, a coachman, four persons inside, two footmen behind, and a postilion on one of the horses, all of which were drawn by a single flea. Latreille mentions a flea which drew a silver cannon, of twenty-four times its own weight, mounted on wheels, and showed no fear when it was charged with gunpowder and fired off. Rose says that he saw three fleas drawing a tiny omnibus, that a pair drew a chariot, and that a brass cannon was drawn by a single one.

There are several varieties of fleas, but they are so much alike that their differences are interesting only to scientific people. The cat-flea will do as well as any to show us the process of breeding. During the spring and summer months she simply drops her eggs into the fur of the cat, but during the autumn and winter she glues each one by upon a hair. These eggs are so small as to be barely visible to the naked eye, but under the microscope they are very beautiful, looking like the loveliest pearls, and so perfectly transluscent. The flea deposits nearly two hundred at a time, running a hair-dropping them here and there. They soon hatch themselves, white, footless worms in from one to two weeks they go into cocoons. Nothing can be prettier than this cocoon. I wish I could show it to you, but will try to describe it. It is like a flask of clear glass, tinged at the shoulder with pink tints, and dotted over with gold. The little sleeper within lies in a circle, in rose color, and looks like the delicate petal of a flower. In about six weeks he reaches maturity. At first he is not larger than a mite, but when well fed grows rapidly in size and strength.

Fleas are quarrelsome and great fighters. When several are confined in a glass, they will stand on their hind legs, striking at their opponents with the others, and roll over and over as an athlete, losing legs and antennæ, and at last giving up their lives in the fight. There is a record of a flea which lived two days after such an encounter, with an antenna, three joints of his sidbroken in; one eye gone; and with only four legs, and these cut off to the first joint.

Fleas are supposed to feel a great antipathy to wormwood and other bitter herbs; and, in England, the country people have a habit of placing these about their cottages for the purpose of hanging the lively little pests.—R. L. Cluyes, Swiss Cross.

The Care of the Ears.

Never put anything into the ear for the relief of toothache.

Never wear cotton in the ears if they are discharging pus.

Never attempt to apply a poultice to the inside of the tragal of the ear.

Never drop anything into the ear unless it has been previously warmed.

Never use anything but a syringe and warm water for cleansing the ears from pus.

Never strike or box a child's ears; this has been known to rupture the drum-head and cause incurable deafness.

Never wet the hair if you have any tendency to deafness; wear an oiled silk cap when bathing, and refrain from diving.

Never scratch the ears with anything but the finger if they itch. Do not use the head of a pin, hairpins, pastel tips or anything of that nature.

Never let the feet become cold and damp, or sit with the back to the window, as these things tend to aggravate an existing hardness of hearing.

Never put milk, fat, or any oily substance into the ear for the relief of pain, for they soon become rancid and tend to excite inflammation. Simple warm water will answer the purpose better than anything else.

Never be alarmed if a living insect enters the ear. Pouring warm water into the canal will drown it, when it will generally come to the surface, and can be easily removed by the fingers. A few pulls of tobacco smoke blown into the ear will stupify the insect.

Never meddle with the ear if a foreign body, such as a bead, button or seed, enters it; leave it absolutely alone, but have a physician at once to it. More damage has been done by injudicious attempts at the extraction of a foreign body than could ever have come from its presence in the ear.

How to Give Up Bad Habits.

Understand the reason, and all the reasons, why the habit is injurious. Study the subject until there is no lingering doubt in your mind. Avoid the places, the persons, and the thoughts that lead to the temptation. Keep busy; idleness is the strength of bad habits. Do not give up the struggle when you have broken your resolution once, but think the matter over, and endeavor to understand why it is you have failed, so that you may be on your guard against a recurrence of the same circumstances. Do not think that it is an easy thing that you have undertaken. It is folly to expect to break off a habit in a day which may have been gathering strength in you for years.

Family Fun.

Lively Little Laughlets.

A lasting document—An iron will.

What kind of shot never made a wound, yet is often the cause of dueling?—Shot silk.

A Vermont woman has her jaw and her husband facetiously called her the vocal speaker.

There is one kind of vice that never sticks to young people long enough to hurt them, and that is advice.

The boy who quails at the sight of a mustard plaster, is the same lad who goes fearlessly forth to tackle a bee's nest with a handful of willow switches.

A railroad eating house is a place where trains stop long enough to allow a person looking man, formerly a colonel, to collect one dollar from each passenger.

Bobby—Pa, what's the meaning of phenomenal?

Pa—Don't bother me, Bobby. It has something to do with lion-ball pitching.

Magistrate (to Chinaman)—What is your complaint against this young man, John? Chinaman (unable to collect a laundry bill)—He too mochee by-and-by.

Dealer (clerk) What did that young lady want, Jessie?

Clerk—She asked for anatomical Hercules except and I told her we had no such thing.

Dealer—Great Scott, James, that young lady is from Oakland! She wanted Jack Hercules, and we've got an overstock of one.

Fireman (to country editor)—Its you want the R. W. Grumbum's address, "Feed my lambs," to go on the editorial page?

Editor (absentmindedly)—No. Run it in the "Agricultural Department."

After dinner speaker. Conquered as I am—unprepared as I am—unprepared as—I'll a wise man once said to me—Mary Tom, you had best by heart this afternoon—to, do.

"Well, my little boy," he said to his mother's son, "we have to get back home, and I can't stay any longer just now. Good-by."

"Say, mister, you're coming from his relatives, looked the tramp over, and slowly replied:

"Walk, by gosh!"

"What's the matter?"

"If you hadn't stopped me I wouldn't have known it was a hearse."

"Half-price were these horses bought?"

"Did I! Why I owned 'em! I traded both of 'em to a horse trader in town three weeks ago. That night one has the bloats, and the other is a critter as dead as a door-nail. I'll trade with you for $75, and thats allowing $50 apiece more on your horses than I got."

The owner of the "spankers" hasn't been a peaceful hour since that meeting.

The Priest Heard Him Finally.

Father O'Halloran had a telephone put into the parsonage, in connection with the church, the parochial school, etc. Patrick Mc Fee, his reverence's handy man, was instructed in the use of the instrument, and it was only the next day when Pat, dusting the church, heard the clatter of the new telephone bell. Taking down the receiver, he was pleased to hear Father O'Halloran's familiar voice, asking him something or other which no his work.

Pat, in escaping to answer, remembered that his reverence was a long way off, and Pat consequently hollered into the transmitter at the top of his voice.

"I don't understand you, Patrick," said the telephone.

Pat tried again, with no better success. On the third trial, he came near splitting the telephone; but again came Father O'Halloran's voice, "I can't hear what you are saying, Patrick."

Pat by this time had lost some of his patience, and as he stood gathering his breath for the fourth blast, he couldn't refrain from soliloquizing in a low tone, "Ah! may the divil fly away wid the tell-fo-phone."

His Pat dropped the telephone like a hot potatoe and fell on his knees in dismay, when he heard Father O'Halloran's voice again, "Now, I hear you perfectly, Patrick."

Too Risky a Risk.

"I'd like to write you a policy in our non-forfeitable, non-assessable, double-guaranteed security company," observed an insurance agent to a stranger.

"Well, I don't know," replied the latter. "But you should think of your wife and family. If anything should happen—"

"All right, go ahead with your policy."

"Thanks! Your name, business, and age, please."

"Darkey Jones, base ball umpire, age 31."

"Oh, er—excuse me—I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I can't stay any longer just now. Good-by."

Never Whip a Child.

"Never maintain Professor, that children should never be slapped or whipped!"

"I do maintain it. The parent who whips his children is a coward, and slapping children are all quiet and obedient. If I had a son like Sobieski's boy I'd break his back."

Brown's Bronchial Troches

Contain ingredients which act upon the organs of the throat. They have a direct medicinal efficacy in all affections of the Throat, resembling Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption. Public Speakers and all who, at any time have a cough, should use the Troches. Obtain only "Brown's Bronchial Troches" take no other. Sold by all druggists.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Paine's Celery Compound

For The Nervous The Debilitated The Aged

CURES Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia, Nervous Weakness, Stomach and Liver Diseases, and all affections of the Kidneys.

AS A NERVE TONIC, it imparts vigor and quiets the Nerves.

AS AN ALTERATIVE, it Purifies and Vitalizes the Blood.

AS A LAXATIVE, it acts mildly, but surely on the Bowels.

AS A DIURETIC, it Regulates the Kidneys and Cures their Diseases.

Recommended by prominent and leading men. Price $1.00. Sold by druggists. Send for circulars.

WELLS RICHARDSON & CO., Proprietors, BURLINGTON, VT.

5% INTEREST.

WITH

FIVE DOLLARS

U.S. CAN AREA LAW

5'- IMP. AUST. 100-FLORIN GOVERNMENT BOND.

INSURE ON THIS

Tell your neighbors, friends and relatives

Wednesday, the 1st of FEBRUARY

Two Drawings Annually.

Until such time as they begin to informed with a larger or smaller number of Prizes, the prizes and Prizes will be drawn as follows:

NO BLANKS.

Premium.	Prizes.	Premium.	Prizes.
1	$ 50,000	—	$ 50,000
2	20,000	—	40,000
3	10,000	—	30,000
4	5,000	—	20,000
5	2,000	—	10,000
100	1,000	—	100,000
1,000	100	—	100,000

Tickets for one drawing, according to Prizes. The next drawing can take place on the

FIRST OF FEBRUARY,

And every other month thereof as ON OR PRIOR THE 1st of FEBRUARY, UNTIL AUGUST, M., Tickets to Each Drawing, Prizes, Prizes and Chances to Each Drawing will be in the proportion of the lower Bond.

Orders, enclosed in letters addressed to American Letters, inclosing $5 will secure one of Chow bonds for the next drawing, or $5 apiece, payable to monthly installments.

For orders, circulars, or any other information, address

INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO., 108 Fulton St., cor. B'Way, New York City.

Agents wanted.

N. B.—In ordering, mention this Paper.

RAILROAD LANDS

For Sale on Reasonable Terms.

Apply to, or address,

W. H. MILLS, Land Agent, Oregon & California R. R., Salem, Or.

JEROME MAYNE, Land Agent, S. P. R. R., Portland, Or.

A. N. TOWNE, General Manager. T. H. GOODMAN, Gen'l Pass. & Ticket Agt. San Francisco, Cal.

WARD & CO.'S

Male and Female

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE.

608 and 610 Clay Street, S. F.

Telephone No. 767.

I WANT TO BE HAD—FIRST-CLASS HOTEL & Help, Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Sawmill Hands, Gardeners, Coachmen, and Married Couples for private families and farmers. Also, good reliable Female Help, Cooks, Waiters, Chambermaids, Nurses, Seamstresses, Housework Girls, Young Girls, etc. Call or address

Tutt's Pills

ARE A SPECIAL BLESSING.

Unerringly adapting themselves to the worst cases of Dyspepsia, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Piles, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver.

Rev. E. R. GRIGGS, New York.

SOLD EVERYWHERE.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

POZZONI'S MEDICATED COMPLEXION POWDER.

Imparts a natural, healthy, and beautiful complexion to the face. Removes all pimples, freckles and discolorations. For sale by all druggists throughout the United States and Canada. Ask for Pozzoni's Medicated Complexion Powder. J. P. POZZONI, St. Louis, Mo.

D. MENCARINI,

911 Mission St,

San Francisco, - - Cal.

Manufacturer and Importer of

RELIGIOUS STATUARY, ETC.

Suitable for Churches, Convent Chapels, Academy Schools, Etc.

THE ONLY COMPLETE COLLECTION OF THE PAINTS' CHART

Catalogues sent free on application.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

A SET OF

PRICE'S Famous California-Made

CARVERS.

His Own Make and Design. Challenge the World. Beware of Imitations.

M. PRICE, Pioneer Cutler, 615 Kearny St.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

PAINTS, OILS and GLASS

112 and 114 California St., SAN FRANCISCO.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PIANOS

GIANTS for PREMIUM for greatest capital & World's Exposure, for artistic and scientific power of tone, elegance of design, and perfection of workmanship, combined by United States commissioners, after a test of two months, and a report of which, in part, we publish, and which, in double repeating action, Grand Square and Upright Pianos, we have, for the best instrument, and the best piano, the highest award of existence, after trying great rival at every world's fair for the past twenty years, and the great London Exposition of 1862 and 1867, and Paris Exposition of 1867, and Vienna Exposition of 1873, and Philadelphia Exposition of 1876, and Paris Exposition of 1878, and Paris Exposition of 1878, and Paris Exposition of 1878

HOME RULERS.

Ireland's Friends in England.

AN APPEAL FOR FAIR PLAY.

Address to Mr. Persico.

The following petition is being circulated among English Catholics:

We continue to invite, inform your notice the accompanying address to Monsignor Persico, and to express a hope that you will allow your signature to be attached to it.

RIPON J. W. BERNARD, Lieut.-Col.
ARUNDELL OF WARDOUR.
OSWALD HENRY HOBART
JAS. MARSHALL SIMON SCROPE
HENRY DISSONO S. N. BROOKS
FRED. BART. JOHN D. KENNEDY, K.S.G.

You are requested to direct your reply to George Hicots, Esq., 28, Old Burlington Street, W.

To the Most Rev. Monsignor Persico, O. S. F. C., Archbishop of Damietta, Commissary Apostolic.

Most Rev. Lord—We, the undersigned, desire respectfully to approach your throne upon your return from Ireland, and offer to you the assurance of our loyalty and devotion to the Holy See, together with our congratulations upon the accomplishment of your important mission.

As Catholics, we feel specially bound to express our gratitude to the Sovereign Pontiff for the tender solicitude displayed by him, in our common father, for our suffering brethren in Ireland; remembering as we do that it is to them, under Divine Providence, that we owe the liberties we enjoy at present in our country after centuries of persecution.

As Englishmen, bitterly conscious of the oppression of England towards her sister land in the past, we hailed with pleasure the advent of your times, believing that it would materially assist and morally encourage our efforts to seek a remedy for the past and to obtain justice in the future. We cannot doubt that the result of your prolonged stay in Ireland will have been to convince you completely as to the legitimate and reasonable nature of the national aspirations, the denial of which we hold to be the main cause of all the misery and disorder which cannot have failed to strike your Grace painfully, as the chief characteristic of this country. You will at the same time have been amazed by observing the apostolic wisdom which characterizes the episcopate, the zeal which animates the clergy, and the piety which distinguishes the whole people.

Your Grace will have noticed and appreciated the remarkable fact that, in the present struggle for constitutional changes, unconstitutional methods of agitation are recommended by the leaders and accepted by the people with a practical unanimity which some rare exceptions here and there only serve to illustrate. Under the influence of this happy sympathy between hierarchy, clergy, and people, not only have secret political associations almost, if not entirely, disappeared, but the bitter and not unnatural enmity and suspicion which have for centuries existed in Ireland against our Protestant fellows is rapidly giving way to affection and confidence.

Englishmen who visit Ireland to express sympathy with the people, or even to satisfy themselves impartially as to the state of the country, are met there with an enthusiastic welcome which a few years ago would have been out of the question.

But amid these general signs of improvement in the relations between the two countries, we have to deplore the action of certain Protestant members of the Church of England—men of high position and honorable character—who, for reasons assuredly worthy of them but incomprehensible to us, have adopted a course of bitter and hostile incompetency hostility towards Ireland. Disparaging and disrespectful observations concerning the conduct of priests and even of the Bishop of Ireland have been made, and the latter especially have been publicly censured in speeches made in England, and even, as we have reason to believe, in private repeated, and, we regret to say, unpleasantly but not less unjustly to the Holy See itself.

We desire most emphatically to repudiate the action of those who assume to speak as we protest against it as resulting in that wounded hierarchy and venerable episcopal which have been the main safeguards of the faith in Ireland in the past, and which are still among the chief glories of Christendom.

Finally, Most Reverend Lord, while we abstain from making needless appeals or offering unsolicited counsels to the Holy See, we deem it a duty to express our firm conviction, that no misrepresentations, however conscientiously made, or from however distinguished a quarter they may proceed, will serve to somewhat lessen the esteem in which Ireland is held by the British Crown, and the confidence in Ireland, and the confidence from his faithful people of Ireland, who, constant to the noble traditions of their past, and adhering as firmly as ever to the faith of their fathers, have made up their core for themselves and their children the power to conduct their own internal affairs, under the shelter of the British Crown, in accordance with the wants, the feelings, and the history of their race.

ARCHBISHOP CASANOVA.

His Course Approved in Rome.

The Most Reverend Ricardo Casanova, Archbishop of Guatemala, who was arrested by that Government, and is now residing at San Clara, in this State, wrote to Rome, setting forth in the Pontiff a full statement of the case. He has received in reply the following letter, in which the Holy Father approves the conduct of the banished Archbishop:

Most Reverend and Dear Sir: "The letter in which you, your Grace informs me of your exile was a scene of intense grief, both to me and His Holiness, whom I was obliged to acquaint with the sad intelligence.

His Holiness deeply deplores the measures taken by the Government of Guatemala against your worthy person, and he deplores it still more since you are only punished for fulfilling the duties inherent to your pastoral charge.

However, the consideration of the merits of your sufferings must serve to console you for your present affliction, knowing as you do that "Blessed is he that suffers persecution for justice sake," and that the transitory tribulations have but one source as of an ever lasting reward.

So with these consolations, sufficient to cheer any sorrowful heart, the Holy Father concludes for your consolation to impart apostolic blessing to your Grace, and I on my part will earnestly pray that this blessing may obtain from our Lord the grace to shorten the time of your exile.

Meanwhile I have the pleasure of signifying to your Grace that the dispositions taken by your Grace for the administration of the dioceses from which you have been so suddenly separated, have been found prudent and praiseworthy.
